"Nine buckshot won't hurt a coon, mother, and I'm after bear. Thirty-seven is what I want, but it isn't enough. I've a notion to put in forty-seven, to make sure. No, I'll take thirty-seven; but thirty-seven ain't enough."

So Farmer McCue put in a double charge of powder and thirty-seven buckshot in each barrel. Mr. McCue is a good farmer, but his early education as a hunter was sadly neglected.

"Now let that bear trespass on me again, by jee!" said Farmer McCue.

The next day he went to work again in his turnip-field. His gun, loaded for bear, was with him. He had no idea of seeing the bear, so that when in making a turn in the field he came almost face to face with it, evidently enjoying itself among the turtops, from the way it was pulling them up and munching them, the farmer was obliged to open his eyes wide again and exclaim, with more vigor than before:

"By jee!"

Farmer McCue was bound to get the bear, however, and, backing off a few feet to where his gun lay, he picked it up, took good aim at the bear, and fired. Mrs. McCue heard the report at the house. It made the windows rattle, and reverberated among the hills like a Fourth of July salute. The farmer's wife ran to the door and looked over into the turnip-field. There was a thick cloud of smoke over by the stone wall where she had last seen her husband at work.

"Joseph must have killed the bear," she said.

But there was no bear and no Joseph to be seen. Mrs. McCue ran down into the field. She had not gone far before she saw the body of the bear stretched out among the turnips. Looking further she saw Farmer McCue also stretched out among the turnips, as still as the bear. Just then Farmer [illegible] and his son, neighbors, happened to be driving by. Mrs. McCue called them. They carried Mr. McCue into the house. One side of his face was as black as his hat and swollen three times its natural size. His right shoulder was dislocated, and his arm was black and blue from the shoulder to the elbow. It was a good while before he could be brought to. Then he opened his left eye, and, looking at his wife, said, faintly but feebly:

"Mother, thirty-seven's enough!"

There was a hole through the bear amidships big enough to run a stove-pipe in. Farmer McCue, a little set in his opinion as he is but willing to own up like a man when he finds he is wrong, is doing as well as could be expected.—N. Y. Sun.

Burden-Bearers of Morocco.

I trust it will be pardoned me if, with but slight transition, I pass from the donkey of Morocco to the women thereof. Those who know Tangier will understand that there is no discourtesy intended against the sex which in Europe we are apt to call the weaker, but which here shares with those other patient creatures, the ass and the camel, the bearing of all burdens. If you walk along the bay at Tangier (which, by the way, is one of the most splendid strands imaginable), you will meet droves of women, each carrying enormous bundles of grass or charcoal for market; the haik covers their heads and their burdens, the weight of which is usually further supplemented by a baby in a kerchief, slung pouch-wise about her somewhere where there is room. This trait, which almost seems borrowed from the kangaroo, is the invariable way of carrying a baby, and the women work and wash, wearing their babies in this marsupial fashion as naturally as some primitive Australian animal would, did it but work and wash, and in the streets, too, under the white haiks of the townswomen, one sees bulging out the little skulls of infants, as in Donnybrook, in the old days, when the crowns of overtaken revellers, showing through the canvas tents, became irresistible spheres of attraction to passing shillalahs. But to return to our women, who are trudging along the sands, perhaps eight or ten together—perhaps it is a family party, a husband, wife, and daughter, in which case there is generally a donkey who shares the loads pretty fairly with the two ladies, except that he has the further privilege of carrying their mutual lord and master, who sits up between the grass-woven baskets with a dignified unconsciousness of any calls of gallantry. Indeed, I believe the ladies would feel it utterly unbefitting and indecent were their positions reversed, and I believe that even the donkey bred in Mohammedan usages would resent it. I think I have only once seen a country woman riding while one of the nobler sex walked, but in this case she was evidently too old to get home otherwise.—Cornhill Magazine.

TRUST FUNDS.

An Impressive Warning as to the Danger of Tampering with Trust Funds.

Whole fleets of merchant vessels enter the harbor of New York every week, and attract no attention, but if a single ship, either through bad steering or fog, or tempest, should be wrecked on Sandy Hook, it would be telegraphed all over the country. So whenever a single conspicuous church member becomes a defaulter, the fact flies widely over the wires and through the press. Genuine Christianity is not harmed by the occasional fall of individuals, who while professing it, yet violate its plainest precepts.

Two or three defalcations have occurred recently which teach a most instructive lesson. One of them—that of the distinguished banker in Portland, Me., was of the most painful character. To those of us who knew and loved the man, it was almost incredible. He was eminent as a financier, as a citizen, as a generous philanthropist, and as a leader in Sabbath-school, missionary and evangelistic enterprises. The young men of Portland loved him; everybody trusted him. On the Sabbath he often officiated as an eloquent lay preacher in some church. So complete was the confidence of his business associates in his integrity that the directors of his bank left to him the control of its finances almost without examination. The shocking discovery came at last that for three or four years he had been embezzling the funds of the bank, and using them for his own purposes in stock speculations! Two months ago he was one of the most honored and beloved men in Portland: to-day he is in the penitentiary. His heart-broken family are crushed under a blow which brings to them the tenderest and deepest sympathy of the whole community.

Did Mr. G—— intend to steal the money of that bank when he began to use it without authority? No, probably not. He intended to return it after he had profited by the use of it. So have scores of other defaulters whose names will readily occur to our readers. But the very first unauthorized touch of a dollar of trust-funds, under any circumstances, is deadly poison. It is like the prick of the dissecting-needle to the doctor who is conducting a "post-mortem." One drop entering the veins sends death through the system. The whole moral sense becomes poisoned. From that moment onward the tamperer with the sacred trust becomes as completely enslaved as the man is who tampers with the brandy bottle.

An officer in one of our banks many years ago purloined a sum of money—not very large—to enable him to pay for his small and modest house. Like the Portland banker, he was a man of most exemplary private life. He told me that he had not a thought of keeping the money, but fully expected and intended to return every dime. But everything went against him from the moment that he touched that fatal money. Having been detained from his teller's desk for just one day, the discovery came, and with it the wreck of his character. The touch of a trust fund, even with no intention of theft, had been deadly poison.

We can imagine the distress of a man who is conscious of the deception he is practicing and of the danger that yawns beneath him. Each day he hopes to make a fortunate turn in his speculations and be able to replace the purloined money. But the rope swings farther and farther off from him every day as he stands with outstretched hands on his dizzy ledge of rocks. Providence, which never deserts a true and loyal Christian, deserts him. He dies a thousand deaths in the dread of detection, yet excuses himself to himself constantly by the artful plea, "When I can I will return the money."

This whole terrible business of tampering with trust funds has been a subject of close and careful observation with me for many years. I have made some study into individual cases. They are all alike: they all prove that any man who, with even the most sincere intention to replace it, ever lays his finger on one dollar of trust funds, commits moral suicide. With the tenderest pity do I write these sad lines in regard to my ruined friend in Portland; but the lesson ought to be solemnly studied and heeded by every Christian in the land, as well as by every man of business:

He tells him now, the Tempter hath
A snare for all;
And pitying tears, not scorn and wrath,
Befit his fall.

—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, in New Evangelist.

She Couldn't Help It.

"Oh-h-h!" she screamed, and while one hand gathered her skirts more closely around her, with the other she clung tightly to her wondering escort. It was on Chestnut street, just after the crowds from the theaters had got away and the street was rather quiet. They were in front of the bulk windows of a newspaper office, and as the woman continued to scream, in a shrill, slightly hysterical manner, her escort meanwhile being so perplexed, as there was no apparent cause for his companion's alarm, that he did not know what to do—so did nothing, a small crowd collected, the stalwart reserve on the rear corner coming forward with giant strides, determined to rescue a fair one in distress or perish in the attempt, from force of habit he exclaimed: "Come, now, move on!" and just then a man in the crowd discovered the cause of the hullaballo, and disgustedly yelled, "Rats!" The reserve was about to arrest him for contempt, when, on looking at the window, he saw a rat, a large one, sitting on its haunches, wondering at the rumpus it had caused. Being of a modest disposition, and noticing the attention he was attracting, his ratship scampered away, and the woman, who was unable to conquer the feminine fear of the rodent, walked quickly away.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

The papabotte is a bird which makes its appearance in Southern Louisiana about May, and abounds until September. It seems to belong to the plover family, though the resemblance is not complete at all points. However, it is a bird about the size of a woodcock, with grayish plumage and a bill short and hard, which makes its appearance about the time the Cantharis vesciatoria (Spanish fly) begins to depredate upon the vegetable gardens. These flies destroy the foliage of the potato and tomato, and other vegetables. They appear in countless myriads, coming no one knows whence, and going no one knows where, but leaving behind them a terrible record of devastation. On these insects the papabotte preys with immeasurable voracity, and grows so fat that when it falls before the gun of the sportsman it bursts like a ripe apricot. The papabotte is wonderfully shy of sportsmen, but will allow a quadruped or a vehicle to come very near, and he who rides or drives may thus choose his own time and opportunity.

Powerful Lenses.

That a [illegible] wonderful discovery in [illegible] been made [illegible] St. [illegible] as a wonderful instance [illegible] of the discovery of an entirely new kind of glass lately. Its powers are [illegible] to [illegible] thereto. It was in the year 1878 that Dr. Abbey read a paper before the South Kensington association in England, in which he strongly set forth his ideas that it was possible that a new kind of glass might be made which would increase the power of the microscope.

In the year 1881 he and Dr. Scott, a celebrated chemist, began to experiment in the town of Witten, in Westphalia. Their funds gave out in 1883, however, before they had obtained any remarkable results from their experiments, but both were sanguine of making a beneficial discovery if they had funds to continue their work that the Prussian government was induced to give $1,500 for the continuance of the experiments. Prof. Abbey and Dr. Scott then erected a laboratory in Germany, at the works of Carl Zeiss, a manufacturer of instruments used by scientists. They tried nearly all elements, and it was only about six months ago that their long labor was crowned with success which will make them famous in the history of science. The ordinary glass contains six substances. The new glass made by Prof. Abbey and Dr. Scott contains fourteen. The most essential elements of which it is composed are phosphorous and boron, neither of which is used in common glass. With the old glass the full power of the microscope was the discernment of the 500th part of an inch, and with the new glass it is claimed that the 204,700,000th part of an inch can be distinguished. This certainly seems incredible, but positive assurance of its truth is given by parties who have tested Prof. Abbey's and Dr. Scott's new instrument.

When the discovery was first made Carl Zeiss, the manufacturer, in whose place the experimentalists had worked, was in favor of getting out a patent so that the discovery might prove a most profitable one, but the fact of the experiments having been conducted with funds supplied by the Prussian government prevented the discoverers from making it a private enterprise, and compels them to make it a public benefit. The difference between the new and the old glass consists in the refraction of light.

A Commercial Curiosity.

A gentleman of this city, who spent the summer in Maine, was permitted to make the following verbatim copy of a document in the possession of a family in Norway, that state, the head of which is a descendant of the merchant who wrote it. It is interesting as showing peculiar business transactions, or ways of doing business, in those early days:

PISCATAQUA in N. England 2 June 1732.—Gent: We write you by Capt Wm Frost Since have not received any of Yors; this home will be delivered by Capt Robert Orom in our Ship Eagle and inclosed you have an Invoice & Bill of Lading for her cargo wch desire you will be Pleased to Receive and Dispose off for our best advantage and Lay out ye at Produce mostly in good rum in Good Strong the Casks & Cotton wool Rome Small matter of Sugr & Melases & Ship it on board her & Let her be Dispacht Directly here; if any freight Should offer without loosing much Time Should Greatly Oblige to You if You would be pleased to Assist them to Procure it & that You will give them a quic Dispatch we Chuse that the cargo Should be Some thing the Cheaper rather than She Should be Delayed or not bring ye ut produce of her cargo with her.

We pray You to Settel our Accost & pay yor Selfes the Ballance that ben So Long due from us to You we are with due respect

Gent Yor Affectionat & obliged Servis

W^M PEPPERELL.

If west India Goods Should be Scarce & Dear Send us ye nt proceeds of ye Cargo partly in Likely Young negroes of about 12 or 14 Years old it to be had Cheap—my Cooper tells me that ye two ahds of Cod fish is Very Good. W P

Thousands Say So.

Mr. T. W. Atkins, Girard, Kan., writes: "I never hesitate to recommend your Electric Bitters to my customers, they give entire satisfaction and are rapid sellers." Electric Bitters are the purest and best medicine known and will positively cure Kidney and Liver complaints. Purify the blood and regulate the bowels. No family can afford to be without them. They will save hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills every year. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking Skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles, found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs." Call at Dr. G. W. Crouter's and Crouter & Harris' Drug Store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles $1.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
The Beam is not fastened to the landside, but by means of a steel frog—is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft. [illegible] steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy. If your Agent has none write us for price.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

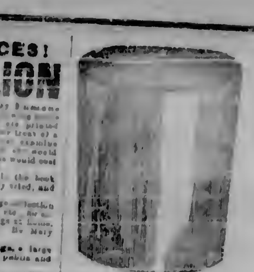
MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible] are printed from good type upon good paper. [illegible] would cost $1.00 each. [illegible]
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc. [illegible]
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils," etc.
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Grey Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 37 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe, describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden." Profusely illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of
"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

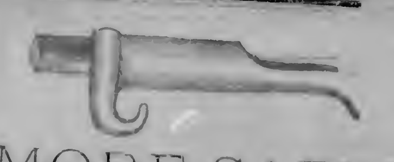
BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm [illegible] and are [illegible] to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the centre of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of [illegible] and is [illegible] up with settlers from almost every [illegible].
Over 300,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
[illegible] Address
W. H. HUBBART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Containing the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.





MORE SAP!
SAP PAILS,
Sap Pans, - Sap Spiles
ATKINS SAWS,
PERFECTION AXES,
JOB and TIN WORK
L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
[illegible] absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
[illegible] Mich., Aug. 15, 1871. I was attacked with a severe cold and threatened with lung fever while on a visit to Hudson, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment to preach on account of my severe cough, but managed to get home and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup I had in the house, and my cough left me as soon as I commenced taking it, and I find permanent relief when any attacked by cough or lung complaint. REV. ROBT. CORE.
Howell, Mich., Oct. 2[illegible]. I have tried Dr. E. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year, as I had occasion, as a remedy for Colds and Coughs, and found it a reliable medicine. I have used his Ague and Liver Syrup in our family with the best of success, curing my mother (whose age was over seventy years) of one of the hard[est] attacks of Fever and Ague, after the second chill and fever. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who [illegible]. REV. S. R. [illegible]
Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.
W. JOHNSTON & CO.,
DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

Take The Sentinel.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

MILLINERY
—AND—
FANCY GOODS!
Mrs. ELLA SMITH &
Miss ANNIE COOPER
Have opened a store in the Ingleside Building, and invite their friends to call and inspect their fine stock of
FANCY GOODS!
Of all varieties usually kept in a first-class millinery store.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS
Dealers in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, - Publishers

CHARLES WESLEY.

In old age Charles Wesley rode a little white horse, gray with age. It appears to have been brought every morning from the foundry—an arrangement which its master did not like, but which it was impossible to avoid. He was somewhat stouter than his brother, but not corpulent. Henry Moore says that he wore winter clothing even in summer. When he mounted his horse, "if a subject struck him, he proceeded to expand it and put it in order. This he used to write on a card in short hand with his pencil." Not unfrequently he used to come to the house in the city road, and, having left the pony in the garden in front, he would enter, crying out, "Pen and ink! pen and ink!" When these were given him, he proceeded to write out his hymn. This done, he looked around on those present, saluted them with much kindness, inquired after their health, and then gave out some short hymn.

What impression he produced on strangers may be understood from William Wilberforce's account of his first interview with the venerable poet, at the house of Hannah More. He says: "I went, in 1782, to see her, and when I came into the room Charles Wesley rose from the table, around which a numerous company sat at tea, and, coming forward to me, gave me solemnly his blessing. I was scarcely ever more affected. Such was the effect of his manner and appearance that it altogether overset me, and I burst into tears, unable to restrain myself."

When City Road chapel was built, Charles Wesley preached there or in some other Methodist chapel every Sunday morning and afternoon, except when he was supplying the congregation in Bristol, or was laid aside from his growing infirmities. His ministry was solemn and awakening, yet full of tenderness for the mourners. When in good health and under the special influence of the spirit, as he often was, he was fluent and powerful. He used short, pointed sentences, full of scripture sentiment and phraseology. "In prayer he was copious and mighty, especially on sacramental occasions, when he seemed to enter into the holiest of all by the blood of Jesus." If his thoughts did not flow freely, he was very deliberate in the pulpit, making long pauses as though waiting for the spirit's influence. "In such cases he usually preached with his eyes closed; he fumbled with his hands about his breast, leaned with his elbows upon the bible, and his whole body was in motion. He was often so feeble as to be under the necessity of calling upon his congregation to sing in the course of his sermon that he might partially recover himself, and be able to finish his discourse." Till within a few months of his death he continued his ministry in the London chapels.

Every lover of Charles Wesley's poetry has been touched by the dying effort of his muse. For some time he had been lying quietly on his bed. At last he called for Mrs. Wesley, and asked her to write the following lines at his dictation:

In age and feebleness extreme,
Who shall a sinful worm redeem;

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

Old-Fashioned Roses.

They ain't no style about 'em,
And they're sort o' pale and faded;
Yit the doorway here without 'em
Would be lonesomer, and shaded
With a good 'eal blacker shadder
Than the mornin' glories makes,
And the sunshine would look sadder
For their good, old fashioned sakes.

I like 'em 'cause they kind o'
Sort o' make a feller like 'em;
And I tell you, when I find a
Bunch out whur the sun kin strike 'em,
It allus sets me thinkin'
O' the ones 'at used to grow,
And peek in thro' the chinkin'
O' the cabin, don't you know?

And then I think o' mother,
And how she used to love 'em
When they wuzn't any other,
'Less they found 'em up above 'em!
And her eyes, afore she shut 'em,
Whispered with a smile, and said,
We must pluck a bunch and put 'em
In her hand when she wuz dead.

But, as I wuz a sayin',
They ain't no style about 'em
Very gaudy or displayin',
But I wouldn't be without 'em,
'Cause I'm happier in these posies
And the hollyhawks and sich
Than the hummin' bird 'at noses
In the roses of the rich.

—James Whitcomb Riley.

How Ella Became a Fairy.

A STORY FOR MAMMA TO READ ALOUD.

After so much talking about fairies, it was not strange that little Ella should think a good deal about them. And thinking about them, and hearing about them, it is not strange that she should wish to be a good fairy. So, lying in bed, one morning, she began to wish she was a fairy, and to say that if she was a fairy she would do this and that. After breakfast she sat looking out of the window at the snow falling thick and fast. The snow seemed very beautiful to her. Every little snow flake seemed like a soft-winged angel coming down from the sky. Far up in the sky she could see the snow-angels flying, flying, here and there, but all the time coming down to the ground. From thinking about angels coming down, she got to thinking about fairies. I suppose she thought first about the poor people who would need more wood in snowy weather. And then she wished she was a good fairy. How she would send a cord of wood to this one, and a barrel of flour to that one. What a brave time she would have! How glad the poor people would be!

Presently papa came up, and said:

"What is my little girl dreaming about on this snowy morning, sitting here watching the snow?"

"Oh, papa! I was just wishing that I was a fairy," said Ella.

"And what would my little bird do if she was a fairy?" asked papa.

"Oh, I'd give the widow Jones a ton of coal, and I'd make it last all winter, and I'd give little Sallie Daugherty a new dolly and some other toys, and I'd make her just as happy as ever I could, and I'd be just the best kind of a friend to all poor people, and—and—well I would just—just do everything. No, not everything, but most everything, all the good I could do, anyhow." And Ella leaned back almost exhausted by her speech, which she couldn't make large enough to express her wishes.

"Well," said papa, after looking in the sweet brown eyes a minute, "there

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE "SWELLING OF JORDAN."

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage recently delivered the following in the tabernacle at Brooklyn, taking for his text: If thou hast run with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses? And if in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?—Jeremiah xii., 5.

Jeremiah had become impatient with his troubles. God says to him:

"If you can not stand these small trials and persecutions, what are you going to do when the greater trials and persecutions come? If you have been running a race with footmen and they have beaten you, what chance is there that you will outrun horses?"

And then the figure is changed. You know, in April and May the Jordan overflows its banks, and the waters rush violently on, sweeping everything before them. And God says to the prophet:

"If you are overcome with smaller trials and vexations, which have assaulted you, what will you do when the trials and annoyance and persecutions of life come in a freshet?"

If in the land of peace, wherein thou trustedst, they wearied thee, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan?

I propose, if God will help me, in a very practical way to ask—if it is such a difficult thing to get along without the religion of Jesus Christ, when things are comparatively smooth, what will we do without Christ amid the overpowering misfortunes and disasters of life that may come upon us? If troubles, slow as footmen, surpass us, what will we do when they take the feet of horses? and if now in our life-time we are beaten back and submerged of

If in the bright sunshine of health and prosperity a man felt the need of something better, how will he feel when the shadows of the last hour gather above his pillow? If, in the warmth of worldly prosperity, he was sometimes dismayed, how will he feel when the last chill creeps over him? If while things were comparatively smooth he was disquieted, what will he do in the agonies of dissolution?

If, in the land of peace in which thou trusted, they wearied thee, what will thou do amid the swelling of Jordan?

Oh, I have seen them, and so have you, go out of this life without a tear on their cheek. There was weeping all round the room, but no weeping in the bed; the cheeks were dry. They were not thrown down into darkness; they were lifted up. We saw the tides rising around them, and the swelling of the wave. It washed them off from the cares and toils of life; it washed them on toward the beach of heaven. They waved to us a farewell kiss as they stood on deck, and floated down further and further, wafted by gales from heaven, until they were lost to our sight—mortality having become immortality.

Life's duty done, as sinks the clay,
Light from its load the spirit flies;
While heaven and earth combine to say,
How blest the righteous when he dies.

I congratulate you that your departed friends are safe on the shore of heaven? Would you have them back again? Would you have those old parents back again? You know how hard it was sometimes for them to get their breath in the stifled atmosphere of the summer; would you have them back in this summer? Didn't they use their brain long enough? Would you have your children back again? Would you have them take the risk of temptations

Charlevoix Sentinel.
CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 16, 1887.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

LOOK OUT FOR

OUR ANNOUNCEMENT OF

New SPRING Goods,

NEXT WEEK.

F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Prior to inventory we are offering great bargains in every line of goods.

We are determined to reduce our stock one-half during this month, and to accomplish this we are making great sacrifices.

Close buyers will do well to inspect our stock.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL & SON ARE SELLING OUT

OWING TO A CHANGE WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE IN OUR STORE IN THE SPRING WE MUST SELL OUR STOCK OF

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, CLOTHING, CLOAKS, NOTIONS, GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

WE MEAN BUSINESS! EVERYTHING IN OUR STORE WILL BE SOLD AT SOME PRICE, FOR CASH ONLY.

Now is the time to get Bargains.

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 47. CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23, 1887. WHOLE NO. 904

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

T I M E

TO BUY

Your Sugar Outfit!

THE PLACE

Stockman & Iddings'

SAP PAILS,
SUGAR PANS,
SPILES,
SKIMMERS,
MOULDS, Etc.

Cheapest and Best

If you are going to want a Spring Tooth Harvester you had better buy one of

Yours Truly

STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

New Winter Goods

BEING RECEIVED WEEKLY.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

BOOTS and SHOES.

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

Flannels, Yarns, and Blankets.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished in short notice. Office over Postoffice.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL.

Send it to your friends abroad.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

BRANCH STORE AT HORTON'S BAY.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1.50 | Six months $.75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—R. M. Cherrie returned from Chicago yesterday.

—Capt. Aldrich and daughters returned home, yesterday.

—Thirty-five Petoskey ladies play the violin.

—L. E. Allen returned from Chicago Thursday.

—C. J. Grier returned home from outside yesterday.

—Ed. Bedford will join the Point Betsey Life Saving Crew April 1st.

—Note the change in L. D. Bartholomew & Co.'s advertising space.

—Mr. Gunderson, the Chicago commission man, was in town over Sunday.

—The steamer hasn't encountered a flee since the dear little thing was purchased.

The Prohibitory Amendment.

The Republican party of Michigan in common with that of several other states, has, during the past seven years, been called upon to display more of the spirit of Christian forbearance than has ever been required of a political party since the foundation of the world.

A party came into being under the impulse of temperance agitation which since its birth has sought the downfall of the party that has been the author of all great reforms since it came into existence ... law and order and ... necessary thereto.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, Publishers

A decree of foreclosure entered at Cleveland lately provides for the sale of the Nickel Plate road [illegible] $[illegible],000.

The Suez Canal is now lighted its entire length by electricity and vessels go through its readily at night as during daylight.

A National convention of School Superintendents from all parts of the country will be held in Washington March 15, 16, and 17.

[illegible] has arrived in Berlin, it is stated, for the purpose of securing Germany's assistance in neutralizing the Suez Canal.

It is rumored that the Fiftieth Congress will be called together in October and that the fall session will run along into the regular one.

Russia has sent secret instructions to all Government Railway Inspectors on the subject of the mobilization and transportation of troops.

The officers of the Ordnance Corps are very much gratified with the performances of the new eight-inch steel rifle now being tested at Sandy Hook.

It is stated that the Executive Committee of the Western Union Telegraph Company has recommended the Board of Directors not to declare any dividend for the quarter.

Archbishop Croke says, in explanation of his attitude on the rent question, that it never entered his head to recommend a general uprising against the payment of taxes. It is believed that the explanation is the result of pressure from the Pope.

It is reported at Ottawa, Illinois, that ex-Treasurer Raymond of La Salle county, is a defaulter for $20,000, his successor for $10,000, ex-Sheriff Milligan for $20,000 and Probate Clerk Hostetls for $1,000 or more. The ex-treasurers are said to have transferred their property to their bondsmen.

In both branches of the Illinois Legislature a measure has been introduced granting the consent of the State of Illinois to the acquiring of title by the United States, by purchase or otherwise, of certain real estate in the County of Lake for military purposes, and ceding jurisdiction over the same.

Finland is an island of rugged Scandinavians from which the world hears but seldom and but little. Late advices state that it is at present agitated by a nihilistic conspiracy, and that many arrests have been made. It appears that Finland, though nearly out of the world, is not out of the fashion.

An understanding has been reached between a committee representing the American Cattle Breeders' Association and the Commissioner of Agriculture which promises more efficient co-operation between the association and the Department of Agriculture in the suppression of pleuro-pneumonia [illegible]

[illegible]

A GRAND JURY RAID.

Another Railway Accident—No Freight Trains Moving at Youngstown, O.—An Injunction, Etc.

Bismarck's Septennate Bill Adopted—Capt. Eads Dead—A Melinite Explosion, Etc.

Latest Washington, General, Eastern, Western, Southern and Foreign News.

Hunting for "Boodlerism."

CHICAGO, March 12.—Considerable excitement was caused in this city yesterday, by the prompt and very decisive action of the special Grand Jury impanelled to investigate charges against County Commissioners, contractors and others. At about noon deputy sheriffs, with subpoenas, attended by detectives went to the rooms of the County Board and seized all the books, records, and memoranda of that body and took them to the grand jury room. Similar descents were made at the County hospital, insane asylum, and infirmary, at the same time. Every document, book, etc., was taken except at the infirmary where the warden, Varnell, who has the combination of the safe was not to be found. It is believed that a very thorough and searching investigation will be made and that the results will be surprising.

Serious Railway Accident.

GODFREY, Ill., March 12.—A serious accident occurred last evening on the Jacksonville & Southeastern railroad, between Virden and Girard, by which two passenger coaches were derailed and tumbled down an embankment about eight feet high and several persons badly hurt. Two are not expected to recover.

No Freight Moving.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 12.—No movement has been made yesterday by either the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio or the Pennsylvania company to start freight trains in their yards, though it was reported that each company would have a large force on hand to take the places of the striking yardmen. The road brakemen on the Mahoning division, running through freight trains from here to Cleveland, struck yesterday and joined the yardmen, the last through freight leaving here at 10 o'clock. This closes freight traffic between Youngstown and Cleveland over the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio road.

Death of a Great Engineer.

NASSAU, N. P., March 8.—Capt. James B. Eads, the great civil engineer, the builder of iron clads during the war for the Union, the builder of the iron bridge at St. Louis, Mo., and the jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi, is dead.

KEY WEST, FLA., March 10.—It is impossible to get any further particulars relative to the death of Capt. Eads. The dispatch chronicling the fact was received here from Nassau by the steamer Lizzie J. Henderson today, forwarded by the press agent at that point. There is no telegraphic communications with Nassau and no one on board the vessel which brought the intelligence knows anything about [illegible]

[illegible]

MICHIGAN.

Condensed Reports of the Latest News from All Parts of the State.

Latest From Lansing.

SENATE.

The Senate passed the following bills: To incorporate the city of Eaton Rapids, Eaton county; to re-incorporate the village of St. Louis, Gratiot county, Sherwood in Branch county, and Ovid in Clinton county; to amend the act incorporating the Baptist State Convention; to provide for organization of mining, smelting, and mineral manufacturing companies. The joint resolution providing that all vacant State lands be held in trust for the benefit of the State University was lost, reconsidered and laid on the table. The Governor sent to the senate the following names for members of the Board of Managers of the Soldiers' Home for six years; Michael Brown, of Big Rapids, and James A. Crozier, of Menominee, and to fill a vacancy, ex-Governor Alger, of Detroit.

But little work was done in the Senate except in committee of the whole. The bill to amend the act providing for ascertaining the cereal products was the only one of importance passed. Senator Hubbell, chairman of the committee on mines, minerals, and mining interests, made a voluminous report on that mining school. It shows that there are twenty two students in attendance in the temporary building now used, and asks for an appropriation of $120,000 for a building and equipments. The Senate this afternoon adopted the joint resolution placing the limit for Capitol elevator passengers.

The Senate passed bills to amend the [illegible]

[illegible]

—A bonus of $700 has been raised at Perrin for a grain elevator.

—Five mail-carriers will be allowed Saginaw City under free delivery.

—A Japanese student now attends the sessions of the agricultural college.

—An East Saginaw lady is making preparations to go to the West Indies as a missionary.

—About half the students at the State university report themselves confirmed Christians.

—Last year 312,000 pounds of butter were turned out by the five creameries in Genesee county.

—The annual meeting of the state Spiritualists' society will occur at Grand Rapids, March 25 to 28.

—The cotton-mills at Jonesville are expected to resume operations soon, after a rest of nearly two years.

—The discovery of a Mormon Sunday-school within ten miles of East Saginaw has stirred up a hornets' nest.

—Mrs. Oaks of Wheatland has pared 1,450 bushels of apples this winter besides attending to her household work.

—There is a small piece of land not far from Muskegon, says The Chronicle, which is in no town or county of the United States.

—The Rugby association of the university has a lobby at Lansing to make an effort to get an appropriation for the university gymnasium.

—The Hon. Edward Breitung, of Negaunee, expired at midnight the 3d inst., at Eastman, Ga. His estate is valued at between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000.

—There are 324 postoffices in this state in the fourth class whose salary allowed is less than $10 a quarter, and [illegible]

[illegible]

COUNTRY LIFE AND WORK.

THROUGH DARKNESS.

One night the Angel Gabriel,
Seated in Paradise apart,
Heard the low, loving voice of God
In answer to a human heart.

"Eminent must this servant be
Who in the Good High is sought;
Whose spirit, dead to lust below,
Already is with Him on high."

He hastened over land and sea
To find this man—he went like light,
But found him not in earth or heaven,
Through all the watches of the night.

"O Lord! direct me to this man
That is so near and dear to Thee."
"The man thou speakest of, Gabriel,
Thou shalt in yon pagoda see."

Straightway to the pagoda sped
The Instructed One and looking there
Beheld before an idol grim
A solitary man at prayer.

"O canst Thou regard this man, O Lord,
Who to an idol prays, not Thee?"
"I have forgot his ignorance
Since he through darkness has found me."

—R. H. Stoddard.

UNSALTED BUTTER.

It is a sound rule, that every thing should go to market as soon as it is ready to ship. This rule applies with particular force to such a perishable article as butter. It can be kept, but it requires some latitude of language to even call such butter sweet. To make it keep longer than thirty days, it must have a liberal allowance of salt to neutralize the effects of the buttermilk that cannot always be gotten out. The French and English markets for the highest grades of butter, require that no salt whatever be put in it. The best markets of this country are tending in the same direction. The higher the price paid for the butter, the [illegible] be cut at once (I do not mean the whole patch, only that which is ripe.) It should be done in the morning early, while the dew is on, and put in the shade to cure. Put it up in the barn-loft and spread it out. Do not put more than three layers on top of each other; if you have room lay them down only just one thick and they will dry sooner. You can prepare it for market at any time, and it will be nice and green.

[illegible]

COST OF PRODUCING MILK.

Recently results have been published of experiments to determine the cost of producing milk in which the methods seem to us very faulty and defective so far as determining with any degree of accuracy this question or presenting results of any practical value. A certain number of cows will be selected for say experiments lasting a month, an accurate account will be kept of the amount and value of all food consumed by them and the quantity of milk produced, and from these data the cost per quart of milk is figured out. But such methods take no account of the fact that cows vary in the amount of milk they give according to the time from last calving, and for a longer or shorter period before calving they go dry, but have to be fed all the same. Now if a number of cows of average quality were selected for experiment which should last a year, or from one calving till the next, and an accurate account kept of the cost of keeping and the amount of milk produced it would furnish data from which the cost to the average dairyman, of producing milk could be determined with sufficient accuracy to be of practical value. In all these experiments it has [illegible]

[illegible]

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A MEMORIAL DAY.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage delivered the following in the Brooklyn Tabernacle, recently, taking for his texts: And four thousand praised the Lord.—[I. Chronicles, xxiii., 5. This day shall be unto you for a memorial.—[Exodus, xii., 14.

When, week before last, the communicant membership of this church passed into the 4,000, now reaching 4,051, the first part of my text came to my mind, and I bethought myself what a grand thing it would be if the 4,000 of our communicant membership would like the 4,000 of the ancient temple make it their lifetime business to praise the Lord. Let them all take harp and timbrel and anthem and doxology!

The allusion of my second text is to the Passover, which commemorated the deliverance of the children of Israel on the night when the destroying angel sped through the land of Egypt, destroying the enemy but saving the Israelites, because on the door posts of their dwellings was sprinkled the blood of a lamb. To-day we come to celebrate a grander Passover, all peril going away from our soul at the sight of the sprinkled blood of the Lamb of God on the door posts of our hearts. Christ, our Passover, sacrificed for us. This day shall be unto you for a memorial.

The Sacramental Sabbath, whether it comes in an American church or an English chapel, or a Scotch kirk, is more impressive than any other Sabbath. Its light is holier, calmer, sweeter; its voices more tender; its touch is softer; its memories are more chastened [illegible]

[illegible]

Again, my friends, this is an absorbing scene because it arouses so many precious memories. We look back, and remember the days of our childhood when, long before we knew the meaning of the bread and wine, we sat in the side pews on sacramental days or in the galleries, and looked as our fathers, mothers and older brothers and sisters sat at the communion. Or, if we sat with them, we pulled at mother's dress and said:

"What does that mean? What is in that cup? What is that on the plate?"

O, yes; we remember those sacramental days of our boyhood. We remember how much more tender father was on that day than on any other day. We remember how mother stood, and without saying one word, looked at us, and her eyes got full of tears. Oh, the dear old soul! They have gone! But until the day of our death we will associate this holy ordinance with their memory. And when our work on earth is done we will just go up and sit down beside them in the heavenly church, as we used to sit beside them in the earthly church, and then we will drink new wine in our Father's kingdom.

Behold the saints, beloved of God,
Washed are their robes in Jesus' blood;
Brighter than angels, lo! they shine;
Their glories splendid and sublime.

I remark again: This scene is tender to-day because it is a confessional. You and I remember the time when if a man had charged us with anything like imperfection or wrong doing, we would have thrown ourselves back on our honor, and said:

"You don't know who you are talking to. I shall resent such an insult to [illegible]

[illegible]

A CRUEL FATE.

At that memorable [illegible]

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 23, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED I. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

An attempt upon the life of the Russian Czar was made last week by the bomb process. Hundreds of arrests are being made.

Lansing Republican: Somebody remarks that something seems to be lacking in the present Democratic administration. We can guess the first time. It's brains.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: It is now said that the world will not come to an end until A. D. 3000. This leaves us 1,113 years in which to study the second section of the Inter-State Commerce bill. The time is short, but by a little hustling we think the work can be done.

Again the daily press is full of the particulars of another horrible rail road accident, by which thirty-three persons are killed and forty or more seriously wounded. The accident occurred on the Boston & Providence road, and was caused by the train plunging through a bridge. The train caught fire but was luckily extinguished. An eye-witness describes the scene of the disaster as horrible in the extreme.

Gov. Luce has signed the Lakey Game and Fish Warden bill, and immediately appointed W. A. Smith, of Grand Rapids, State Game and Fish Warden for a term of four years. Smith at once accepted the appointment. He is an energetic attorney of Grand Rapids, 28 years of age, and well-known throughout the State. The new Warden receives an annual salary of $1,200 a year, and has all the powers of a sheriff in enforcing the game and fish laws. He may appoint three deputies in each county.

The "peace of Europe" must be a very expensive luxury. The military budgets are enormous, and probably aggregate nearly a thousand millions of dollars annually. The military expenditures of Germany have been lower for several years than those of her chief rivals in Europe. Where Russia pays $232,000,000 annually for standing armies and preparations for war, and France and Great Britain (including India) $170,000,000 and $148,000,000 respectively for their military establishments, Germany expends $158,000,000. This is $2,000,000 less than Italy is credited with paying, if reliance may be placed upon the figures given by a Paris journal.

The New York Tribune says that probably the most striking feature of Mr. Beecher's funeral was the entire absence from Plymouth Church of the customary emblems of mourning. Not a scrap of crape of black cloth was to be seen in the decorations, and one ignorant of the occasion, entering the church, would have supposed from the profusion of flowers that a wedding, not a funeral, was about to take place. Elsewhere in Brooklyn, however, the conventional signs of grief were freely displayed. During the funeral hours business was almost at a standstill, and the city was absorbed in paying tribute to its most widely-known citizen. In four churches besides Plymouth crowded meetings were held, and earnest words were spoken in honor of Mr. Beecher by many of his fellow-pastors. Thousands flocked to the church in which the preachers eloquent voice had sounded during so many years, to take a last look at his face.

Congress passed the Mexican pension bill and the President signed it, but the report comes from Washington that $7,000,000 would be available for that purpose were it possible to do the necessary work in the pension office. Commissioner Black asked for an extra force of 250 clerks, so that he might make the necessary examinations, and place those entitled to pensions on account of services in the Mexican war on the rolls by the first of July. Congress, however, failed to appropriate a single dollar for the purpose, and the veterans who fought under Scott and Taylor will have to wait indefinitely. It is impossible to do the extra work with the present force in the pension office without neglecting the pressing cases of soldiers of the civil war. The number of entirely new cases on the latter account during the months of January and February just past is 3,000 in excess of the number of new cases filed during the same months last year, and they are still rolling in. If the Fiftieth Congress makes prompt provisions for the necessary additional force of clerks, it is possible to get the Mexican claimants on the roll by the 1st of April, 1888. There is no hope for them before that time. The knowledge of these facts will save applicants for pensions under the act a great deal of unnecessary correspondence.

Traverse City, by 5 majority, voted not to incorporate as a city, last week.

Northern Michigan News.

Cheboygan wants a dry-dock, and wants it bad!

Mackinac Island has locked the door after the horse was stolen, or about the same thing. It has bought a steam fire engine.

The failure of the river and harbor bill does not affect Cheboygan harbor. There is now available for the work of improving $19,380.

Several hundred men employed on the Sault branch of the D. M. & M. railroad struck recently for better treatment and higher wages.

Last week Quay & Son, of Cheboygan, has contracted to supply 320,000 first-class shingles for the new hotel at Mackinac Island this season.

At the Petoskey charter election last week D. C. Page was elected president. It was "amendment" and "anti-amendment" and the former got there in great shape.

At Cross Village, Lake Michigan is clear of ice to within a short distance of Skillagalee light house. Travel to and from Beaver Island is over a very circuitous route. Prospects are good there for an early opening of navigation.

Cheboygan Tribune: While C. W. Caskey was in town this week, he made definite arrangements with Capt. E. A. Bouchard to sail the steamer Van Raalte the coming season. The Captain will feel at home on her, and will need no introduction to the people along her route.

An early opening of navigation is looked for at Harbor Springs. The ice in the harbor is from fourteen to eighteen inches thick, but the ice is breaking around the shores. Open water can be seen from the bluffs. The mail carrier from Beaver Island reports the ice nearly out at the head of the Beavers.

Plank's Grand Hotel will be the name of the new hotel at Mackinac Island, which is to be built this spring. It will cost $300,000, will have 620 feet frontage, and will accommodate 1,000 guests. The owners will be the Michigan Central and G. R. & I. railroads, the Detroit & Cleveland Steam Navigation Co., and John O. Plank, of Thousand Islands, N. Y., and it will be leased to Mr. Plank for six years.

Mancelona Herald: Several of our citizens have received letters of enquiry from wealthy acquaintances concerning the prospects of the Intermediate valley for a railroad. The latest is from a gentleman who is now operating several large saw mills, saying that he would invest $1,000,000 in manufacturing at Bellaire as soon as the D., C. & E. R. R. is a reality.—[Bellaire Correspondent.]——A meeting of physicians along the line of the G. R. & I. R. R. and adjacent points was held at the office of Dr. Rockwell, on Thursday last, for the purpose of organizing a medical society, to be known as the Northwestern Medical Association. Dr. F. R. Boyd, of Kalkaska, was elected President; Dr. N. P. Blakeslee, of Elmira, vice president; Dr. J. B. Martin, of Manton, sec'y; and Dr. A. H. Rockwell, of Mancelona, Treasurer. The next meeting will be held at Mancelona, April 8th, at 7 o'clock p. m.

Harbor Springs Independent: Neil Gallagher went over to the Island again last week, and will bring back another drove of horses.——Geo. Wright will go to Charlevoix this week to superintend the work of fitting out the steamer Van Raalte.——The foundation for the new county jail has been laid and work is progressing rapidly. Contractor Snyder says he will have the building completed in 20 days——Mrs. G. W. Dickinson came up from Cleveland last week, to prepare for their removal to that city. Mr. Dickinson has accepted the management of the stock farm of a wealthy Clevelander, and will reside in the city during his administration of affairs.——Editor and Oil Inspector Bontecou was nosing around yesterday, searching after oil to test. He had settled several barrels, when he struck one that seemed to be a "little off." The oil did not rise readily in the apparatus, and was "off color." But he kept on and boiled it in the machine. It acted "most uncommon queer," and Bontecou was just going to set the seal of his condemnation on the stuff, when the proprietor of the oil came up and knocked our doughty inspector out in the first round by the ejaculation—"What in h—ll are you doing with that barrel of lard oil???" Bonty dropped his instruments, fell over a box of candles and gasped—"lard oil!" "Yes! lard oil. Can't you read the brand on the head here?" The worthy inspector followed the owner's finger, and saw "A-1 Lard Oil" emblazoned on the barrel he was about to condemn as dangerous kerosene. He picked up his tester, folded his overcoat about him, and silently stole away. Parties using lard oil will do well to petition for Bontecou's removal. He will soon be raising the test on whale oil and oleomargerine. [Bontecou, however, says the whole story is a darned lie.]

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Luce, Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

Communication.

In a recent issue of the Sentinel the question is asked, "Why is it that the female excels in all studies not even excepting mathematics and actually outstrips her stronger brothers in every study where they work together?" That question is a poser; and on the very face of it assumes the question to be proven by the assertion, "That in nearly all our middle-grade schools the girls are ahead of the boys, not only in mathematics, but in nearly all branches pursued." "Why is it?" That is the question, and if answered in the affirmative, proves that woman is the superior in mental make-up, though perhaps not quite so strong physically. But the question itself seems to evoke another quite relevant to the point, "Why does a man think?"

That aptitude, spoken of in relation to woman's superior mental activity, has its origin in the brain. She may be weaker in a physical point of view, but in ethical make-up she is much ahead of her stronger brother. If the subject is examined carefully, it will be seen that woman has a keener mental perception, finer social feeling and a more sensitive emotional nature; in fact, has superior social and ethical powers, or aptitude, and when she has had the same opportunity that men have had, she will lead the world in all reform tending to elevate the race. By nature she is adapted to be the teacher of humanity.

The answer to the question, why she is superior, must be found in the constitution of the brain, that organ being the seat of thought and consciousness, and the variation of that brain, in its texture and conformation, accounts for the differences we see in individuals and all education should be applied with reference to the capacity; mentally, morally and physically of the individual. Any system of education which fails to develop a healthy organization, fails in its first essential. It will be found that there is a difference in the male and female brain. At the base of the brain, which is the seat of animal life, muscular activity, passions and appetites, the male head is more amply developed. The female brain not being so fully developed in that region is one reason why she excels in any matter requiring cool, calm, quick perception and the reason why she is so different in many respects.

I am not an 'Educator,' but feel some interest in the matter, and believe that our present school system needs revision, which must come through a more correct knowledge of man's whole nature.

***

"It is conceded that one of the most dangerous elements in this republic to-day is the illiterate class. Seven millions of persons who can not write their names or read a political platform, nearly one-third of whom are voters, hold the balance of power in civil affairs, and make the decision of political questions a travesty on intelligence. But illiteracy and vice very largely clasp hands. The indolence of the people has its focus among those who from lack of spirit or from untoward surroundings content themselves with the darkness of ignorance and the incapacity resulting therefrom.

In the semi-ignorance of such large masses of our people there is the probability, if not the certainty, that views involving the rights of property will be formed which contain the leaven of social disorder if not of anarchy and ruin. If the schools, the press, the platform, and the pulpit cannot guide the thoughts of the people, supply the light that is needed, clearly unfold the true principles of social and economical science, where can we look for help? Evidently the question is an educational one."

FISKE.

How should the poor man vote on the amendment relative to salaries of state officers? At present none but rich men can afford to hold those offices. There is a general tendency at the present time to elevate labor and extend political recognition to the poorer classes, so that qualification through education and training are likely to be recognized as the proper requisite to advancement. The poor man who votes against this amendment, votes to keep public offices a monopoly in the hands of the rich.

QUERIES.

(26) Who signed the Declaration of Independence first?

(27) Who received Gen. Washington's commission when he resigned command of the army?

(28) What is the lost colony of America?

(29) How is it explained that the Mississippi river runs up hill?

(30) What did England pay per head for the Hessians who fought against the colonies?

OUR SUPERSTITIONS.

It will, perhaps, surprise many Americans to read, as they may do in a recent letter to a French paper from the United States, that the people of this country are among the most superstitious in the world, exceeding in this respect the French, the Germans, and the English. This statement cannot be proved, for it is not true that any large number of our people equal in superstitiousness the French peasantry, or even the English yeomanry. And yet it is undeniable that our sailors are full of superstitions, and that many of our farmers are the absolute slaves of fallacies about the influence of the phases of the moon upon their crops and upon the weather.

Many women, too, are apt to shudder at the breaking of a mirror, fearing bad luck, and a whole family of superstitions has been grouped about the cat. The idle and foolish fear, in the South West, that it is "bad luck" to remove a cat from one house to another with a moving family, has probably been the cause of the desertion and cruel death of more than one unfortunate animal. Many superstitions, indeed, are wicked, and all are foolish.

The belief in the "unluckiness" of Friday is common all over the Christian world, and retains a certain hold in this country, in spite of the "lucky" circumstances that America was discovered on Friday, that the Pilgrims landed on Friday, and that the Declaration of Independence was adopted on Friday. The superstition arises from the belief that our Saviour was crucified on Friday. How unworthy to suppose that the event which saved mankind should have doomed the world to perpetual ill-fortune on the day of its occurrence!

If Friday were indeed an unlucky day, nothing could have been undertaken in this year, 1886, because the year began on Friday, will end on Friday, and contains fifty-three Fridays; four of its months contain five Fridays each; the longest and shortest days of the year are both Fridays, and, more dreadful still, five changes of the moon fall on Friday!

The fear of the number thirteen is not so common in this country as it is in Europe. The superstition has its origin in the fact that the apostles, with the Saviour, made thirteen at table. The superstition in its original form was to the effect that, if thirteen men were seated together, one of the number was sure to prove a traitor or a criminal and be hanged. As executions ceased to be of common occurrence the notion simply that one of the thirteen would die within a year replaced the former superstition.

The accidental spilling of salt is often noted by the American housewife as "unlucky," but rather, it seems, by way of a jest than seriously. This superstition also goes back to ancient times, when the exchange of a pinch of that necessary article, salt, was a sign of friendship, quite naturally, and its refusal a token of hostility. The overthrow of a dish containing it was held, therefore, to foreshadow the end of friendship.

Superstitions about the moon are very old and of very varied origin. Men of science tell us that there is, so far as influence of the moon upon the weather is concerned, but one chance for any such effect; and that is in the possibility that the very slight amount of heat that the full moon radiates may have some little influence in dispelling clouds and rendering the atmosphere dryer.

A good story is told of a colored man in the South who, though ignorant, was wise enough to get along without squaring all his acts by the state of the moon. He was a successful gardener, and the vegetables he produced were always the earliest and the finest.

"Do you plant your seeds in the new of the moon, Gabriel, or in the old of the moon?" he was asked.

"Go 'long!" said Gabriel; "I plants my seeds in de ground, an' lets de moon take care ob hers'f!"—Youth's Companion.

A Novel Settlement.

A City of Mexico correspondent writes: Up in the mountains, about twenty leagues from this capital, there is a "pueblo," or community of pure Indians, which is governed by six wise old men and six venerable women, who form a sort of patriarchal council, to which all disputes or differences occurring in the village are submitted for arbitration. In order to attain patriarchal dignity, a man must, during his youth and middle age, have been honest, laborious, and truthful. The matriarch must have brought up a family of children properly, and never been given to lying, stealing, or gossiping.

In this pueblo each Saturday is set apart for labors of love and charity. All the able-bodied men and women leave their own land or usual occupations and till the grounds of the widows and young orphans, or else work for the benefit of the old, sick, blind, and helpless. Sometimes, when there is a large family of boys and the parents can not give each land "whereon to raise his food," some energetic youth, who has heard of the great world called "Mexico City," desires to go there to earn his bread and perhaps that, too, of some dusky maiden whom he designs or hopes to wed. The fact that he does not know a phrase of Spanish rarely deters him; moreover, there are a few learned men in Mexico City who understand the Ottomie language.

When the family of a young Indian has consented to the proposed exodus the patriarchs and matriarchs hold a "solemn council," ways and means are discussed, and then the would-be emigrant is earnestly admonished: "Be brave, honest, truthful, and industrious, and never disgrace your pueblo by any act unworthy an Ottomie."

The lad's departure is a serious affair. The entire community accompany him to a certain boundary line and the "venerable fathers and mothers" bestow their benediction upon him. In the course of time, or whenever the exile has a chance to send a message to his native land, the "venerable fathers and mothers" are as tenderly remembered as his own "blood kin."

Magistrate—You say you are a tourist? Prisoner—Yes, sir. I love nature in all her radiant beauty——Magistrate (hastily)—Never mind that! How much money have you about your clothes? Prisoner—Seventy-five cents. Magistrate (severely)—Then I shall commit you as a tramp. We draw the line between tourists and tramp at $1.—Philadelphia Call.

"There is my wife," said the duelist to his second, in a voice broken with emotion; "if I am killed she will be left alone in this cold, cold world; but, thank Heaven, I am rich, and if the worst comes to the worst, she will be provided for." "You ought to write her a letter," suggested the second. "I will, and in case I fall will you deliver it?" "Certainly," responded the second, endeavoring to keep the tears back, "and by the way, old fellow, just say a good word for me."—Life.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Coryon ... Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, William Coryon, ... guardian of the estate of said Richard Coryon, ... the 2d day of June, A. D. 1886, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the ... hereinafter described, in the county of Charlevoix in said State, on Saturday, the 23d day of April, A. D. 1887, at ... o'clock in the forenoon of that day, (subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise ...) ... All that ... situate ... the south-east quarter ... of the north-west quarter ... of section ... in the township thirty-four (34) North, of Range ... West.

Dated, Feb. 28, 1887.

WILLIAM COYRON,
as Guardian of Richard Coryon, Insane.

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will occur as follows: Boyne City, Friday, March 25th, 1887; East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887. Examinations will commence at 8:30 a. m., and end at 5:30 p. m. Candidates for first or second grades can write only at the examination at Boyne City, and may write until 5 o'clock, p. m.

WM HARRIS, Sec., Norwood.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES. The grandest and ... Female Trouble ... simplest known remedy for all ... womankind is heir—$1 per box ... Reliable Lady Agents ... themselves and become benefactors ... engaging in the sale of this remedy. For more ... and particulars. Address

PAN-ZAMA MED. CO.,
Frankfort, Ind.

CROSS & SONS.,

Buy and Sell all kinds of

Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.

Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,

Photographer.

In Bradbeer's Gallery.

Photographs of all sizes taken.

Old Pictures copied and enlarged.

CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.

My Stock of

Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete.

If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,

ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

—ON—

Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both

Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

CHARLEVOIX

Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich.,

Manufacturers of

Sash and Doors,

Blinds, Mouldings etc.

NEWELL

Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails

kept in stock.

Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of

Building Material

Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS.

Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building.

Correspondence solicited.

Washburn & Ackert,

FOUNDREYMEN,

MACHINISTS,

And Manufacturers of The

Charlevoix Plow.

CHARLEVOIX

Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:

Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL ... $25,000
SURPLUS ... 2,000

The liability of stockholders in all State Banks as provided in Art. 3174 Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.

We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:

NATIONAL PARK BANK ... NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK ... CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK ... GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK ... DETROIT.

Bank of

Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking

Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites

People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will

Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking

Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private Investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,

Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

Fox & Miller

Offer a

Mammoth Stock

OF

BOOTS, SHOES

and other

FOOT WEAR,

--AT--

LOWER PRICES

Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a

FIRST-CLASS

SHOEMAKER,

And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

J. A. HEATH,

FURNITURE

—AND—

JOBBING SHOP.

Antrim Street,

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

All classes of furniture made to order, furniture repaired and shop work of all kind promptly attended to, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Manufacturer of BED SPRINGS.

Give me call.

RIFENBURG

MILLING CO.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers

3 EXTRA GRADES OF

FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

It Pays to Buy the

BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for residents, ... to boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and fast sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

D. Sherwood & Co

We are now receiving our Fall and Winter Stock of

BOOTS

AND SHOES,

which is the most complete in all respects ever brought here and embraces

Lumbermen's Rubbers,
Wool Boots,
Shoe Pacs,
And Everything

Usually kept in a country shoe store.

We also have some big bargains in Women's and Misses Shoes for common wear.

Womens grain shoes for $1.25. Misses grain shoes for $1.00. This Shoe cannot be undersold by any of the dealers.

Also quite an assortment in fine Shoes to please all, having taken advantage of the market and purchased them cheap. We shall give our customers the advantage of the low figures.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at

Wholesale or Retail

All kinds of

FRESH MEATS,

SALT PORK,

SMOKED & SALTED

HAMS,

Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S

MARKET

Is supplied with

All Kinds Of

MEATS

At Lowest Prices.

CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.

Corner of State & Mason sts.,

JOHN McCABE.

1-3 OFF SALE!

At Miss Spaulding's

MILLINERY ROOMS,

I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only.

Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $5.00 will receive a present of her choice of any untrimmed hat in the store.

Come early and secure a Bargain.

MISS L. SPAULDING.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of

Blacksmithing,

At the

Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH H. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey, Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

W. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, ... west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., ... residence Main st., Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, ... second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-Office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 291, meet ... and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 148, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows Hall.

L. O. L.—Pine Bluff No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 86, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 150, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—D. ...
Treasurer—Albert F. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and ... Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, H. ..., Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, B. H. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Bering.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
R. A. Campbell, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 150 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinac. L. G. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St. Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address,
JOHN MUNROE, Jr., General Manager, South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

T. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist, Office in West's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R

"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West (read down)		Detroit	Going East (read up)
7 00 am	5 45 pm	[illegible]	11 15 am	[illegible]
10 2	8 45	Newberry	6 21	2 05
12 00	9 [illegible]	Seney	5 15	12 35
	10 12	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 31	Au Train	3 25	9 05
3 50	12 40	Marquette	2 15
	12 50 pm	Marquette	2 00 pm
	1 30	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 40
	5 30	Houghton	9 20
	6	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M C Co boats, M C & G R ... R R at ... H ... D.
E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

IN EFFECT SEPTEMBER 27, 1886.

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.		No 6	No 8	No 4
Mackinaw City	Lv	7 35 a m	9 30 p m
Petoskey		8 51	10 51
Boyne Falls		9 16	11 30
Mancelona		10 18	12 30
Walton Junc		11 50	1 50	6 15 p m
Cadillac	Ar	12 40	2 50	6 10
	Lv	12 45	3 05	6 30
Le Roy		1 34	3 46	7 07
Reed City	Ar	1 55	7 ...	7 ...
	Lv	2 15	7 ...	8 ...
Big Rapids		2 40	7 ...	8 03
Stanwood		3 05	8 11	8 31
Howard City		3 33	8 40	8 55
D G H & M Cross		4 30	9 03	9 20
Grand Rapids	Ar	4 30	10 15	10 15
	Lv	7 15	10 30	10 50
Plainwell		8 30	5 15	11 45
Kalamazoo	Ar	9 05	6 41	1 12
	Lv	9 10	7 10	1 40
Sturgis		10 27	7 30	2 00
Ft Wayne	Ar	12 40	8 59	3 28
	Lv	1 ...	11 20	6 00
Richmond		4 30	1 15
Cincinnati	Ar	7 30	3 ...
			7 25

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.		No 5	No 7	No 3
Cincinnati, leave		7 35 a m	7 20 p m
Richmond		10 20	10 ...
Fort Wayne	Ar	1 50	1 15
	Lv	2 10
Sturgis		4 21	5 25
Kalamazoo	Ar	5 40	6 55
	Lv	5 50	7 20
Plainwell		6 33	7 48
Grand Rapids	Ar	7 30	8 ...
	Lv	11 30
D, G. H., & M. Cross		11 45	5 10
Howard City		12 52	5 ...
Stanwood		1 22	6 48
Big Rapids		1 41	7 03
Reed City	Ar	2 18	7 4
	Lv	2 35	8 ...
Le Roy		3 09	8 31
Cadillac		3 ...	9 ...
	Lv	3 55	9 30
Walton Junc		4 45	10 25
Mancelona		6 16	11 50
Boyne Falls		7 14	12 52
Petoskey		7 40	1 30
Mackinaw City		9 30	2 55

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

BUTTERFLIES.

Some Curious Scientific Facts—Mimicry in Nature.

Rev. W. J. Holland, pastor of the Bellefield Presbyterian church, and one of the most noted entymologists of the country, has just returned from an extended trip. During the last month he has received some very rare and valuable accessions to his already large collection of butterflies. The new specimens come from China, Japan, Africa, Switzerland, and parts of this country. One of the most interesting is that sent by Rev. B. C. Henry, author of the "Cross and Dragon," formerly of Sharpsburg, but now missionary in the island of Hainan, China. Rev. Henry was the first white man to collect insects in that island for scientific purposes. He has sent Rev. Mr. Holland some 550 specimens of butterflies, representing about 160 different species. The specimens belong to what is known as the Siam fauna and contain six species hitherto unknown to science.

In showing the new specimens to a Commercial-Gazette reporter recently, Mr. Holland said: "These butterflies exemplify in a striking manner what is known in science as mimicry. Let me explain. Here is a male butterfly," he said, pointing to one of the finest looking specimens, "and by its side is the female. This female differs greatly in appearance from the male of her own species, but is almost the counterpart of the male of another species. Now that male, to which the female is so similar in appearance, belongs to a species that, on account of peculiar excretions from the body, enjoys immunity from the ravages of birds. For some reason unknown to science, there are certain species that are thus free from the attack of birds. As the propagation of the butterfly depends principally on the female, nature has provided that in those species not favored with immunity from bird attacks the females should resemble the form which enjoy this immunity.

"I have just received a collection of fifteen hundred specimens from the west coast of tropical Africa, where Du Chaillu started out to hunt gorillas. The African butterflies present a great variety of form and color. In the Madagascar butterflies the male is constant in the same species, but the female shows as high as seven varieties of form. This variety of form is no doubt due to the principle of mimicry by which the female butterfly is protected."

"On this theory, then, the Arctic butterflies ought to be white," suggested the reporter.

"The Arctic butterflies are often white," continued Mr. Holland, but not because that is the color of the snow. In Greenland the butterflies are the insects of the summer as well as here. Some of our butterflies are almost the color of the vegetables on which they perch and hence can scarcely be distinguished from their surroundings.

"It is a curious fact about the Greenland butterfly that the same species which here matures in forty days requires in that climate over two years. There is one species of butterfly that is a great cosmopolite. It is found in China and in Pennsylvania. I refer to the thistle butterfly. It has followed the thistle-down all over the world. The intelligence of butterflies is shown in their wonderful memory. They will fly about for hours and then return to the identical leaf from which they started and go to bed. The largest butterflies, the orthoptera, measure as high as eleven inches across the wings from tip to tip."

"How large a collection have you now?" was asked.

"I never keep any account of the number of specimens, as that alone does not make a collection valuable. I think I have the most complete collection of this country. Of the 639 specimens in America north of the Rio Grande I have an abundant representation. But my collection is not complete, nor will it be until I have about 750,000 specimens. That will be in the days of my great great grandson perhaps."—Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette.

Where He Got the Pedigree.

I don't know that dog shows are very reliable things. The dog is an honest animal. It is very hard for a dog to get up any very serious deception on anybody. A setter can hardly impose innocent people as a scotch terrier, nor can you sell a Newfoundland for a fighting bulldog. You can't get a greyhound of respectable character to attempt to pass itself off for a King Charles spaniel, and no amount of make-up can change a mastiff into a Japanese pug. But when man, with his inventive powers in superior development, with his enormous advantage in reasoning, gets hold of a dog he is not above taking advantage of his dumbness to make any misrepresentation that occurs to him. There's a young gentleman in town who owned a dog some years ago. It was honest enough not to attempt to hide its propensities, and went about eating up everything it could get, with a partiality for leather. This was rather annoying, and as the young gentleman was going to be married anyway he said to the dog: "You're a very honest dog, there's no denying that. You're a frank dog, and there is no guile in you, but you've got to go. Your frankness takes a turn I don't like."

He didn't care to drown the dog, he didn't need to sell him, for he was wealthy, so he gave him to a man of humble capacities who was willing to take him. The bench show came on, and walking through it with his lady-love the young gentleman was somewhat surprised to get a polite and courteous wag of the tail from a noble animal with a gold medal hanging around his neck and a pedigree a yard long stretched out behind him. It was his leather-eating friend. He went to the man he had presented the dog to.

"So you've sold the dog."

"Yes sir."

"What did you get for him?"

"Two hundred dollars, sir."

"Two hundred—what? But I say, where did you get the pedigree?"

The man flushed a little and said modestly:

"Oh you can't expect to sell a dog without a pedigree, you know, sir."

There should be an inquest held on that award.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A 15-year-old girl visited Bracebridge, Canada, one day recently, and distinguished herself in various ways. She visited the public school, and had the courtesy of the teaching fraternity extended to her on the ground that she taught a private school at her home in Midland. She hired livery rigs, and ordered goods which she never called for, with great industry, and generally exhibited such remarkable enterprise that it was thought well that a constable and magistrate should wait upon her and advise her to return home, which advice she judiciously accepted.

THE FIELD OF FAIR OAKS.

A Thrifty Farmer Speculates in Soldiers' Skulls and Relics.

The condition of the battle-ground of Seven Pines and Fair Oaks is a disgrace to the citizens of Virginia and the nation at large. Bones of those who died in that bloody conflict are scattered thickly on the surface of the ground, and if the facts were told, many of the stones which stand in the National Cemetery of Seven Pines, within a quarter of a mile of where many men who wore the blue and gray fell, mark almost empty graves.

It would be hard for any one who had not gone over the ground of one of the hottest battles ever fought to believe that twenty-four years afterwards the bones of the slain lie half hidden by leaves and brush by the score, and yet such is the case. The theater of the great but undecisive struggle at Seven Pines has been turned into a place where a few men can reap financial profit by guiding visitors to the spot where skulls protrude from the ground and where all that remains of many brave lads who are numbered among the missing lie. It is difficult to escape the guides, but it pays the visitor to make his own way over the field of battle. He does not follow the beaten path in which those who gain money by exhibiting the bones of the boys who died amid the roar of cannon and the rattle of musketry take their victims, and he gains for himself positive information of the actual condition of things.

A Sunday News correspondent, in company with W. H. Barrett and Michael Fogarty, of Philadelphia, and M. C. Thorton, of Wisconsin, slipped away from these guides and were horrified at what they found. Under the leaves and twigs and amid the thick brush of oak and pines, which has sprung up during the last twenty years, the bones of many brave men were found. They had answered to the order to charge the batteries which stood on the other side of the ploughed field and had laid down their lives ere the outer intrenchment was taken. As night fell on the 30th day of May, 1862, many of the boys failed to answer the roll-call and were placed among the missing. It was a partly cultivated field then. Now pines twenty feet in height cover the bloody ground and even stand on the breast-works from behind which the rebel cannons belched forth death, and where the marks of the wheels of the artillery are still visible. The bones of many of the fallen still lie there, although the flag which flies from the staff in the Seven Pines Cemetery is within sight. Whether these bones were clothed in the blue or the gray is unknown, but many men are ready to testify that whoever was intrusted with the duty of collecting those bones has failed in his trust.

The reason for the failure is manifest. The fact that the bones still lie there attracts many people to the field of carnage, and every one that falls into the clutches of the guides must pay his toll. A party of twenty-one, which included several men from Philadelphia and vicinity, had to pay $5.25 for walking behind a guide for an hour. This same guide owns 700 acres of the land upon which the battle was fought. He began by purchasing one acre, for which he paid $3. The same price was paid for the remainder of the ground which he has bought and every cent of the money was extorted from Northern visitors to the battle-field. He was ordered by the Government to pick up all the bones, disinter the buried soldiers and see that they were removed to the cemetery just across the road. Instead of doing so he has placed skulls and other bones of the dead in various places and guides the visitors by beaten paths to these spots. He never takes them through the thicket. Another dodge of this man Lynne is to find a battered musket ball on the ground and sell it to the visitor for fifty cents if he can, and for ten cents if he can get no more. The balls are dropped by him when the visitor is not looking, and picked up when he is looking. —Richmond Letter to Philadelphia News.

The Duration of Life.

How long may a human being live in perfect possession of his faculties and powers for good or evil? The question is important to all. Conceive a statesman with a despotic power of influencing men's wills who should last as long as Old Parr! Think of a beauty who might eclipse the maidens of each fresh season, and whose hesternae rosae should outglow their fresh loveliness, as long as Ninon de l'Enclos was a toast, or Marion Delorme, to whom Balzac assigns 130 years! History, social or political, would be altered; the whole progress of humanity might be advanced for æons or retarded by one man, who varied from the kindly race of men and lived twice as long as his oldest neighbor. If we may believe a curious old French book, "History of Persons who have lived for many Ages, and grown young again" (Paris, 1716), this fancy is not wholly absurd or impossible. All Europe expects great changes from the death of Prince Bismarck, of Von Moltke, of the emperor. How would all Europe look if they retained their vigor till, say, 1950? Before the deluge such lives would have seemed prematurely cut short at 150. And since the deluge? Here on our French author enlightens us with learning from Pliny, Cotterio and Phlegon of Tralles. Thus Fohi, the founder of the Chinese empire, reigned 115 years, and so did Apaphus of Thebes Egyptian, but he, surely, was the son of Zeus! Antiochus Epiphanes died at 149! A king of the Omncanians lived to 115, but that was in Arabia Felix. Tacitus gives 165 years to Tuisco, a German prince. Daddon, an Illyrian noble, lived for 500 years, according to Alexander Cornelius. Anacreon gives Cinyras of Cyprus 160 years, and Arganthonius, a Spaniard, saw 150 summers. According to Bonfinius, Attila was 124 when he died of the consequences of a revel on the night of his marriage—his second marriage. How long had he lamented his first consort? Epimenides was 157 (others say 229) at his regretted decease. At 190 Euphranor gave up taking private pupils. Sophocles perished by an accident at 130. The Apocrypha mentions the circumstances that Mattathias died by misadventure at 146. The countess of Arundel (temp. Charles I) employed a Mrs. Gamp of 125. Thus, even in its natural way, we need never despair of any man attaining, say, 130, a pleasant thought in the case of really great men, whose lives are useful to their country. Why, we might have Cromwell with us yet! —Longman's Magazine.

A St. Louis bank cashier says this is the way to tell a twenty-five from a twenty-cent piece: "On the quarter the eagle is looking over its right wing, and on the twenty-cent piece over the left wing." The chances are twenty-five to twenty that if that eagle looked him straight in the eye the cashier would skip to Canada.—Philadelphia ...

Divided Responsibility.

There are three brothers in the Patrick family—one of the sisters is the wife of Editor Medill of the Chicago Tribune—Abraham, James and Andrew ... Abraham ... New Philadelphia, Ill., who told ... the story himself.

When the three brothers were boys their father purchased a litter of young pigs of a particular breed quite uncommon in those days. During their infancy he watched those pigs with a very jealous eye, and would have missed his supper at any time rather than to have seen the porkers go to their nests hungry. One day he took Abraham aside and said:

"My son, I am called away on business and expect to be gone a week. I want you to look after the pigs and see that they get all they want."

"All right, father," said Abraham.

Going to James, the old gentleman said:

"I am going out of town for a week, James, and while I am gone, you feed and water those pigs, the same as I have done."

"I'll give them my personal attention," said James.

"Andrew," said old Mr Patrick, taking the young man aside, "I charge you with the pigs. Don't fail to feed them at least three times a day while I am away."

"You may depend on me, father; I shall see that the pigs do not suffer," said Andrew.

Having delivered his commands, the old gentleman climbed into his carriage and took up his journey. Eight days later he returned. When he entered the house he met Abraham.

"Did you feed the pigs?" he asked.

"No, James did," said Abraham.

Meeting James he asked: "How are the pigs?"

"I don't know," replied James; "Andrew took care of them."

Hunting up Andrew, he exclaimed: "Well, Andrew, have the pigs prospered under your care?"

"I haven't seen the pigs," said Andrew; "the other boys looked after them."

The old gentleman, with a horrible suspicion under his hat, rushed to the pen. There, in death's cold embrace, lay the young porkers stiff and stark. A few minutes later three young men were being reasoned with in the woodshed, and it is altogether likely that they experienced a change of heart before the old gentleman and his cowhide left them.—Cleveland Leader.

Messrs. Walsh and Tweedy, of the United States Geological Survey, were caught out in an electric storm while sketching from a high peak near Dixie Butte, Ore., recently. First there was a buzzing sound, apparently coming from under the drawing table that Mr. Walsh was using. He put his hand under the drawing sheet, and received a severe shock. Tweedy, who was lying down, was disturbed, and jumped to his feet, but went down again quickly, for where he stood the electric fluid entered in such quantities as to produce an almost unbearable pricking sensation. Both men felt tremendous shocks, their hair stood up like bristles, their muscles twitched, and in all respects they felt as if connected to a powerful electric battery. Through it all the projecting rocks gave forth a musical humming sound.

Most of us, says the London Illustrated News, know the story of the American who, visiting some provincial museum on the continent, was shown a rusty blade which, he was assured, was the identical knife used by the brave Charlotte when she finished the bloodthirsty Jean Paul. "Where's the fork?" asked the American. He must have been twin brother to, if not the self-same American globetrotter of whom I heard lately at Candy, in Ceylon. He was visiting a Buddhist temple, and the priests showed him a lamp in which burned a sacred fire, which, they said, had not been extinguished for 2,000 years. "Is that so?" asked the American. "It is," replied the priests. Then the American stooped down, pursed his lips together, and, with one vigorous puff, extinguished the sacred fire. "I guess it's out now," he remarked, quietly, as he walked away.

These Are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at Dr. G. W. Crouter's Drug Store.

SOMETHING NEW.

WORLD RENOWNED

CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it

1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.

The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but by means of a steel frog — is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, making a steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy.

If your Agent has none write us for price.

MANUFACTURED ONLY BY

J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,

RACINE, Wis.

MARVELOUS PRICES!

BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. ... good type upon good paper ...

$1.00 each.

1. The Widow Bedott Papers. ...
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, ... Games, ... for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils," etc.
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott, none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 57 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. ...
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila. Illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $3.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of

"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

NEW Double Action "TRAHERN" FORCE PUMP.

Simplest, Cheapest, Most Durable, Works Easy!

FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and STATIONERY,

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

A Large and Complete New Line

JUST RECEIVED.

EVERYTHING

YOU CAN THINK OF.

You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.

PERRY WEED.

The only News stand in town.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S

LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT

TAILORING.

I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.

Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.

Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,

C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES

Of Splendid

MICHIGAN LANDS

For Sale By The

G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are ... to best markets.

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the centre of the grant, the part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of ... with ... settlers ...

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

The Kalamazoo

"DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Contains the Associated Press Dispatches

Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN

Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of

BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK

a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop.

Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC

Single Thread Sewing Machines

will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.

Address,

78 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES

Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

YOUNG'S COUGH SYRUP

Dansville, Mich., Aug 15, 1871.—I was attacked with a severe cold and throat ... with fever while on a visit to Hudson, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment ... on account of ... severe coughing ... managed to get home and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup I had in the house, and my cough left me ... and I now ... relief when I am attacked by cough or lung complaint.

Howell, Mich., Oct. 28, 1871.—I have tried Dr. E. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year as I had occasion, as a remedy for Colds and Coughs, and found it a reliable medicine. I have used Dr. ... and Liver Syrup in my family with the best of success, curing my mother (whose age was over seventy years, of one of the hardest attacks of Fever and Ague after the second chill and fever. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who ...

Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.

W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

FRANK E. WOODS

Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,

At current rates of interest, on

Approved Real Estate Security.

School Bonds bought and sold.

MILEY & CHAPIN,

Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

MILLINERY

AND

FANCY GOODS!

Mrs. ELLA SMITH & Miss ANNIE COOPER

Have opened a store in the Ingleside Building, and invite their friends to call and inspect their fine stock of

FANCY GOODS!

Of all varieties usually kept in a first-class millinery store.

For Finest

JOB WORK,

Patronize The

Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS

Dealers in

Choice Wines,

Fine Liquors

EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our

Old Kentucky Sour Mash

WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught

Milwaukee

Export and lager Beer.

Bridge St. 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, - PUBLISHERS

WAR IS A BAD THING.

The Mother Who Patiently Waited For Her Boys Who Never Came.

"People talk about war with Mexico and war with England, and the newspapers paint pleasant incidents and glorious achievements of the noble soldiers who figured in the late War, which is all well and as it should be, but," said old man Plunket, looking over his spectacles, "thar's none of 'em what knows what war is lessen they's been thar.

"I tell you, stranger," said the old man, "you may read and you may look at pictures of battl and you may go to all these 'campments and see them have their sham fights, but you won't know a bit more about what real war is than a man who would suppose your Gate City Guard could thrash old England. War is a bad thing, mister, war's a bad thing, sure!"

. . . .

"Do you see that house up the road?" asked the old man, pointing with his finger. "Well, stranger, right by that window thar by the chimney is a vacant chair. Not mor'n a week ago, the dear old woman who sat in that chair, right by that window, with her eyes looking right down this big road ever since Lee's surrender, was buried over yonder at the church, and thar's not a man nor a woman in this settlement but what has shed a tear over the grave whar she lies."

The old man wiped his spectacles with his red bandana, and with his head bent and his eyes cast down shook his head and uttered, "War's a bad thing, stranger; war's a bad thing."

"That old lady," continued the old man, "had four as fine boys as ever shouldered a musket for the Confederacy—and that's saying a right smart. They all went to Virginia, and one by one they were killed till there was only one left. Tom, he was the oldest, and I shall never forget when the news come that he was killed at Seven Pines. Squire Adams he lived cross on the other road yonder, and the mail for the settlement went to his house during the War, and the neighbors would get their letters from thar. We'd done heard thar'd been a big fight at Richmond, so I was settin' right here in this piazer smoking after supper, and I hered Jim, one of Squire Adams' niggers, start from the Squire's house down the path that led across the fields to yon house, hollowing and blowing his quills, and I told my old 'oman thar was a letter for our neighbors. Jim he went down the path, and directly he crossed over the branch yonder, and the sound from his quills came up the branch, and I could hear the doleful tune he was blowing as if I'd been in 200 yards of him. I followed the sound of his quills till he struck the path through yon pine thicket, and then he quit blowing his quills and sung:

> "Down in de cornfield,
> Hear dat mournful sound,
> All de darkies am er weeping,
> For massa's in de cold, cold ground.

"I told my old 'oman I was afered that nigger had bad news for our neighbors, and so it was, for no sooner than he'd got to the house, I hered screams and hollerin, and me and the old 'oman put over thar, and what I seed then makes me know war's a bad thing, mister, war's a bad thing."

. . . .

"Then," said the old man, "thar was more fighten and the army it went into Maryland and our neighbors they'd sorter calmed themselves in their anxiety for the other three sons, and the army it come onten Maryland and then pretty soon we hered of a big fight at Fredericksburg; and a few nights arter I was settin' right here on this piazza alone, and I hered Jim start from the Squire's agin, and as he went down across the field yonder he was singin',

> "I cannot work until tomorrow,
> Because the tear drops flow;
> But I'll try to drive away my sorrow,
> Picking on de old banjo.

"And then he'd blow his quills and then sing another verse till he'd got over yonder to our neighbors, and then I listened to hear any weeping, if he carried any bad news, but thar was no fuss this time, but I went over thar, me and the old 'oman, and when we got close to the house we seed the spinnin' wheels nor the loom warn't running, and we knowed something was wrong, and sure enough the letter brought the news that two of the boys—the middle ones, Bob and John—had been killed in the battle, and there was only one left—William, the youngest; and that poor family was too sad to weep; they could not cry; they were huddled down in the middle of the room on the floor, leaning one upon the other, and not a word spake they. I tell you, stranger, war's a bad, bad thing."

. . . .

"Well," resumed the old man, "the War went on, and at last news came that Lee had surrendered and that all the soldiers would soon be at home. My neighbors over thar sorter brightened up then, cheered with the hope of soon having William with them. The railroads 'twixt here and Virginia was all tore up, so the boys all had to walk home and get home the best they could. They paired off in little squads and started, every man for himself, and pretty soon this one, and then that one, and then another, according to their ability to make the trip, came in, and several brought the news that William was on the road and would be here at any moment, and that dear old mother, who we buried last week, took her seat by that yonder window every morning, and thar she sat watching down this road for William, her baby boy, who has never come yet, and never will come. She set by that window over twenty years, waiting and watching, with a ball of thread in her lap and a half-finished sock in her hand that she held in all this time, never saying a word, but looking down this road so anxious. O, so anxious! Last week about 3 o'clock one day she raised her arms and with a cry of joy, 'My boys! O, my boys!' she fell over on the arm of the chair, dead. War's bad, stranger, very bad."—Atlanta Constitution.

There are ninety persons in the immediate vicinity of Harborville, N. S., who are over 70 years old.

Worth is happy because he has secured Mrs. James Brown Potter's order for stage gowns.

A SOLDIER UNDER NAPOLEON.

> Do you see that tumble-down cottage there,
> Beyond the road by the sycamore tree,
> With rags in the broken window-panes,
> And thorns where the flower-pots used to be?
> You never would think, in such a place,
> To meet an old hero face to face—
> A soldier under Napoleon.
>
> There's little heroic, I confess,
> In the withered old man in his corner chair,
> Not a tooth nor a thought in his hairless head,
> As he sits and mumbles and grumbles there;
> But if ninety years take much away,
> His title, at least, will always stay—
> A soldier under Napoleon.
>
> His dim eyes watch his daughter at work,
> A thin old woman in calico;
> He sometimes finds her grandson at play
> With his painted soldiers all in a row;
> And he dearly loves his pint of gin,
> And his black clay pipe, this man who has been
> A soldier under Napoleon.
>
> But Jena, Marengo, Austerlitz,
> And last and bloodiest, Waterloo!
> Will his eye not flash if I speak these words,
> And the sluggish blood in his veins burn true.
> He's deaf, but I'll shout them out till he hear,
> And in memory's light, at least, appear
> A soldier under Napoleon.
>
> "Good sir," I say, "do you recollect
> That last great day when the records tell,
> You fought so bravely, nor quit your post
> Till the last man left of your comrades fell?"
> "I've lost the names," he says to me;
> "I just remember I used to be
> A soldier under Napoleon."
>
> —Charles F. Richardson, in Harper's Magazine.

THE OLD ABBEY'S LEGEND.

The Tower Bell at Midnight.

Journeying through Warwickshire, England, we found shelter by accident in an old abbey, a somber pile that had been built in the reign of Henry I, as a hospital for the Knights of St. John, and afterwards became an abbey or monastery. In the reign of Elizabeth the destroyed portions were rebuilt and the relic thus restored had been retained in the family of the Earl of Warwick for three centuries. Every room was eloquent of the long past. Antique furniture, mullioned windows, wainscotings in oak, beds heavily curtained, and great dark rafters produced and continued the general somber and ghostly effect.

As night came on the sun sank below the horizon in a chaos of clouds, which seemed to rise up and drown its light, and through which glowed a stain of angry red. The wind rose suddenly and set the Gothic gables and chimneys shivering and creaking. The windows rattled and innumerable phantom ghosts were conjured up from the semi-gloom. Our only relief from the ghostly atmosphere was to gather more closely around the broad fire-place piled with logs, which sent up cheery showers of yellow light and put into wide contrast our antique surroundings. There was certainly a mystery connected with this old monastic pile of buildings.

Our drawing-room was labeled "St. Mary Magdalen," and our sleeping apartments "St. Claudes" and "St. Agatha,"—heirlooms doubtless from the old abbey. But it was not merely a breath from the remote past which gave us a hint of hidden secrets—it was a haunting memory of human tragedy which voiced itself in the dead of night in mournful whisperings and anguished sobs, and gentle tappings against the solid masonry, ending at last in the long vibrations of a solemn-tolling bell and the chanting of some Franciscan brother. We heard it all the first night we slept in our St. Agatha bedroom.

"Who rings the tower bell at midnight?" we enquired of our little maid the next day. She nearly dropped the tray on which she was bringing our coffee, in the sudden surprise of the question.

"You heard—the bell!" she faltered rather than asked.

"Yes," replied one of our party,—"and who chants the miserere in such a silver voice after the tolling is over?"

The brown-haired waiting-maid was evidently oppressed by our questioning. She turned a shade paler as she hesitatingly replied, "They say—it is—brother Cecil, the good monk," and then hastily retreated from the room.

After that her lips were sealed. In vain we tried to get the story from some inmate of the manor-house. Everbody was astonishingly innocent of all knowledge of that kind. Nobody ever knew of any particular history connected with the building. But at last our opportunity came. At last we discovered our garrulous antiquarian. The big book which he kept for registering visitors showed the names of some of our distinguished countrymen. General Grant, Mark Twain, Hawthorne, and the Bancroft family, had all written their autographs in the antiquarian's volume. From him we learned the mournful story of "Faire Margery."

It was in the reign of Henry III, during the baronial wars, which were so fertile in tragic and romantic incident. The governor of a certain castle, in a sudden foray against an ally of the king, gained the day, and besides despoiling his enemy of much treasure, took captive many noble prisoners. Most of them were afterward ransomed, but among their number was the beautiful "Margery," who was known to be in high favor with His Majesty, and against whose keen intelligence centered the suspicion that in some mysterious way she obtained knowledge of their contemplated movements, foiled their cunning, and turned their expected victories into defeat. "Faire Margery" was now their prisoner and prey, and she alone of all the noble captives could not be ransomed by money.

A grim Council of Ten decreed her death, or an alternative from that fate gained by the betrayal of her "comrades in arms." With the hope that she might accede to this latter proposal, she was conveyed to the old abbey beneath whose roof we were domiciled, and placed under the personal guardianship of the abbess herself, lest the heart of nun or holy monk might be touched with enough of mercy to relax the heavy hand of vengeance and allow a dangerous foe to escape. A thick wall at that time separated the monastery from the cloistered nuns, and in a cell adjoining this wall the fair captive was placed in vile duress.

It transpired on a particular night when the abbot and abbess had each commanded special prayers among the assembled monks and nuns. The chants and prayers ascended, mixed with the rolling organ music, but it could not keep out another sound of mysterious import—the sound of hurrying feet in the entrance halls, and the deposit of the castle plunder within the abbey for safe keeping. A whisper went around that a noble captive was a prisoner of the abbey, but no prying questions were answered—nor indeed were any asked.

One day Brother Cecil—whose voice rose in the chants like a silver-toned flute—was passing the corridor when the fair captive's cell door was momentarily opened. What a vision greeted his wondering eyes! Cloths of gold hung from the walls in rich profusion; mottled skins strewed the floor. But the fairest object of all was Margery herself, standing in the midst of this barbaric splendor, with pale and resolute face and a heroic light shining from her beautiful eyes. Brother Cecil thought in his heart that such a face with a nimbus painted around the brow might well be framed as the pictured face of a saint. A strange thrill of sympathy went out from his soul to the captive on the other side of the wall as he thought of the rare vision, and when to his ears one day there came a faint sound of tapping against the solid masonry which thenceforward continued intermittently—but most assiduously of all during chapel or refectory hours, where there was noise of chants to drown it—he was impelled by a strange temptation to help the fair prisoner by digging away his side of the wall.

Yielding to the tempter, he went to the abbot one day with a confession. He was carving an image of the Virgin, he said, a thank-offering; but thinking he might prove unworthy of the gracious task his heart had well-nigh failed him, and he therefore begged the holy father's approving blessing. From that time forward Brother Cecil worked steadily at the task of scraping away the division wall, impelled by an irresistible sympathy for the unknown captive. What was the mystery of that captivity? He did not know. He only knew that his "heart was worn with the beating of hands against a relentless barrier," hands whose weakness compelled his outstretched aid, as far as in him lay.

But the day came at length when no registering struggles for liberty recorded themselves upon the adamantine wall. Complete silence reigned. Brother Cecil was puzzled. Did the silence auger good or ill? Whatever portent hovered in the atmosphere, when the hour of twilight came, the good monk sought the abbot's permission to stand guard as sentinel that night without the turreted walls. At starlight his voice rang out across the paved courtyard, intoning the hour with the watchwords, "All's well!" in long and measured cadence. At nine, at ten, at eleven, the silver-voiced call was repeated, as if no whisper of tragedy was near. Leaning against an angle of the building, Cecil wondered what might be the fate of the fair captive within its walls. Suddenly his eyes were directed upwards toward the ivy-covered tower. Was it the night-wind which moved the ivy so mysteriously, or some silent bird seeking its nest in the bell tower?

A sudden rustling trembled on the still air and then—then—surely that was a woman's form emerging from the clinging mass of vines!

The dark object was now directly underneath the bell.

Was it the captive maiden?

Cecil's heart stood still in a horror of expectation.

With wildly outstretched arms the figure caught the bell-rope. A single solemn tolling of the bell rang out upon the air of night. It was indeed a knell of death, for the next instant "Faire Margery" lay upon the pavement of the courtyard below, silent in that last passionless embrace of the pale bridegroom.

Then came the sound of hurrying feet, followed by hushed exclamations of awe and lights glimmering from the abbey windows.

From a kneeling figure on the courtyard pavement there arose, amid the subdued voices of the women, the beseeching burden of the miserere. It was Brother Cecil, on his knees, intoning the penitential chant. But its tones now were a wail, tremulous with heart-break and a sorrow that must henceforth be an unceasing corrosion in his breast.

* * *

"Fair Margery" had simply made a choice of tragedies.

This was the sad secret breathed by legions of shadows through the ruined abbey, and repeated from wall and turret and tower. This is why the bell tolls at dead of night and why the ghostly intoning of holy Cecil's voice rises in the miserere, borne by the sighing winds that seem to come up like a sob from those forgotten centuries.—M. L. Brainerd, in the Traveler and Tourist.

A Texas Literary Venture.

In publishing this paper, remarks a Texas editor, we are working under disadvantage. Six subscribers and two copies sold of the last issue of this paper is not flattering to the editor. If an editor of a monthly or quarterly paper, even with a large circulation to begin with, would undertake to publish all original matter he would despair after the first six numbers. We have in stock an immense supply of arguments and explanations in support of our theories, but it would not be proper to publish them unless called upon. Nevertheless we intend to make good our promise to subscribers and publish twelve numbers of this paper with original matter—the acme of literature, according to our reasoning. Under the circumstances we deem it advisable to leave a vacant space in some of the papers.

General George Crook, the Indian fighter, has succumbed to the east winds which play about Massachusetts Bay, and was quite ill in Boston Sunday.

President Cleveland is said to pay Private Secretary Lamont $3,500 out of his own pocket, making the latter's total salary $7,000 a year.

A colony of Quakers is expected to locate in Nevada county, California.

HUMOROUS.

Wife (at supper)—What a very disagreeable old gossip Mrs. Hendricks is. Husband—Have you seen her lately? Wife—Yes, I spent the entire day there.—New York Sun.

Husband—If you only had the ability to cook as mother used, to I would be happy, dear. Wife—And if you only had the ability to make money enough to buy things to cook, as your father used to, I, too, would be happy, dear.—Ex.

A Scotch Presbyterian minister who married a couple of his rustic parishioners felt exceedingly disconcerted on his asking the bridegroom if he were willing to take the woman for his wife by his scratching his head and saying: "Ay, I'm wullin', but I'd rather have her sister."—Brooklyn Union.

> Who builds the fire for his wife
> Much happiness will know in life.
> Who ashes on his sidewalk throws
> Will always have more friends than foes.
> Who his wife's letters promptly mails
> Need not to tell fictitious tales.

—Boston Courier.

Employer (to clerk)—You've been gone a good while to lunch, James. What did you have, fish? Clerk—No, sir; ham and beans. Employer—Does it take you three quarters of an hour to eat a plate of ham and beans? Clerk—No, sir; but the waiter was whistlin' "White Wings," and I didn't like to interrupt him.—New York Sun.

A very deaf Boston man has a charming wife and a cross dog. The other morning a friend met him and said: "Good morning, Mr. Blank. Your wife made a very pleasant call on us last evening." "I'm very sorry," was the startling answer of the deaf citizen. "I'll see that it doesn't occur again. I'm going to chain her up after this."—New York Sun.

Gentle Spring.

> The thought that gentle spring is near
> Sets all our hearts a throbbing.
> Now see which liar will soonest hear
> The first notes of the robing.

—Somerville Journal.

> The first bird of spring attempted to sing,
> But, ere he had rounded a note,
> He fell from the limb—ah! a dead bird was him—
> The music had friz in his throat.

—Ex.

Just Like a Bass Drum.

"That man has the greatest voice of any one on the floor," said a visitor in the House gallery as a member sat down after his speech.

"Just like a Bass drum," replied the companion visitor.

"Yes, strong and sonorous."

"Yes, and nothing inside of it."—Washington Critic.

The Right Time to Fail.

"Maybe I haf to fail before spring," said a Pennsylvania merchant to a traveling salesman who was trying to sell him a bill of goods.

"But you are worth $40,000 and have only $10,000 worth of stock. You'd have to pay $1 for $1 if you failed."

"Great hafens! vhas it like dot? Vell, den I keep right on, und you may send me some more sugar, und tea, und coffee. I wait until I vhas worth $10,000 und haf $40,000 worth of stock."—Wall Street News.

On Mischief Bent, Not Suicide.

"I hope you don't contemplate suicide, madam," observed the patrolman at the ferry dock to a woman, who had been hanging around there for some time.

"Don't be a fool," she bluntly replied.

"Take the case home to yourself. If you was me and you expected your husband to come over on the next boat with a woman he's trying to run away with would you be thinking of suicide or of breaking both their necks?"—Detroit Free Press.

Discretion Personified.

"In cleaning your coat," he said, as he halted a gentleman in the postoffice, "I found these two letters in the lining. When your wife called for the garment I thought it best not to say anything about the letters."

The gentleman received them, flushed up, and then turned pale, and as he put them in one pocket and drew a silver dollar from the other he remarked:

"You did exactly right. These are a couple of letters my wife wrote to me when we were sparking, and I wouldn't have lost them for a hundred-dollar bill."

"Quite right, sir, and I'm much obliged. If she writes you any more and I find 'em you can depend upon my discretion."—Detroit Free Press.

Paying Off a Bill.

A woman who was owing her grocer $16 was at the Third street depot yesterday to take a train out of town. He heard that she was going away, and made all haste down there to collect the bill. He found her calmly waiting on a seat, and approached her in a quiet manner.

"I shan't pay!" she boldly replied.

"But, madam, you had the goods."

"That don't make any difference."

"I don't like to proceed to extreme measures, madam."

"Now, look here!" she said as she wheeled around at him, "if you don't get up and skip I'll call out that you are my divorced husband and trying to rob me of part of my money. There are 200 people in this room, and a policeman at the door, and there is a reporter talking to the ticket agent. Just imagine the sensation!"

"I can, madam."

"And you want those $16?"

"Oh, no, madam. I'll be only too happy to make you a present of the bill. Wish you a happy journey, and if you should return to Detroit please favor me with your patronage. Good-day, madam."—Detroit Free Press.

The Berlin journals announce that the Czar will soon start on a voyage abroad. He will first proceed to Munich, from there to Stuttgart, thence to Switzerland, and by way of Italy will return to Russia by Vienna. The steward of the journey, Baron Staude, is said to have been on his way for some time arranging for the travels of the Emperor.

Thirteen members of the Congress that has just adjourned were added to the death roll. This mortality is said to be without precedent.

Senator Vest's Game of Poker.

Years ago Senator Vest, when a young man, occasionally indulged in the the fascinating game which we know is thoroughly understood in all its details in Clinton County more especially Lathrop. Well, once on a time Vest had tried a case in a little county seat and received a large fee for clearing his man. So much money in the hands of the young lawyer was as tempting to the denizens as a cool watermelon to a hungry nigger. The result was a game of poker was gotten up. The boys intended to fleece Vest, and of course "stacked" the cards. They had no floor but some fresh dry wheat straw. It was a five-handed game, and a dry-goods box served as a table. It happened to be a jack pot, and Vest opened it on three queens. The cards being fixed, the other fellows had better hands and of course raised before the draw. Vest stood the raise and drew two cards. As luck would have it he got the other queen. The betting commenced and grew exceedingly warm. They would raise the young lawyer and he would see them and go a little better. An outsider, who stood in with the gang, looked over Vest's shoulder and saw what a formidable hand he had.

He held up four fingers, shook his head and in other ways tried to warn his friends. But to no purpose. He saw that Vest would break the crowd, so he lit a match and set the straw floor on fire and told them to run for dear life. That cool head which serves him so well in the great debates of the Senate, and which never lets him become rattled, did not desert him then. With one hand he raked in the boodle, with the other he exhibited his lovely queens, and as he went out of the door with his coat-tail on fire he said: "Let her burn; the pot is mine." An hour or two afterward he sat in the hotel surrounded by a crowd of friends. He told them that the manner in which they weighed hogs in Arkansas was to tie two boxes on the ends of a pole and balance it across a rail fence. The hog was placed in one box and the other one was filled with rocks until they balanced. The weight of the hog was ascertained by guessing at the weight of the rocks. Vest then lazily closed his near eye and slowly elevated the brow of the off one, a comical facial expression so peculiar to himself, and remarked that he was of the opinion that some people in that town knew as little about playing poker as the people of Arkansas did about weighing hogs. The crowd all laughed but the shed burners, and they put on a sickly grin and went out and smiled.—Lathrop (Mo.) Monitor.

Used Gunpowder for Tea.

Once when Julius Cæsar was very thirsty he made inquiries and found that there was no tea to be had. Julius wanted tea, and to a man in his position the fact that English Breakfast was not in existence at that wee sma' hour of the world's history was of no consequence. He donned his [illegible] and sent for his wife. Calphurnia was out of tea. There was no disguising the fact.

"Slave," said she to an attendant, "go to the corner grocery and ask for a pound of their best black tea—and, sirrah, tell them to put a handful of gunpowder into it."

I don't think Calphurnia said "sirrah," but Shakespear makes several equally unfortunate mistakes.

"Hold!" she cried. "Take this money and see he does not cheat you in the weight.

The slave sped to the corner grocery.

"My lord and master Cæsar, wants some black tea, and please put a handful of gunpowder into it."

"Gunpowder!" quoth the Roman groceryman.

"Gunpowder. Ye heard me, did ye not?"

"Well, if it must be it must be."

Calphurnia brought an alcohol lamp in and boiled the water before her august husband. As she put in a teaspoonful of tea for each cup into the pot a few specks fell on the burning wick. They went of with a bang.

"Woman, what mean you? Socialism? Is this conspiracy? Fetch forth the slave who sold me this tea."

And they took the groceryman and strung him up on the spot. I tell this story in this classic form to give it appearance of age. It happened, barring the people mentioned, out at the Mission (Dolores) last week. The people there are at the mercy of a groceryman who has never heard of gunpowder tea.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Wonderful Clock.

The renowned horologist of Villingin in the Black Forest, Christian Martin, has just completed a clock, which, as a marvel of construction, probably surpasses all that has hitherto been achieved in the clock making art. The clock is three and a half meters high, two and three quarters broad, and set in a magnificent Gothic case. It shows the seconds, minutes, quarter hours, hours, days, weeks, months, the four seasons of the year, the years, and leap years until the last second of the year 99999 A. D. The clock is not only chronological, but geographical, and shows the right time, by comparison, in every latitude of the northern and southern hemispheres. It records the successive phases of the moon; and it strikes the minutes as well as the quarters and hours.

The mass of automatic machinery in it will seem stupendous, even to those who have seen the splendid specimens of local Black Forest clockmaking in the public Clockmaker's hall at Triberry, Furtwangen and other places, and the great clock on the opposite side of the Rhine, in Strassburg cathedral. There are multitudes of working figures, representing the life of man, the creed of Christendom, and the old Roman and German mythologies. There are sixty different personages to strike the sixty minutes—the guardian angel, death as a skeleton, the twelve apostles, the ages of man, the four seasons, twelve signs of the zodiac, the seven Teutonic deities—after which our days of the week are named—and many others.

During the night hours, winter and summer, a night watchman comes forward and blows the hour on his horn. At sunrise a cock appears and crows lustily. The cuckoo, the inevitable ornament of a Black Forest clock, remains concealed in the works of Herr Martin's clock until spring. The great face of the clock has thirty (two distinct) compartments. A whole series of moveable pictures are exhibited in succession by the works representing in turn the seven days of creation and the fourteen "Stations of the Cross." A little sacristan rings a bell in the spire, and then kneels down and folds his hands. The musical works, always a great feature in the Black Forest clock have a sweet, flute-like tone.

Poisoned by a Cobra.

The Morning Star, of Jaffna, in Ceylon, reports the death of the taxidermist of the Victoria museum in that town from the bite of a cobra, under curious circumstances. While feeding a cobra, which was harmless from previous extraction of the poison bag, it suddenly bit his hand. For a few minutes he took no notice thinking the bite harmless, but pain and nausea soon began. Carbolic acid was applied, ligatures were bound round the arm, and an incision was made at the bite, and the blood of the arm was wholly removed. Various antidotes were used, but the unfortunate man lost the power of speech, and breathing entirely ceased. Artificial restoration was therefore resorted to, and this operation was unceasingly continued for nine hours, when at last the patient made an attempt to breathe and soon regained consciousness enough to make his wants known.

He steadily improved until the Friday, the accident having taken place on a Wednesday, and then astonished those around him by stating that during the severe operation of Wednesday night he was conscious of all that was taking place, but was unable to make his feelings known, not having power over a single muscle. It would seem that the poison paralyzed the nerves of motion, but not those of feeling; for he could hear and feel, although the physician, even by touching the eye-ball, could get no response either of feeling or consciousness. His partial recovery was, however, followed by a high fever and inflammation of the lungs, and he died, perfectly conscious, on the following Sunday.

The Richest American Actress.

Lotta owns in her own name and without incumbrances the Park Theatre in Boston and the International Hotel property in front of that place of amusement. For this she paid $350,000 in cool cash in addition to $25,000 that she paid Henry E. Abbey for the moveable property it contained, such as scenery, furniture, carpets, etc., opera-chairs and gas-fixtures. The theatre is said to be the best stocked in this country. There are over twelve complete sets of stage furniture, one costing $800, another $500, another $350, and so on.

In addition to the scenery in the theatre, over forty complete sets were found stored in an outside warehouse. All these "properties" were estimated to be worth not less that $50,000, so that prudential Miss Lotta and her ma, with the wary financial eye, were not driving a bad bargain. In addition to this Lotta has $100,000 invested in different manufactories and dwelling-houses in New York and Harlem. She has one house and lot covering nearly a square and originally costing $80,000. She has a house and property on Staten Island, and in Akron, Chicago, Kansas City, and San Francisco. Add to all this the $400,000 worth of jewelry, and you'll see that the sum of $1,000,000 does not fully represent her possessions.—Boston Letter.

Lady Experts on the Violin.

There are two young Southern ladies of more than ordinary musical talent who are devoting themselves to the study of the violin under the best masters to be had in this country. One is Miss Duke, the daughter of that dashing cavalryman, Gen. Basil Duke of Kentucky, who married the beautiful and spirited sister of Gen. John Morgan, the famous partisan leader, and whose remarkable exploits in the Civil War form a thrilling feature of the great struggle. Miss Duke is now here, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Zane of Louisville, who had taken a house here for the winter. At the musicale given at Justice Matthews' this accomplished young lady played with a degree of artistic feeling and finished skill several morceaux which require the utmost culture and advanced technique. Another is Miss Maud Tarleton of Baltimore, formerly of Mobile, Ala., who has been studying about four years or more, and possesses a touch of peculiar delicacy, firmness, strength, and passion.—Washington Letter.

Photographing a Bullet in Flight.

Pall Mall Gazette: Dr. Riegler of Pesth has just made a very curious experiment in photography, and one that to many people will appear incredible. He has photographed a bullet after it had been fired from a rifle, and while it was proceeding with a velocity of 440 metres—rather more than a quarter of a mile—a second. A Werndl infantry rifle was the weapon selected for the purpose of conducting the experiment, which was in every way successful, a perfect reproduction of the bullet being the result. A horse at full gallop, a swallow in his flight, and even a flash of lightning have succumbed to the photographer's art, but his last triumph is still more marvelous.

Bogus Treasures.

The Paris Intransigeant states that the famous treasure of Hue, captured by Gen. de Courcey in the Imperial Palace and sent to France, and which was supposed to be worth 15,000,000f., turns out on examination to be of no value at all. The supposed bars of silver are simply lead.

Fire-Fly Lamps.

"Why, Lionel, what are you trying to do?" asked his mother, coming into a dark room the other evening where she discovered him. There he sat by the table trying to read by the light of a dozen or so of fire-flies under a glass.

"Trying a few experiments," he replied, soberly; "I think I've discovered a way to lessen gas bills, if I could only feed those little fellows to make them grow larger."

"I'm afraid you will fail, like some other great inventors," she said; "for the money saved on gas you would soon have to spend on spectacles. Now if you lived in the West Indies, Lionel, you could get plenty of large-sized ones, and you would only need five or six of them under a glass to enable you to read the smallest print. Your uncle told me once that when he visited St. Domingo he saw many people use them in place of candles, by putting several of them in a glass vessel. He also said that at one of their festivals he saw many of the women wearing them on their dresses for ornaments."

"Or headlights; quite attractive!" interrupted the boy, laughing.

"And a headlight or torch will attract these insects, too," continued his mother. "While your uncle was in the Indies, the mosquitoes almost devoured him during the nights, and one time when he was complaining to a native, that person advised him to use a torch and catch a lot of the fireflies to keep the mosquitoes away. The hint was at first treated as a joke, but finally he began to experiment with them, and found that the large fireflies, when turned loose in a room full of mosquitoes, would chase them around and make havoc among them. After this discovery he was never much troubled with the pests. But let's go out upon the veranda and watch the thousands of them flying around."

"I guess I will," he replied, "for I cannot see very well by this light."

The air seemed full of them. They darted hither and thither, flashing their tiny lights like a magnificent display of fireworks. Occasionally one would be seen flying through the air and throwing out a long, lingering glow, which appeared like the tail of a very small comet, while down toward the river the scene was perfectly grand.

"Millions of them! Wonderful!" were the exclamations.

The Trade Dollar.

The Senate bill for the redemption and recoinage of the trade dollar, which was passed in the house of Representatives by a vote of 174 to 36 provides that for a period of six months after its passage trade dollars, if not defaced, mutilated or stamped shall be received at their face value for all dues to the United States. The coin shall then be retired from circulation. During the same period such unmutilated coins will also be received at the Treasury of the United States in exchange for a like amount of standard silver dollars or subsidiary coinage. All the trade dollars so redeemable must be recoined into standard silver dollars or subsidiary coinage, but such recoinage shall not be considered as part of the silver billion required to be purchased monthly and coined into standard dollars. The bill repeals all laws authorizing the issuance of trade dollars. This dollar at first was worth more than 100 cents, at the then ruling rate for silver, and it was for some time the only silver dollar in circulation. Its coinage was begun in 1874, and it was demonetized in 1878. The total coinage has been $36,000,000, of which $31,000,000 was at the San Francisco and Carson mints on the Pacific coast, and the other $5,000,000, at the Philadelphia mint. Over $26,000,000 were exported of which a part came back, and the director of the mint estimates that there are $7,000,000 in this country.

Witty and Wise.

They have been having a series of dancing parties in the staid old town of Amherst, N. H., concerning which a correspondent writing to the Nashua Telegraph, says: "These dances have been kept upon as purely a moral basis as practicable." We should like to know about how much morality is "practicable" at a dance in Amherst.—Lowell Courier.

No doubt this is a wise remark: "Polish is not piety, refinement is not religion, manners are not morals." Nevertheless they are not to be disparaged when they accompany those excellent possessions.—Gospel Age.

Says the Rev. Dr. A. E. Owen: "The largest thing in this world is the heart of a converted man. Drop the continent of America into a converted heart and it will rattle."—Richmond Religious Herald.

Cure for Rheumatism.

That electric well or pit in Taliaferro County, Georgia, continues to cure severe cases of chronic rheumatism. The The well is located on the side of a small mountain four miles from the Sharon Station, on the Georgia Railroad. It was dug last summer in search for gold. It is six or eight feet square and about fourteen feet deep, the bottom being covered over with loose boards and a rude carpet. Four chairs are at the bottom for persons to sit in. The owner has built a small house over the well. There is nothing like a shock, only a tingling sensation like that caused by a very weak current from a galvanic battery. The sensation is felt whether one touches the walls or not.

He Was Caught Napping.

Wife—"What did you think of that hat Miss Fussanfeather wore to church this morning?"

Husband—"I didn't notice Miss Fussanfeather's hat."

"It's very funny you didn't see it. She sat directly in front of you."

"Well, suppose she did. Do you suppose I go to church to look at women's hats?"

"Well, my dear, it's the same hat Miss Fussanfeather wore to the theatre last night, and which you claimed obstructed your view of the stage."

Husband concludes that he was caught napping.—Yonkers Statesman.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

Dr. Laura Weld, a graduate from a Boston medical school, has hung out her shingle in Dresden, Germany.

Miss Anna Siegel enjoys the distinction of being the only woman in this country who plays the trombone. She was educated in Vienna.

The Iowa Agricultural College has a new degree, M. D. E. (Master of Domestic Economy). It has already been bestowed upon two women.

Evelyn College, for young women, will be established at Princeton next year. The requirements for admission will be the same as those of Princeton College.

Mrs. Kate Chase is at Edgewood, a suburb of Washington, looking over her father's papers and gathering material for the publication of his biography.

Miss Carrie Duke, the daughter of the famous Confederate General, Basil Duke, is a wonderful player on the violin, and is now entertaining her friends at the National Capital.

San Francisco has a novelty in an itinerant female button adjuster, who stands at the street corner with her box of buttons (the mechanical self-fastening kind) ready to repair the accidents of the day.

Miss Mildred Lee, daughter of Gen. Robert E. Lee, is now in Washington. She is said to be a woman of rare accomplishments, very simple and unassuming in manner, and an exceptionally charming woman socially.

A petition is circulating in Germany asking the Government to open universities to women, with all that "opening" implies. Heretofore women have been allowed to study at Heidelberg and Leipsic, but not to take degrees.

A petition in circulation in New York sets fourth the necessity of the appointment of half a dozen women on the corps of tenement-house inspectors. It seems to be an appropriate measure and is being very largely signed.

Mrs Theresa Fair, of San Francisco, whose charities are many, is the recipient of a large number of begging letters by every mail. Recently one of these appeals for help was brought by a messenger-boy, and Mrs. Fair observed that the applicant had coolly marked the message "Collect."

The Rookwood Pottery, at Cincinnati, founded by Mrs. Bellamy-Storer, is celebrated for its colors and glazes, than which none are finer outside China and Japan, and for the beauty of form and finish generally. The initial experiments which have led to this perfection have been mainly conducted by women.

Twelve young women in New York have organized themselves into a class for fencing, under the auspices of the Fencers Club, and the number bids fair to be largely increased. The club has set apart its fine rooms for their exclusive use Mondays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays from 10 A. M. to 2 P. M., and its members have gallantly relinquished their right to enter the rooms at those times.

The adopted daughter of the late William H. Seward has promised to give to the Art Gallery of the University of California, at Berkeley, the original painting by Leutze of his well-known picture, "Westward the Course of Empire takes its Way" which hangs in the Capitol at Washington. The university has another of Leutze's works, "Washington at Monmouth," presented by Mrs. Mark Hopkins, the widow of the railroad millionaire.

The four daughters of Ignatius Riggen of Marion County, Illinois not only make their own dresses and other clothing, but spin and weave the cloth of which they are made from raw cotton and wool. Mr. Riggen is a rich man, rated worth $250,000, and his daughters are pretty, intelligent, and accomplished. They live luxuriously in a handsome house, expensively and tastefully furnished. Home-made clothing is the father's hobby, and the girls sensibly indulge him in it.

Fashion Notes.

Old Normandy laces are again in use.

The full sleeve gathered at the elbow is more and more popular with evening dresses of transparent material.

Shoes with uppers of patent leather and foxed with thick soft kid are still preferred for carriage and house wear, and walking shoes maintain the patent leather tipped toe.

Corsets are made very high over the bust and long in the waist for street wear to increase the long-waisted effect aimed at in all French gowns, but for evening wear they are cut very low to provide for the very decollete gowns that are fashionable.

To those who can stand the severity of the style the Greek knot is the most becoming style of wearing the hair. The hair should be waved, with a few light curls in the middle of the forehead, but drawn away from the temples and twisted in a close knot on the back of the head, immediately below the crown, not allowing it to drag downward towards the nape.

Large shell ornaments for the hair grow more and more popular and in the shape of long daggers, stilettos, two-handled swords, tridents, &c., are thrust through the elaborate long puffs. A pretty one worn by a woman with light brown hair heaped in silky folds on the crown of her head was of dark reddish shell in the shape of a crescent, three inches across from tip to tip.

In line of the new fancy for ribbons around the throat and wrists are new collars and cuffs with small loops of linen along the upper edge, through which narrow, picot-edged ribbon of different colors is run and tied in a bow of many long loops, under the chin and on the outside of the sleeves. Another fancy is for ruffles of crimped lisse, set thick with innumerable loops of narrow white or colored ribbon.

A pretty tea gown has a petticoat of thickly gathered lace flounces sewn with big, dark-red chenille balls. The gown, of white cashmere with a long train, buttons to the waist, from which it is open, showing the petticoat, and turned back with broad revers of red velvet, the edges of which, like the full open sleeves, are hung with the chenille balls. The inside and train of the gown is lined with the palest pink surah.

Misses wear tailor-made suits of dark serge, or of striped and plaid homespun, with a kilt skirt that has short drapery, with a postilion basque with velvet revers and a vest of gay watered or striped silk. Dark blue serge, with red watered silk vest and blue velvet revers, makes a pretty frock. The high collar of blue velvet has a red watered ribbon inside, with a small bow on one side, and the cuffs are similarly finished.

With the approach of spring many new black lace gowns make their appearance. The prettiest have plain skirts of narrow stripes of satin and moire, finished around the foot with a narrow plaiting of the same. The drapery is best made of very wide flouncing, which lends itself readily to the present mode of plain, full folds, and is as deep as the skirt. An economy is to have an extra pair of lace sleeves made with lining, which can be easily substituted and worn in the evening.

Incidents in the Life of Mrs. Hunter.

A few days ago the death of Mrs. Gen Hunter, at Washington, was announced.

The deceased was the daughter of John Kinzie, the Indian trader who carried on his business at Chicago when the house he lived in was the only one outside the garrison of the first Fort Dearborn.

Maria I. Kinzie, daughter of John and Eleanor, was born in the Kinzie house in 1807, three years after the birth of her sister, Ellen Marion, who was the first white child born in Chicago. She married Lieut. David Hunter, who subsequently became general, when he was stationed at Fort Dearborn, and accompanied him in 1831 to Green Bay.

Writing of this event under date of May 24, 1879, Gen. Hunter, said:

"More than half a century since I first came to Chicago on horseback from St. Louis, stopping on the way at a log cabin of the early settlers and passing the last house at the mouth of the Fox river. I was married in Chicago, having to send a soldier on foot to Peoria for a license. The northern counties in the state had not then been organized and were all attached to Peoria county. My dear wife is still alive and in good health, and I can certify a hundred times over that Chicago is a first rate place from which to get a good wife."

The Kinzie house was perhaps the first pretentious dwelling put up in Chicago. It was a long, low building, with a piazza extending along its front, a range of four or five rooms. A broad, green space was inclosed between it and the river and shaded by a row of Lombardy poplars. It was in this spot that little Maria passed her early childhood. She was 5 years old when, April, 1812, the dwellers at Lee's place were murdered by the Indians, and it was in the following August that the Indians massacred the garrison at Fort Dearborn. Mr. Kinzie, who was then known as "the Indian's friend," and has been called in later years "the father of Chicago," moved his family to the fort for protection at the time of the Indian outrage in April, and was living there when it was evacuated.

The little family were turned over to the care of two friendly Indians, who were to convey them in a boat to Bertrand, on the St. Joseph river, while Mr. Kinzie left the fort with the garrison. About two-thirds of the garrison were slaughtered; then the massacre was stayed by the surrender of the survivors, with the stipulation that their lives should be spared and they should be delivered at some British port. Meanwhile the boat containing the children had only reached the mouth of the river, where a messenger from Mr. Kinzie was in waiting for them with orders not to proceed farther on the journey. With the other prisoners they were removed to Detroit and turned over to the British military authorities as prisoners of war. It was while living in Detroit that little Maria Kinzie first attended school. She was educated at that place and at Middletown, Conn., and in 1816 returned with her parents to Chicago. Their old home was desolated. The bones of the murdered soldiers who had fallen four years before were still unburied. It was among such scenes that the future bride of the young army officer was raised. She grew to be a beautiful girl. She was 21 years old when Lieut. Hunter met her.

In October, 1828, five years after the garrison of old Fort Dearborn had been moved westward to the Mississippi, another garrison was stationed at Chicago, under the command of Maj. John Fowle and Lieut. David Hunter. That was five years after the marriage of her sister, Ellen Marion Kinzie, to Dr. Alexander Wolcott. That was the first marriage solemnized in Chicago and the bride was the first white child born there. By many Mrs. Gen. Hunter was thought to have been the first white child born in Chicago, but they have confounded her with her sister Ellen, who was born in 1804, three years before the date of Mrs. Hunter's birth.

A Story About Old Bullion.

Mr. Murphy, a veteran stenographer of the senate told me to-day, a story of Thomas H. Benton, I had never heard of before. There has always been a dispute whether congress should adjourn at midnight of the 3d of March or at noon on the 4th. The latter idea has prevailed, although for many years there was a struggle over it each year. Mr Benton was one of those who insisted that the session expired on the calendar day at midnight on the third day of March, and he used regularly to raise the point. One year when Orr of South Carolina was in the chair Mr. Benton arose at midnight to a point of order, and declared that in his opinion the legal existence of the Senate had expired. Orr asked if the senator from Missouri insisted upon his point of order that he was no longer a senator, Benton's term expiring that day. Mr. Benton responded that he did.

"Then," cried Orr, "the sergeant-at-arms will remove the gentleman from the floor, as by his own confession he is not entitled to it."

The sally was greeted with laughter, and Mr. Benton responded that with the permission of the senator from South Carolina he would claim his privilege as an ex-member of the Senate and remain.

An old man arrived in Butte City, M. T. on the last day of January, having walked all the way from St. Paul in nine weeks.

The Greatest Gift Be Ever Made.

It has been stated in some of our exchanges that Mr. H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., in the last eight years, has, through his devotion to science, built an astronomical observatory at an estimated value of $100,000, and given between $1,000 and $5,000 in prizes for astronomical discovery.

This is all very well, if Mr. Warner seeks to divert his energies in this channel. But from all we can hear among the people, if he never gave anything to the world except his great remedy, Warner's safe cure, formerly known as Warner's safe kidney and liver cure, he would be conferring the most practical and far-reaching benefit that it is in the power of any one man to give the public.

It is now conceded that he has the only specific for kidney disease and uric acid in the blood, and medical authorities of candor agree that if the blood is freed from uric acid by that great remedy, and the kidneys are kept in health, over ninety per cent. of human diseases disappears.

The manufacturers evidently know, and if they do not, we would like to tell them, of the unanimity of public sentiment in favor of their great remedy; indeed, they seem to realize this, when they say, "If you do not believe the statements we make, ask your friends and neighbors, what they think of Warner's safe cure." Such evidence of confidence in the established character and worth of their preparation is unprecedented. Unless they know it has merit, and will do precisely what they state, they would not dare give such advice to the public.

Such confidence ought to be infectious.

The President's Messenger.

Nearly every afternoon, between 2 and 3 o'clock, a good looking pair of clipped bays may be seen going down the avenue at a lively rate, drawing a comfortable looking carriage, containing a single occupant, holding tight one or more mammoth envelopes. The destination is the capitol, and the starting-point was the front portico of the white house. The occupant is Mr. O. L. Pruden, sometimes called "Sergt." Pruden, because of his antipathy to the title of major. He is the assistant secretary to the president, a position he has held since Gen. Grant became president. He is on his way to the capitol with a "message from the president in writing." The horses and carriage in question form the office turn out belonging to the white house. The horses are well matched, and while not flyers in the professional meaning of the term are good enough travelers to make the trip from the white house to the capitol in a very few minutes. Anyone who is on the avenue often at this time of day can not have failed to notice this turnout and become accustomed to seeing it on account of the regularity of its appearance. The team does not go dashing up the avenue like a fire engine, but as little time as possible is lost in order that the senate may not adjourn between the time of leaving the white house and reaching the capitol. The most unfrequented side of the street is chosen in order to make good time. The horses are generally driven down the west side of Fifteenth street and along the south side of the avenue. The object of the errand is generally to convey nominations made by the president to the senate, although occasionally there is a tersely written veto contained in the big official envelope.—Washington Star.

Parnell's Religion.

The question of Parnell's religion has often been discussed, but never elucidated. Religion enters so acutely into politics and society over here that a conspicuous man must declare himself. The compulsion which Gladstone invites and Churchill does not repel Parnell has ignored. Ireland is overwhelmingly Catholic. Yet she trusts this man implicity not to permit any legislation which will be offensive to her traditions. A great critic described the religious state of Germany after the thirty years' war as petrified Protestantism. Parnell is a petrified Protestant. He has never spoken a word which would indicate the presence of a dogma in his consciousness. He has never written a line to disavow the hereditary creed of his family. But he has had to encounter so much malignant stupidity on the part of recriminating exponents of faiths claiming to be divine that one may credit a story told of him. A lover of Greek lore quoted in his presence one day the ancient trope that Socrates had brought philosophy down from heaven. Parnell smiled his pale smile and replied. "What a pity he did not take theology up there."—Cor. New York Sun.

On His Guard.

Mrs. Wayback (pointing out one of Buffalo Bill's cowboys)—What's that, John?

Mr. Wayback (who is cognizant of the perils of a great city)—Hush, Mariar, don't ye say a word. That must be one of them bronco steerers what the newspapers says cheats people out o' money.—New York Sun.

In Paris there are 490,000 unmarried men and only 380,000 married, while there are 416,000 unmarried women.

The Household remedy for pain, bleeding or inflammation of any kind, is Pond's Extract. Beware of imitations weak and sour.

General Hazen, late Chief of the Signal Service, left an estate valued at $12,000.

FITS.—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No Fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2.00 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa

A dog case in Boone county, Iowa, is now on its sixth trial, having had two before a justice and three before the District Court. The dog is dead.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A New York postoffice has been named after Secretary Manning.

One of every five we meet has some form of Heart Disease and is in constant danger of sudden death. Dr. Kilmer's Ocean-Weed Heart Remedy regulates, corrects and cures. Price $1.00.—6 bottles $5.00.

Autumn Thoughts.

> When crimson lights the fading green,
> Adown the avenues of trees,
> I dearly love the shadowy scene,
> And feel, beyond the power of speech,
> A sense of close companionship
> With Nature in her dying glow,
> Though swift the changing seasons slip
> From bud to bloom, from fruit to snow,
> These gifts of silence and repose
> Grave Autumn can alone bestow.

Rev. J. B. Hushart of Hastings, Tenn., writes that Piso's Remedy for Catarrh has done him more good than any thing he ever tried.

> And never seems the wood so dear
> As when its beauty dies away;
> Earth draws her living child so near
> In this, the time of her decay,
> When field and wayside bloom is shed,
> And summer birds afar have flown,
> The grasses and the ferns are dead,
> And forest trees are left alone,
> Where dying leaves are closely spread,
> And restless winds around them moan.

For Bronchitis, or any disease of the Chest or lungs, I believe Piso's Cure for Consumption to be the best medicine of the present day.—Charles Berry, Great Yarmouth, England.

> So much of change my life hath known,
> I love these dear familiar ways
> In which I walk and muse alone
> In all the calm of Autumn days.
> I can but feel akin to these,
> Whose Summer was so bright and brief,
> Since Youth's delightful dreams and ease
> Passed as the fading of a leaf.
> But yet remains the lasting gain
> Of ripened fruit and harvest sheaf.

Prince Alexander, late of Bulgaria, was born at Verona and had an Italian wet-nurse, who is still living and with whom he maintains an affectionate correspondence.

"Be wise to day. 'tis madness to defer." Don't neglect your cough. If you do your fate may be that of the countless thousands who have done likewise, and who to-day fill consumptives' graves. Night-sweats, spitting of blood, weak lungs, and consumption itself if taken in time can be cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." This wonderful preparation has no equal as a remedy for lung and throat diseases. All druggists.

Eighty-four of Yale University students have taken the course on sociology this year.

Read $100.00 Reward in another column. Kah-Do-Kah is a great malaria cure, for we know parties who have tried it. 50c. box lasts a month.

"Plon Plon's" second son, Prince Louis Napoleon, who wants to go with the Italian army and fight Arabs at Massowah, has entirely renounced his French citizenship in favor of Italy.

Mr. Ed. P. Wells, Thells P. O., Stevens Co., Wash. Ter., was entirely cured of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. He says: "I consider it a wonderful remedy and will always speak a good word for it."

Lieutenant Joseph S. Powell, of the Signal Service, has resigned his commission to go upon the stage as a concert singer.

DYSPEPSIA

Does not get well of itself; it requires careful, persistent attention and a remedy that will assist nature to throw off the causes and tone up the digestive organs till they perform their duties willingly. Mrs. Bosworth, of Amherst, N. H., after trying many "sure cures" without benefit, found that hit the nail on the head and restored her to health. Among the agonies experienced by the dyspeptic, are distress before or after eating, loss of appetite, irregularity of the bowels, wind or gas and pain in the stomach, heart-burn, sour stomach, &c., causing mental depression, nervous irritability and sleeplessness. If you are discouraged be of good cheer and try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has cured hundreds, it will cure you if you give it a fair chance.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Messrs. C. I. Hood & Co.

Gentlemen—I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla for my wife, who has been troubled with indigestion and debility for several years, which had really rendered her feeble. * * * Before she had taken the first bottle her health commenced to improve. She is now taking the fourth bottle, and her health has steadily and permanently improved, and I firmly believe Hood's Sarsaparilla is entitled to the credit. GEO. W. BOSWORTH, Amherst, N. H.

Prepared by C. I. HOOD & Co., Lowell, Mass. Price $1.00, six for $5.00. Sold by Druggists.

Children Cry FOR PITCHER'S Castoria

Castoria promotes Digestion, and overcomes Flatulency, Constipation, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, and Feverishness. Thus the child is rendered healthy and its sleep natural. Castoria contains no Morphine or other narcotic property.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me." H. A. Archer, M. D., 82 Portland Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"I use Castoria in my practice, and find it specially adapted to affections of children." Alex. Robertson, M. D., 1057 2d Ave., New York.

The Centaur Co., 182 Fulton St., N. Y.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

Highest Awards of Medals in Europe and America. The neatest, quickest, safest and most powerful remedy known for Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, colds in the chest and all aches and pains. Endorsed by 5,000 Physicians and Druggists of the highest repute. Benson's Plasters promptly relieve and cure where other plasters and greasy salves, liniments and lotions, are absolutely useless. Beware of imitations under similar sounding names, such as "Capsicum," "Capucin," "Capsicine," as they are utterly worthless and intended to deceive. Ask for Benson's and take no others. All druggists. SEABURY & JOHNSON, Proprietors, New York.

Sensation in High Life.

The little nerve plant Moxie has just captured the place. The town drink Moxie and talk of the revolution in drinks. The women [illegible] for the drink and [illegible] the revolution. Every tired or nervous woman should have a drink of Moxie, and if she once gets a taste, you can not keep it from her and its no use to try.

The Michigan editors will hold their annual meeting at Port Huron, July 26, 1887.

Wretched, Indeed.

Are those whom a confirmed tendency to biliousness, subject to the various and changeful symptoms indicative of liver complaint. Nausea, sick headache, constipation, furred tongue, an unpleasant breath, a dull or sharp pain in the neighborhood of the affected organ, impurity of the blood and loss of appetite, signalize it as one of the most distressing, as it is one of the most common, of maladies. There is, however, a benign specific for the disease and all its unpleasant manifestations. It is the concurrent testimony of the public and the medical profession, that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a medicine which achieves results speedily felt, thorough and benign. Besides rectifying liver disorder, it invigorates the feeble, conquers kidney and bladder complaints, and hastens the convalescence of those recovering from enfeebling diseases. Moreover, it is the grand specific for fever and ague.

The recent explosion of an aerolite near Terre Haute, Ind., was heard for a distance of six miles.

The huge, drastic, griping, sickening pills are fast being superseded by Dr. Pierce's "Purgative Pellets."

Hay is only $1 a ton in various parts of Nevada.

Architect Edmond Legendre, 419 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal., states that having suffered for a long time with a severe cough, and failing to obtain any relief from doctors and the numerous preparations he took, he became alarmed. Tried Red Star Cough Cure, and one bottle entirely cured him.

Hay is worth $30 a ton in San Bernardino, Cal.

Pond's Extract without an equal for Forty years, for Piles, Inflammations and Hemorrhages, etc., carries this prestige with every bottle.

Casey County, Ky., is said to be over-run by rats. A sort of cat cholera has killed off all the cats, and the rats are having everything their own way. Cats are away up above par there.

A QUESTION ABOUT Brown's Iron Bitters ANSWERED.

The question has probably been asked thousands of times, "How can Brown's Iron Bitters cure everything?" Well, it doesn't. But it does cure any disease for which a reputable physician would prescribe IRON. Physicians recognize Iron as the best restorative agent known to the profession, and inquiry of any leading chemical firm will substantiate the assertion that there are more preparations of iron than of any other substance used in medicine. This shows conclusively that iron is acknowledged to be the most important factor in successful medical practice. It is, however, a remarkable fact, that prior to the discovery of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS no perfectly satisfactory iron combination had ever been found. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS does not injure the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—all other iron medicines do. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS cures Indigestion, Biliousness, Weakness, Dyspepsia, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, Tired Feeling, General Debility, Pain in the Side, Back or Limbs, Headache and Neuralgia—for all these ailments Iron is prescribed daily. BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, however, does not cure in a minute. Like all other thorough medicines, it acts slowly. When taken by men the first symptom of benefit is renewed energy. The muscles then become firmer, the digestion improves, the bowels are active. In women the effect is usually more rapid and marked. The eyes begin at once to brighten; the skin clears up; healthy color comes to the cheeks; nervousness disappears; functional derangements become regular, and if a nursing mother, abundant sustenance is supplied for the child. Remember Brown's Iron Bitters is the ONLY iron medicine that is not injurious. Physicians and Druggists recommend it.

The Genuine has Trade Mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. [illegible]

Frightful Waste.

Consumption carries off its thousands of victims every year. Yes, thousands of human lives are being wasted that might be saved, for the fact is now established that consumption, in its early stages is curable. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" will, if used in time, effect a permanent cure. It has no equal as a remedy for bronchitis, coughs and colds. Its efficacy has been proved in thousands of cases. All druggists.

The widow of Charles Livingstone, once Consul to the West Coast of Africa, and a brother of the famous explorer, lives in Denver.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

The name of General Boulanger is pronounced Boolanghjai. In English General Boulanger would be General Baker.

Relieves every sort of Bleeding, Pain, or Inflammation—Pond's Extract. Do not be imposed upon by weak imitations.

Many cattle are dying in the cattle ranches of Victoria, British Columbia.

$100.00 Reward. WE ARE RELIABLE AND MEAN WHAT WE SAY.

For any case of Malaria, Ague, Chills and Fever, Dyspepsia, or Rheumatism, that can not be cured by

Kah-Do-Kah, Herbs of Joy

Small Box Free to any one sending names of 15 persons afflicted with above complaints. Enclose 2c stamp. Salesmen wanted in this country. Lady agents make money at home. Always at [illegible] (One 50c box makes quart. 3 boxes for $1.00.) Send for sworn affidavits of cures.

SECREST MEDICAL COMPANY, McConnelsville, Ohio.

ELY'S CREAM BALM. CATARRH

For 15 years I was annoyed with catarrh, severe pain in my head, discharges into my throat and unpleasant breath. My sense of smell was much impaired. I have overcome these troubles with Ely's Cream Balm.—J. R. Case, St. Denis Hotel, Broadway, N. Y.

HAY-FEVER

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable to use. Price 50 cts. by mail or at druggists. Send for circular. ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

OAKLAWN. The Great Nursery of PERCHERON HORSES.

200 Imported Brood Mares Of Choicest Families.

LARGE NUMBERS, All Ages, both Sexes, IN STOCK.

300 to 400 IMPORTED ANNUALLY from France, all recorded with extended pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Books. The Percheron is the only draft breed of France possessing a stud book that has the support and endorsement of the French Government. Send for 120-page Catalogue, illustrations by Rosa Bonheur.

M. W. DUNHAM, Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

HOME STUDY. Secure a Business Education by mail. Bryant's Bus College, Buffalo, N. Y.

PATENTS [illegible] Address [illegible]

$5 TO $8 A DAY. [illegible]

LADY Agents make $3.00 per day selling Improved Ideal Hair Curler and Frizzer. Sample 50c. [illegible] Thompson, 127 Quincy St., Chicago.

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York.

OPIUM MORPHINE HABIT CURED AT HOME. NO PAIN. [illegible] THE HUMANE REMEDY CO., LAFAYETTE, Ind.

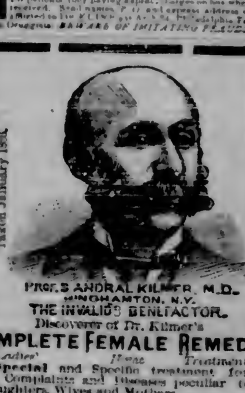
TELEPHONES FOR PRIVATE LINES Straight or Crooked. Call Bells, Ear-Phone, etc. Four Styles, 8 Patents. Prices Low. Send for Illustrated Circular. E. E. Herbert & Co., 151 La Salle St., Chicago.

PENNYROYAL PILLS "CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH." The Original and Only Genuine. Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Indispensable to LADIES. Ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. Chichester Chemical Co., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

THE OLDEST MEDICINE IN THE WORLD is probably Dr. Isaac Thompson's Celebrated EYE WATER. This article is a carefully prepared physician's prescription, and has been in constant use for nearly a century, and notwithstanding the many other preparations that have been introduced into the market, the sale of this article is constantly increasing. If the directions are followed, it will never fail. We particularly invite the attention of physicians to its merits. JOHN L. THOMPSON SONS & CO. Troy, N. Y. Sold by all druggists.

Free! Free! Free! DR. J. P. BARNUM, the well known Louisville Druggist, will send free of charge on request for [illegible], a circular containing a most valuable list of superior toilet articles and medicinal remedies of real value. Dr. Barnum is Professor of Chemistry in Louisville School of Pharmacy, and Chemist for L. and N. R. R. Co., and American Plate Glass Co. He makes a specialty of all kinds of chemical examinations, and refers to Courier-Journal Co., or any bank in Louisville. Address J. P. BARNUM & CO., Louisville, Ky.

FITS STOPPED FREE. Marvelous success. Insane Persons Restored. Dr. KLINE'S GREAT NERVE RESTORER for all BRAIN & NERVE DISEASES. Only sure cure for Nerve Affections, Fits, Epilepsy, etc. INFALLIBLE if taken as directed. No Fits after first day's use. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit patients, they paying express charges on box when received. Send names, P. O. and express address of afflicted to Dr. KLINE, 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa. Druggists. BEWARE OF IMITATING FRAUDS.



PROF. S. ANDRAL KILMER, M.D., BINGHAMTON, N.Y. THE INVALIDS' BENEFACTOR. Discoverer of Dr. Kilmer's

COMPLETE FEMALE REMEDY

Ladies' Home Treatment. Special and Specific treatment for all Complaints and Diseases peculiar to Daughters, Wives and Mothers.

Each package contains 3 bottles. Each kind is also sold separately:
Female Remedy, (Blood and System) $1.
Autumn-Leaf Ext., (Local Treatment) $1.
U & O Anointment, (External) .50
Or the three in one Package $2.00.

Recovers the "run-down," bed-ridden" or "abandoned." It Eliminates Humors and Blood Impurities that cause Scrofula, Cancer, Tumor, pimples and blotches. The age for Pessaries and Exposures is past. Woman's Health and usefulness again restored. Dr. Kilmer treats Internal Tumor, Cancer. You can't afford to neglect early symptoms. Letters of inquiry promptly answered. Dr. Kilmer's Female Dispensary, Binghamton, N. Y. "Invalids' Guide to Health" (Sent Free). SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

M. N. P. Co. Chicago—No. 4.

LIVER, BLOOD AND LUNG DISEASES.

LIVER DISEASE AND HEART TROUBLE. Mrs. Mary A. McClure, Columbus, Kans., writes: "I addressed you in November, 1884, in regard to my health, being afflicted with liver disease, heart trouble, and female weakness. I was advised to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription and Pellets. I used one bottle of the 'Prescription,' five of the 'Discovery,' and four of the 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets.' My health began to improve under the use of your medicine, and my strength came back. My difficulties have all disappeared. I can work hard all day, or walk four or five miles a day, and stand it well; and when I began using the medicine I could scarcely walk across the room, most of the time, and I did not think I could ever feel well again. I have a little baby girl eight months old. Although she is a little delicate in size and appearance, she is healthy. I give your remedies all the credit for curing me, as I took no other treatment after beginning their use. I am very grateful for your kindness, and thank God and thank you that I am as well as I am after years of suffering."

LIVER DISEASE. Mrs. I. V. Webber, of Yorkshire, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "I wish to say a few words in praise of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets.' For five years previous to taking them I was a great sufferer; I had a severe pain in my right side continually; was unable to do my own work. I am happy to say I am now well and strong, thanks to your medicines."

Chronic Diarrhea Cured.—D. Lazarre, Esq., 275 and 277 Decatur Street, New Orleans, La., writes: "I used three bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and it has cured me of chronic diarrhea. My bowels are now regular."

GENERAL DEBILITY. Mrs. Parmelia Brundage, of 161 Lock Street, Lockport, N. Y., writes: "I was troubled with chills, nervous and general debility, with frequent sore throat, and my mouth was badly cankered. My liver was inactive, and I suffered much from dyspepsia. I am pleased to say that your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' have cured me of all these ailments and I cannot say enough in their praise. I must also say a word in reference to your 'Favorite Prescription,' as it has proven itself a most excellent medicine for weak females. It has been used in my family with excellent results."

Dyspepsia.—James L. Colby, Esq., of Yucatan, Houston Co., Minn., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion, and would eat heartily and grow poor at the same time. I experienced heartburn, sour stomach, and many other disagreeable symptoms common to that disorder. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and I am now entirely free from the dyspepsia, and am, in fact, healthier than I have been for five years. I weigh one hundred and seventy-one and one-half pounds, and have done as much work the past summer as I have ever done in the same length of time in my life. I never took a medicine that seemed to tone up the muscles and invigorate the whole system equal to your 'Discovery' and 'Pellets.'"

INVIGORATES THE SYSTEM.

Dyspepsia.—Theresa A. Cass, of Springfield, Mo., writes: "I was troubled one year with liver complaint, dyspepsia, and sleeplessness, but your 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me."

Chills and Fever.—Rev. H. E. Mosley, Montmorenci, S. C., writes: "Last August I thought I would die with chills and fever. I took your 'Discovery' and it stopped them in a very short time."

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health and vigor will be established. Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

INDIGESTION BOILS, BLOTCHES. Rev. F. Asbury Howell, Pastor of the M. E. Church, of Silverton, N. J., says: "I was afflicted with catarrh and indigestion. Boils and blotches began to arise on the surface of the skin, and I experienced a tired feeling and dullness. I began the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as directed by him for such complaints, and in one week's time I began to feel like a new man, and am now sound and well. The 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets' are the best remedy for bilious or sick headache, or tightness about the chest, and bad taste in the mouth, that I have ever used. My wife could not walk across the floor when she began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Now she can walk quite a little ways, and do some light work."

HIP-JOINT DISEASE. Mrs. Ida M. Strong, of Ainsworth, Ind., writes: "My little boy had been troubled with hip-joint disease for two years. When he commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' he was confined to his bed, and could not be moved without suffering great pain. But now, thanks to your 'Discovery,' he is able to be up all the time, and can walk with the help of crutches. He does not suffer any pain, and can eat and sleep as well as any one. It has only been about three months since he commenced using your medicine. I cannot find words with which to express my gratitude for the benefit he has received through you."

A TERRIBLE AFFLICTION. Skin Disease.—The "Democrat and News," of Cambridge, Maryland, says: "Mrs. Eliza Ann Poole, wife of Leonard Poole, of Williamsburg, Dorchester Co., Md., has been cured of a bad case of Eczema by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The disease appeared first in her feet, extended to the knees, covering the whole of the lower limbs from feet to knees, then attacked the elbows and became so severe as to prostrate her. After being treated by several physicians for a year or two she commenced the use of the medicine named above. She soon began to mend and is now well and hearty. Mrs. Poole thinks the medicine has saved her life and prolonged her days."

Mr. T. A. Ayres, of East New Market, Dorchester County, Md., vouches for the above facts.

CONSUMPTION, WEAK LUNGS, SPITTING OF BLOOD.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. While it promptly cures the severest Coughs it strengthens the system and purifies the blood.

It rapidly builds up the system, and increases the flesh and weight of those reduced below the usual standard of health by "wasting diseases."

GIVEN UP TO DIE. Consumption.—Mrs. Edward Newton, of Harrowsmith, Ont., writes: "You will ever be praised by me for the remarkable cure in my case. I was so reduced that my friends had all given me up, and I had also been given up by two doctors. I then went to the best doctor in these parts. He told me that medicine was only a punishment in my case, and would not undertake to treat me. He said I might try Cod liver oil if I liked, as that was the only thing that could possibly have any curative power over consumption so far advanced. I tried the Cod liver oil as a last treatment, but I was so weak I could not keep it on my stomach. My husband, not feeling satisfied to give me up yet, though he had bought for me everything he saw advertised for my complaint, procured a quantity of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I took only four bottles, and, to the surprise of everybody, am to-day doing my own work, and am entirely free from that terrible cough which harrassed me night and day. I have been afflicted with rheumatism for a number of years, and now feel so much better that I believe, with a continuation of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' I will be restored to perfect health. I would say to those who are failing a prey to that terrible disease consumption, do not do as I did, take every thing else first; but take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' in the early stages of the disease, and thereby save a great deal of suffering and be restored to health at once. Any person who is still in doubt, need but write me, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply, when the foregoing statement will be fully substantiated by me."

Ulcer Cured.—Isaac E. Downs, Esq., of Spring Valley, Rockland Co., N. Y. (P. O. Box 28), writes: "The 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured my daughter of a very bad ulcer located on the thigh. After trying almost everything without success, we procured three bottles of your 'Discovery,' which healed it up perfectly." Mr. Downs continues:

WASTED TO A SKELETON. Consumption and Heart Disease.—"I also wish to thank you for the remarkable cure you have effected in my case. For three years I had suffered from that terrible disease, consumption, and heart disease. Before consulting you I had wasted away to a skeleton; could not sleep nor rest, and many times wished to die to be out of my misery. I then consulted you, and you told me you had hopes of curing me, but it would take time. I took five months' treatment in all. The first two months I was almost discouraged; could not perceive any favorable symptoms, but the third month I began to pick up in flesh and strength. I cannot now recite how, step by step, the signs and realities of returning health gradually but surely developed themselves. To-day I tip the scales at one hundred and sixty, and am well and strong."

Our principal reliance in curing Mr. Downs' terrible disease was the "Golden Medical Discovery."

BLEEDING FROM LUNGS. Joseph F. McFarland, Esq., Athens, La., writes: "My wife had frequent bleeding from the lungs before she commenced using your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' She has not had any since its use. For some six months she has been feeling so well that she has discontinued it."

Golden Medical Discovery is Sold by Druggists. Price $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Proprietors, No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 23, 1887.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

TO THE PUBLIC.

At this, the close of our first year's business in Charlevoix it seems to us eminently proper that we extend our sincere thanks to the trading public of this region for the patronage they have so generously extended us during the past 12 months.

Our constantly increasing business proves that the people appreciate a Metropolitan stock at lowest prices.

Our past experience has shown us the needs of the people of this section. During the coming season our line of goods will be the largest ever offered in this region. Our Prices we always guarantee to be the lowest. If we have pleased you in the past, please grant us a continuation of your patronage.

Very truly yours,

F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Prior to inventory we are offering great bargains in every line of goods.

We are determined to reduce our stock one-half during this month, and to accomplish this we are making great sacrifices.

Close buyers will do well to inspect our stock

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL & SON

ARE SELLING OUT

OWING TO A CHANGE WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE IN OUR STORE IN THE SPRING WE MUST SELL OUR STOCK OF

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, CLOTHING, CLOAKS, NOTIONS, GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

WE MEAN BUSINESS! EVERYTHING IN OUR STORE WILL BE SOLD AT SOME PRICE, FOR CASH ONLY.

Now is the time to get Bargains.

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 48 — CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MARCH 30, 1887. — WHOLE NO. 905

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS! ---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We call special attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best. Tea for the money in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS — THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works — Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS. — THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I — JEWEL STOVES — S & I

THE MOST DURABLE. — Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL.

Send it to your friends abroad.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

BRANCH STORE AT HORTON'S BAY.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay in this Peninsula.

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Local News.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, - PUBLISHERS

[illegible] has heartily indorsed the policy [illegible] by Cardinal Gibbons toward the Knights of Labor.

SECRETARY WHITNEY has decided to proceed at once with the work on the cruisers Chicago, Boston, and Atlanta.

THE insolvency is announced of Stewart Brothers, slate and timber merchants, of London, whose liabilities are $500,000.

THE Illinois house, by a vote of 50 to 83, rejected a resolution for the submission of a prohibitory amendment to the people.

PRAGUE advices are to the effect that an earthquake has destroyed the village of Hickenberg, the inhabitants taking refuge in Prague.

THE failure of the Chinese bank at Hong Kong was speedily followed by the destruction of the building and papers by the creditors.

COUNT [illegible], from conversations with Emperor William and Bismarck, feels certain that there will be no war between France and Germany.

THE Canadian department of marine and fisheries has chartered, in Nova Scotia, a fast schooner of one hundred tons to be used next summer as a cruiser.

MR. PARNELL will oppose any Irish land-purchase bill based upon the existing judicial rents, which, it is generally admitted, [illegible]

[illegible]

CONDENSED NEWS.

Latest Intelligence From all Parts of the World.

FIRE RECORD.

A great fire at Buffalo, N. Y., on Friday morning consumed the Richmond Hotel and St. James Hall. The loss is estimated at fully $500,000. Quite a number of lives were lost.

The business section of Rock Hill, S. C., was almost wiped out by fire Thursday night. The loss is $100,000, with about $40,000 insurance. The Durham distillery, at Covington, Ky., with 2,000 barrels of bonded whisky, was also destroyed and one employe fatally injured. The insurance aggregates $30,000.

The building of a commission merchant in New York City, was damaged $10,000 Wednesday by fire.

The Reed Manufacturing Company's factory, at Canajoharie, N. Y., was burned Wednesday. Loss, $50,000.

Half of the business part of Blackville, S. C., and some dwellings were burned Wednesday. Loss nearly $100,000; insurance light.

One-half of the business section of Oxford, N. C., was destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning. Twenty-three firms were burned out, and the loss is $100,000. The fire is believed to be the work of incendiaries, and great excitement prevails.

The large brick building of Miller, Grenier & Co., at Buffalo, N. Y., was burned Tuesday. The office of the Commercial Advertiser was saved by the heroic efforts of the firemen. The loss on the building is $200,000, on stock $250,000.

Four buildings were burned Monday morning by a fire-bug at Berlin, O.

[illegible]

CASUALTIES.

[illegible]

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

[illegible]

John Sanderson, a notorious "tough" of Broken Bow, Neb., stabbed his younger brother to the heart Monday, in a quarrel over a trivial [illegible]

Nathan F[illegible], a traveling salesman, jumped from the [illegible] story of the [illegible], at Denver, Col., Monday, to escape from a constable in whose charge he was for theft of cigars, and fell to the basement floor. He will die.

The special Grand Jury in session for Cook County, Illinois, on Tuesday, found indictment against W. J. McGarrigle, of the County Hospital, Warden Varnell, of the [illegible], E. McDonald, engineer of [illegible], R. O. Driscoll and J. T. Connelly, book-keepers, on charges of [illegible]. All except Connelly, were arrested before midnight, and were kept in [illegible] till they could have an opportunity to give bail.

INDUSTRIAL.

Freight traffic is being resumed at Youngstown, [illegible], about 250 section hands on the [illegible] & Fort Wayne R. R. struck at Pittsburgh for higher wages.

About five [illegible] employers in the various branches of the building trade met in New York [illegible], and organized the Building [illegible] Protective federation.

The Rock Island [illegible] through the fall are of the [illegible] the use of the Kansas Pacific [illegible] Kansas City [illegible] the north side [illegible]

Over seven [illegible] Cincinnati [illegible] nine hours [illegible]

A Co-operative [illegible] established in [illegible] Typographical [illegible]

[illegible]

WASHINGTON.

[illegible]

FOREIGN.

[illegible]

POLITICAL.

[illegible]

GENERAL.

[illegible]

The National Democrat at Peoria, Ill., was sold on Wednesday to Owen Scott of the Bloomington Bulletin for $16,000.

The Yellowstone and the Missouri Rivers are full of ice and are overflowing their banks, destroying railroad bridges and other property.

Hon. E. F. Pillsbury died at his residence in Melrose, Mass., Sunday night.

The Hon. W. P. Pocock, twice attorney-general of Virginia, died Monday, in Appomattox county, aged 80 years.

The New York Sun is to print an evening edition beginning this week.

It is said that the principal reason why Garrett, the President of the B. & O. R. R. Co., is willing to dispose of his interest in the road is on account of the Tiffin disaster some weeks since.

Ex-Secretary Manning and Ex-Treasurer Jordan sailed for Europe on Tuesday.

The Maine legislature has abolished capital punishment and substituted imprisonment for life.

The jury in the suit of Panama Railroad against Ellie Stacey Charlier in New York City resulted in a verdict for the company for over $41,000.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R. Co., has decided to send out propositions to newspaper men, for advertising to be paid for in mileage tickets in lieu of passes as heretofore.

The Illinois Senate adopted a concurrent resolution, Tuesday, providing for sine die [illegible]

[illegible]

THE MARKETS.

[illegible]

"BOODLERS" AT BAY.

Wardens McGarrigle and Varnell, and Others, Indicted and Arrested in Chicago.

Great Excitement.

The investigations by the special Grand Jury called in Cook County, Illinois, has already resulted in very important movements. On Tuesday, the 15th inst., the jury which had been in session only five days found indictments against William J. McGarrigle, the Warden of the County Hospital; Harry A. Varnell, the Warden of the County Insane Asylum; Edward S. McDonald, the Engineer of the County Hospital; Richard O. Driscoll, the book-keeper for McDonald, and James T. Connolly, book-keeper for Nic Schneider. All of these men except Connolly were arrested Tuesday night by deputy sheriffs, and taken to the Sheriff's office, where after the lapse of considerable time, and owing to the absence of the County Attorney, it was determined to hold them until Wednesday. Judge Jamieson could not name the bonds because he did not know what the charges were. Several persons were ready to go on their bonds, but nothing could be done until Wednesday so the prisoners were taken to the Sherman House where they occupied a room with the deputy sheriff.

Connolly was arrested early Wednesday [illegible]

[illegible]

were on the point of retiring, there came a violent ring at the front door bell, and for a while there was great consternation indoors. It was regarded as ominous that the dog had failed to make known the presence of a stranger, but finally one of the servants mustered up sufficient courage to answer the summons. A well-dressed man, but an utter stranger to the family, was on the vine-covered porch, and his inquiry was not for the President but for the former occupant of Oakview, whose name is Green. In explanation of his untimely visit the stranger said that he had been absent from this part of the country for several years and that he did not know of the change of ownership in the place where he had formerly been a frequent guest. He was profuse in his apologies when informed of the consternation that his visit had created, and turned his steps cityward very much disappointed. An effort was made to keep the matter quiet, but it finally leaked out, and the probabilities are that in the future callers at Oakview will again be compelled to run the gauntlet of the metropolitan police.

WHEAT AND CORN.

Stocks of Both Cereals in the Country.

WHEAT.

Extended inquiries made by the Cincinnati Price Current of the stocks of wheat and corn held in the country March 1st show the following facts. In the light winter wheat States on the basis of the [illegible]

[illegible]

THE NEW RAILROAD LAW.

[illegible]

THE PRESIDENT ALARMED.

[illegible]

RAILROAD HORROR.

Four Passenger Cars Go Through a Bridge, Falling Thirty Feet.

Sixty to Eighty Persons Killed and Wounded.

The accident which occurred on the Boston and Providence Railroad, between Roslindale and Forest Hill, on Monday morning, the [illegible] of horrors.

The 7 o'clock train from Dedham, consisting of seven cars [illegible] in charge of Conductor [illegible], broke through the bridge. The engine [illegible] went over safely [illegible] others fell through [illegible] beneath, a distance of [illegible] last car, which [illegible] completely over [illegible] others, all being [illegible] shape.

It is stated that the bridge where the accident occurred is comparatively a new one, and that the accident was caused by a truck on one of the cars leaving the track, causing the car to strike against the abutment of the bridge. [illegible] fell, caught fire [illegible] was promptly [illegible] spread of the flames.

Many of the injured were taken to the hospitals in [illegible] have not been [illegible] crowded with [illegible]

[illegible]

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

IMPATIENCE.

Like to impatient children when the sky
[illegible]
To cheat their happy hearts of outdoor play,
We fret when [illegible]
And every cloud and [illegible]
Till thus we waste [illegible] strength, as they
Their zest for pleasure in some in-door way,
Our age scarce wiser than their infancy.

If we could chain and chase the clouds afar!
Rather than borrowed gloom upon them bring,
Our gain its lack of grace might palliate,
But leave us yet with misfortune at war,
That brave defiance to all fate would fling,
And by endurance make us strong and great.

—William C. Richards, in Harper's Magazine for March.

FOR THE CHICKS.

Probably one of the best standard soft foods for young or adult fowls is ground oats and barley meal, and if occasionally mixed with boiled potatoes, turnips and carrots, so much the better. This food should be given only in the morning and fed moderately warm. [illegible]

[illegible]

to send the requisite information for $1.

Darkness is necessary. The "Miller" that deposits the eggs from which moths are but hatched only moves in light. To entirely themselves work in darkness. Hang the furs in a very dark closet and keep the door shut; keep it always dark, and you can have no trouble. But as closet doors are often left open, the better way is to inclose the articles loosely in a paper box, put this in a pillowcase, or wrap around with cloth, and hang up in a dark closet. Camphor, spices, or perfumes, are of no use. Continual darkness is sufficient. And do not take out the furs in June and July to give them an "airing," for even then cometh the enemy, and it may be that in fifteen minutes after exposure, has deposited a hundred eggs. If you consider an airing indispensable, give the furs a good switching and put them quickly back.

ABOUT PLOWS.

A writer in the Farmer's Review says: "I want to live to see an improvement in ploughs. [illegible]

[illegible]

MICHIGAN.

Condensed Reports of the Latest News from All Parts of the State.

Latest From Lansing.

SENATE.

Bills were passed to authorize the issue of a patent to Frederick Durand for certain land in Arenac County, to incorporate the village of Gagetown, Tuscola county; to authorize the building of South Bay City and Saginaw State Road; to provide for the laying out of a State road in Bay County; to amend the act in reference to incorporating public schools in Albion; a bill permitting all consolidated corporations organized under laws now repealed to file articles of association according to the present laws, and have the same rights as companies organized under existing statutes.

The Senate to-day passed bills to reinstate the testimony in the courts of miners under 10 years of age; to provide for the correction of frauds and [illegible] the debates on both sides. At 9 p. m. the motion to strike all after the enacting clause failed, and the bill was laid upon the table, and the committee rose.

[illegible]

STATE ITEMS.

A gas well will shortly be bored at Jackson.

—Ann Arbor will hold a three days cattle fair in May.

—A woman's relief corps has been organized at Holly.

—Two Ionia citizens started to walk to Florida on a wager of $100.

—A St. Andrew's society will shortly be organized at Battle Creek.

—A shavers' union is being organized by the barbers of Muskegon.

—The people of Salt River want the name of their town changed to Shepherd.

—East Saginaw contemplates connecting her public schools by telephone.

—Work has been commenced on the Battle Creek water-system improvement.

—[illegible] that Congressman [illegible] to mercantile life [illegible]

[illegible]

THE CAMP FIRE.

HIGHWOOD MILITARY POST.

The Highwood military Post is to be a fact in the future, but the future when it will be completed and occupied seems to be some two or three years off. The bill accepting the tract of land from the citizens of Chicago who donated it for a military post passed Congress on the last day of the session. The army officers stationed at the headquarters of the division of the Missouri were rather glad to hear of its passage. In spite of the opposition it has met at times they believed that the donation would be accepted, and eventually a post would be built. General Sheridan and other leading army officers have been in favor of the post for many reasons. The first is that Chicago is one of the leading railroad centers of the country, and from it any point can be reached with the greatest speed and ease in case troops are demanded by order of the President. Next, the integral of an army in time of war in the field is a regiment, companies and battalions not being taken into consideration at such times. At present the various [illegible]

[illegible]

HOW THE KING CAME HOME.

"Oh, why are you waiting, children,
And why are you watching the way?"
"We are watching because the folks have said
The king comes home to-day.
The king on his prancing charger,
In his shining golden crown.
Oh, the bells will ring, the glad birds sing,
When the king comes back to the town."

"Run home to your mothers, children;
In the land is pain and woe,
And the king, beyond the forest,
Fights with the Paynim foe."
But, said the little children,
"The fight will soon be past
We fain would wait, though the hour be late:
He will surely come at last."

So the eager children waited
Till the closing of the day,
Till their eyes were tired of gazing
Along the dusty way,
But there came no sound of music,
No flashing golden crown,
And tears they shed, as they crept to bed,
When the round red sun went down.

But at the hour of midnight,
While the weary children slept,
Was heard within the city
The voice of those that wept,
[illegible]

[illegible]

good; and while she had an item in her 'omnibus bill' for our joint presents to our friends there could be no individual presents made by any one except myself. I can't give myself a present. She could not give herself a present. If we took anything out of the common fund, by agreement, then it was not a present but an appropriation for her or my benefit. I could make gifts out of my $3, but there was no possible way by which she, as an individual, could personally make a present to any one. She had no privy purse as I had. Everything of that kind was joint—the firm's, so far as she was concerned. Here I interfered, for the only time, and insisted that $2 should be set apart for her private use as absolutely as my $3. Our little presents are made from these private purses, and are not worth mentioning."

"How does your wife get her bracelets and sealskin sacques, and all that? Baldwin would be in a pickle if his wife had your wife's chance."

"You are mistaken, I think. He might at first, because his wife has never been trusted, but not after she grew accustomed to responsibility. Women are naturally much more [illegible]

[illegible]

THE FAMILY POCKET-BOOK.

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 30, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

Republicans should bear in mind that the Democrats and greenbackers have a ticket in the field this spring.

Henry Waterson says that a mugwump is one-third Democrat, one-third Republican, and one-third angel.

Below the Mason and Dixon line there are four million people who cannot read or write, and 750,000 voters who cannot read or write.

The election this spring is an exceedingly important one. If the Republicans carry their ticket through with a rousing majority the fight in 1888 will be already half over.

If all the true lovers of good order would rise up and say that right and wholesome laws must prevail, it would not be long until drunkenness and debauchery would disappear from our State.

The new party has nominated O'Brien J. Atkinson and J. C. Blanchard for associate justices, and W. H. Miller and W. G. Baumgardner for regents. The greenback committee endorsed these nominations.

A California temperaance society allows its members to drink when "depressed." If the members of that society do not go about looking ing mighty gloomy a good deal of the time human nature on the coast is exalted.

Portland Oregonian: President Cleveland, by "pocketing" the River and Harbor bill, has made it impossible for any Democrat to carry Oregon in the next presidential election. It will be quite useless for that party to present an electoral ticket in this State.

In the interest taken in the prohibitory amendment, this spring, pro and con., republicans should not forget the importance of attending closely to their state and judicial ticket. See that every voter is at the polls, and that every man is invited to vote the Republican ticket.

The newspapers are not complaining at the action of the roads in calling in passes issued on account of advertising, but the members of the State legislatures are up in arms. In Illinois the present law permits railroads to charge three cents a mile, which if passed, will cut off the earnings of the roads one-third.

Sportsmen and others interested in the preservation of fish and game are greatly pleased over the final passage of the law providing for the appointment of a fish and game warden, which failed every session heretofore at the point of passing the Senate. This law will, it is believed, be of great pecuniary value to the state. Besides making the game law effective, it will restore game to the forests and abundance of fish to the streams.

A newspaper ostensibly published in the interest of the colored people speaks in congratulatory terms of the "position in which the colored race have been placed" by the appointment of a colored man or two under Cleveland's administration. Did the newspaper organ in question ever think of the "position in which the colored race were placed" by the emancipation policy of the Republican party, or has it forgotten all about the facts.

There is one question of importance in the coming election which the prohibitionists of Michigan should understand, and that is, how much would the prohibitory amendment be worth, even if carried, with a Democratic Supreme Court? The defeat of the Republican candidates for the Supreme court would give the Democrats absolute control of that body. This is something every prohibitionist should ponder over when preparing his ballot next April.

At the G. A. R. encampment at Grand Rapids recently, L. G. Rutherford, of Hart, was elected commander; senior vice commander, Wm. Cooke, of Leslie; junior, Thomas H. Williams, Jackson; medical director, C. P. Brow, Spring Lake; chaplain, Henry W. Thompson, Escanaba; council of administration, Louis Kentz, of Muskegon, B. F. Graves, of Adrian, Wm. J. Dailey, of Mt. Clemens, Ira H. Wilder, of Flint, R. A. Parker, of Detroit; committee on the soldiers' home, J. R. Fertis, of New Lothrop, F. D. Newberry, of Coldwater, and John G. Berry, of Vanderbilt; delegates at large to National encampment, Gen. Russell A. Alger, L. S. Trowbridge, Detroit, alternate. Resolutions of respect to the memory of Gen. Logan were adopted, and the dependent pensions were discussed at length. A public meeting was held, and addresses made by Judge Morse, Gen. Fairchild, Capt. C. W. Watkins and A. T. McReynolds.

Northern Michigan News.

Teams have crossed on the ice from Norwood to Northport.

Northern Michigan is beginning to assume a maple sugar flavor.

Samuel Gagnon, of Northport, has received a proposition from parties at Atlanta, for four or five car-loads of flour.

A singular circumstance occurred at Elk Rapids recently. The smoke from the furnace went over and settled on the bay a couple of miles out, making a very odd though beautiful sight.

L. W. Hubbell, formerly a prominent business man of Traverse City, but who has been extensively engaged in the drug business at Springfield, Mo. has sold his interest in that business and entered a well-known real estate firm of that city.

The Sault Ste. Marie fever is beginning to be felt in Northport, and last week it took N. C. Morgan to the upper peninsula quite suddenly, and now J. J. Donaldson contemplates a move to the Sault. John Sanborn is also studying the map of the U. P. with loving eyes.

John Wallace, of Bellaire, was robbed of $75 cash and $750 in papers on a Grand Rapids and Indiana train near Cadillac, one day recently. Suspicion fell upon Wm. Rowe and Frank Bissell, and they were seen to hide the pocketbook. Later the men were arrested and bound over for trial, but the valuables were not found.

Petoskey Record: R. Connable & Son are repairing old and making new gill nets in the rink. They will fish about thirty miles of nets this season with the Ethel J. The tug will be commanded by Capt. Plumb, of St Joseph, one of the best pilots and most experienced fishermen on Lake Michigan, and the steamer is now being overhauled and will be in first-class shape to commence her season's work as soon as the ice moves out.—— Caskey, the contractor, is picking up all the carpenters for work on the big Mackinac hotel, and it is probable that carpenters will be scarce when building begins here in the spring. Besides at least two business blocks, a number of residences will be built.

Mancelona Herald: Chas. W. Brown has been engaged to teach the Eastport cornet band. Charley is not only an excellent musician but is also a first-class band teacher. —— In order that our readers may have some idea of the manner which the work on our butter dish factory is being rushed, we will state that on Saturday last two car-loads of lumber containing 23,000 feet, were taken from the cars, sawed, and nailed on the building in just five hours. The enormous structure is already enclosed, and the iron roof on. It is now patent to all that the company was in dead earnest when it stated that the factory would be turning out dishes at double its former capacity inside of sixty days from the time of the fire.

Harbor Springs Independent: Old Uncle Joe Shomin has been confined to the house for several days. "By jingominy, putty sick me, now again." ——"Gus" Bushaw, who is perhaps better known than any Indian in this region, is very sick, and may close his career here with his last long trip to the happy hunting ground. "Gus" is a personage whose loss will be felt among the "boys" with whom his good-natured reception of practical jokes had made him quite a favorite. ——Cash Williams will not handle the throttle of the Van Raalte this season. He will work in a Detroit machine shop helping to complete a marine engine now under way, and will have charge of the engine after, in a new steam barge soon to be launched. ——Uncle Joe Pyant, for several years employed in Weston's store, is very sick, and it is thought will never recover. Uncle Joe has a history, and twelve years ago his form, though then seventy-five years of age, was as straight as an arrow, and his step still firm. He has failed rapidly for the past year, and though his iron will kept him up, he was compelled at last to leave the store. Seventy years ago, when Michigan was a wilderness and Detroit a trading-post, he began service for John Jacob Astor as a trapper and trader, and followed this vocation for many years. He roamed the State from north to south, and has lived to see throughout the State the Indian village and bark wigwam transformed into the busy city and the marble mansion. He carried his goods in bark canoes, and on his back, and tracked the wilderness with snow shoes where now pants and puffs the iron slave of commerce. He is a connecting link between the prosaic present and the historic past. What changes have occurred, in land and men, since Pyant, as a boy, launched his bark canoe and speared the speckled beauties in our harbor, some four-score years ago. We take off our hat to the relic of by-gone days, and in silence await the call which will summon the venerable Frenchman on his last trip. Peace to Joe Pyant.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, superintendent of the Charlevoix schools.

THE SCHOOLS.

Report of Charlevoix Schools for the Month ending Mar. 25th, 1887.

NO. ENROLLED
1st Department	41
2nd Department	51
3d Department	38
4th Department	43
5th Dep't Grammar Section	34
5th Dep't High School	38
Total	245

NO. BELONGING.
1st Department	34
2nd Department	43
3d Department	36
4th Department	39
5th Dep't Grammar Section	32
5th Dep't High School	33
Total	217

DAYS ATTENDANCE.
1st Department	627½
2nd Department	733
3d Department	686½
4th Department	742
5th Dep't Grammar Section	598½
5th Dep't High School	614
Total	4,001½

DAYS LOST BY ABSENCE.
1st Department	101½
2nd Department	77
3d Department	26
4th Department	18½
5th Dep't Grammar Section	26
5th Dep't High School	18½
Total	226½

AVERAGE ATTENDANCE.
1st Department	31.3
2nd Department	38.4
3d Department	34
4th Department	37.1
5th Dep't Grammar Section	29.9
5th Dep't High School	30.6
Total	201.3

ATTENDANCE, PER CENT OF NUMBER BELONGING.
1st Department	94.4
2nd Department	93.2
3d Department	97.1
4th Department	98
5th Dep't Grammar Section	97.7
5th Dep't High School	98.4
Total	96.5

CASES TARDY.
1st Department	18
2nd Department	21
3d Department	16
4th Department	2
5th Dep't Grammar School	2
5th Dep't High School	1
Total	60

NO. PUPILS NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY DURING THE MONTH.
1st Department	6
2nd Department	14
3d Department	18
4th Department	21
5th Dep't Grammar Section	10
5th Department, High School	18
Total	87

SUMMARY FOR WINTER TERM.
Total Number enrolled	245
Average Number Belonging	216
Days Attendance	11,981
Days Lost by Absence	668
Average Attendance	203
Cases Tardy	190
Attendance & Punctuality, pr.et	96½

The following named pupils have been neither absent nor tardy for the entire term:

First Dept.—Mattie Brink, Edith Lamereaux.

Second Dept.—Katie Kirkpatrick, Hiram Ross, Alta Brink.

Third Dept.—Frank Geiken, Gertrude Myers, Lillie Newman, Walter Krebs, Harvey Lawrence, Mabel Green Wallace Newman.

Fourth Dept.—Winifred Bartholomew, Lillian Eaton, Clifford Atchison Edward Widdifield, Aggie Lawrence, Chloe McCartney, Eva Swails, Mary Pullock, Emma Lamphear, Alfred Thompson.

Fifth Dept., Grammar Section.—Geo. Newman, Lewis Thompson, Geo. Metcalf, Wm. F. Lewis, George McCartney, Aggie Kirkpatrick, Chancey Upright.

High School.—Luna Washburn, Blanche Bartholomew, Edith Mason, Clinton Whitmoyer, Fred M. Green, Pearl Dart, Ralph Washburn, Herbert See, Charles Nettleton, Edward Stewart.

The Yaggy's Anatomical Chart purchased by the school board, is being used by the present and former physiology classes in joint reviews of the human system. It is an excellent chart and is highly appreciated by the pupils.

In answer to question in issue of March 16th as to birthplace of presidents, we have received answers as follows: Born in Virginia, Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Harrison, Tyler and Taylor. In Ohio, Grant, Hayes and Garfield. In North Carolina, Jackson, Polk and Johnson. In New York, Van Buren and Fillmore. In Massachusetts, John Adams and J. Q. Adams. In New Hampshire, Franklin Pierce. In Vermont, C. A. Arthur. In Pennsylvania, Jas. Buchanan. In New Jersey, Cleveland, and in Kentucky, Abraham Lincoln.

This is vacation week. Next Monday begins the Spring term, which continues ten weeks.

Ralph Washburne carries off the palm for spelling, being the only pupil of the 5th dept. who has not missed a word during the entire term.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated April 22nd, 1882, executed by Joseph Moore and Jane Moore his wife to the Wayne County Savings Bank, Detroit, ... [illegible] ... Dated March 22nd, 1887. WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee. D. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Croyon ... [illegible] ... Dated, Feb. 26, 1887. WILLIAM CROYON, as Guardian of Richard Croyon, Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th 1881 executed by Andrew H. Ross and Mary H. Ross (his wife) to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan ... [illegible] ... Dated March 22, 1887. WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee. D. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage ... [illegible] ... Dated March 7, 1887. OTIS ROSS, Mortgagee. JAMES H. JOHNSON, Attorney for Mortgagee.

For Sale

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will occur as follows: Boyne City, Friday, March 25th, 1887; East Jordan, Friday April 29th, 1887. Examinations will commence at 8:30 a. m., and end at 5:30 p. m. Candidates for first or second grades can write only at the examination at Boyne City, and may write until 5 o'clock, p. m. W. M. HARRIS, Sec., Norwood.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES. The grandest and simplest known remedy for all Female Trouble to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable lady agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For medicine and particulars, address PAN-ZAMA MED CO., Frankfort Ind.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co. Charlevoix, Mich., Manufacturers of Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc. NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock. Window & Door Frames made to order. All Kinds of Building Material Kept constantly on hand. PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS, Furnished on application. Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building. Correspondence solicited.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank. Henry Bennett, Pres. John Nicholls, Vice Pres. F. A. Smith, Cashier. DIRECTORS: Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, O. D. Wood, A. Buttars, A. Fox, F. A. Smith. CAPITAL, $25,000. SURPLUS, 2,000. [illegible] We respectfully solicit your patronage. CORRESPONDENTS: National Park Bank, New York; Commercial National Bank, Chicago; Nat. City Bank, Grand Rapids; Detroit Nat. Bank, Detroit.

Bank of Charlevoix, W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier. CAPITAL, $25,000. Perfect Security is assured to the depositors of this Bank, both by its capital and conservative management. Its Officers Never Speculate. Security in Banking is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors. This Bank Invites People generally to entrust their money to its keeping. This Bank Will Loan investment money when desired. Parties Seeking Productive employment for money will find attractive security at this Bank. Investment Notes, Now paying Five per cent. yearly interest. We Solicit Your Patronage.

WILL FRANCIS FURNITURE AND JOBBING SHOP. South Terrace, CHARLEVOIX, MICH. All classes of furniture made to order, furniture repaired, and shop work of all kind promptly attended to, and satisfaction guaranteed. Manufacturer of BED SPRINGS. Give me call.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S LIVERY STABLE CHARLEVOIX. The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand. Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low. Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT TAILORING. I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring. Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates. Call and see me, Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours, C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands 500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R. 50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co. These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets. By Water and Rail. Not a Wilderness by any Means. Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold. Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address W. R. HUGHART, Commissioner, GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. TITLE PERFECT.

CROSS & SONS., Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc. Charlevoix, Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer. In Bradbeer's Gallery. Photographs of all sizes taken. Old Pictures copied and enlarged. CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE. I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures. My Stock of Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete. If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum. All classes of Repairing done quickly. C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick, ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR, —ON— Chalevoix Summer Resorts. I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages. I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters. Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention. J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, --AT-- LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County. We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty. We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them. NOTHING SHODDY. Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH." Contains the Associated Press Dispatches. Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO. Charlevoix, Mich. 3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR Feed, Corn Meal, Graham. We will do exchange work for farmers on short call.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS! I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the LEAST MONEY! All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made. LEAVE ORDERS with me for a boat for next summer's use. Special facilities for stocking boat liveries. J. BEAUVAIS.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS? DEALING! It represents something you like and appreciate. It illustrates our method of doing business. It means square dealing. Don't you see this is what we preach, practice and guarantee. HONEST VALUES, LATEST STYLES, FAIREST PRICES, Put before you in opening our elegant new stock of Early Spring Styles in BOOTS & SHOES. You'll find them the newest, the best, the cheapest. Remember Square Dealing at D. SHERWOOD & CO'S.

A. J. McLEOD, Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail All kinds of FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage. Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS. Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates. A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S MARKET Is supplied with All Kinds Of MEATS At Lowest Prices. CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs. Corner of State & Mason sts., JOHN McCABE.

1-3 OFF SALE! At Miss Spaulding's MILLINERY ROOMS, I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only. Come early and secure a Bargain. MISS L. SPAULDING.

NEW SHOP! All kinds of Blacksmithing, At the Shop in the Foundry Building. Horseshoeing a specialty. ALL WORK GUARANTEED. M. SCOTT.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Kellats' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey, Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 106, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 1.. K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron Ross. First Vice President—W. A. Smith. Second Vice President—Robert Miller. Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang. Financial Secretary—H. Suffield. Treasurer—Albert L. Mason. Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee. Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. T. Cook. Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. S. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Bardan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix ... [illegible]

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r, Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible]

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE, R. A. Campbell, Prop'r, Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible]

NEWMAN HOUSE, W. C. Newman, Prop'r, Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible]

PILE DRIVER.

[illegible]

SURVEYORS.

[illegible]

DENTIST.

[illegible]

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R. "Mackinac Short Line." [timetable illegible]

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad [timetable illegible]

SOME FAMOUS KISSING.

An English Artist Gives an Exceedingly Curious Resume.

The first recorded kiss was the treacherous one given by Jacob to his father Isaac, when the former was masquerading as Esau. It is the first in a series of deceitful kisses. Equally treacherous was the kiss given by Joab when about to assassinate his brother commander, of whom he was jealous. He caught Amassa's beard by the right hand to kiss him, and when the other was thus thrown off his guard Joab stabbed him by a left-handed thrust with a short-sword. All through history instances of treacherous kissing occur; but it is an unpalatable subject, and I pass to lighter themes.

There is a famous kiss in the "Beggar's Opera." It was given by Macbeth to Jenny Diver, and the unpleasant effect which is produced on him may be judged from the sarcastic remark: "One may know by your kiss that your gin is excellent."

Petruchio gave his bride a kiss of enormous calibre. We are told that he "kissed her lips with such a clamorous smack, that at the parting all the church echoed."

The kiss given by the Dutchess of Devonshire to a butcher, for his vote, has almost a world-wide reputation. The butcher was bold and ingenious enough to demand a kiss as the price of his vote. It was gracefully given, and the kissee became known as the butcher Steele, who kissed the Dutchess. He thus increased his trade and gained historic fame. I should like to know the opinion of the Duchess as to the difference in the flavor of the Duke's kiss and a butcher's.

It is related that Voltaire was once kissed in a theater by the beautiful Countess de Villars. The pirtites, in their enthusiasm for the great writer, compelled her to give him the salute.

Almost every one has heard of the first kiss given by Dominie Brown to his sweetheart Janet, after a courtship of seven years.

One evening as they sat together in the customary solemn silence Mr. Brown summoned courage and said: "We have been acquainted now for seven years, and I've ne'er gotten a kiss yet. D'ye think I might tak' yan, by bonnie girl?"

"Just as you like, John; only be becoming wi' it."

"Surely, Janet, we'll ask a blessing. For what we are about to receive, Lord make us truly thankful."

The kiss was taken, and the worthy divine, overpowered by the blissful sensation, rapturously exclaimed: "O, Janet, it is gude. We'll return thanks."

Six months afterwards they were married.

Every one remembers the famous kiss imprinted by Mr. Bumble on the "chaste nose" of Mrs. Corney, and still more famous kiss applied to the lips of Mary, the pretty housemaid, by Sam Weller. The latter event is thus amusingly described in "Pickwick":

"Get your hat, Sam," said Mr. Pickwick.

"It's below stairs, sir," said Sam, and he ran down after it.

Now there was nobody in the kitchen but the pretty housemaid, and as Sam's hat was mislaid he had to look for it, and the pretty housemaid lighted him. They had to look all over the place for the hat. The pretty housemaid, in her anxiety to find it, went down on her knees, and turned over all the things that were heaped together in a little corner by the door. It was an awkward corner. You couldn't get at it without shutting the door first.

"Here it is," said the pretty housemaid; "this is it, ain't it?"

"Let me look," said Sam.

The pretty housemaid had stood the candle on the floor. As it gave a very dim light Sam was obliged to go down on his knees before he could see whether it really was his own hat or not. It was a remarkably small corner, and so—it was nobody's fault but the man's who built the house—Sam and the pretty housemaid were necessarily very close together.

"Yes, this is it," said Sam. "Good-by!"

"Good-by," said the pretty housemaid.

"Good-by," said Sam, and as he said it he dropped the hat that had cost so much trouble in looking for.

"How awkward you are," said the pretty housemaid. "You'll lose it again if you don't take care."

So just to prevent his losing it again she put it on for him. Whether it was that the pretty housemaid's face looked prettier still when it was raised toward Sam's, or whether it was the accidental consequence of their being so near to each other is a matter of uncertainty to this day; but Sam kissed her.

"You don't mean to say you did that on purpose?" said the pretty housemaid, blushing.

"No, I didn't then," said Sam, "but I will now." So he kissed her again.

"Sam!" said Mr. Pickwick, calling over the banisters.

"Coming, sir," replied Sam, running up-stairs.

"How long you have been?" said Mr. Pickwick.

"There was something behind the door which prevented our getting it open for ever so long, sir," replied Sam.

And this was the first passage of Mr. Weller's first love.—Tid-bits.

Speaking of the statement recently made that there are thirty-four coffin factories in the United States, turning out one hundred and fifty coffins daily, the American Furniture Gazette says that this must be a mistake, or that a great many coffins are imported. Chicago uses forty coffins a day and the other large cities use as many in proportion, to say nothing of the smaller ones. If each factory turns out 150 the statement may be nearer the truth.

The Find.

You sound's to their steeple-bell our bark,
They're running—they're running. Go bark!
The sport may be lost by a moment's delay,
So whip up the puppies and scurry away.
Push down through the cover by single and dell,
There's a gate at the bottom—I know it full well;
And they're running—they're running.
Go bark!

They're running—they're running. Go bark!
One fence, and we're out of the park;
Sit down in your saddles and race at the brook,
Then smash at the bullfinch; no time for a look;
Leave cravens and skirters to dangle behind;
He's away for the moors in the teeth of the wind,
And they're running—they're running.
Go bark!

They're running—they're running. Go bark!
Let them run on and run till it's dark:
Well with them we are and well with them we'll be
While there's wind in our horses and daylight to see,
Then jog along homeward, chat over the run,
And hear in our dreams the sweet music all night
Of—They're running—they're running.
[illegible]

THREE EASTERN CITIES.

Growth of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston Since the War.

The New York Herald prints an interesting account, illustrated by maps, of the growth of three cities—New York, Philadelphia, and Boston—since the war. It is a record of wonderful prosperity and full of encouragement for the future.

In 1866 the solid blocks of New York extended as far north as Thirty-fourth street. Between Thirty-fourth and Forty-second streets, east of Sixth avenue it was partially built up, but west of Sixth avenue few improvements had been attempted. North of Forty-second street the only improvements were between Second and Fourth avenues as far as Fifty-ninth street and between Eighth and Ninth avenues to Central park. North of Seventy-ninth street was the scattered population of Yorkville, and north of One Hundred and Eighteenth street was Harlem, on the Harlem river, which was then the northern boundary of the city. Since that time a tract north of the Harlem river, more than half as large as the former area of the city, has been annexed from Westchester county. This tract is bounded on the east by the Bronx river and on the north by Yonkers. This extensive district, it is expected, will be devoted mainly to manufactories and the population they support, while the rest of the people will find homes on Mahattan island, south of the river.

The population of New York city in 1865, as ascertained by the state census, was 726,386, which was less by more than 87,000 than the population reported by the national census of 1860. But if the war gave a check to the growth of New York it was but a temporary effect. In 1870 the population was 942,292. In 1880, 1,206,299. The Herald now claims a population of 1,800,000, which we must think to be an exaggeration. The increase from 1870 to 1880 was something more than 25 per cent. We are not prepared to believe that it has been 50 per cent in the last six years. But if the present population is 1,500,000 it is an evidence of wonderful prosperity. In 1866 Madison avenue was not graded above Forty-second street, and along Forty-second and Forty-third streets in the neighborhood of Fifth avenue there was a cattle-yard. Now the center of activity in building is north of One Hundred and Fiftieth street. On One Hundred and Fifty-fourth street houses of three stories with mansard roofs rent readily for $1,000. Within twenty years about fifty thousand new houses have been erected.

The consolidation, which increased the area of the city of Philadelphia from one of the smallest of American cities to the largest, and made it in population the second in the country, was adopted in 1854. The growth of Philadelphia since the war has been steady, but not phenomenal in any degree. Its population in 1865 was 619,755, and is now estimated to be a round million. It lacked less than 50,000 of that number last year. The number of buildings erected in Philadelphia largely exceeds the number in New York for the same period, which is due to the fact that they are smaller and cheaper, the majority being intended only for one family each. The records of the building inspectors show that since 1865 nearly 94,000 buildings have been constructed. While New York is the city of high rents, Philadelphia is the city of low rents, in comparison with any other large city in the country.

Boston has also grown rapidly. Since the war, Roxbury, Dorchester, West Roxbury, Charlestown, and Brighton have been annexed, and the population has increased from 192,000 to nearly 400,000.

"The meanest man in town," said a barber in Philadelphia, one day recently, "is a lawyer who will come in one day, get shaved, and come in a day or two later and get his head rubbed and hair combed on the old shave."

Wine with a History.

J. A. Murray, of Butte, Mont., is the possessor of twelve bottles of wine with a history. The earliest known of this wine is that it was found in a subterranean vault inside a sealed stone receptable, in a Jesuitical monastery that was demolished during a local feud among religious fanatics. It so happened that the eye of an epicurean fell upon it, and he secured it as the most valuable of the treasures, carried it into Poland, and presented it the crown, for which he was rewarded by the highest honors and titles that could be conferred upon an ordinary citizen. At the marriage of the Princess Decherniz of Poland to the heir apparent of the crown of France the only remaining basket of this priceless vintage was presented to the prince for the nuptial occasion. An unprincipled adventurer by the name of Bonforte, who had secured the position of second steward to the crown, stole twelve bottles of the precious nectar and replaced these with twelve of the inferior article. These twelve bottles he brought with him to America in the year 1790. He communicated the nature of his special treasure to his most trusted friend, Henry Coatway. The cupidity and avarice of the latter overpowered his reason, and he killed Bonforte to secure the wine. The deed was no sooner done than he feared the vengeance of the law, and resolved to fly to distant parts, for a time at least, until the excitement of the murder would die out. Before leaving he buried the twelve bottles, with their history, far down among the roots of an ancient oak. Fifty years after, on uprooting this same tree, a newly converted Mormon found the treasure and took it with him when he migrated to Utah.

When Brigham Young was made acquainted with the nature of the valuable article contained in the twelve bottles he informed the owner that God had made him the instrument to find this treasure that he might give it to the head of the church, and forthwith took the vintage.

The wine was in turn stolen from Brigham by an apostate Mormon, who brought it to Montana, and on his death bed, at the mining camp of Pioneer, he bequeathed to J. A. Murray this wine of such an eventful history as testimonial of his gratitude to that gentleman for having loaned him $500 at one time for the purpose of calling a hand of Julius Levy, by which he took down a pot containing $1,399.—Salt Lake Tribune.

In 1884 the bulk of the tea shipments were via the Suez Canal. In 1885 the shipments by that route to America were but 9,254,197 pounds, while San Francisco received 12,496,187 pounds. This year the imports by way of San Francisco have reached 27,525,280 pounds, while those via the Suez Canal have fallen off to 7,502,049 pounds. Coming by way of San Francisco eleven days are saved.

CASTING OUT SNAKES.

Remarkable Sufferings of a Man Whose Stomach Was a Reptiles' Nest.

[illegible] ... About three years ago Mr. John Longwell, of Charleston, ... county, began to fail in health ... had always been a strong, rugged man, weighing about 180 pounds ... [illegible]

Getting Married at Easy Rates.

"Wedding-rings, $3.50 upwards." So ran the legend in the window of a cheap jewelry store on Fulton street. ... [illegible] ... "Say, mister, I'se done got married, but I'se got no money; but if yoah want a job whitewashing yoah house you be sho' an' send to me."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hereafter Druggists ... [illegible]

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. ... [illegible] ... Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

Good Results in Every Case.

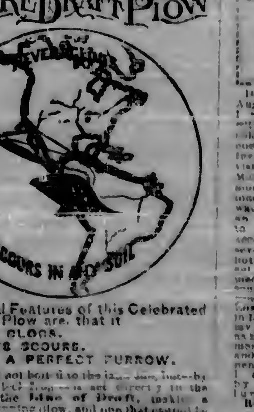
D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs ... [illegible] ... Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption ... [illegible] ... Trial Bottles free at G. W. Crouter's Drug Store.

MARVELOUS PRICES! BOOKS FOR THE MILLION. Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [list of 45 titles illegible] OUR UNEQUALLED OFFER. We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

GRENADES. Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts. Over Sixty Millions Sold. PRICES. Pints, - Per Doz., $10.00. Quarts, " " 15.00. "STAR" Tubular Fire Extinguisher. In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant in ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No rust, no corrosion possible. Plain, $12.00 per doz. Ornamt'd. 15.00 per doz. The "Star" EXTINGUISHER Holds gallons, and will force a stream through 6 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone. Price, $80.00 Each. "STAR" CHEMICAL. Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt. 450 lbs. PRICE. $200.00 EACH. Four years of practical use have demonstrated these to be the only reliable and thoroughly efficient Hand Fire appliances made. We use the same chemical liquid in all, and guarantee fully. Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials. The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO. 51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW. WORLD RENOWNED CENTRE DRAFT PLOW



The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it 1st. NEVER CLOGS. 2d. ALWAYS SCOURS. 3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW. The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but is directly in the Centre of the line of Draft, making a steady, light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy. If your Agent has none write us for price. J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS, Racine, Wis.

NEW Double Action "TRAHERN" FORCE PUMP. Simplest, Cheapest, Most Durable, Works Easy! FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and STATIONERY, OF EVERY DESCRIPTION. A Large and Complete New Line JUST RECEIVED. EVERYTHING YOU CAN THINK OF. You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices. PERRY WEED. The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works! Builder and Manufacturer of BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS. Sheet Iron Work given special attention. MARINE WORK a specialty. HENRY BARTH, Prop. Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC Single Thread Sewing Machines will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic. Address, 78 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases. YOUNG'S COUGH SYRUP. [testimonials illegible] Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price. W. JOHNSTON & CO., Detroit.

FRANK E. WOODS Bath & Barber Rooms. Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN, At current rates of interest, on Approved Real Estate Security. School Bonds bought and sold. MILEY & CHAPIN, Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS. Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House. [illegible] JAY L. PRICE.

MILLINERY AND FANCY GOODS! Mrs. ELLA SMITH & Miss ANNIE COOPER have opened a store in the Ingleside Building, and invite their friends to call and inspect their stock. FANCY GOODS! Of all varieties usually kept in a first-class millinery store.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS Dealers in Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS. We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES. We also keep constantly on draught Milwaukee Export and lager Beer. Bridge St., second south of Bed...

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, Publishers

The Perennial Dog-Days.

As we sailed down from Syracuse I fell asleep, but the old gentleman sitting beside me grew so restless and fidgety that he roused me. In the seat in front of us a lady and a gentleman were carrying on one of those intellectual conversations that are evidently intended for the whole car, and tend to make travel such a rare pleasure to a man who has just escaped from the asylum. I lost the opening chapters of the dialogue, but it was evident that the lady wanted to buy a "dawg," and the gentleman knew all about "dawgs." She wanted a setter.

"Red, or liver-colored?" he asked.

"Oh," she didn't care; just so it was a handsome setter. "I do so love a beautiful setter. And I never had one, and I just long for one."

"Well," he said, they are beautiful dogs. I couldn't live without dogs. There is something so loving about a dog."

"So human," she said, "so more than human. There is nothing in all this world so devoted as a dog's affection."

"That's so. A dog's love is perfectly unselfish. If you feed him he loves you; if you beat him, he still loves you."

"Oh!" she cried, "how can anyone beat a dog! I hate a man who can be cruel to a dog."

"So do I. I'd shoot a man in a minute if I saw him kick one of my dogs. I have seven dogs."

"Oh! how happy you must be."

"Yes, and there isn't a room in my house too good for those dogs, and they know it, too. You know my big black Newfoundland, St. Augustine Le Claire? I paid $100 for him. Well, he sleeps in my room, and often he climbs right up on the bed, and sleeps there."

"Oh! isn't that too cunning for anything?"

"Yes, my dogs live all over the house. Then my wife has three dogs of her own, that makes ten altogether. It seems like a good many."

"But yet you couldn't spare one?"

"Oh, no! The house would seem lonely without them. They always welcome me when I come home; they're always glad to see me. Last spring when my Siberian bloodhound, Charlemagne, died I thought my wife would go wild. She cried herself into hysteria, and went to bed; gave up society, put on mourning, and locked the piano. I couldn't eat anything myself for days. I felt as though I had lost a son."

"You have children haven't you, Mr. Kennelthorpe?"

"O yes. I have three, two boys and a girl—no, two girls—no, no, what am I thinking of? They're all girls."

Here the old gentleman collared me and dragged me furiously into the smoking-car, where he backed me up against the wood-box and held me fiercely by the collar.

"That's the cause of hydrophobia," he howled. "That's the kind of stuff that makes a man mad! The bite of a mad dog is healing balm after such rot as that! One hundred dollars for a dog. Buy all the curs that ever yelped. I can buy one hundred dogs for $1, and then I'd only keep one and I'd kill him. Am I right?"

I feebly said, "Amen."

"You are saved," he said, relaxing his hold; "and now let's sit down and smoke one of the train-boy's non-combustible cigars, for I must nerve myself to a deed of awful justice."

"What is it you'll do?"

"I am going to kill that man when he gets off the train, and at the same time you will kill that woman, or I shall kill you."

But when we got to Utica they rushed the old gentleman off and took him to the asylum. And I was the only man on the train who knew what drove him mad.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Andrew Jackson and the Veteran.

A general in the Revolutionary war, who was well known by Jackson, was postmaster of a prominent New York town. He had been an Adams man, and Silas Wright, one of the ablest representatives the state ever had, and Martin Van Buren, who was then Jackson's secretary of state, formed a coalition to have the veteran warrior removed soon after Jackson had taken the oath of office. The scared hero determined to see Jackson and plead his own cause. He called on Jackson at the white house. The president engaged in a familiar conversation with him, when to his amazement the old soldier said:

"Gen. Jackson, I have come here to talk to you about my office; the politicians want to take it away from me, and I have nothing else to live upon."

The president made no reply until the aged postmaster began to take off his coat in the most excited manner, when old Hickory broke out with the inquiry:

"What in heaven's name are you going to do?"

"Well, sir, I am going to show you my wounds which I received fighting for my country against the English."

"Put it on at once, sir!" was the reply. "I am astonished that a man of your age should make such an exhibition of himself," and the eyes of the iron president were suffused with tears as without another word he bade his ancient foe good evening.

The next day Wright called upon the president and made out his case against the general, and urged his removal upon the strongest grounds. He had hardly finished the last sentence when Jackson sprang to his feet, flung his pipe into the fire, and exclaimed with great vehemence: "I take the consequences, sir, I take the consequences. By the eternal, I will not remove the old man. I can not remove him. Why, Mr. Wright, do you know that he carries more than a pound of British lead in his body?"

That was the last of it. He who was stronger than courts or cabinets pronounced his case, and the happy old postmaster next day took the stage and returned home rejoicing.—Nashville.

Constance Fenimore Woolson is living near Florence, next to the house where Hawthorne wrote his "Marble Fawn."

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE.

She is Seventeen.

She stands with her face to the setting sun,
Her hands clasped loosely across her gown,
And weaves bright day dreams one by one,
In the crimson clouds where the sun goes down.

From the sunset land comes the prince so bold,
With his gleaming sword and flying steed,
Her heart is filled with a love untold,
And she smiles to hasten his laggard speed.

He will bring her from out his cloudland home
A ring and robe of wondrous dyes,
And together the whole wide world they'll roam,
With love for a guide, under purple skies.

Was ever in life a thing so bright
As a maiden's heart in her dreamy teens,
When every lad is belted knight,
With gold and jewels to crown their queens?

The light goes out in the western sky,
The crimson fades to a somber gray
And she turns away with a half breathed sigh;
She must wait for the prince another day.

Ah, maiden mine, with your heart of gold,
Could I keep you thus, with your castle bright,
But alack for the ring and prince so bold,
They will fade away like the sunset bright.
Mrs. Belle Morrison.

A Motto.

Never, never a day should pass
Without some kindness kindly shown;
This is a motto, dear laddie and lass,
To think upon daily and take for your own.

A Short Spell.

Said Jeremy Jack to Timothy Tom: "I can spell 'busy,' can you sir?"
"Yes, b-i-z, biz," says Timothy Tom, "Z y, zy: how will that do sir?"
"Well," says Jeremy Jack, "but it seems to me
You could just as well spell it with one little bee."

He Had Read History.

A teacher stood before his class
In "History," one day
Composed of twenty-five young boys
And thus to them did say:

"Now, who can tell, what is the one Great, fundamental, grand
Foundation principle, on which
Is built this glorious land?"

A small boy raised his hand, and then
In lisping tones, said he:
"Pleath, thir, I dess it mutht 'a been Georth Wathington'th cherry tree."

A Boy Love Affair of Washington's.

George Washington was a tall, large-limbed, shy boy of about fifteen when he fell in love with a girl whom he seems to have met when living with his brother Augustine. He calls her, in one of his letters afterward, a "lowland beauty," and tradition makes her to have been a Miss Grimes, who later married, and was the mother of one of the young soldiers who served under Washington in the War for Independence. Whatever may have been the exact reason that his love affair did not prosper—whether he was too shy to make his mind known, or so silent as not to show himself to advantage, or so discreet with grave demeanor as to hold himself too long in reserve, it is impossible now to say; but I suspect that one effect was to make him work the harder. Sensible people do not expect boys of fifteen to be playing the lover; and George Washington was old for his years, and not likely to appear like a spooney.

A Pretty Good Bad Boy.

A good many years ago now, a small, bare-legged boy set out from his home in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, for an afternoon's sport with a gun. He rambled along as boys will, with his eyes wide open for everything that came under them, as well as for the game that was the special object of his expedition, and he had not gone far when he saw a chaise approaching, driven by the Governor of the State.

The Governor was a very popular and distinguished man, who was being talked of for the Presidency, and we should not have liked the small boy if he had not been a little overawed by finding himself alone in the presence of so august a personage. He was equal to the occasion, however, and as the chaise drew near him, he stood aside to let it pass and gravely presented arms. The Governor at once pulled up his horse and looked with amazement at the little fellow standing there as serious as a sentry, with his gun held rigidly before him.

"What is your name?" said the Governor.

"Thomas Bailey Aldrich," replied the boy, with a military salute.

He was invited into the chaise, and though he lost his shooting, what was that in comparison with the distinction of riding into Portsmouth Town with Governor Woodbury?

This was forty years ago, and since then Thomas Bailey Aldrich has earned a place among the foremost of American authors by a series of books, some in prose and some in verse, which are distinguished by the purity of their tone, and the refinement of their style, and the picturesqueness of their invention. One of them is called "The Story of a Bad Boy," and except that some of the names of persons and places are changed, it is so faithful a picture of the author's boyhood that it might be called an autobiography.—William H. Rideing in March St. Nicholas.

The students of the state university at Athens, Ga., have organized a boarding-house assembly of Knights of Letburgy, for self-protection. All the students but seven belong to it. Recently Mr. Anderson reproved two of his boarders for sleeping too late, and told them to leave. A boycott was declared, and every student left his house. They propose to boycott establishments of any kind which treat students improperly, and to punish students who do not pay their debts. They say the only way for Mr. Anderson to get his boarders back is to apologize to the two whom he reproved, to promise to let them sleep as late as they wish and to keep their breakfast warm.

"Give an example of an immovable obstacle," said the teacher. And the smart bad boy at the foot of the class suggested three girls on the sidewalk. The teacher, who usually has to walk in the middle of the street herself, sent him right up to the head of the class and told him to stay there for a week.—Burdette.

"What is an affaire de coeur, papa?" said the boy, who had been endeavoring to read the daily papers. "That must be a new name for a dog fight," said the old gentleman, as he reached for the paper.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

Mrs. Grundy says: "boys now to a great extent take the places of men in New York society." Mrs. Grundy must not complain, since boys were created for just this very thing.—St. Albans Messenger.

GRANT AND HANCOCK.

True Story of the Circumstances That Led to their Estrangement.

Gen. James B. Fry, U. S. A., speaking a few days ago of the recently-published article as to the disagreement between Gen. Grant and Gen. Hancock, said to have come from a "well-known Major General," entitled "The Grant-Hancock Tiff," said a similar article appeared in a New York evening paper a year ago, and that the statements were attributed to Gen. Alfred Pleasanton. As Gen. Pleasanton was an old acquaintance of Mrs. Hancock, who felt much aggrieved by the story, she wrote asking if he had been correctly reported. He answered that the statement had been made without his knowledge, that he had never made any such statements, had no idea who the author was, etc. The Washington correspondent who wrote the story was taken to task by his editor, and replied that Gen. Pleasanton did tell the story "without solicitation and purely and solely voluntarily on his part." The substance of the two stories was that when Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Hancock were young ladies in society in St. Louis as Miss Dent and Miss Russell there was a marked difference in favor of the latter in their social positions; that the Russell family entertained splendidly; that the Dent family did not mingle in the society of the city, but lived humbly and frugally; that Miss Russell was the rich prize; that Miss Dent became just a little bit envious of the much-sought rich young lady; that from this seed—envy—sprang the Grant-Hancock quarrel; and that said quarrel was precipitated at the close of the War by Mrs. Grant forcing her husband to give her revenge upon the rival of her youth by turning Gen. Hancock and his family out of quarters and taking her into the house thus vacated.

Gen. Fry says, "It is not true that Gen. Grant turned Gen. Hancock out of quarters, or that the trouble between them was based upon any question concerning quarters. There was no bad feeling between them until 1868, when Gen. Hancock, then in New Orleans, was over-ruled by Gen. Grant. The difference that then arose was official, and, though it was subsequently aggravated by other official matters, it was in time removed, and their relations were thereafter friendly until 1880. While Hancock was running for the Presidency in that year a preacher by the name of Fowler published an account of an interview he had held with Grant, in which he reported Grant as having said unkind and injurious things of Hancock. Hancock stated to his friends and to the public that he could not believe Grant could have been correctly reported, and that Grant himself would make the necessary contradictions. But as that was not done Hancock settled down to the conclusion that Grant had wronged him, and they ceased to be on speaking terms; so they died. Their wives were in no respect to blame for their differences. Concerning the unjust fiction relating to the early associations of Mrs. Grant and Mrs. Hancock, the latter has said to me recently: 'This attack is untruthful, wanton, and unprovoked. In it some one has seen fit to sacrifice Mrs. Grant for the purpose of placing me in a false position. ...... The article is baseless and cruel. ...... Our intercourse [with the Grants] remained perfectly cordial up to the New Orleans affair. I knew Mrs. Grant very slightly before her marriage, which took place in 1848. At that time I was at school, but left the summer following. Nellie Dent, Mrs. Grant, was a contemporary of mine. I was very fond of her, as well as of old Mr. and Mrs. Dent, who occupied as good a position in St. Louis as any one, and had quite as good claims, in my opinion. They were hospitable people. The family were not living out of the city, but in it, very near to my home, and I saw much of them.'"

Gen. Fry adds further: "As Mrs. Grant was married and went out of the young society of St. Louis in 1848, and Mrs. Hancock was at school then and did not enter society until 1850 and was married in 1850 when only 18 years of age, there is no foundation for the story of a rivalry between them as young ladies which led to a quarrel between their husbands in after life."

Curious Aversion.

All over the north of Europe the greatest aversion is felt to be the first to enter a new building or go over a newly built bridge. To do this is not thought everywhere and in all cases to entail death, it is considered supremely unlucky. Several German legends are connected with this superstition. The reader, if he has been to Aix-la-Chapelle, has doubtless had the rift in the great door pointed out to him, and it has been told how it came there. The devil and the architect made a compact that the first should supply the plans and the second gain the kudos, and the devil's pay was to be the first who crossed the threshold when the church was built. When the building was nearly complete the architect's conscience smote him, and he confessed the compact to the bishop. "We'll do him," said the prelate; that is to say, he said something to this effect in terms more appropriate to the century in which he lived and to his high ecclesiastical office. When the procession formed to enter the minster for the consecration the devil lurked in ambush behind a pillar, and fixed his wicked eye on a fine, fat, and succulent little chorister as his destined prey. But, alas for his hopes! this fat little boy had been given his instructions, and as he neared the great door loosed the chain of a wolf and sent it through. The evil one uttered a howl of rage, snatched up the wolf, and rushed away, giving the door a kick as he passed it that split the solid oak.—The Cornhill Magazine.

A SOLDIER UNDER NAPOLEON.

Do you see that tumble-down cottage there,
By the road by the sycamore tree,
With [illegible] the broken window-panes,
[illegible]
[illegible]
A soldier under Napoleon.

There's little to see, I confess,
In the withered old man in his corner chair;
Not a tooth nor a thought in his hairless head,
As he sits and mumbles and grumbles there.
But if ninety years take much away,
His title, at least, will always stay—
A soldier under Napoleon.

His dim eyes watch his daughter at work,
A grim old woman in calico;
He sometimes notes her grandson at play
With his painted soldiers all in a row;
And he dearly loves his pint of gin,
And his black clay pipe, this man who has been
A soldier under Napoleon.

But Jena, Marengo, Austerlitz,
And last, and blood-est, Waterloo!
Will his eye not flash if I speak these words,
And the sluggish blood in his veins burn true?
He's deaf but I'll shout them out till he hear,
And in memory's light, at least appear
A soldier under Napoleon.

"Good sir," I say, "do you recollect
That last great day when, the records tell,
You fought so bravely, nor quit your post
Till the last man left of your comrades fell?"
"I've lost the names," he says to me;
"I just remember I used to be
A soldier under Napoleon."
—Charles F. Richardson, in Harper's Magazine for March.

LINCOLN'S JOURNEY.

Philadelphia Times: There have been many romances given to the public about Abraham Lincoln's night journey from Harrisburg to Washington, when on his way to his inauguration, and various individuals have made themselves figure as conspicuous agents in securing the safety of the then President-elect. That there was a thoroughly organized conspiracy to assassinate Mr. Lincoln in Baltimore when passing through to Washington is not now a matter of dispute. Samuel H. Felton, then resident of the Philadelphia, Wilmington & Baltimore Road, was the first to obtain information of the combination to destroy his railway and bridges and cut off communication between Washington and the North, and he employed the Pinkerton Detective Agency to investigate it. The inquiry developed that the chief aim was to prevent Lincoln from reaching Washington to be inaugurated, and that information led to a more searching investigation by skilled men and women of social position mingling freely with Baltimore secessionists and pretending to sympathize heartily with them. This developed the settled purpose to create a general riot at the depot in Baltimore when Lincoln arrived, and in the confusion Lincoln was to be assassinated.

While this Pinkerton inquiry was going on under Mr. Felton's direction, Gen. Scott, who was charged with the protection of the President-elect during the inauguration ceremonies, had secretly commissioned the late Col. Charles P. Stone to investigate the threatened peril to Lincoln. Stone soon found that Baltimore was the centre of the danger, and he covered that city by the best detectives of both sexes and reached the same conclusion that Pinkerton had reached, although each was ignorant of the operations of the other. Senator Seward, who was the announced Premier of the new Administration, was acting with Gen. Scott, and they communicated with Lincoln at Springfield before he started on his journey to the Capitol. Lincoln responded by sending Leonard Swett to Washington accredited to Gen. Scott and Seward as his most trusted friend. Swett obtained all the facts and returned to Lincoln with them, fully impressed with the peril of the situation. The result was that Lincoln was sent East in company with Colonel (later General) Sumner and Col. Lamon, who were charged with the double duty of advising and and protecting him. The only record Mr. Lincoln has made on the subject was his statement made to Benson J. Lossing in December, 1864, when Lossing reports as follows:

"I arrived at Philadelphia on the 21st. I agreed to stop one night and on the following morning hoist the flag over Independence Hall. In the evening there was a great crowd when I received my friends at the Continental Hotel. Mr. Judd, a warm personal friend from Chicago, sent for me to come to his room. I went and found there Mr. Pinkerton, a skillful police detective, also from Chicago, who had been employed for some days in Baltimore watching and searching for suspicious persons there. Pinkerton informed me that a plan had been laid for my assassination, the exact time I expected to come through Baltimore being publicly known. He was well informed as to the plan, but did not know that the conspirators would have pluck enough to execute it. He urged me to go right through to Washington that night. I did not like that. I had made arrangements to visit Harrisburg and go from there to Baltimore, and had resolved to do so. * * * When I was making my way back to my room through crowds of people I met Frederick W. Seward. We went together to my room, when he told me that he had been sent at the instance of his father and Gen. Scott, and informed me that their detectives in Baltimore had discovered the plot there to assassinate me. They knew nothing of Pinkerton's movements. I now believed such a plot to be in existence."

Mr. Swett, in a recent article in the North American Review, gives the foregoing facts and follows with the true history of Lincoln's perilous night journey from Harrisburg to Washington. We give the conclusion of his article without abridgement. He says: The change in the program of the journey occurred at Harrisburg at a dinner the night of the 21st, which was presided over by Gov. Curtin, and the circumstances are told by Alexander K. McClure in a paper to the "Clover Club" of Philadelphia. It seems that Gen. Scott and Mr. Seward, being for some reason alarmed at the continuance by Mr. Lincoln of the original plan of his journey, sent a dispatch to Gov. Curtin, which was received at the dinner over which he was presiding at Harrisburg. I give the language of Mr. McClure:

"While all were intent on the enjoyment of a dinner, with the new president as the central figure of the feast, a message was brought by a servant and quietly handed to Gov. Curtin. The mere interruption of presenting a message to the Governor in his own Capital attracted no special attention; but when the smile fled and a sudden cloud of despair fixed itself upon his face there was an ominous silence and painful suspense around the table before a word was spoken. Mr. Lincoln was among the first to note that a shadow had been suddenly flung upon the circle, and he did not conceal his anxiety to learn the cause. The truth was soon made known by Gov. Curtin. The message he had received was a joint one from Gen. Winfield Scott and Senator Seward, who had already been designated as Premier of the new Administration, and it notified the Governor that Mr. Lincoln could not pass through Baltimore alive the following day, and peremptorily commanded a change of route and program to save the life of the President-elect.

"It is needless to say that the occasion was no longer one of festivity. The solemnity of the funeral quickly enthroned itself where there had been pleasant converse and welcome wit but a moment before. All but one of the dozen or more men present seemed utterly appalled, and that one was Abraham Lincoln. While every other face was pale with apprehension, he maintained the same sober, sad expression that he had exhibited from the beginning, and as usual he said nothing until all the others had spoken and he was personally appealed to for his views. One by one, beginning with Gov. Curtin, each gave pointed expression to the judgment that Mr. Lincoln's route and program must be changed and that it must be done without publicity. The silence of Mr. Lincoln had hardly been noted until all but himself had spoken in the intensity of their feelings; and then, as if suddenly called to the recollection of the presence of the man who was the decreed victim of the assassin, all turned to him for counsel. Even when personally appealed to, he seemed reluctant to answer, but when pressed to acquiesce in the unanimous judgment of his friends he said, with scarcely a tremor in his clear voice: 'What would the people think of their ruler stealing into his Capital like a thief in the night.'"

He seemed to think little of the peril to his life, but he thought much of the peril of forfeiting the respect of the Nation. Mr. Lincoln's unwillingness to assent to a change of route and program brought the dinner guests to face a new duty. Instead of suggesting, one by one they followed Gov. Curtin in commanding, and the President-elect was notified that the time and manner of pursuing his journey to Washington had passed beyond his discretion, and that he must defer to such measures as could be devised for his safety. He silently acquiesced; but his was the only face at the table that was not blanched with fear. Col. Thomas A. Scott, the keenest of all in perception and the boldest to execute, at once proposed a new route and program and suggested all its details. His plan was promptly and gratefully accepted, and Mr. Lincoln himself seemed to share the general sense of relief when Col. Scott's program was settled. The first duty was to avoid even the suspicion outside that the route or time of the President had been changed. To mislead the vast crowd that surrounded the hotel, a carriage was ostentatiously called for Gov. Curtin and President Lincoln, and they walked out together, entered the carriage, and ordered the driver to take them to the Executive Mansion. This was a natural proceeding and attracted no attention; but the Executive Mansion was not the destination of the two distinguished executives.

Before they had started Col. Scott and myself hastened to the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, where he promptly cleared one of his tracks to Philadelphia, gave some confidential instructions by telegraph to a trusted agent in West Philadelphia, had a special engine and car made ready, and then I saw him personally superintend the cutting of every telegraph line that entered Harrisburg. By the time that was accomplished a carriage stopped near the depot, where there was no brilliant rays of gaslight and the Governor and the President elect, who had driven circuitously to the depot, alighted. Mr. Lincoln and Col. Lamon entered the special car and they were soon whirling along on their way to the City of Brotherly Love."

It is fortunate for the Nation that the solution of this question, so fraught with the gravest consequences, among others fell upon two such men as Thomas A. Scott and Alexander K. McClure. The writer heard Mr. Lincoln say in the fall of 1861, after a protracted interview with him, and after Mr. McClure had left, that he had more brain-power than any man he had ever known, and everybody who knew Thomas A. Scott knows that he saw the intricacies and the solution of any complicated question at a glance as accurately as most men see them in the afterthought. He was the brightest, quickest, and promptest man of his time.

Pinkerton had been left at Philadelphia to arrange matters there in case an emergency should arise. As the special from Harrisburg would arrive before the train for Washington would leave, Mr. Pinkerton received Mr. Lincoln and Col. Lamon at the depot with a private carriage and drove about the city until it was time for the train to start for Washington. The party then took the rear car, the last half of which, divided off by a curtain, had been engaged by Pinkerton's lady for a sick brother and Mr. Lincoln Mr. Lamon, Mr. Pinkerton, and lady occupied this part of the sleeper for the journey.

They left Philadelphia about 11 o'clock. Not a soul except the four people in the rear end of the car and the few at the dinner party at Harrisburg knew that Mr. Lincoln had left that city or was on his way to Washington.

He could not, of course, take a large number of persons with him without attracting attention and betraying his presence, and therefore reduced his arrangements for defense upon that journey to the smallest possible compass by the selection of Ward H. Lamon as his companion. Lamon was a native of Virginia, who had come to Danville, Ill., at an early day, and for many years had practiced law as the partner of Lincoln on the circuit at that place. He was all over a Virginian and strong, stout, and athletic, a Hercules in stature, tapering from his broad shoulders to his heels, and the handsomest man, physically, I ever saw. He was skilled in all the ways of the manly art, 30 years of age, six feet high, and, although prudent and cautious, was thoroughly courageous and bold. He wore that night two ordinary pistols, two derringers, and two large knives. You could put no more elements of attack or defense to a human skin than there were in Lamon and his armory on that occasion.

Mr. Lincoln selected him for this position because the two were wholly unlike, and each admired in the other qualities he himself did not possess. Lincoln knew the steadying the last drop of blood in his defense would be the most delightful act of Lamon's life, and that in him he had a regiment, armed and drilled for the most efficient service.

Having taken possession of the rear end of their car, the conductor was handed a package of papers, for which he had been instructed by telegraph to wait. It is not true that Lincoln wore a Scotch cap or used any other mode of disguise. All the persons accompanying him were dressed in ordinary dress and went simply as private citizens.

They arrived at Baltimore at 3 o'clock and waited there, because of some ordinary detention, about two hours. Before the train left workmen began to come around, and one was heard to say with expletives that "old Lincoln is coming here today, but I don't believe he will get through alive." Mr. Lincoln laughed heartily at the remark, and soon the train pulled out, and a little after daylight we reached Washington.

It is doubtful if there was any time during the War in which there was not in Washington, Baltimore, or in that general vicinity some conspiracy in existence to capture or injure Mr. Lincoln. On one occasion, in the summer of 1863, if I remember rightly, the writer of this article had occasion, with William H. Hanna of Bloomington, Ill., to ride to the Soldiers' Home, about four miles from Washington, to call upon Mr. Lincoln in the evening. Our driver missed the way, passing by the house into the forest below. Being once in the intricacies of this labyrinth we did not get out until 2 o'clock in the morning, and the question arose why the Rebels might not send a force across the river, and, coming up in the woods to the Soldiers' Home, capture Mr. Lincoln and carry him within the enemy's lines. Mr. Hanna was very much concerned in reference to the situation, and I said to him: "You go and talk with Mr. Lincoln; you are a new man." The subject of his capture or assassination had been discussed until it was a sore subject between Mr. Lincoln and his friends. So the next day we got Marshal Lamon, and the three obtained an audience with the President.

"I cannot be shut up in an iron cage and guarded," he said. "If I have business at the War Office I must take my hat and go there, and if to kill me is within the purposes of this Rebellion no precaution can prevent it. You may guard me at a single point, but I will necessarily be exposed at others. People come to see me every day and I receive them, and I do not know but that some of them are secessionists or engaged in plots to kill me. The truth is, if any man has made up his mind that he will give his life for mine he can take mine."

Mr. Lamon's official duties embraced the safety of the President, and these facts, with many others, made a deep impression upon his mind. During the fall of 1862 I was a guest at his house nearly three months.

During that time he did not sleep at home a single night, but left his house about 10 o'clock, went to the White House, and with a guard which he stationed there, and without Mr. Lincoln's knowledge, remained during the night. At the time of the assassination Lamon was, unfortunately, out of the city, and his absence occurred in this wise: Mr. Lincoln had just returned from Richmond, and, having inaugurated some steps looking toward the holding of a convention to get that State back into the Union, he asked Lamon, being a Virginian, to go to Richmond and attend this convention. The following is the pass which he gave him:

Allow the bearer, Ward H. Lamon, and friend, with ordinary baggage, to pass from Washington to Richmond and return. A. LINCOLN.

April 11, 1865.

Lamon said to the President as he separated from him: "Make me one promise."

"What is that?" said the President; "perhaps I can."

"I want you to promise not to go to the theatre during my absence."

"Well," said he, after some conversation, "I will do the best I can," then, turning to John P. Usher, who was present at the interview, he said in substance: "My friend is crazy on the subject of my assassination."

When Mr. Seward first became conscious after the attack upon him, he said: "Where was Col. Lamon? If he had been in the city this would not have happened." He repeated this remark often afterwards.

But Mr. Lincoln did go to the theatre the night of the eventful 14th and the stealthy tread of the murderer followed him. There was a pistol shot which echoed through the land louder than the cannon's roar, and a murderous horseman dashed into the night.

A tall man, wounded, and limp, was carried to the nearest house and stretched upon his bed to die. Men who had faced death where fire danced along the weird line of battle without blanching stood around his bed and wept. The blood oozed from his head until it soaked through the bed and dropped from the under side. Towards morning there was a convulsive struggle and the spirit of Abraham Lincoln passed to where the angel at the gate said:

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Liquor from the Poppy.

A German botanist has discovered a source of brandy and alcohol in the poppy. It appears that the pulp which covers the poppy seed contains saccharine matter, which, after due fermentation and distillation, produces a kind of brandy of agreeable flavor. As this pulp has been hitherto thrown away, the discovery, it is said, affords poppy planters an opportunity of realizing more profit from their crops without a very great expenditure of capital.

HUMOROUS.

"What do you call your dog, doctor?" "Cuchona, because his bark is the only valuable thing about him."—Burdette.

Why women kiss each other is
An undetermined question,
Unless the darlings would fly this
Give man a sweet suggestion.
—Texas Siftings.

Minister (to boy who is digging for worms)—"Little boy, don't you know that it is wrong to work on Sunday, except in case of necessity?" Boy (going on with his digging)—"This is a case of necessity. A feller can't go fishin' 'thout bait."—Brooklyn Union.

Young Schuyler Van Dyck (who has been assigned a fair partner from the west)—"Shan't we look into the supper room, Miss Beefe?" Miss Beefe (from Omaha)—"No, thanks; I'd rather round up than pasture, any time. Let 'ee go now, for the home ranch under the fiddlers. Whoopla!"—Judge.

"What do you want?" asked the employer. "Work and pay," demanded the strikers. "That's fair enough," said the boss, "and how will you have it?" "You do the work and we take the pay," demanded the strikers. Then he asked for time to consider and the walking delegate ordered them out.—Burdette.

Visitor—"And is there nothing for you to eat in the house?" Socialist—"Not a bite, ma'am, have we tasted for twenty-four hours." Visitor (sympathetically)—"Why, what is the trouble?" Socialist—"Well, you see my wife has had the rheumatics so she ain't been able to take in no washing."—Harper's Bazar.

Three different waiters at a Southern hotel asked a little, prim, precise Harvard professor at dinner, in quick succession, if he would have soup. A little annoyed, he said to the last waiter who asked: "Is it compulsory?" "No, sah," answered our friend and brother, "no, sah; I think it am mock turtle."—Hotel Reporter.

A Great Secret Out.

Omaha Girl—Engaged to Mr. De Love! Dear me! How do you widows manage to step right in among us young girls and carry off our nicest beau?

Young Widow—Well, in the first place, if we really like a man, we don't act as if we hated the very sight of him.

"You don't?"

"No, and if he forgets himself and happens to touch our hands, we don't jump as if he were a reptile and look as if we thought he ought to go right off and hang himself. Don't you think you had better adopt our plan?"

"I guess I'll have to. My plan is too hard work, anyhow."—Omaha World.

When Women Vote.

When women shall rule by the ballot,
Which they hope to attain soon or late,
How grand will - and President Flossie,
And Mamie (Department of State)!
How dignified Gertie and Winnie
Will sit in their Cabinet chairs,
And Gussie, and Lulie, and Kittie
Transact Governmental affairs!
How majestic will Chief Justice Bertha
Inspire with judicial awe
Sweet Rosie, and Susie, and Myrtie,
The learned expounders of law!
And when the great General Mollie
With her troops at the battle arrives,
Her name will strike fear to the terrified foe
And they'll turn and run for their lives!
—Tid Bits.

A Queer Combination.

"Well, what is it?" queried Magistrate Thompson, after Wm. McDermott, a colored man, had kissed the book at the Central.

"Why, dat fellow over thar he cheated me outen $1.75," replied the witness, pointing to Isaac Silverman, a South street merchant in the dock.

"How did he do it?"

"Why, he sold me a pair of pants for dat much money, and dey don't fit me, and he wouldn't take 'em back er give me de money."

"Ask him to return the cash?"

"You bet I did, boss, 'bout a dozen times I guess. De las' time I were dar the man went up stairs, and when I followed him he said to his gal in Dutch what did she let me go up for."

"How do you know that was what he said?"

"Case I ken understand Dutch as well as he ken."

"Well, you're a phenomenon. Just think of a black man with an Irish name that can talk Dutch. What have you to say, Silverman?"

"Vell, I'd gif der coon his monish. Dot is all I can say mit it."

The offer was fair, and the suit ended.—Philadelphia North American.

The New French Explosive.

A Parisian correspondent writes the following in respect to the terrible new French explosive. "A subject of supreme interest to-day among military men is the new explosive called melinite, about which nothing is known otherwise than its superior power to that of any other explosive substance hitherto invented. It is manufactured at Bourges, the center of operations of artillery for the French army. Here experiments succeed upon experiments, and a corps of special officers are detailed, who are studying continually the problem of killing, all at once, the greatest number of men possible. It is, in truth, an appalling problem, but probably from its solution a great boon may be elicited, inasmuch as it may conduce to the cessation of warfare. The discoverers of melinite are Capts. Locard and Hirondart, attached to the manufacture of cannon at Bourges. The name melinite has been given to the new substance from its resemblance in color to honey. The experiments made with the new explosive have been most satisfactory, and have demonstrated that its destructive force is one hundred times that of ordinary powder, and ten times that of nitro glycerine. An ordinary bomb charged with melinite, falling upon the roof of a building, will blow into small fragments the house and everything it contains. It is said that Gen. Boulanger has ordered the immediate manufacture of 200,000 projectiles of melinite, which are to be ready by spring. Besides the melinite, experiments are being made upon a new gunpowder, which explodes without smoke, and which will permit a body of infantry to make a discharge from its intrenchments without discovering its position by means of the smoke."

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

STINGING ANNOYANCES.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage delivered the following in the Brooklyn Tabernacle recently, taking for a text: "The Lord, thy God, will send the hornet." [Deut. vii., 20.

It seems as if the insect world were determined to war against the human race. It is every year attacking the grain fields and the orchards and the vineyards. The Colorado beetle, the Nebraska grasshopper, the universal potato destroyer, seem to carry on the work which was begun ages ago when the insects buzzed out of Noah's ark as the door was opened.

In my text the hornet flies on its mission. It is a species of wasp, swift in its motion and violent in its sting. Its touch is torture to man or beast. We have all often seen the cattle run bellowing from the cut of its lancet. In boyhood we used to stand cautiously looking at the globular nest hung from the tree branch, and while we were looking at the wonderful pasteboard covering we were struck with something that sent us shrieking away. The hornet goes in swarms. It has captains over hundreds, and twenty of them attacking one man will produce certain death. The Persians attempted to conquer a Christian city, but the elephants and the beasts on which the Persians rode were assaulted by the hornet, so that the whole army was broken up and the besieged city was rescued. The burning and noxious insect stung out the Hittites and Canaanites from their country. What the gleaming sword and chariot of war could not accomplish was done by the puncture of an insect. The Lord sent the hornet.

My friends, when we are assaulted by behemoths of trouble—great behemoths of trouble—we become chivalric, and we assault them; we get on the high-mettled steed of our courage, and make a cavalry charge at them, and if God be with us, we come out stronger and better than when we went in. But, alas for these insectile annoyances of life—these foes too small to shoot—these things without any avoirdupois weight—the gnats, and the midges, and the flies, and the wasps, and the hornets! In other words, it is the small stinging annoyances of our lives which drive us out and use us up. Into the best conditioned life, for some grand and glorious purpose, God sends the hornet.

I remarked in the first place, that these small stinging annoyances may come in the shape of a sensitive nervous organization. People who are prostrated under typhoid fevers or with broken bones gets plenty of sympathy, but who pities anybody that is nervous? The doctors say, and the families say, and every body says.

"Oh! she's only a little nervous; that's all."

The sound of a heavy foot, the harsh clearing of a throat, a discord in music, a want of harmony between the shawl and the glove on the same person, a curt answer, a passing slight, the wind from the east, any one of ten thousand annoyances, opens the door for the hornet.

The fact is, that the vast majority of the people in this country are overworked, and their nerves are the first to give out.

Again, these small insect annoyances may come to us in the shape of friends and acquaintances who are always saying disagreeable things. There are some people you cannot be with half an hour but you feel cheered and comforted. Then there are other people you cannot be with for five minutes before you feel miserable. They do not mean to disturb you, but they sting you to the bone. They gather up all the yarn which the gossips spin and peddle it. They gather up all the adverse criticisms about your person, about your business, about your home, about your church, and they make your ear the funnel into which they pour it. They laugh heartily when they tell you, as though it were a good joke, and you laugh too—outside.

When I entered the ministry I looked very pale for years, and every year, for four or five years, a hundred times a year, I was asked if I was not in a consumption; and passing through the room I would sometimes hear people sigh and cry.

"A-ah! not long for this world!"

I resolved in those times that I never, in any conversation, would say anything depressing, and by the help of God I have kept the resolution. These people of whom I speak reap and bind in the great harvest field of discouragement. Some days you greet them with a hilarious "Good morning," and they come buzzing at you with some depressing information. The Lord sent the hornet.

The small insect annoyances of this life sometime come in the shape of a local physical trouble, which does not amount to a positive prostration, but which bothers you when you want to feel the best.

Perhaps these small insect annoyances will come in the shape of a domestic irritation. The parlor and the kitchen do not always harmonize. To get good service and to keep it is one of the great questions of the country. Sometimes it may be the arrogancy and inconsiderateness of employers; but whatever be the fact, we all admit there are these insect annoyances winging their way out from the culinary department. If the grace of God be not in the heart of the housekeeper, she can not maintain her equilibrium. The men come home at night and hear the story of these annoyances, and say:

"O, these home troubles are very little things."

They are small, small as wasps, but they sting. Martha's nerves were all unstrung when she rushed in asking Christ to reprove Mary, and there are tens of thousands of women who are dying, stung to death by these pestiferous domestic annoyances. The Lord sent the hornet.

These small insect disturbances may come in the shape of business irritation.

It is not the panics that kill the merchants. Panics come only once in ten or twelve years. It is the constant din of these every day annoyances that is sending so many of our best merchants into nervous dyspepsia, and paralysis, and the grave. When our national commerce fell flat on its face, these men stood up and felt almost defiant; but their life is giving way now under the swarm of these pestiferous annoyances. The Lord sent the hornet.

When you stand chin-deep in annoyances is the time for you to swim out toward the great headlands of Christian attainment, and when your life is loaded to the muzzle with repulsive annoyances that is the time to draw the trigger. Nothing but the furnace will ever burn out of us the clinker and the slag. I have formed this theory in regard to small annoyances and vexations. It takes just so much to fit us for usefulness and for heaven. The only question is whether we shall take it in the bulk, or pulverized and granulated.

Here is one man that takes it in the bulk. His back is broken, or his eyesight put out, or some other calamity befalls him; while the vast majority of people take the thing piecemeal. Which way would you rather have it? Of course in piecemeal. Better have five aching teeth than one broken jaw. Better ten fly-blisters than an amputation. Better twenty squalls than one cyclone.

Well, God has your soul under process of development, and it is the little annoyances and vexations of life that are chiseling out your immortal nature. It is click, click, click! I wonder why some great providence does not come, and with one stroke prepare you for heaven. Ah, no; God says that is not the way. And so he keeps on by strokes of little vexations, until at last you shall be a glad spectacle for angels and for men.

Now, be careful to let none of these annoyances go through your soul unarraigned. Compel them to administer to your spiritual wealth. The scratch of a six penny nail sometimes produces lockjaw, and the clip of a most infinitesimal annoyance may damage you forever. Do not let any annoyance or perplexity come across your soul without its making you better.

If I had my way with you I would have you possess all possible worldly prosperity. I would have you each one a garden, a river flowing through it, geraniums and shrubs on the sides, and the grass and flowers as beautiful as though the rainbow had fallen. I would have you a house, a splendid mansion, and the bed should be covered with upholstery dipped in the setting sun. I would have every hall in your house set with statues and statuettes, and then I would have the four quarters of the globe pour in all their luxuries on your table, and you should have forks of silver and knives of gold, inlaid with diamonds and amethysts. Then you should each one of you have the finest horses and your pick of the equipages of the world. Then I would have you live 150 years, and you should not have a pain or ache until the last breath.

"Not each one of us?" you say.

Yes; each one of you.

"Not to your enemies."

Yes; the only difference I would make with them would be that I would put a little extra gilt on their vails and a little extra embroidery on their slippers. But you say:

"Why does not God give us all these things?"

Ah! I bethink myself. He is wiser. It would make fools and sluggards of us if we had our way. No man puts his best picture in the portico or vestibule of his house. God meant this world to be only the vestibule of heaven, that great gallery of the universe toward which we are aspiring. We must not have it too good in this world, or we would want no heaven.

Polycarp was condemned to be burnt to death. The stake was planted. He was fastened to it. The faggots were placed around him, the fires kindled, but history tells us that the flames bent outward, like the canvass of a ship in a stout breeze, so that the flames, instead of destroying Polycarp, were only a wall between him and his enemies. They had actually to destroy him with the poniard; the flames would not touch him.

Well, my hearers, I want you to understand that by God's grace the flames of trial, instead of consuming your soul, are only going to be a wall of defense and a canopy of blessing. God is going to fulfill to you the blessing and the promise, as He did to Polycarp.

When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burnt.

Now you do not understand; you shall know hereafter. In heaven you will bless God even for the hornet.

Circumstances Alter Cases.

Omaha Boy—Say, sis, you know Mr. Nicefellow begged your pardon for steppin' on your dress and tearin' a big hole in it.

Omaha Miss—Well, what of it?

"An' you said it didn't matter a bit, an' you was glad of it?"

"Yes."

"'Cause you liked to sew, an' you didn't know what you'd do with yourself if you didn't have anything to mend?"

"Well, what of it, I say?"

"It wasn't Mr. Nicefellow that stepped on your dress. It was me."

"Oh! you horrid, awkward little wretch, I'll skin you alive."—Omaha World.

Scotch Observance of the Sabbath.

When two Scotch ministers advised their flocks to take advantage of any fine Sunday last autumn to get their harvest in, I thought we should hear something more about it. It seems I was right, for there has been grievous searchings of heart in the Presbyterian persuasion ever since, and last week the Auchterarder Established Presbytery, moved thereto by the Sabbath Alliance of Scotland, sat in judgment on the offenders. The result, however, must be gall and wormwood to the Sabbath Alliance. After hearing Dr. Rankin, one of the culprits who stuck manfully to his guns and avowed his readiness to act on his own precepts on the first opportunity, the presbytery declined taking action. This is all the more significant because Dr. Rankin had even poured contempt on the national observance of the Sabbath, which he describes as "pulling down the blinds and living on cold meat, cold tea, and perhaps cold whisky." Stands Scotland where it did?—London Truth.

Secretary Manning is to be presented with a $1,000 memento of regard by the officials of the Treasury Department.

Nevada honey gets away with all the premiums at California fairs.

WORSE THAN SMALL POX.

A Great Danger Which Menaces an Unsuspicious Public.

The Brompton Hospital for consumptives, in London, reports that over fifty people out of every hundred consumptives, are victims of constipated or inactive kidneys.

Consumption is one of our national diseases, and the above report goes to prove what has often been said in our columns during the last eight years, that kidney troubles are not only the cause of more than half of the cases of consumption, but of ninety out of every hundred other common diseases. They who have taken this position, made their claims after elaborate investigation, and their proof that they have discovered a specific for the terrible and stealthy kidney diseases, which have become so prevalent among us, is wise and convincing.

We have recently received from them a fresh supply of their wonderful advertising. They have challenged the medical profession and science to investigate. They have investigated, and those who are frank have admitted the truth of their statements. They claim that ninety per cent. of diseases come originally from inactive kidneys, that these inactive kidneys allow the blood to become filled with uric acid poison; that this uric acid poison in the blood carries disease through every organ.

There is enough uric acid developed in the system within twenty-four hours to kill half a dozen men.

This being a scientific fact, it requires only ordinary wisdom to see the effect inactive kidneys must have upon the system.

If this poison is not removed, it ruins every organ. If the bowels, stomach, or liver become inactive, we know it at once, but other organs help them out. As the kidneys become constipated and dormant, the warning comes later on, and often when it is too late, because the effects are remote from the kidneys and those organs are not suspected to be out of order.

Organs that are weak and diseased are unable to resist the attacks of this poison, and the disease often takes the form of and is treated as a local affliction, when in reality the real cause of the trouble was inactive kidneys.

Too many medical men of the present day hold what was a fact twenty years ago, that kidney disease is incurable, according to the medicine authorized by their code. Hence, they ignore the original cause of disease itself, and give their attention to useless treating of local effects.

They dose the patient with quinine, morphine, or with salts or other physics, hoping that thus nature may cure the disease, while the kidneys continue to waste away with inflammation, ulceration and decay, and the victim eventually perishes.

The quantity of blood that passes through the heart, passes through the kidneys. If the kidneys are diseased, the blood soaks up this disease and takes it all through the system. Hence it is, that the claim is made that Warner's safe cure, the only known specific for kidney diseases, cures 90 per cent. of human ailments, because it, and it alone, is able to maintain the natural activity of the kidneys, and to neutralize and remove the uric acid, or kidney poison, as fast as it is formed.

If this acid is not removed, there is inactivity of the kidneys, and there will be produced in the system paralysis, apoplexy, dyspepsia, consumption, heart disease, head-aches, rheumatism, pneumonia, impotency, and all the nameless diseases of delicate woman. If the poisonous matter is separated from the blood, as fast as it is formed, these diseases, in a majority of cases, would not exist.

It only requires a particle of smallpox virus to produce that vile disease, and the poisonous matter from the kidneys, passing all through the system and becoming lodged at different weak points, is equally destructive, although more disguised.

If it were possible for us to see into the kidneys, and how quickly the blood passing through them goes to the heart and lungs and other parts of the system, carrying this deadly virus with it, all would believe without hesitation what has so often been stated in advertisements in these columns, that the kidneys are the most important organs in the body.

They may regard this article as an advertisement and refuse to believe it, but that is a matter over which we have no control. Careful investigation and science itself are proving beyond a doubt that this organ is, in fact, more important than any other in the system as a health regulator, and as such should be closely watched, for the least sign of disordered action.

A Queer Candidate.

Bertron is dead at the age of 82. He was the "candidat humain," who since 1857 has been a candidate, as the model representative of the human race, at every general election. Usually he has polled one vote, his own. He was a little gray-haired man, who always wore a Panama hat, fine broadcloth clothes, and huge stoga boots. He was very rich, and amused himself between elections in cultivating one of the finest pear orchards in France. All the ripe fruit he gave to the poor. Last year he telegraphed to all the sovereigns of Europe, inviting them to dine with him at a prominent cafe in Paris.

* * * * Delicate diseases of either sex, however induced, speedily and radically cured. Address, in confidence, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Charles Sangster, the business manager of the Kingston (Canada) Whig, was at one time the national poet.

Watch for $100.00 reward offered by Scovest Medical Company, next week.

There will be no leap-year between 1896 and 1904. The ordinary test of division by four would make 1900 a leap-year, since no remainder would be left, but in revising the calendar Pope Gregory XIII. found that it would be necessary to count as leap-years only those centurial years which would be divisible by four hundred without a remainder.

Fits.—All Fits stopped free by Dr. Kline's Great Nerve Restorer. No Fits after first day's use. Marvelous cures. Treatise and $2.00 trial bottle free to Fit cases. Send to Dr. Kline, 931 Arch St., Phila., Pa.

Live Stock Notes and Experience.

An average egg weighs about 1,000 grains, divided as follows: shell 107, white 604, and yolk 289.

It is the appearance of goods that sells them. Nice, large, fat, plump, white turkeys, ducks, chicks or geese always bring outside prices.

The most successful wool grower of the future will have his mutton on the market as regularly and in as good condition as his wool. This same man will make both products as good as possible.

If the wool of sheep becomes wet it dries very slowly and only by chilling the animal through. Shelter from rain and snow, especially the former, is therefore more important than protection from cold. If a sheep is chilled so as to give it cold or fever, the fibre of the wool is injured.

The friends of Suffolk swine claim that in all the qualities that constitute a perfect animal for producing the most pork of the best quality at the least cost this breed stands unrivaled by any in the United States. In the West the Suffolk never had many friends among practical feeders, and still less now than ever.

Examine the pedigree as well as the horse before you breed your mare. There are "pedigrees without horses" and "horses without pedigrees," and of the two it is hard to tell which is the worse for breeding purposes. A fine appearing horse with a poor ancestry is a very uncertain kind to breed to, and should be avoided if a well-bred horse can be procured.

A colt once stunted never fully recovers from the effects. It is quite necessary then that colts be kept steadily growing during the winter, even if it requires special care and attention to do it.

F. D. Curtis says: "Most hog-pens are a disgrace and a nuisance. They foul the animals in them and poison the air for rods around. Something to absorb and deodorize the dropping, when the quarters are narrow, should be used—such as cut straw, sawdust, dry earth, and a good sprinkling of common land plaster.

The Veiled Picture.

Two artist lovers sought the hand of a noted painter's daughter. The question which of the two should possess himself of the prize so earnestly coveted by both having come finally to the father, he promised to give his child to the one that could paint best.

So with the highest skill his genius could command each strove for the maiden. One painted a picture of fruit, and displayed it to the father's inspection in a beautiful grove where gay birds sang sweetly among the foliage, and all nature rejoiced in the luxuriance of bountiful life. Presently the birds came down to the canvass of the young painter and attempted to eat the fruit he had pictured there. In his surprise and joy at the young artist's skill the father declared that no one could triumph over that.

Soon, however, the second lover came with his picture, and it was veiled. "Take the veil from your painting," said the old man. "I leave that to you," said the young artist, with simple modesty. The father of the young and lovely maiden then approached the veiled picture, and attempted to uncover it. But one year ago I weighed only 121 pounds, and was very low with Consumption, when I began taking Piso's Cure. Now I weigh 149 pounds. I have some cough yet, but think a few more bottles will effect a cure. I was given up by good physicians, and had about given up myself, but luckily got hold of the right medicine.—W. C. Hall, 2805 Clay Street, Richmond, Virginia.

great was his astonishment when, as he attempted to take off the veil, he found the veil itself to be a picture. Plainly he who could so veil his canvas with the brush as to deceive a skilful master was the greater artist.

High-Priced Liquors.

Some exceptionally high prices were obtained at the sale of the cellar of the late Mr. Fullerton, of Kershaw, Ayrshire, in Edinburgh last week. Ten dozen Berbice rum, known to be at least eighty years old, fetched 110 shillings per dozen; eight dozen of Jamaica rum, of the same age, 100 shillings per dozen; some Malmsey madeira, seventy years old, 102 shillings per dozen; while six dozen of very old West Indian shrub went at the quite unprecedented price of 17 shillings per bottle.—London Truth.

Mr. Arthur Shurtleff, Parker, Dakota, writes that he suffered for two years with a lame knee, which was entirely cured by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. He considers it a most wonderful remedy. It conquers pain.

William B. Allison, James G. Blaine and James A. Garfield were sworn into Congress on the same day, December 7, 1863.

If you have numbness in arms or limbs, heart skips beats, thumps or flutters, or you are nervous and irritable—in danger of shock—Dr. Kilmer's OCEAN-WEED regulates, relieves, corrects and cures.

The German bark Argo, recently reported as wrecked at St. Thomas, had two captains die and one commit suicide on the last ill-fated voyage.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Professor Turner, the Edinburgh anatomist, gets $20,000 a year, the highest salary paid any professor in the world.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is agreeable to use. It is not a liquid or a snuff. 50c.

Mr. James Gordon Bennett is now at Calcutta with his yacht Namouna.

Danger Ahead!

There is danger ahead for you if you neglect the warnings which nature is giving you of the approach of the fell destroyer—consumption. Night sweats, spitting of blood, loss of appetite—these symptoms have a terrible meaning. You can be cured if you do not wait until it is too late. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," the greatest blood-purifier known, will restore your lost health. As a nutritive, it is far superior to cod liver oil.

"I Would That I Were Dead!"

cries many a wretched housewife to-day, as, weary and disheartened, she forces herself to perform her daily tasks. "It don't seem as if I could get through the day. This dreadful back ache, these frightful dragging down sensations will kill me. Is there no relief?" Yes, madam, there is. Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is an unfailing remedy for the complaints to which your sex is liable. It will restore you to health again. Try it. All druggists.

A Justice of the Peace at Ionia, Mich., has begun suit against a man for a wedding fee.

Piles are one of the most disagreeable and painful of disorders. The disease is of common occurrence, and to effect a cure should be promptly treated by proper remedies. There is nothing more suitable by its wonderful curative action than POND'S EXTRACT Ointment, in which the medicinal virtues of Pond's Extract, which are very valuable in the above complaint, are in a state of great concentration. It is advisable in every instance, however, to use both the Extract and Ointment. Ask your Druggist and be sure you get the right articles.

Senator Charles B. Farwell resembles Garfield in features to a striking degree. So says the Boston Traveler.

Mr. L. D. Vinson, Cashier D. & I. R. R., has tried and endorses Red Star Cough Cure.

Mrs. Grant was the guest of Mrs. Cleveland at the White House recently.

1,000 $2 Washing Machines Free. To introduce them. If you want one send at once to Monarch Laundry Works, 82 Warren St., N. Y.

California boasts of a boy typesetter, 12 years old, who can set 4,000 ems of solid brevier in less than four hours.

If afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

London underground railways, during the year 1886, carried 80,474,550 passengers. Fares averaged 3.48 cents.

The Western Settler's Chosen Specific

With every advance of emigration into the far West, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly peopled regions are frequently less salubrious than older settled localities, on account of the miasma which arises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the Bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet subject him. Consequently, he places an estimate upon this great household specific and preventive commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

The two wealthiest women in Pittsburgh are Miss Stella Hayes, aged 14, and Miss Irwin Loughlin, aged 10. The former is heiress to five millions, and the latter to about three.

A Good Thing to Know.

Moxie is the only plant known that will give immediate, vigorous strength and produce no reaction. In fact some doctors say it is the only real Nerve Food known. It looks so now. It is made into a perfectly harmless beverage neither stimulant or alcohol, and will remove the tired out nervous feeling and the effects of stimulants at once. Every druggist keeps it.

Reports say that Mr. T. B. Aldrich has a dog trained to carry rolls of MS. sent in by would-be contributors to the Atlantic Monthly and drop them into the waste-basket.

March April May

Are the months in which to purify your blood, and for this purpose there is no medicine equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It purifies, vitalizes, and enriches the blood, removing all trace of scrofula or other disease. It creates an appetite, and imparts new strength and vigor to the whole body. It is the ideal spring medicine. Try it.

"I have been troubled some time with poor appetite, particularly in the morning, and also had frequent attacks of rheumatism. I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and now my appetite is the best and the rheumatism has entirely left me." C. ARENS, 704 Emerald Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, and other well known and valuable vegetable remedies. The combination, proportion and preparation are peculiar to Hood's Sarsaparilla, giving it curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where others fail.

"Last spring I was troubled with boils, caused by my blood being out of order. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me, and I recommend it to others." J. [illegible], Peoria, Ill.

Henry Biggs, Campbell Street, Kansas City, had scrofulous sores all over his body for 15 years. Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured him.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I have been in poor health several years, suffering from indigestion, restlessness in the night, and in the morning I would get up with a very tired feeling. After taking only a part of the first bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could rest well at night and feel refreshed when I woke up. I must say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is all it is recommended to be." MRS. H. D. WINANS, 210 East Mason Street, Jackson, Mich.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in my family and consider it a splendid blood purifier." J. P. WILLIAMSON, South 7th Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Best Spring Medicine

"I was troubled with boils, having several of them at a time. After suffering about all I could bear, I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which entirely cured me. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all like afflicted, being sure they will find relief." E. N. NOURTHWAITE, Quincy, Mass.

"I had been troubled with hives and pimples for some time. Other remedies having failed, I was advised to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have taken two bottles and am entirely cured. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla has no equal as a blood purifier." ERRIE M. FARRAR, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS — THE BEST TONIC. Trade Mark. Quality Not Quantity. On Every Bottle. PHYSICIANS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT.

This medicine, combining Iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely Cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, and Neuralgia.

It is an unfailing remedy for Diseases of the Kidney and Liver.

It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives.

It does not injure the teeth, cause headache or produce constipation—other Iron medicines do.

It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, relieves Heartburn and Belching, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.

For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, etc., it has no equal.

The genuine has above trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

Highest Awards of Medals in Europe and America. The neatest, quickest, safest and most powerful remedy known for Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, colds in the chest and all aches and pains. Endorsed by 5,000 Physicians and Druggists of the highest repute. Benson's Plasters promptly relieve and cure where other plasters and greasy salves, liniments and lotions, are absolutely useless. Beware of imitations under similar sounding names, such as "Capsicum," "Capucin," "Capsicine," as they are utterly worthless and intended to deceive. ASK FOR BENSON'S AND TAKE NO OTHERS. All druggists. SEABURY & JOHNSON, Proprietors, New York.

PENNYROYAL PILLS "CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH." The Original and Only Genuine. Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Indispensable to LADIES. Ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. Chichester Chemical Co., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

Free! Free! Free! [illegible] Louisville druggist, will send free of charge on request for D., a circular containing a most valuable list of superior toilet articles and [illegible] value. Dr. Rathbone [illegible] Louisville School of Pharmacy and Chemist for L. and N. R. R. Co., and American Plate Glass Co. He makes a specialty of all [illegible] tions, and refers to Courier Journal Co., or any bank in Louisville. Address [illegible] Louisville, Ky.

TELEPHONES PRIVATE LINES Straight or Crooked. Call Bells, Batteries, etc. Four Styles, 5 Patents. Prices Low. Illustrated Circular. E. E. Harbert & Co., 157 La Salle St., Chicago.

DR. KILMER'S SWAMP-ROOT CURES KIDNEY, LIVER & BLADDER. CURE.

A MEDICAL VICTORY! Cures Bright's Disease, Catarrh of the Bladder, Torpid Liver. It dissolves Gall-Stones and Gravel.

SYMPTOMS and CONDITIONS of Urine for which this Remedy should be taken.

Scalding, Stoppage, Blood-tinged, Diabetic, Albumen, Brick-dust, Dropsical, Dribbling, Milky-pink, Headache, Frequent, Costiveness, Bone-ache, Nervous, Brownish-dark, Uric-acid, Settlings, Catarrh-ache, Backache, Nervous ache, Phosphates, Bad-taste, Foul-Breath, Gall-color.

IT IS A SPECIFIC. Every dose goes to the spot.

Relieves and Cures internal Slime-fever, Canker, Dyspepsia, Ague, Malaria, Fever and Ague, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Enlargement of the Prostate Gland, Sexual Weakness, Spermatorrhœa, and Gout.

It Eliminates Blood Impurities, Scrofula, Erysipelas, Salt-Rheum, Syphilis, Pimples, Blotches, Fever-sores, and Cancer-taints.

It is a most Wonderful Appetizer. Builds up quickly a Run-down Constitution. Tell your neighbors all about it.

PRICE 25c, $1.00—6 bottles $5.00. Prepared at Dr. Kilmer's Dispensary, Binghamton, N. Y., U. S. Invalids' Guide to Health (Sent Free.) All letters of inquiry promptly answered. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S

Oriental Cream, or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth-Patches, Rash and Skin diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 30 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayer, said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin Preparations." One bottle will last six months, using it every day. Also Poudre Subtile removes superfluous hair without injury to the skin. FRED. T. HOPKINS, Manager, 48 Bond St., N. Y. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the U. S., Canada and Europe. Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

PATENTS Obtained for $30 by R. B. Meriwether, Attorney, St. Louis, Mo. Advice Free.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by mail. Circulars free. BRYANT'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Buffalo, N. Y.

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York.

DR. JOSEPH A. SEWELL'S TREATISE ON HOG CHOLERA. Its Prevention and Cure. Sent Free. C. S. Jones & Co., Bloomington, Ill.

OPIUM MORPHINE HABIT CURED AT HOME. NO PAIN. [illegible] HUMANE REMEDY CO., LAFAYETTE, Ind.

One Agent (Merchant only) wanted in every town for TANSILL'S PUNCH 5¢.

During the last year you furnished me with 40,000 Tansill's Punch. This month you have sold me a new, almost all of which have been sold, from one to five each morning, to the same customers, every Saturday night all purchased [illegible]. C. S. [illegible], Denver, Col. Address R. W. TANSILL & CO., Chicago.

SWAYNE'S

THROAT & LUNG TROUBLES CONQUERED BY SWAYNE'S WILD CHERRY.

SWAYNE'S VERMIFUGE THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE.

TO KEEP HEALTHY 1. EXERCISE DAILY 2. EAT GOOD FOOD 3. BE CHEERFUL 4. USE SWAYNE'S PILLS.

SWAYNE'S PANACEA PURIFIES SYPHILITIC BLOOD.

LONDON HAIR RESTORER (ENGLISH) DR. SWAYNE & SON, SOLE AGENT.

OINTMENT THE GREAT CURE FOR ITCHING PILES & SKIN HUMOR

SYMPTOMS: Moisture, intense itching and stinging; most at night—worse by scratching—very distressing. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration and in many cases removes the tumors. Sent by mail for 50 cts. DR. SWAYNE'S MEDICINES OLDEST IN U. S. PREPARED ONLY BY DR. SWAYNE & SON, PHILADELPHIA. Sold by Druggists.

"THE FAVORITE

contains the most important improvements introduced in recent years. The Violin Shaped Sounding Board and Double Shoulder Agraffe make the

BAUER

the best toned Piano in America. Being manufactured in Chicago buyers are enabled to secure them at manufacturers prices, and thus obtain a first class at a moderate price for cash or payments. Factory and Warerooms, 156-158 Wabash Avenue. JULIUS BAUER & CO., Chicago.

PIANO"

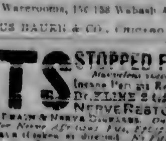
FITS STOPPED FREE Marvelous success. Insane Persons Restored. DR. KLINE'S GREAT NERVE RESTORER for all BRAIN & NERVE DISEASES. Only sure cure for Nerve Affections, Fits, Epilepsy, etc. INFALLIBLE if taken as directed. No Fits after first day's use. Treatise and $2 trial bottle free to Fit patients, they paying express charges on box when received. Send names, P. O. and express address of afflicted to Dr. KLINE, 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa. See Druggists. BEWARE OF IMITATING FRAUDS.

RARE OPPORTUNITY. Our new self-acting REVOLVER, (Nickel) 32, 38 or 44 caliber, (warranted) sent to CLUBS of 12 for $30., or will send SINGLE ONE as Sample on receipt of $3.50 worth $7. Sends a ball through a 2 in. plank at 60 feet. Wesson Gun Works Office, 111 B'y, Bl'dg, Chicago.



Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest. CATARRH Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

M. H. P. Co. Chicago. No. 15.

PAINT YOUR BUGGY for ONE DOLLAR

By using Coit's ONE-COAT BUGGY PAINT. [illegible] COIT & CO., 506 & 508 Kinzie St., Chicago, Ill.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 30, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED. F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

Historical Society.

The meeting of the Historical Society at the residence of O. D. Wood Friday evening, was well attended and very enjoyable.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Maggie Green, tastefully executed; a reading from English history, by R. W. Kane, a duo by Miss Rose Cody and Mr W. A. Smith, with Mrs. Guyles accompanist, and a pleasing recitation by Miss Flora Nelson.

After intermission, Miss Cody recited "The Daisies" very touchingly, and W. A. Smith sang "The Bridge." Mrs. Guyles interspersed two brilliant piano selections during the programme.

The next meeting will occur at the parlors of President Green; paper of the evening by Miss Waterbury.

Northern Michigan.

Boyne Falls has just opened its first saloon.

The Petoskey K. of L. have a very successful and pleasantly arranged reading room.

Watson Snyder, of Petoskey, has sold his brick yard to L. G. Grimes, of the same place.

Charles Goodrich, son of ex Senator Goodrich, of Traverse City, died in Kansas City last week.

Bay View will witness the biggest kind of a boom this summer. Thirty resort cottages will be put up.

News comes from Baldwin that the C. & W. M. R. R. Co. have a very large quantity of material at that place ready to commence the work of extending their road as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Sherman Pioneer.

J. N. Upham, of Cheboygan, up to Saturday had in on Bois Blanc Island 60,000 pieces of cedar ties, telegraph poles, and paving posts. He reports some very handsome telegraph poles. He expects to put in 10,000 more pieces before the snow leaves.

The Resort Association of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity will put up a handsome $2,500 club house on Hughart hill, adjoining Bay View, this spring. J. B. Ware and L. W. Hoyt, of Grand Rapids, and Ed F. Parmelee, of Charlevoix, are a committee of directors who will have charge of the enterprise.

The judicial fight in the 28th Circuit appears to be a lively one. The contest is between two republicans—M. L. Dunham, the regular republican nominee, and Fred H. Aldrich, the people's candidate, both from Cadillac. Nine of the newspapers in the circuit support Aldrich, three Dunham, and one is non-committal. The chances appear to be very much in favor of Aldrich.—Eagle.

C. A. Hammond, who has just returned from a trip to Muskegon, informs us that General Manager Mulliken, of the C. & W. M. Railroad, informed him a few days since that the surveyors on the road north of Baldwin had not, up to the time they were compelled to leave the work on account of deep snow, found a satisfactory route between Baldwin and the Manistee river. The route they went over proved too hilly to furnish a good route. Just as soon as the snow is off they will go to work again and look for a route further to the westward, where the hills are not so plenty or so high, and where they expect to find a good route. This side of the Manistee river there is no serious difficulty.—Eagle.

Perry Hannah, of Traverse City, has invested $250,000 in Chicago real estate during the past month. The largest purchase was the Studebaker Building fronting on Jackson and State streets, for which he paid $205,000. The Herald says: "The fact that Mr. Hannah has put a quarter of a million into Chicago property does not mean that he expects to draw out his still extensive interests in Traverse City, in real estate, merchandising, banking, shipping and floating mill interests. Mr. Hannah's home is Traverse City and he can never lose his interest in the town with which he has become so closely identified and where his fortune has been made. The town and the whole country are dear to him and the people of Northern Michigan emphasize and reciprocate the kindly feeling that has so long existed between them and the man who has done so much to aid in the development of this portion of the state. They are glad of and take pride in his success, and will be gratified to know that he will continue to make this his home."

There is certainly one amendment upon which the best men in all parties will agree; and that is the one raising the salaries of state officers. At present no poor man can accept an office. Vote to raise Michigan up to a level with her sister states in this matter.

Death of Arza Campbell.

Mr. Arza Campbell, who has been seriously ill for several months, died Thursday evening.

Mr. Campbell was born July 13, 1845, and for many years has been a well-known and respected resident of Charlevoix. About four years ago, while hauling a vessel off the beach, he was injured by the fall of a lever which struck him on the head. He was prostrated for some time but finally partially recovered, only to be stricken down again by the illness which resulted in his death after months of suffering.

The funeral occurred from the house Saturday, Rev. W. C. Clark, officiating.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Arza Campbell desires to return her heartfelt thanks to those friends who have been so kind to her during her recent bereavement, and the painful, lingering illness that preceded it.

The Prohibitory Amendment.

The force opposed to the prohibitory amendment is in two camps. Both are under the anti-prohibition banner, but the rallying cry of one is "prohibition does not prohibit," of the other, "prohibition does prohibit." The brewers, saloonists, cigar makers, and independents proclaim the latter. Weeks ago the saloon-keepers' union declared that the passage of the amendment would ruin every man connected with their business. Their organ, the Leader, said Feb. 9: "You may make up your minds, gentlemen, first as well as last, that the success of the prohibitory amendment will bring about the total annihilation of the liquor traffic in the state of Michigan."

It is constantly asserted that the tax on saloons relieves taxation on other property. But what property? The rural vote will be most largely for the amendment. This portion of the state, which holds practically the decision of this question, receives not one dollar of benefit from the saloon tax, this tax going exclusively to the towns. The justification for this tax is frequently made that it helps pay the expenses which the traffic causes. But this is not true. Not one dollar of the saloon tax goes to support the courts or the poor houses of the state. The saloon is the chief factor in causing the taxes for the relief of the poor and the care of the criminal. Of the tax they pay, not one dollar goes to meet these expenses. The farmers must pay these bills. The tax consideration for every farmer is on the side of the amendment. Cut off the saloons and lower the criminal and pauper taxes, not one penny of which they now pay, and 90 per cent of which they cause.

In a recent Detroit speech, the eloquent Manistee divine, the Rev. E. B. Fairfield said: "Regarding the claim made that the prohibition law had failed in Michigan for twenty years, Mr. Fairfield said that except for twelve months in 1855 and 1856 no real prohibition law had ever existed in Michigan. The supreme court pulled its teeth when it declared the search and seizure law unconstitutional. That old prohibitory clause in the constitution only prohibited the licensing of the business, not the business itself. There was a big difference between the two things. The speaker had broached this point to Judge Marston, who had admitted to him that it was true, but declined to pursue the subject further. The judge, Mr. Fairfield said, would have had to admit that all his letters and arguments had been built on a false basis.

In Maine, Mr. Fairfield said the United States tax paid on liquor amounted to 4 cents per capita. In Michigan it amounted to $1.50 per capita. This looked as if prohibition prohibited, because where liquor was sold the United States revenue officers soon found it out. Blaine, Hale, Dingley, and other prominent Maine men claimed success for prohibition, and equally favorable testimony came from Kansas and Iowa. With reference to the loss of the tax, Mr. Fairfield, referring to the anti-prohibition cry that $250,000 would be lost to the city of Detroit, said that $4,000,000 had been spent over Detroit bars in one year. The people had taken $4,000,000 out of one pocket, put $250,000 in the other, and thrown away $3,750,000. The men who spent that $4,000,000 could well afford to pay $250,000 to the city and spend the rest in good things, or save it. Within a few years after the passing of prohibition the business of those who sell furniture, shoes, dry goods, etc., will have to be doubled to supply the demand of men who have heretofore squandered their money on liquors.

Farmers and the Liquor Tax.

It is a peculiarity of the liquor tax law that while the expenses caused by the traffic are paid by the tax payers of the entire community, the tax money is turned over to certain favored localities. Ionia, for instance, has twenty saloons which are turning out their daily grist of criminals, drunkards, and paupers. The criminal is arrested and tried at the expense of the county and sent to prison, where he is kept at the expense of the state. The drunkard is arrested and sent to jail to be kept at the county expense, while the pauper goes to the poor house, a county charge. The liquor tax does not go to help pay any of these expenses, but goes instead into the city treasury. In this way the farmer, while compelled to pay his full share of the expenses of the liquor traffic, is cheated out of a share in the tax. Surely he has nothing to lose in voting for the amendment.

This liquor tax law was gotten up in 1875 by the Detroit liquor league. It was shrewdly designed as a bribe to municipalities. How well it has worked is shown by the fact that not a daily newspaper in Michigan is supporting the amendment. The daily newspapers represent the cities, and nearly all of them defend their course by pointing out the fact that a large revenue would be sacrificed if the amendment is adopted.

Farmers have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the adoption of the amendment. They do not get a cent from this infamous tax, and in case a license law was passed, the license money would probably go to the cities just the same as the tax money now does.

W. E. KIDD.

Ionia, March 4.

Judge Ramsdell, the candidate for Circuit Judge for this district, is out in a card to the voters of the district which successfully refutes the slanderous lies which have been circulated against him. By reason of superior experience and fitness for the position, Judge Ramsdell should receive the vote of every republican in the district as well as the votes of many others, politically opposed to him. When he was nominated many prominent Charlevoix democrats were averse to running any candidate against him. He will certainly be elected.

—Notice the change in the call for the republican caucus. It will be held Friday evening in the Lewis Building.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of The Sentinel:

The prohibition sentiment in Michigan at the present time is the all-absorbing question of the hour, and the first Monday in April is looked forward to as the time this great question will be settled.

If an amendment to the constitution does carry by a sweeping majority, what then? Will that law reach down to the root of the evil, so much deplored by all who feel an interest in the welfare of society, will it give us the power to be a law unto ourselves, or will it merely palliate an evil, which, with its present increase, seems to work as a cancer at the vitals of our civilization by destroying the moral stamina and physical constitution of all who come within its vortex. This question of prohibition should not be made a party question. Every individual in this broad land is involved in the issue. The question should be, can we by law or other means prevent intemperance, lead man and woman out of the evil, up to a higher plane of purity and true progress, or must we surrender our lives, our liberties, our all, to the destroying monster, intemperance.

The question is a momentous one; it is one which will not out, until thoroughly understood and solved.

It is too deeply rooted to be really cured by any law we may put upon the statute book, yet I favor the amendment, though doubtful of its operation as a total cure for intemperance. I feel glad to see the SENTINEL declare in favor of prohibition; I have great hopes of grand results from the movement in favor of temperance, as the operation of the law, should it pass, will show what we may expect from that source; and show us too, the necessity of a closer communion of all interested in measures aiming at improvement in society.

The evil resulting to society through intemperance, can not be measured in dollars and cents, and to be able to grasp the question in all its bearings requires more thought and consideration than is usually bestowed upon it by many who are zealous workers in the cause.

Intemperance comes up in many ways, presents so many phases, that it becomes one of the most perplexing questions with which we have to deal.

Think of the tens of thousands who are working deterioration of the race through the influence of the morphine habit, so much patronized by the female sex.

Think of the enervation, prostration, and general enfeeblement of nervous energy produced by the soothing (?) influence of narcotics improperly administered, and read in your mind's eye the result to posterity. If we can not change the habits of the rising generation, give a new direction and nobler aspiration to those who will soon fill our places, our civilization is doomed to an early grave, and our hopes of realizing "Peace on Earth" becomes a mere myth, a phantom. Shall it be so, must we submit to that greatest of all bondage, the slavery of intemperance?

Can we counteract the current of dissipation and intemperance by any means within our reach and bring back to a healthy, normal state, those who now fill the ranks of the intemperate?

It appears to me a doubtful undertaking, the rescue of those who are fixed in the habit of the evil; as we are, in our lives merely a bundle of habits formed and matured in early life, it becomes one of the most difficult tasks to reform and reconstruct habits once fairly established. We must commence in early life to fix habits of truthfulness, probity, and temperance, in order to make it practical in the life of the individual. In the movement in favor of temperance, there is the hereditary taint to be overcome which has been accumulating for centuries in the race, which has to a great extent become an element of our nature, which must be eliminated before temperance can produce its best fruits—peace, happiness, joy, and brotherly love.

***

Hazings from Hayes.

Henry Ostrum is in the southern part of the state attending the funeral of his brother.

William Compton has been confined to the house several weeks with an inflamed eye.

Miss Nellie Barnett closed her school in District No. 5 last Saturday with an exhibition in the evening.

There will be a lecture on prohibition at the Hopyard school house on Friday evening of this week, by Rev. W. H. McCartney, of Charlevoix. The Glee Club of Charlevoix will also be present.

The citizen's caucus for nominating township officers will be held at Ross school house Friday, April 1, at 10 a. m.

Whitford & Cram have a larger stock of logs in their mill yard than usual. They have three-fourths of a million, and since testing their new mill they are sorry they did not buy a full million.

Sabbath schools have been organized at Maple Grove and Burgess, and will commence next Sunday.

The amount of wood, logs, ties, and posts taken out of Hayes this winter is enormous. At the present rate our forests will soon be denuded.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Common Council.

A full council sat around the board Thursday evening, President McLeod in the chair.

The finance committee reported a settlement with the village treasurer, and that the accounts were correct. (Report elsewhere.)

The special committee appointed to report on the employment of an engineer for the steamer reported that they could employ Gurley Boak for $200 per annum, providing the positions of janitor and librarian were secured for him. With the latter contingency assured, the committee on fires and their prevention were instructed to employ Mr. Boak.

The bonds of village officers were fixed the same as last year, excepting that of treasurer, which was raised from $2,000 to $3,000.

It was ordered that $50 be expended in park improvement.

The president appointed committees as follows:

Sidewalks, Eaton, See, and Smith.

Fires and their prevention, Mason, Newman, and Cameron.

License and Printing, Cameron, Newman, and Mason.

Public Buildings, See, Cameron, and Eaton.

Sanitary Matters and Police, Newman, Mason, and See.

Claims and Finance, Smith, See, and Newman.

Ordinance, Smith, Eaton, and Mason.

Public Parks, Eaton, Smith, and Cameron.

Report of Village Treasurer for year ending March 17, 1887.

March 17, cash on hand	$457 18
March 20, cash rec'd for [illegible]	75
May [illegible] cash rec'd of Co. Treas. saloon tax	594 [illegible]
June 3, cash rec'd of Village [illegible]	12 00
June 5, cash rec'd of F. & E. dock rent	25 00
June 26, cash rec'd of I. Kelly [illegible]	20
June 3[illegible], cash rec'd of Village Marshal	24 00
July [illegible], cash rec'd of Village Marshal	2 00
Aug. 2[illegible], cash rec'd of Wm. Dale, taxes	61
Aug. 24, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	[illegible]
Aug. 2[illegible], cash rec'd of Village Clerk	2 00
Dec. 7, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	2 00
Feb. 28, 1887, cash rec'd of Village Marshal, village taxes, 1886	726 20
Feb. 2[illegible], cash rec'd of Village Clerk	[illegible]
	$2,[illegible] 75
March 8, paid village orders	$1,96[illegible] 83
March 17, cash on hand	[illegible] 92
	$[illegible] 75

Charlevoix, March 17, 1887.

H. C. COOPER,
Village Treasurer.

Indebtedness of the village to be met the coming year:

June 8, int. on bond 1 park bond, $[illegible]	$ [illegible]
Aug. 24, int. on fire bond, $2,500 6 per cent	[illegible]
Dec. 6, int. on hall bond, $7,[illegible] 6 per cent	42 00
July 1, loan from Charlevoix Savings Bank, $200, with interest	207 [illegible]
	$749 [illegible]

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL.

Litney & Steimel
LIVERY, And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

TO THE PUBLIC.

At this, the close of our first year's business in Charlevoix it seems to us eminently proper that we extend our sincere thanks to the trading public of this region for the patronage they have so generously extended us during the past 12 months.

Our constantly increasing business proves that the people appreciate a Metropolitan stock at lowest prices.

Our past experience has shown us the needs of the people of this section. During the coming season our line of goods will be the largest ever offered in this region. Our Prices we always guarantee to be the lowest. If we have pleased you in the past, please grant us a continuation of your patronage.

Very truly yours,

F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Prior to inventory we are offering great bargains in every line of goods.

We are determined to reduce our stock one-half during this month, and to accomplish this we are making great sacrifices.

Close buyers will do well to inspect our stock.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL & SON
ARE SELLING OUT

OWING TO A CHANGE WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE IN OUR STORE IN THE SPRING WE MUST SELL OUR STOCK OF

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, CLOTHING, CLOAKS, NOTIONS, GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

WE MEAN BUSINESS! EVERYTHING IN OUR STORE WILL BE SOLD AT SOME PRICE, FOR CASH ONLY.

Now is the time to get Bargains.

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 49. CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887. WHOLE NO. 906

School Books!
SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!
----HEADQUARTERS----

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,
F. G. HINES & CO.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember.

Our Goods are the Best.
Our Prices the Lowest.
Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL.

Send it to your friends abroad.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS

THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works

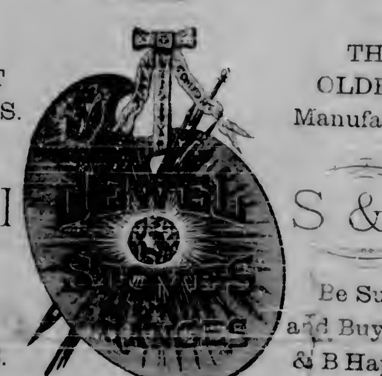
Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

THE NEWEST PATTERNS.

THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I



S & I

THE MOST DURABLE.

Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,
AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice.

A Large Fresh Stock of Groceries
JUST OPENED AT
WILL SEE'S.

I call especial attention to something fine in Corn Beef at 8c. Try my Tea and Coffee stock. You will find it to your advantage to call and see me.

ALL KINDS OF COUNTRY PRODUCE WANTED.

Pine Lake Iron Co.
IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, Michigan

Address all business correspondence to the firm.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year $1 50 | Six months 75
(invariably in Advance)

Local News.

—Sugar parties are the next thing in order.

—O. D. Hilton has a number of milch cows for sale.

—The Rifenburg Milling Company have a quantity of oats for sale.

—M. J. Stockman and wife returned home from Florida on Wednesday last.

—Preaching at Black's next Sabbath at 2:30 p. m., and at Johnson's in the evening.

—Mr and Mrs. E. Carpenter and C. Y. Cook are expected home from Florida, next Friday.

—Dean Burns left yesterday for Colden, Ont., on a visit. Will be gone a month or more.

—J. C. Hatch, employe of J. L. Hurd & Co., leaves this week to visit his parents at Traverse City.

—Perry Weed has purchased the Glover property on Clinton street, and will occupy his new abode soon.

—Notice the first announcement of A. T. Washburn & Co. Their line of spring goods is unusually attractive.

—The finest line of Easter cards ever offered here is now on sale at F. G. Hines & Co.'s. Call in and inspect them.

—Rosenthal & Son announce that they will slaughter prices on Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing, etc., in order to close out their stock by August 1st.

—Barnard Burns has leased his farm to John Holden for five years and will move to Charlevoix and start a livery and feed barn on the north-side this week.

Misses Sarah, Lizzie and Ella Aldrich have purchased the millinery stock of Mrs. Ella Smith and Anna Cooper, and they will continue business at the old stand.

—Loyal Legion next Saturday at 3 o'clock as usual. Every effort is being put forth to make it a success, but the help of every one is needed and earnestly solicited. SEC'Y.

—Two hundred feet of the basement for the new Mackinac hotel is finished and two hundred carpenters will be at work next week. In addition to the above 30 resort cottages will be erected this spring.

—Andrew Emery returned from Charlevoix, Monday, where he had been looking after his real estate interests. He rented his dock and ware house to the Northern line of steamers.—Manistee Times.

—Will See, the new grocer, gets to the front this week with a new advertisment. With a large circle of friends, a central location and a good stock, Will is bound to build up a large grocery trade. Just step in and see him.

—Charlevoix county people should patronize the Rifenburg Flouring Mills. Notwithstanding the fact that the Rifenburg flour is as good as there is in the market, we regret that a good deal of outside flour finds its way into the market.

—Capt. Chas. E. Kirkland, the well-known wrecker, formerly of Milwaukee, has purchased the Michigan Exchange hotel of Cheboygan for $13,000 and will take possession shortly and manage it personally. He has indefinitely withdrawn from the wrecking business.

—Sam E. Watson, superintendent of Telephone service, and well known in northern Michigan, was last week elected Eminent Commander of De Molai Commandery, No. 5, K. T., of Grand Rapids. We heartily congratulate Sam. It is an honor indeed. The Grand Rapids Eagle says, concerning the fact: The EAGLE of Thursday very truly said that no body of Knights Templar in America has a higher reputation among the fraters of that splendid Order than has De Molai, No. 5, of this city, either individually or collectively. Hence to be the Eminent Commander, the chief officer, of that body, which contains about 225 of our chief citizens, is a very high honor, indeed. That honor, by common consent, was conferred up Sir Knight, Sam E. Watson, last night. The general public knows Mr. Watson very well indeed as the Superintendent or General Manager of the telephone interests in Western Michigan, a gentleman whom all who know him are glad to honor and thoroughly respect. He is now but thirty-one years of age—few men have risen to such a position in such a body so young—and has lived here about fifteen years, seven years as an operator in the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and the past eight years as the manager of the Telephone Exchange—he is the father of the telephone system in this region. Sir Knight and Eminent Commander Watson has many fraternal and other friends who are glad that he has been thus honored, yet feel that he has won all that he has secured, and that still higher honors are in store for him.

—Hon. A. Buttars left for Chicago and Lansing, Sunday.

—Ben. Weaver spent election day among his Charlevoix friends.

—C. J. Grier has assumed the editorial management of the Journal.

—Bryant Weed left for Thompson Thursday to begin his spring term of school.

—Mrs. James E. Wood left for Ludington one day last week to visit her husband.

—A twelve pound girl came to the household of Perry Weed on Monday of last week.

—A copy of the Ventilator, a monthly journal of Traverse City, has reached our desk.

—Henry Barth and P. S. Brown left yesterday for Elk Rapids to do some boiler work there.

—Wm. Alden Smith, State Game and Fish Warden, made an official trip to Sault Ste. Marie last week.

—The election in the Township of Wilson resulted in a tie between G. W. Bailey and M. Hudkins for Supervisor.

—Rifenburg & Co. will this spring erect a flour and feed store and warehouse, 26x45, two stories high, at the north end of the bridge.

—George Clark, with one team, and a three mile haul, banked 10,200 ties and posts and 40,000 feet of pine at Berdan's camp this winter.

—Gurley Boak has entered upon the discharge of his duties as engineer of the steam fire engine, street commissioner, janitor of the public building and Township librarian.

—Bernard Burns, who has removed from Marion to Charlevoix to open a livery stable, was waited upon by about 50 of his neighbors one evening before leaving, and a very pleasant time was the result.

—W. A. Smith returned home from Grand Rapids and Stanwood Wednesday. Mrs. Smith will remain at Stanwood some time yet. Mr. Reed, whose supposed fatal illness called them there, is recovering.

—A most horrible story comes from Boyne City. "Old man Joles," a person well known as an old resident, criminally assaulted his grand daughter, aged nine years. Finding he was discovered, he fled, but was caught at Vanderbilt and brought back to Boyne City. This is a case where capital punishment would be appropriate.

—Last week the dry goods firm of F. W. Craine & Co., of this place, was dissolved, and that of A. T. Washburn & Co. took its place. Mr. Washburn taking the interest of Mr. Craine. Mr. Gow continues in the same relation to the establishment as before. Mr. A. T. Washburn is well known to the people of Charlevoix and vicinity, and needs no introduction. The stock has been largely increased, and the business will be made to boom.

Preacher's Meeting.

At the Preacher's meeting held on Monday afternoon, the following committee of laymen was appointed to have control of the business management of revival services to be held at the rink: Alex Cameron, F. J. Meech, J. L. Hurd, John Burns, Robert Kane and D. S. Way. The citizens are invited to aid committee in making preparations for the meeting.

Common Council.

A full council was present Thursday evening.

The bonds of the village officers were approved.

The contract with engineer Boak was executed.

The council passed a resolution requesting the Deputy Game and Fish Warden to enforce the law prohibiting the depositing of saw-dust in the trout streams.

The Council voted to defray the expense of securing trout fry from the State Fish Commission, and depositing the same in the streams about Charlevoix.

Council adjourned for two weeks.

Marine Jottings.

The steamer Gordon is being put in shape for business.

Capt. Smith is beginning to put the schooner Sea Gem in shape.

Tug and steamboat owners are beginning to look over their craft.

Capt. Vanderhoef expects to be here the 15th with the Friant and Cummings.

Ben. Campbell will haul out the steamer Van Raalte as soon as the ice leaves the harbor.

The Dauntless arrived all safe, on Monday. She encountered heavier weather than the Coronet, having been compelled to lie hove to for sixteen hours at one time. She made one day's run of 328 miles—the best record ever made by a yacht on the Atlantic.

A special from Frankfort states that a schooner passed there before the gale on Monday, under reefed canvas, apparently seeking refuge at the Manitous. Point Betsey life saving patrol report that when last seen she was bearing north of station, standing in for Empire Bluffs. She was making more sail, evidently to seek shelter in an ice-field. It was impossible to reach the island, as the passage is blockaded with shore ice. It was supposed to be the schooner A. J. Mowry, as she was loading lumber at Pierport.

THE STATE.

Republican by Safe Figures—The Prohibitory Amendment Carried.

Telegraphic advices up to last evening indicate that the State is safely Republican. The prohibitory amendment is carried by safe figures.

THE JUDGESHIP.

Ramsdell, for Judge, is undoubtedly elected by from 300 to 400 majority. Cheboygan county may reduce these figures somewhat.

VERY LATEST.

The very latest advices by telegraph indicate that the vote on the prohibitory amendment is very close. Anti-prohibitionists claim the State by from 5,000 to 8,000. The Detroit Evening Journal of last evening concedes the defeat of the amendment.

State Republican ticket elected by about 7,000 majority.

The Elections.

Notwithstanding the blizzard which prevailed election day, a large vote was polled in Charlevoix and all other Townships heard from.

In Charlevoix the Republicans and Independents united upon the following ticket: Supervisor, F. J. Meech; Clerk, H. S. Harsha; Treasurer, H. Bedford; Commissioner, R. Mudge; School Inspector, R. W. Kane; Justice, R. Miller. The Democrats nominated a ticket as follows: Supervisor, John Burns, Clerk, Wm. Cross; Treasurer, Chas. Swallow; Commissioner, R. Mudge, School Inspector, J. B. Allen; Justice, L. E. Allen.

The Republican State ticket received an average majority of 80, Long running 5 ahead of the head of the ticket. The greenbackers cast 18 straight votes. Circuit Judge, Ramsdell, 180; Pratt, 101. The Republican town ticket was elected except Kane. The vote was as follows: Supervisor—Meech, 171; Burns, 121; Clerk—Harsha, 192; Cross, 103; Treasurer—Bedford, 189; Swallow, 104; Justice—Miller, 162; Allen, 133; Com.—Mudge, 292; Inspector, Kane, 104; Allen, 191. Prohibitory amendment—yes, 178; no, 109. Salaries, yes, 96; no, 51.

HAYES.

State, 17 Republican majority; Ramsdell, 22 majority; prohibitory amendment, 23 majority; salaries, 33 majority. Supervisor, Fred Smith; Clerk, tie between Whitford and Tillotson; Treasurer, Moses Cooper; Commissioner, Frank Kane; Justices, Chew and Ross; School Inspectors, J. E. Chew and E. H. Burgess.

MARION.

State, Republican majority, 35; Ramsdell, 59 majority; prohibitory amendment, 38 majority; salaries, 1 majority; Supervisor, Geo. Cooper; Clerk, W. D. Thompson, Treasurer, John A. Johnson; Commissioner, H. Dixon; Justices, John Shapton and John Newman; School Inspector, John H. O'Neill.

EVANGELINE.

State, Republican majority, 109; Ramsdell, 89 majority; prohibition, 68 majority; salaries, 43 majority. Supervisor, J. L. Helrigel; Clerk, W. J. Lewis; Treasurer; E. F. Allen.

EVELINE.

State, greenback, 19 plurality; Ramsdell, 105 majority; prohibition, 79 majority; salaries, 29 majority against. Supervisor, Ava Smith; Clerk, R. A. Miller; Treasurer, S. B. Brown, Justice, Fowler Steele; Inspector, C. B. Lane; Commissioner, R. Williams.

NORWOOD.

State, Republican plurality, 20, Ramsdell, 5 majority; prohibition, 22 majority; salaries, 20 majority.

THE COUNTY.

Returns up to the time of our going to press indicate a Republican majority on state ticket of from 400 to 450. The majority for the prohibitory amendment will reach, if not exceed 700. Judge Ramsdell will have a majority of like proportions.

ELECTION NOTES.

East Jordan gave a majority of 304 for the prohibitory amendment.

Petoskey recorded herself in the same way by 205 majority.

Emmet county gave about 400 majority for the prohib. amendment.

Pratt carried Leelanaw county by 130 majority, and Grand Traverse by 150 majority. Ramsdell carried Emmet county by 225 majority.

A new treatment for consumption, rectal injections of carbonic acid gas, is attracting much attention just now and reports of astonishing cures are given. A French doctor is the author of the idea.

Six hundred thousand dollars worth of iron property changed hands at Negaunee one day last week, which was quite a day for trade it seems to us, though our informant declared not.

—Subscribe for the SENTINEL.

—The annual election of officers of Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar, Petoskey, takes place to-morrow night.

—Some eighteen months ago, parties applied for land in sections 34, 35 and 36 north of Range 4, West Emmet county, which was claimed by the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw railroad. This claim has now been cancelled, and the land office at Reed City has received notice from the Commissioner of the General Land Office that such applications were not good, which will leave a free-for-all race. April 25, at 2 o'clock, the land will be disposed of for homestead purposes, to the highest bidder.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MARCH 30, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor

Historical Society.

The meeting of the Historical Society at the residence of O. D. Wood Friday evening, was well attended and very enjoyable.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Maggie Green, tastefully executed; a reading from English history, by R. W. Kane, a duo by Miss Rose Cody and Mr. W. A. Smith, with Mrs. Gayles accompanist, and a pleasing recitation by Miss Flora Nelson.

After intermission, Miss Cody recited "The Daisies" very touchingly, and W. A. Smith sang "The Bridge." Mrs. Gayles interspersed two brilliant piano selections during the programme.

The next meeting will occur at the parlors of President Green; paper of the evening by Miss Waterbury.

Northern Michigan.

Boyne Falls has just opened its first saloon.

The Petoskey K. of L. have a very successful and pleasantly arranged reading-room.

Watson Snyder, of Petoskey, has sold his brick yard to L. G. Grimes, of the same place.

Charles Goodrich, son of ex-Senator Goodrich, of Traverse City, died in Kansas City last week.

Bay View will witness the biggest kind of a boom this summer. Thirty resort cottages will be put up.

News comes from Baldwin that the C. & W. M. R. R. Co. have a very large quantity of material at that place ready to commence the work of extending their road as soon as the frost is out of the ground.—Sherman Pioneer.

J. N. Upham, of Cheboygan, up to Saturday had in on Bois Blanc Island 60,000 pieces of cedar—ties, telegraph poles, and paving posts. He reports some very handsome telegraph poles. He expects to put in 10,000 more pieces before the snow leaves.

The Resort Association of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity will put up a handsome $2,500 club house on Hughart hill, adjoining Bay View, this spring. J. B. Ware and L. W. Hoyt, of Grand Rapids, and Ed F. Parmelee, of Charlevoix, are a committee of directors who will have charge of the enterprise.

The judicial fight in the 28th Circuit appears to be a lively one. The contest is between two republicans—M. L. Dunham, the regular republican nominee, and Fred H. Aldrich, the people's candidate, both from Cadillac. Nine of the newspapers in the circuit support Aldrich, three Dunham, and one is non-committal. The chances appear to be very much in favor of Aldrich.—Eagle.

C. A. Hammond, who has just returned from a trip to Muskegon, informs us that General Manager Mulliken, of the C. & W. M. Railroad, informed him a few days since that the surveyors on the road north of Baldwin, had not, up to the time they were compelled to leave the work on account of deep snow, found a satisfactory route between Baldwin and the Manistee river. The route they went over proved too hilly to furnish a good route. Just as soon as the snow is off they will go to work again and look for a route further to the westward, where the hills are not so plenty or so high, and where they expect to find a good route. This side of the Manistee river there is no serious difficulty.—Eagle.

Perry Hannah, of Traverse City, has invested $250,000 in Chicago real estate during the past month. The largest purchase was the Studebaker Building fronting on Jackson and State streets, for which he paid $205,000. The Herald says: "The fact that Mr. Hannah has put a quarter of a million into Chicago property does not mean that he expects to draw out his still extensive interests in Traverse City, in real estate, merchandising, banking, shipping and flouring mill interests. Mr. Hannah's home is Traverse City and he can never lose his interest in the town with which he has become so closely identified and where his fortune has been made. The town and the whole country are dear to him and the people of Northern Michigan emphasize and reciprocate the kindly feeling that has so long existed between them and the man who has done so much to aid in the development of this portion of the state. They are glad of and take pride in his success, and will be gratified to know that he will continue to make this his home."

There is certainly one amendment upon which the best men in all parties will agree; and that is the one raising the salaries of state officers. At present no poor man can accept an office. Vote to raise Michigan up to a level with her sister states in this matter.

Death of Arza Campbell.

Mr. Arza Campbell, who has been seriously ill for several months, died Thursday evening.

Mr. Campbell was born July 13, 1845, and for many years has been a well-known and respected resident of Charlevoix. About four years ago, while hauling a vessel off the beach, he was injured by the fall of a lever which struck him on the head. He was prostrated for some time but finally partially recovered, only to be stricken down again by the illness which resulted in his death after months of suffering.

The funeral occurred from the house Saturday, Rev. W. G. Clark, officiating.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Arza Campbell desires to return her heartfelt thanks to those friends who have been so kind to her during her recent bereavement, and the painful, lingering illness that preceded it.

The Prohibitory Amendment.

The force opposed to the prohibitory amendment is in two camps. Both are under the anti-prohibition banner, but the rallying cry of one is "prohibition does not prohibit," of the other, "prohibition does prohibit." The brewers, saloonists, cigar makers, and independents proclaim the latter. Weeks ago the saloon-keepers' union declared that the passage of the amendment would ruin every man connected with their business. Their organ, the Leader, said Feb. 2: "You may make up your minds, gentlemen, first as well as last, that the success of the prohibitory amendment will bring about the total annihilation of the liquor traffic in the state of Michigan."

It is constantly asserted that the tax on saloons relieves taxation on other property. But what property? The rural vote will be most largely for the amendment. This portion of the state, which holds practically the decision of this question, receives not one dollar of benefit from the saloon tax, this tax going exclusively to the towns. The justification for this tax is frequently made that it helps pay the expenses which the traffic causes. But this is not true. Not one dollar of the saloon tax goes to support the courts or the poor houses of the state. The saloon is the chief factor in causing the taxes for the relief of the poor and the care of the criminal. Of the tax they pay, not one dollar goes to meet these expenses. The farmers must pay these bills. The tax consideration for every farmer is on the side of the amendment. Cut off the saloons, and lower the criminal and pauper taxes, not one penny of which they now pay, and 90 per cent of which they cause.

In a recent Detroit speech, the eloquent Manistee divine, the Rev. E. B. Fairfield said: "Regarding the claim made that the prohibition law had failed in Michigan for twenty years, Mr. Fairfield said that except for twelve months in 1855 and 1856 no real prohibition law had ever existed in Michigan. The supreme court pulled its teeth when it declared the search and seizure law unconstitutional. That old prohibitory clause in the constitution only prohibited the licensing of the business, not the business itself. There was a big difference between the two things. The speaker had broached this point to Judge Marston, who had admitted to him that it was true, but declined to pursue the subject further. The judge, Mr. Fairfield said, would have had to admit that all his letters and arguments had been built on a false basis.

In Maine, Mr. Fairfield said the United States tax paid on liquor amounted to 4 cents per capita. In Michigan it amounted to $1.50 per capita. This looked as if prohibition prohibited, because where liquor was sold the United States revenue officers soon found it out. Blaine, Hale, Dingley, and other prominent Maine men claimed success for prohibition, and equally favorable testimony came from Kansas and Iowa. With reference to the loss of the tax, Mr. Fairfield, referring to the anti-prohibition cry that $250,000 would be lost to the city of Detroit, said that $1,000,000 had been spent over Detroit bars in one year. The people had taken $4,000,000 out of one pocket, put $250,000 in the other, and thrown away $3,750,000. The men who spent that $4,000,000 could well afford to pay $250,000 to the city and spend the rest in good things, or save it. Within a few years after the passing of prohibition the business of those who sell furniture, shoes, dry goods, etc., will have to be doubled to supply the demand of men who have heretofore squandered their money on liquors.

Farmers and the Liquor Tax.

It is a peculiarity of the liquor tax law that while the expenses caused by the traffic are paid by the tax payers of the entire community, the tax money is turned over to certain favored localities. Ionia, for instance, has twenty saloons which are turning out their daily grist of criminals, drunkards, and paupers. The criminal is arrested and tried at the expense of the county and sent to prison, where he is kept at the expense of the state. The drunkard is arrested and sent to jail to be kept at the county expense, while the pauper goes to the poor house, a county charge. The liquor tax does not go to help pay any of these expenses, but goes instead into the city treasury. In this way the farmer, while compelled to pay his full share of the expenses of the liquor traffic, is cheated out of a share in the tax. Surely he has nothing to lose in voting for the amendment.

This liquor tax law was gotten up in 1875 by the Detroit liquor league. It was shrewdly designed as a bribe to municipalities. How well it has worked is shown by the fact that not a daily newspaper in Michigan is supporting the amendment. The daily newspapers represent the cities, and nearly all of them defend their course by pointing out the fact that a large revenue would be sacrificed if the amendment is adopted.

Farmers have everything to gain and nothing to lose by the adoption of the amendment. They do not get a cent from this infamous tax, and in case a license law was passed, the license money would probably go to the cities just the same as the tax money now does. W. E. KIDD.

Ionia, March 4.

Judge Ramsdell, the candidate for Circuit Judge for this district, is out in a card to the voters of the district which successfully refutes the slanderous lies which have been circulated against him. By reason of superior experience and fitness for the position, Judge Ramsdell should receive the vote of every republican in the district as well as the votes of many others, politically opposed to him. When he was nominated many prominent Charlevoix democrats were averse to running any candidate against him. He will certainly be elected.

—Notice the change in the call for the republican caucus. It will be held Friday evening in the Lewis Building.

Correspondence.

To the Editor of The Sentinel:

The prohibition sentiment in Michigan at the present time is the all-absorbing question of the hour, and the first Monday in April is looked forward to as the time this great question will be settled.

If an amendment to the constitution does carry by a sweeping majority, what then? Will that law reach down to the root of the evil, so much deplored by all who feel an interest in the welfare of society, will it give us the power to be a law unto ourselves, or will it merely palliate an evil, which, with its present increase, seems to work as a cancer at the vitals of our civilization by destroying the moral stamina and physical constitution of all who come within its vortex. This question of prohibition should not be made a party question. Every individual in this broad land is involved in the issue. The question should be, can we by law or other means prevent intemperance, lead man and woman out of the evil, up to a higher plane of purity and true progress, or must we surrender our lives, our liberties, our all, to the destroying monster, intemperance.

The question is a momentous one; it is one which will not out, until thoroughly understood and solved.

It is too deeply rooted to be really cured by any law we may put upon the statute book, yet I favor the amendment, though doubtful of its operation as a total cure for intemperance. I feel glad to see the SENTINEL declare in favor of prohibition; I have great hopes of grand results from the movement in favor of temperance, as the operation of the law, should it pass, will show what we may expect from that source; and show us too, the necessity of a closer communion of all interested in measures aiming at improvement in society.

The evil resulting to society through intemperance, can not be measured in dollars and cents, and to be able to grasp the question in all its bearings requires more thought and consideration than is usually bestowed upon it by many who are zealous workers in the cause.

Intemperance comes up in many ways, presents so many phases, that it becomes one of the most perplexing questions with which we have to deal.

Think of the tens of thousands who are working deterioration of the race through the influence of the morphine habit, so much patronized by the female sex.

Think of the enervation, prostration, and general enfeeblement of nervous energy produced by the soothing (?) influence of narcotics improperly administered, and read in your mind's eye the result to posterity. If we can not change the habits of the rising generation, give a new direction and nobler aspiration to those who will soon fill our places, our civilization is doomed to an early grave, and our hopes of realizing "Peace on Earth" becomes a mere myth, a phantom. Shall it be so, must we submit to that greatest of all bondage, the slavery of intemperance?

Can we counteract the current of dissipation and intemperance by any means within our reach and bring back to a healthy, normal state, those who now fill the ranks of the intemperate?

It appears to me a doubtful undertaking, the rescue of those who are fixed in the habit of the evil; as we are, in our lives merely a bundle of habits formed and matured in early life, it becomes one of the most difficult tasks to reform and reconstruct habits once fairly established. We must commence in early life to fix habits of truthfulness, probity, and temperance, in order to make it practical in the life of the individual. In the movement in favor of temperance, there is the hereditary taint to be overcome which has been accumulating for centuries in the race, which has to a great extent become an element of our nature, which must be eliminated before temperance can produce its best fruits—peace, happiness, joy, and brotherly love.

***

Hazings from Hayes.

Henry Ostrum is in the southern part of the state attending the funeral of his brother.

William Compton has been confined to the house several weeks with an inflamed eye.

Miss Nellie Burnett closed her school in District No. 5 last Saturday with an exhibition in the evening.

There will be a lecture on prohibition at the Hopyard school house on Friday evening of this week, by Rev. W. H. McCartney, of Charlevoix. The Glee Club of Charlevoix will also be present.

The citizen's caucus for nominating township officers will be held at Ross school house Friday, April 1, at 10 a. m.

Whitford & Cram have a larger stock of logs in their mill yard than usual. They have three-fourths of a million, and since testing their new mill they are sorry they did not buy a full million.

Sabbath schools have been organized at Maple Grove and Burgess, and will commence next Sunday.

The amount of wood, logs, ties, and posts taken out of Hayes this winter is enormous. At the present rate our forests will soon be denuded.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Go to Spott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent. Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Cern.

Common Council.

A full council sat around the board Thursday evening, President McLeod in the chair.

The finance committee reported a settlement with the village treasurer, and that the accounts were correct. (Report elsewhere.)

The special committee appointed to report on the employment of an engineer for the steamer reported that they could employ Gurley Boak for $200 per annum, providing the positions of janitor and librarian were secured for him. With the latter contingency assured, the committee on fires and their prevention were instructed to employ Mr. Boak.

The bonds of village officers were fixed the same as last year, excepting that of treasurer, which was raised from $2,000 to $3,000.

It was ordered that $50 be expended in park improvement.

The president appointed committees as follows:

Sidewalks, Eaton, See, and Smith.

Fires and their prevention, Mason, Newman, and Cameron.

License and Printing, Cameron, Newman, and Mason.

Public Buildings, See, Cameron, and Eaton.

Sanitary Matters and Police, Newman, Mason, and See.

Claims and Finance, Smith, See, and Newman.

Ordinance, Smith, Eaton, and Mason.

Public Parks, Eaton, Smith, and Cameron.

Report of Village Treasurer for year ending March 17, 1887.

March 17, cash on hand	1457 18
March 26, cash rec'd [illegible]	75
May 13, cash rec'd [illegible] saloon tax	594 00
June 3, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	12 00
June 5, cash rec'd [illegible]	25 00
June 20, cash rec'd of A. Kelly [illegible]	[illegible]
June 30, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	[illegible]
July 30, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	2 00
Aug. 21, cash rec'd of Wm. Dale, taxes	.61
Aug. 24, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	11 00
Aug. 26, cash rec'd of Village Clerk	2.00
Dec 7, cash rec'd of Village Marshal	2 00
Feb. 19, 1887, cash rec'd of Village Marshal, village taxes, 1886	726 29
Feb. 28, cash rec'd of Village Clerk	200 00
	$2,999 75
March 5, paid village orders	$1,965 81
March 17, cash on hand	[illegible]
	$2,999 75

Charlevoix, March 17, 1887. H. C. COOPER, Village Treasurer.

Total of indebtedness of the village to be met the coming year:

June 6, int. on bond 1 park bond, $450	$ 58 00
Aug. 21, int. on fire bond, $2,500 5 per cent	[illegible]
Dec. C. int. on hall bond, $7,[illegible] 6 per cent	120 00
July 1, loan from Charlevoix Savings Bank, $200, with interest	207 50
	$[illegible]

M. LITNEY. JOS STEIMEL.

Litney & Steimel

LIVERY,

And Feed Barn

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

TO THE PUBLIC.

At this, the close of our first year's business in Charlevoix it seems to us eminently proper that we extend our sincere thanks to the trading public of this region for the patronage they have so generously extended us during the past 12 months.

Our constantly increasing business proves that the people appreciate a Metropolitan stock at lowest prices.

Our past experience has shown us the needs of the people of this section. During the coming season our line of goods will be the largest ever offered in this region. Our Prices we always guarantee to be the lowest. If we have pleased you in the past, please grant us a continuation of your patronage.

Very truly yours,

F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Prior to inventory we are offering great bargains in every line of goods.

We are determined to reduce our stock one-half during this month, and to accomplish this we are making great sacrifices.

Close buyers will do well to inspect our stock.

J. L. HURD & CO.

ROSENTHAL & SON

ARE SELLING OUT

OWING TO A CHANGE WHICH WILL TAKE PLACE IN OUR STORE IN THE SPRING WE MUST SELL OUR STOCK OF

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, CLOTHING, CLOAKS, NOTIONS, GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

WE MEAN BUSINESS! EVERYTHING IN OUR STORE WILL BE SOLD AT SOME PRICE, FOR CASH ONLY.

Now is the time to get Bargains.

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO.—49 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6, 1887. WHOLE NO. 906

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

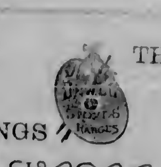
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SUBSCRIBE FOR THE SENTINEL.

Send it to your friends abroad.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS

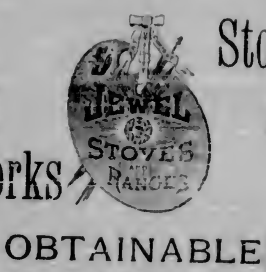


THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works



Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS. S & I THE MOST DURABLE.

THE OLDEST Manufactur's S & I Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,

AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

A Large Fresh Stock of Groceries

JUST OPENED AT

WILL SEE'S.

I call especial attention to something fine in Corn Beef at 8c. Try my Tea and Coffee stock. You will find it to your advantage to call and see me

ALL KINDS OF COUNTRY PRODUCE WANTED.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, Michigan

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1 50 | Six months $ 75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Sugar parties are the next thing in order.

O. D. [illegible] has a number of milch cows for sale.

The Rifenburg Milling Company have a quantity of oats for sale.

—M. J. Stockman and wife returned home from Florida on Wednesday last.

Preaching at Black's next Sabbath at 2:30 p. m., and at Johnson's in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Carpenter and C. Y. Cook are expected home from Florida, next Friday.

—Dean Burns left yesterday for Cobden, Ont., on a visit. Will be gone a month or more.

—J. C. Hatch, employe of J. L. Hurd & Co., leaves this week to visit his parents at Traverse City.

—Perry Weed has purchased the Glover property on Clinton street, and will occupy his new abode soon.

—Notice the first announcement of A. T. Washburn & Co. Their line of spring goods is unusually attractive.

—The finest line of Easter cards ever offered here is now on sale at F. G. Hines & Co.'s. Call in and inspect them.

—Rosenthal & Son announce that they will slaughter prices on Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing, etc., in order to close out their stock by August 1st.

—Barnard Burns has leased his farm to John Holden for five years and will move to Charlevoix and start a livery and feed barn on the north-side this week.

Misses Sarah, Lizzie and Ella Aldrich have purchased the millinery stock of Mrs. Ella Smith and Anna Cooper, and they will continue business at the old stand.

—Loyal Legion next Saturday at 3 o'clock as usual. Every effort is being put forth to make it a success, but the help of every one is needed and earnestly solicited. SEC'Y.

—Two hundred feet of the basement for the new Mackinac hotel is finished and two hundred carpenters will be at work next week. In addition to the above 30 resort cottages will be erected this spring.

—Andrew Emery returned from Charlevoix, Monday, where he had been looking after his real estate interests. He rented his dock and ware house to the Northern line of steamers.—Manistee Times.

—Will See, the new grocer, gets to the front this week with a new advertisment. With a large circle of friends, a central location and a good stock, Will is bound to build up a large grocery trade. Just step in and see him.

—Charlevoix county people should patronize the Rifenburg Flouring Mills. Notwithstanding the fact that the Rifenburg flour is as good as there is in the market, we regret that a good deal of outside flour finds its way into the market.

—Capt. Chas. E. Kirkland, the well-known wrecker, formerly of Milwaukee, has purchased the Michigan Exchange hotel of Cheboygan for $13,000 and will take possession shortly and manage it personally. He has indefinitely withdrawn from the wrecking business.

Sam E. Watson, superintendent of Telephone service, and well known in northern Michigan, was last week elected Emmet Commander of De Molai Commandery, No. 5, K. T., of Grand Rapids. We heartily congratulate Sam. It is an honor indeed. The Grand Rapids Eagle says, concerning the fact: The EAGLE of Thursday very truly said that no body of Knights Templar in America has a higher reputation among the fraters of that splendid Order than has De Molai, No. 5, of this city, either individually or collectively. Hence to be the Eminent Commander, the chief officer, of that body, which contains about 225 of our chief citizens, is a very high honor, indeed. That honor, by common consent, was conferred up Sir Knight, Sam E. Watson, last night. The general public knows Mr. Watson very well indeed as the Superintendent or General Manager of the telephone interests in Western Michigan, a gentleman whom all who know him are glad to honor and thoroughly respect. He is now but thirty-one years of age—few men have risen to such a position in such a body so young—and has lived here about fifteen years, seven years as an operator in the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company, and the past eight years as the manager of the Telephone Exchange—he is the father of the telephone system in this region. Sir Knight and Eminent Commander Watson has many fraternal and other friends who are glad that he has been thus honored, yet feel that he has won all that he has secured, and that still higher honors are in store for him.

—Hon. A. Buttars left for Chicago and Lansing, Sunday.

—Ben. Weaver spent election day among his Charlevoix friends.

—C. J. Grier has assumed the editorial management of the Journal.

—Bryant Weed left for Thompson Thursday to begin his spring term of school.

—Mrs. James E. Wood left for Ludington one day last week to visit her husband.

—A twelve pound girl came to the household of Perry Weed on Monday of last week.

A copy of the Ventilator, a monthly journal of Traverse City, has reached our desk.

Henry Barth and P. S. Brown left yesterday for Elk Rapids to do some boiler work there.

—Wm. Alden Smith, State Game and Fish Warden, made an official trip to Sault Ste. Marie last week.

The election in the Township of Wilson resulted in a tie between G. W. Bailey and M. Hodkins for Supervisor.

Rifenburg & Co. will this spring erect a flour and feed store and warehouse, 26x45, two stories high, at the north end of the bridge.

—George Clark, with one team, and a three mile haul, banked 10,209 ties and posts and 40,000 feet of pine at Berdan's camp this winter.

Gurley Boak has entered upon the discharge of his duties as engineer of the steam fire engine, street commissioner, janitor of the public building and Township librarian.

Bernard Burns, who has removed from Marion to Charlevoix to open a livery stable, was waited upon by about 60 of his neighbors one evening before leaving, and a very pleasant time was the result.

—W. A. Smith returned home from Grand Rapids and Stanwood Wednesday. Mrs. Smith will remain at Stanwood some time yet. Mr. Reed, whose supposed fatal illness called them there, is recovering.

A most horrible story comes from Boyne City. "Old man Joles," a person well known as an old resident, criminally assaulted his grand daughter, aged nine years. Finding he was discovered, he fled, but was caught at Vanderbilt and brought back to Boyne City. This is a case where capital punishment would be appropriate.

Last week the dry goods firm of F. W. Craine & Co., of this place, was dissolved, and that of A. T. Washburn & Co. took its place. Mr. Washburn taking the interest of Mr. Craine. Mr. Gow continues in the same relation to the establishment as before. Mr. Al. T. Washburn is well known to the people of Charlevoix and vicinity, and needs no introduction. The stock has been largely increased, and the business will be made to boom.

Preacher's Meeting.

At the Preacher's meeting held on Monday afternoon, the following committee of laymen was appointed to have control of the business management of revival services to be held at the rink: Alex Cameron, F. J. Meech, J. L. Hurd, John Burns, Robert Kane and D. S. Way. The citizens are invited to aid committee in making preparations for the meeting.

Common Council.

A full council was present Thursday evening.

The bonds of the village officers were approved.

The contract with engineer Boak was executed.

The council passed a resolution requesting the Deputy Game and Fish Warden to enforce the law prohibiting the depositing of saw-dust in the trout streams.

The Council voted to defray the expense of securing trout fry from the State Fish Commission, and depositing the same in the streams about Charlevoix.

Council adjourned for two weeks.

Marine Jottings.

The steamer Gordon is being put in shape for business.

Capt. Smith is beginning to put the schooner Sea Gem in shape.

Tug and steamboat owners are beginning to look over their craft.

Capt. Vanderhoef expects to be here the 15th with the Friant and Cummings.

Ben. Campbell will haul out the steamer Van Raalte as soon as the ice leaves the harbor.

The Dauntless arrived all safe, on Monday. She encountered heavier weather than the Coronet, having been compelled to lie have to for sixteen hours at one time. She made one day's run of 328 miles—the best record ever made by a yacht on the Atlantic.

A special from Frankfort states that a schooner passed there before the gale on Monday, under reefed canvas, apparently seeking refuge at the Manitous. Point Betsey life saving patrol report that, when last seen she was bearing north of station, standing in for Empire Bluffs. She was making more sail, evidently to seek shelter in an ice field. It was impossible to reach the island, as the passage is blockaded with shore ice. It was supposed to be the schooner A. J. Dewey, as she was loading lumber at Pierport.

THE STATE.

Republican by Safe Figures. The Prohibitory Amendment Carried.

Telegraphic advices up to last evening indicate that the State is safely Republican. The prohibitory amendment is carried by safe figures.

THE JUDGESHIP.

Ramsdell, for Judge, is undoubtedly elected by from 300 to 400 majority. Cheboygan county may reduce these figures somewhat.

VERY LATEST.

The very latest advices by telegraph indicate that the vote on the prohibitory amendment is very close. Anti-prohibitionists claim the State by from 5,000 to 8,000. The Detroit Evening Journal of last evening concedes the defeat of the amendment.

State Republican ticket elected by about 7,000 majority.

The Elections.

Notwithstanding the blizzard which prevailed election day, a large vote was polled in Charlevoix and all other Townships heard from.

In Charlevoix the Republicans and Independents united upon the following ticket: Supervisor, F. J. Meech; Clerk, H. S. Harsha; Treasurer, H. Bedford; Commissioner, G. Mudge; School Inspector, R. W. Kane; Justice, S. Miller. The Democrats nominated a ticket as follows: Supervisor, John Burns; Clerk, Wm. Cross; Treasurer, Chas. Swallow; Commissioner, R. Mudge, School Inspector, J. B. Allen; Justice, L. E. Allen.

The Republican state ticket received an average majority of 80, Long running 5 ahead of the head of the ticket. The greenbackers cast 18 straight votes. Circuit Judge, Ramsdell, 180; Pratt, 101. The Republican town ticket was elected except Kane. The vote was as follows: Supervisor—Meech, 171; Burns, 121; Clerk—Harsha, 192; Cross, 103; Treasurer—Bedford, 190; Swallow, 104; Justice—Miller, 162; Allen, 131; Com.—Mudge, 292; Inspector—Kane, 103; Allen, 193. Prohibitory amendment—yes, 178; no, 109. Salaries, yes, 96; no, 51.

HAYES.

State, 17 Republican majority; Ramsdell, 22 majority; prohibitory amendment, 23 majority; salaries, 33 majority. Supervisor, Fred Smith; Clerk, tie between Whitford and Tillotson; Treasurer, Moses Cooper; Commissioner, Frank Kane; Justices, Chew and Ross; School Inspectors, J. E. Chew and E. H. Burgess.

MARION.

State, Republican majority, 35; Ramsdell, 59 majority; prohibitory amendment, 38 majority; salaries, 1 majority; Supervisor, Geo. Cooper; Clerk, W. D. Thompson; Treasurer, John A. Johnson; Commissioner, H. Dixon; Justices, John Shapton and John Newman; School Inspector, John H. O'Neill.

EVANGELINE.

State, Republican majority, 109; Ramsdell, 89 majority; prohibition, 68 majority; salaries, 43 majority. Supervisor, J. L. Helrigel; Clerk, W. J. Lewis; Treasurer; E. F. Allen.

EVELINE.

State, greenback, 19 plurality; Ramsdell, 105 majority; prohibition, 70 majority; salaries, 23 majority against. Supervisor, Ava Smith; Clerk, R. A. Miller; Treasurer, S. B. Brown; Justice, Fowler Steele, Inspector, C. B. Lane; Commissioner, R. Williams.

NORWOOD.

State, Republican plurality, 20; Ramsdell, 3 majority; prohibition, 22 majority; salaries, 25 majority.

THE COUNTY.

Returns up to the time of our going to press indicate a Republican majority on state ticket of from 400 to 450. The majority for the prohibitory amendment will reach, if not exceed 700. Judge Ramsdell will have a majority of like proportions.

ELECTION NOTES.

East Jordan gave a majority of 304 for the prohibitory amendment.

Petoskey recorded herself in the same way by 205 majority.

Emmet county gave about 400 majority for the prohib. amendment.

Pratt carried Leelanaw county by 330 majority, and Grand Traverse by 450 majority. Ramsdell carried Emmet county by 225 majority.

A new treatment for consumption, rectal injections of carbonic acid gas, is attracting much attention just now and reports of astonishing cures are given. A French doctor is the author of the idea.

Six hundred thousand dollars worth of iron property changed hands at Negaunee one day last week, which was quite a day for trade it seems to us, though our informant declared not.

—Subscribe for the SENTINEL.

—The annual election of officers of Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar, Petoskey, takes place to-morrow night.

—Some eighteen months ago, parties applied for land in sections 34, 35 and 36 north of Range 4, West Emmet county, which was claimed by the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw railroad. This claim has now been cancelled, and the land office at Reed City has received notice from the Commissioner of the General Land Office that such applications were not good, which will leave a free-for-all race. April 25, at 2 o'clock, the land will be disposed of for homestead purposes, to the higher bidder.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX. · MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, · PUBLISHERS

TURKISH GIRLS.

Every Turkish girl, says a writer in Harper's Bazar, is permitted to attend either the public schools attached to the mosques or to receive private instruction at home—that is, in the selamlik—until she is 7 or 8 years of age, when she is no longer allowed the freedom of her childhood. At that period she feels as proud as a young miss does in Christendom who doffs her short clothes and considers herself a young lady.

The limited time allotted them for instruction, the difficult nature of the language, which is most complicated, and the mode of tuition being altogether unsystematical, very little learning is acquired by them; so that for all future years they retain their simplicity, and are but overgrown children.

Notwithstanding their limited education, it is delightful to listen to the melodious tone of their voices, as they speak with remarkable purity the harmonious Turkish language. There is no sinning against grammar or murdering the sultan's Turkish from the lips of a Turkish woman, no matter how low her lot in life. I happened to be in the apartment of a functionary at the war office. The room being large, it was partitioned with a wooden wall. The adjoining section was occupied by the auditor. I heard the voice of a woman pleading for pay. It seems that her husband was a captain in the army and away on military duty. Prior to his departure he had made arrangements to have half of his pay given to his wife, but for the last nine months she had been unable to realize a para. Being driven to extremities, she had come to state her pitiable condition. This she did in accents so sweet, words so mellifluous, and language so choice and elegant that I was not only attracted by it, but surprised at the incident. I could not, of course, see her, and consequently could not tell whether she was old or young, pretty or otherwise; but the manner of her pleading and her melodious accent were sufficient to fill my imagination with all that is poetic and lovely—and this from the lips of one evidently not of the highest class.

Their domestic occupations vary according to their stations. The poor and the middle classes are, as a matter of course, occupied with household work, sewing, and embroidery for market, those of the higher with prinking, by which they hope to render themselves bewitching to the lords of creation. It is most amusing to see a young lady perched on the sofa with a hand-mirror intently engaged for hours in giving the requisite shape to her eyebrows or embellishing her headgear, etc.

Their minds having had no culture, the senses naturally assume entire dominion over them, and their time is thus spent either in adorning their persons or in observance of etiquette. There are certain acts which devolve altogether upon the sterner sex in the most exquisitely civilized regions of the world, which are, however, sometimes reluctantly performed, but as usual such matters are reversed in the East, where even the sun rises at a different hour. There the effendi graciously receives a glass of water at the hands of his too happy hanum; his pipe and his coffee are gracefully served by some fair Hebe of a wife or sister, who naturally considers herself as the helpmeet for her spouse, as did Eve, the first and fairest of womankind.

Indeed, their deportment in company especially towards persons of consideration, is truly admirable, and could only be expected from those of high education.

Oriental life has many distinguishing peculiarities and characteristic forms of politeness, but, unlike other parts of the globe, etiquette is in the East permanent and general. The mental accomplishments being but few, wealth seems to constitute the only aristocratic distinction, while the poorest and the richest are equally versed in the established routine of civility.

It is curious to observe the native refinement even of the lower classes in Turkey. There is no gaucherie, no reluctance in any one to do the right thing in the right way and place; no fear of being unlike other personages in manners and customs, for there is no doubt as to the prescribed and most elegant style of conduct; even the salutations, compliments, and congratulations are most carefully worded, and any deviation from the formula would destroy the intended effect.

The Appetite of Birds.

Of all animals, birds possess the quickest motions, the most energetic respiration, and the warmest blood, and they consequently undergo the most rapid change of substance, and need the most food. Although few creatures are so pleasing to the æsthetic tastes of a poetically inclined person as birds, the breeder knows that most of them are to be looked upon as hearty or excessive eaters. Any one who closely observes birds and their conduct will soon remark that all their thoughts and efforts, aside from the few days they spend in wooing and their short periods of resting, are directed to getting something to eat. With what restless earnestness do titmice plunge through the bushes and trees! Not a leaf is uninvestigated, every chink in the bark is examined for whatever eatable it may be hiding, and a sharp look is cast into every joint of a branch. How industriously does the ousel turn and thrash the leaves on the ground of the woods all day long, spying its game with a glance of its sharp eye, and snapping it up on the instant! After observing a few such incidents we can easily believe the stories that are related of the fish-eating powers of the cormorant, and of the fruit-eating birds that are able to consume three times their weight every day.—William Marshall in Popular Science Monthly.

The savings bank depositors of the city of New York number 560,423, or about half of the population.

MY LOST SELF.

You wonder why my eyes are dim with tears,
Then, shall I tell you? Long and long ago—
So long ago—years piled on weary years—
There was a little child I used to know;

And every day and night and every hour
We took life's gift together, sun and shade,
And saw the rainbow shining through the shower,
And heard the talk that building robins made.

We thought the world was ours, to come and go
About its highways, finding treasures rare;
We thought all heaven was ours, and fashioned so
Grand, castle after castle high in air.

Ah! now I find the world a desert wild,
No room in all the sky for tower of mine,
But, most of all, I miss my comrade child,
Her brave, true courage and her faith divine.

Dead? Changed? I know not, sweet; I only know
That sometimes from the mirror's shining space,
In my own features, worn and faded so,
I catch a glimmer of the bright, lost face.

You will no longer wonder that I weep,
My little girl with eyes so bright and clear;
Whatever treasure we may hold or keep,
To lose one's happy self is saddest, dear.
—[Marie Ainge De Vere.

DODD'S BOY.

Now there was a boy who was a boy! No pale faced, sickly-looking youngster was he. An apple's redness wasn't a circumstance to the color of his cheeks, and his appetite might have raised the price of provisions. There wasn't such another in the town, nor in any other town. Just show us his match, name your price, and the money is yours.

Almost everybody called him "Dodd's boy," (although Dodd himself called him Sam) so with us, Dodd's boy let it be.

How he could yell! In the wild prairies of the West there wasn't an Indian, who, on hearing Dodd's boy's yell, wouldn't have been ashamed of his own weak war whoop. But he wasn't always noisy. His voice could be low, and sweet, and tender—for a bundle of contradictions was this boy of Dodd's.

A sharp one, too, was Dodd's boy. You couldn't pull any wool over his eyes! People said to do that, "one would have to get up mighty early in the morning." The truth was one couldn't have done it even if he had stayed up all night! Dodd's boy was as wide awake as wide awake could be!

There was no knowing where to have him. Across the street a moment ago—now yelling at your very heels—and, quicker than you can turn round, across the street again, laughing to burst his sides.

He wasn't a bad fellow, though—this boy of Dodd's—don't think it! He never did a mean or cruel thing in his life. All the dogs and cats in the neighborhood liked him, and Dodd himself said he was worth his weight in gold; which was praise indeed; for he was the village butcher, and had taken the boy out of charity, and was very hard to please.

Dodd's boy was in love. You needn't laugh! What right-minded lad has no place in his heart for some pretty little fairy? Show him to us, let us look at him, and see how quickly we will show you, that he is a fraud, and not right minded.

His fairy's name was Dolly, and she was Dodd's daughter. After seeing her you never would have blamed the boy for loving her. Why attempt to describe her? Pen of mortal could not do it. Imagine her as sweet and as pretty as you please, and you can not do her justice!

Dodd lived away from his shop, in a little, two story cottage, just outside the town. Belonging to the cottage was the neatest, cleanest, little stable you ever saw. In it was Dodd's boy's room—neat and clean, too, as everything had to be about that stable.

The boy was considered quite a member of the family, and spent his evenings with them. He thought the little parlor, with its little piano, and other attractions too numerous to mention, the very summit of earthly grandeur.

It may be mentioned here that everything about the premises was on a small, cunning scale.

When Dolly sat at the little piano and sang (wonderfully like a bird) the boy listened, with ears, eyes and mouth wide open.

We couldn't begin to tell you all the songs she sang; but there was one the boy loved to listen to better than all the rest. An older friend, in a spirit of mischief, had taught her it; and in truth it was a strange song for such a little girl to sing. Even now, it is known everywhere as "Tender and True." Dolly only knew the first few lines, which are these:

"Could ye come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness that I knew?
I would be so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true;
Never scornful word should pain you—
I'd smile as sweet as the angels do."

You better believe that song was the boy's favorite. We really believe he would have listened to it for days, without even stopping for meals!

On a certain night, memorable in the history of Dodd's boy, Dolly, after playing and singing for ever so long, had gone to bed thoroughly tired. He had gone to his room; but being neither tired nor sleepy, was reading. The moon's silver light shone in so beautifully that he laid aside his book and blew out the flame of his coal-oil lamp. Moonlight and coal-oil—the boy had too much taste to like a combination like that.

He stood by the window, thinking about the moon, and stars, and God! There was a vein of sentiment in him—and good sentiment, too—although he was only a butcher's boy.

A sound broke the sweet, deep silence; no, not broke the silence, but melted into it, and seemed almost a part of it. Because it seemed so, and that he was half dreaming, at first the boy was not startled. But the sound growing more strong and clear, he started and listened, wondering.

"Never scornful word should pain you—
I'd smile as sweet as the angels do."

Dolly's song and Dolly's voice at that hour!

His heart beat faster. It took a great leap! In three jumps he was at the head of the stairs, in three more at the foot. In a few seconds he was in the open air, praying God to save her.

There, clad in her nightdress, upon the roof of the house, stood Dolly!

For the moment the sight made Dodd's boy powerless. He shuddered as he saw Dolly begin to walk along the very edge. The danger which had benumbed him, brought him to himself.

Dodd's boy was quite a reader, and, remembering what he read, knew a thing or two! She was walking in her sleep—there could be no doubt of that. He had read once that to cry out to one walking in sleep is dangerous. There was but one way—he counted the danger to himself nothing.

"I must walk below her," he thought. "The roof's not very high, and, if she falls, I can save her from these cruel bricks. It doesn't make any difference if I do get hurt."

Fine fellow, Dodd's boy!

Back and forth her little feet bore her along the roof's edge, and below, exactly beneath her, walked the boy.

After a little she stood still again and sang.

With a feeling that was almost one of awe, he listened to her, it was sad to see her thus so near to danger and perhaps to death! sad to hear that sweet voice, which in a moment might be stilled forever!—and she so unconscious of it all!

When the song died away, as Æolian harps still with the dying wind, she turned and disappeared.

Dodd's boy heard her stepping to the other side of the roof.

In an agony of fear he ran around.

Not an instant too soon!

One step too far and she fell.

But into his arms! into his arms!

The shock bore him to the ground, and he felt terrible pain in his arms that had saved her.

Dolly's shrieks aroused her father, who, coming quickly out, held her soothingly to his breast, only a little hurt!

But what of Dodd's boy?

He lay there, striving to keep back the groans that would come. He had saved the child; but poor fellow! both of his arms were broken!

When they bore him in, and laid him tenderly, so tenderly, upon the best bed in the house, and Dolly wept over him, he did not mind the pain so much; when Mr. Dodd said he was a hero, he felt quite proud; and when the doctor came, and the broken limbs were set and Dolly said that she would be his nurse till he was strong and well again, he felt happy and content.

Indeed she kept her promise! Though he was helpless and often in much pain, those days passed like a pleasant dream. Years after when he was a wanderer from that home and her, the sweet face that had wept and laughed with him was mirrored in his heart.

There is more to tell. They, with hearts so dry as to laugh at love, had better turn away. The broken arms healed and became strong and shapely again. The time came, a sad time for all of them, when the boy left Dodd, and Dodd's daughter, and went into the great world to seek his fortune.

He found it too! but found no forgetfulness of his child love.

No longer Dodd's boy, but a man who had made a name to be proud of, he returned to look upon the face of his fairy once more.

When he called he asked:

"Is Mr. Dodd in?"

No, Mr. Dodd had "just stepped out for a little while."

"Is Miss Dodd in?"

The formal Miss Dodd almost stuck in his throat.

Yes, she was in.

He sent up his card.

Wasn't that funny! Dodd's boy sending up a card!

"What will the meeting be like?" he thought, as he waited for her. "Now that she was a young lady, will there be any of the childish heartiness of old in her manner? Or will she have grown beyond and forgetful of me?" And Dodd's boy that was, sighed!

When she enters the room he is ashamed of his doubts. She holds out both hands to him with such a smile of welcome that he fancies he sees the Dolly of old.

Soon Dodd comes in, and gives his hearty greeting.

Like the sensible, sympathetic man he is, after a little while he says:

"I must really go to bed."

So he goes.

Dodd's boy that was, and the child Dolly that was, the man and woman who are, are alone again.

You may guess what he said to her—the question he asked her so earnestly.

You may guess what Dolly's answer was, when, stepping to the little piano, she gave it in almost the exact words of the old song:

"You have come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness that I knew;
I will be so faithful, so loving, Douglas,
Douglas, Douglas, tender and true."

The Shop Council.

Mr. James C. Bayles, the editor of The Iron Age, has suggested in a pamphlet the institution of "shop councils," in which employer and employe are to be equally represented—the decisions not to be binding on either party unless approved by both, and all functions to be purely conciliatory. As a means of eliminating something of the element of secrecy from the relations of the two parties, of keeping petty matters out of secret discussion and decision, it seems all that can be desired. It is the antipode of compulsory arbitration; and it avoids that suspicion which often attaches even to voluntary arbitration. It is rather symptomatic than remedial, just as a general disuse of the pistol pocket would be an excellent accessory to a law against street combats. It is a modest proposition; but even in the din of high sounding schemes and associations, is it too much to hope for a fair trial of it somewhere? —The Century.

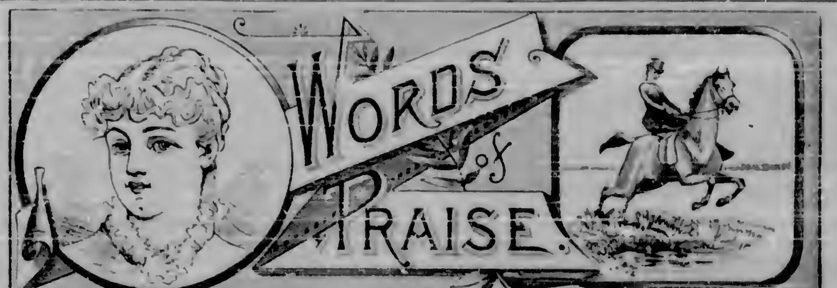
Mr. Beecher belonged to an uncounted number of clubs of various sorts. Among others he was a member of the New York Press Club, which is in mourning for him.

The fact that Ben Butler now chews slippery elm instead of the end of a dry cigar is attracting attention.



Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 6, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR.
ED F. PARMELEE, ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

A Japanese student at the Michigan University has created a sensation by joining the Masonic Order, and marrying an American girl at Ann Arbor recently.

Tid-Bits: "I don't believe in all this talk about so much liquor being sold in prohibition states," exclaimed Doolittle excitedly. "Why not?" "Well, I asked an Iowa man how liquor sold in his State and he said it was a drug in the market."

Some of the papers of eastern Canada appear to have queer ideas about the permanence and the binding nature of treaties. They deny the right of the United States to withdraw from an international compact which has been persistently violated by Great Britain. The treaty of 1818 is not like the law of the Medes and Persians. It is like any other agreement between nations—it will stand as long as it is respected by both sides. The United States will be under no obligation to hold fast to it, if the Canadian officials persist in violating its letter and spirit.

Illinois boasts of being the home of the oldest horse in the country, if not in the world, owned by a man named Gilbert, at Chili, in that State. According to the veracious chronicler, Gilbert's father purchased the horse from the Indians in 1836, when he was a two year old colt. When the war broke out the horse was twenty-five years old, but Mr. Gilbert rode him all through the war, and neither was hurt. The old fellow still lives and is tenderly cared for. He hasn't a tooth in his head, lives on corn bread and bran mash, and is probably the oldest horse in the world.

Detroit Tribune: This is a great nation of over three dozen states and several large territories, but when it comes to deciding a national political contest, New York state does it. As goes New York so goes the union. And what is the pivot on which the state of New York turns? It is New York city. And what element of democracy in New York city governs? The very lowest and vilest. With the solid south's electoral vote always boxed up ready for delivery to the democracy—no matter how the elections are conducted—the fight is only in the north, and the result depends upon the amount of crooked work that is done by the democracy of New York city. Democratic success depends upon just that. Republican success depends upon successful Republican effort to prevent fraud at the polls in New York city. Right there is where the hardest blows must be struck.

In the first day's battle of Chickamauga, Saturday, September 18, 1863, a young man from Springfield, Ill., named Peter Casserleigh, then about eighteen years of age, received three minnie balls from the rebel guns. One entered the right leg, another the right thigh, and another the right hip. The one which entered the thigh could not be found by the surgeons. All trace of the bullet was lost until about eighteen months ago, when a swelling appeared on the inner portion of the thigh. During the past few weeks he could scarcely endure the pain from the swelling. A few days ago several physicians were summoned and the ball removed, after having been carried about for nearly a quarter of a century. It was found to be greatly flattened by its concussion with the thigh bone. Its weight was one ounce and forty-five grains avoirdupois. It was covered with a bony deposit.

The Inter-State Commerce bill appropriates $100,000 for all the expenses for the first year of its existence, while other expenses incident to it are to be met out of other appropriations for the interior departments and the courts. The salaries of five commissioners at $7,500 each, and of the secretary at $3,500, and other stipulated expenses leave a sum of something like $50,000 to be expended for assistance, clerical service, etc. This represents a large clerical and official force to be appointed in such manner, at such rates, and for such duties as the commission sees fit, but subject in every case to the approval of the secretary of the Interior. Thousands of communications, it is said, are ready to pour in upon the Commission whenever it is ready to receive them. The notices which the law requires all railroad companies to file as soon as the law goes into effect in regard to discontinuing pools, revising rates, and canceling contracts with themselves, requires a large clerical force to classify and file. Washington hotel keepers are congratulating themselves that the new commission will keep a small army of lawyers, railroad men, and aggrieved shippers constantly in Washington.

Northern Michigan News.

Bay View will have thirty new cottages this season.

Work will begin on the new Petoskey depot in a few days.

The Mancelona M. E. church received 17 new converts last week.

W. A. Sprague has removed his harness shop from Kalkaska to Elk Rapids.

C. C. Jencks has bought an interest in the business of Ramsey & Morgan at Kalkaska.

A signal service station has recently been located at Kalkaska, with F. R. Boyd as agent.

Central Lake township will vote on the proposition of purchasing Green's Hall for the use of the township.

The ice in the straits is as solid as it was two months ago. Navigation is in no hurry to open up this spring.

The Leland Enterprise has moved slightly in its sleep, rolled a little farther over on its side and become wholly a democratic sheet.

Scott Phettepiace, son of Capt. E. C. Phettepiace, living some miles south-east of Petoskey, died recently of lung disease, after an illness of nearly three months.

We understand the prospects are not very favorable for the passage of the city charter bills in which Petoskey and Harbor Springs are interested. It is better so.

The Bellaire fire department has purchased a 250-pound fire alarm bell and it will be put up as soon as the snow goes off in the vacant space north of the Bellaire house.

The misunderstanding in regard to title of church property at Central Lake has been amicably adjusted, the Mission Board having been given the tax title held against it by Robert Hastings.

L. Newberry, the Traverse City drayman, has the contract for hauling the acetate from the Elk Rapids chemical works to the depot at Traverse City, and has already taken over large quantities.

Traverse City houses are to be numbered, street signs put up and everything in readiness for the moment when the town will grow big enough to hold up its chin to be spotted for free mail delivery.

We notice that the bill to place the management of the Northern Asylum in the hands of the homeopathists has passed the House committee of the whole, which would seem to indicate its passage by that body.

East Jordan Enterprise: Glenn & Porter's mill is turning out hardwood lumber at the rate of 35,000 feet per day. The Messrs. Palmiters' mill is cutting an average of 11,000 per day, they having cut as high as 13,000.

J. M. Slight offers to present a gold dollar to every child born at Slight's Station, Blair Township, Grand Traverse county, during the next five years. The parents must be actual residents of the place. Now then!

Joe Reutaer, of East Jordan, met with a painful accident a few days ago. While at work in his shoe shop, he accidentally ran a sharp knife into his arm about an inch and a half, cutting an ugly gash that had to be sewed up.

Harbor Springs Independent; Gus Bushaw, the indian mentioned last week as being very sick, died. He was a union soldier, fighting in a company of sharpshooters raised in this portion of the State. He was a queer Gus! May his poor old bones rest in peace.

Record: Mr. Marks has begun his annual planting of whitefish fry. Last week he planted about 3,000,000 in Pine Lake off Horton's Bay, and expects to plant the balance of the product of our hatchery in Mullet Lake, Torch Lake, Little Traverse Bay and the Straits.

Mr. W. F. Hubbard, of Kalkaska, received a consignment of 25,000 young brook trout from the State Fish Commissioners last week. They were shipped to other parties who were not prepared to receive them, so they were turned over to Mr. H. and placed in his artificial pond.

Cadillac Express: Business is rushing now at the Michigan Iron Works. Nine new machines are being built for the oval dish factory at Mancelona, and a large amount of repairing and general machine work is being ordered. An additional crew of machinists has been employed.

Richard Slopton, who has been farming in partnership with Wm. Knight, of Banks, the past two years, moves back on his farm in this county. One evening last week the young people of that part of Banks assembled at the residence of Wm. Knight to eat oysters before they moved away.

Meech's camp, in Jordan township, caught fire recently. Mrs. Colburn was alone at the time and a mile from any help. After having done all she could to extinguish it and failed, she carried out what she could and then started for help, but fortunately met Mr. Windling who succeeded in keeping the fire under control until help arrived.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

Teachers' Meeting.

The next regular monthly meeting of the Charlevoix teachers will be held at the high school room next Monday evening. Rev. W. G. Clark will speak on "The relations of Teachers and Parents." The teachers present will participate in the discussion. A question box will be opened and queries bearing on the welfare of the schools will be considered. It is hoped that the patrons will attend and take part in the deliberations. They should be better acquainted with the teachers at the school.

Examinations.

A country teacher asks, "What good can I get from regular examinations in my school?"

Some educators at the present time condemn the examination as a waste of time and labor, and as imposing an unnecessary strain on both teachers and pupils. They argue that a teacher in charge of a class, can tell as accurately the qualifications of individual pupils, and decide on the question of their promotion, as well from their daily work as from an examination.

This last point may be well taken, but the time has not yet arrived when the teacher can arbitrarily advance certain members of a class, and detain others, without such a formal test of their respective scholarships as can only be shown by an examination of the whole class upon the same work and in such a manner that the figures will show the comparative standings.

The teacher may be no better satisfied after the examination than before, but the pupil and the parent generally are, and with the figures as a standard, the judgment of the teacher is sustained. That they are often unfairly used by both teacher and pupil is doubtless true, but if serious questions arise on that score they can be settled to the satisfaction of all.

That they are a strain upon the pupils there is no doubt, but if properly managed, if good work is done in the intervals, and if they occur with proper frequency, and are not too long, this objection is, in a great measure, removed.

Aside from a test of scholarship, in fact they should seldom be used for that alone, they are of great benefit to the pupil. They afford frequent reviews of the subjects studied requiring him to recall the matter gone over before it is forgotten, and thus greatly aid to fix it in his mind; they require a considerable amount of practice in original expression of ideas, a most valuable end. Again the facts in the regular study, have been found in their natural order, and the pupil has been aided by this connection. In the examination he meets these questions independent of their natural relations, and is compelled to exercise his judgment in classifying them and selecting the principles which apply; and this is one of the most essential features of a true education. When the pupil enters active life his experience will be one continued examination, in the sense just indicated, and it is well for him to make some preparation for it under favorable conditions in school.

The aim of the teacher should ever be to make examinations an educating factor in his work, and if this end is kept in view and the examinations adjusted to it, they will grow in favor and value with the increase of intelligence among teachers.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

(25) A black slate pencil makes a white mark because the minute particles of slate broken up by rubbing, reflect and refract the rays of light.

(26) John Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence first.

(27) When Gen. Washington resigned Gen. Mifflin received his commission.

(28) The Roanoke Colony is known as the "Last Colony" of America.

(29) The Mississippi River is said to run up hill because the equatorial diameter of the earth is several miles greater than the polar diameter and as the river runs from the direction of the pole toward the equator, the increase in the earth's diameter is greater than the fall of the river, thus bringing its mouth farther from the center of the earth than its source.

The answer to the problem of the lead pencils in the issue of March 2, is as follows: He received 3 pencils at 4 cents each, 15 at ½ cent and 2 at ¼ cents. The question may be readily solved by Alligation, but fractional results will be obtained generally which is of course, contrary to the sense of the problem. A few trials will give an integral result. One solution is offered by using two algebraic equations of 3 unknown quantities each. Eliminating one of these three, two equations with two unknown quantities each which can be satisfied by assumed values, a species of Alligation.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated April 22nd 1882, executed by Joseph Moore and Jane Moore, his wife, to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, April 26th, 1882, in liber 7 of mortgages, on pages 1, 2, and 3, upon which the whole amount is due and unpaid to wit: [illegible] one hundred and fifty six and [illegible] one hundredths dollars [illegible] ... will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by a statutory sale of the premises described therein ... at the front door of the county building ... Boyne City, in the county of Charlevoix (that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix), at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, June 17th, 1887.

Dated March 22nd, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
H. F. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Corvyn, Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, William Corvyn, Guardian of the estate of said Richard Corvyn, by the Hon. Judge of Probate of Charlevoix county, on the 26th day of June, A. D. 1886, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the premises hereinafter described, in the county of Charlevoix, in said State, on Saturday, the 23d day of April, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, (subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of granting the order) the following described real estate, to-wit: All that certain piece or parcel of land lying and being situate in the Township of [illegible] Lake, in the County of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, known and described as follows, to-wit: The southeast quarter (¼) of the south-west quarter (¼) of section nineteen, (19) Township Thirty four, (34) North, of Range Five (5) West.

Dated, Feb. 26, 1887.
WILLIAM CORVYN, as Guardian of Richard Corvyn, Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 1884 executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife), to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 1884, in liber 7 of mortgages on page 382, upon which the whole amount is due and unpaid to wit: The sum of one hundred and twelve and thirteen one hundredths dollars ($112.13) for the recovery of which no suit or proceedings at law have been commenced, will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by a statutory sale of the premises described therein ... at the front door of the county building (so called) in the village of Boyne City, in the county of Charlevoix (that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix), at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, June 17th, 1887.

Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
H. F. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 11th day of December, A. D. [illegible] ... [illegible]

Dated March 7, 1887.
JAMES H. JOHNSON, Attorney for Mortgagee.

A GOOD SAW [illegible] cheap. Inquire [illegible]

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations ... [illegible] ... Boyne City, Friday, March [illegible], East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887 ... [illegible]

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by [illegible]

Pan-Zone-Rajia.

THE ARCH OF [illegible] FEMALE REMEDIES. The grandest and [illegible] remedy for all Female Trouble ... [illegible] ... Frankfort, Ind.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres. John Nicholls, Vice Pres. F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, C. D. Wood, A. Hull, A. Fox, F. A. Smith

CAPITAL .... $[illegible],000
SURPLUS .... [illegible],000

The liabilities of stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 2171 Sec. 43 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.

We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
National Park Bank - New York.
Commercial Nat. Bank - Chicago.
Nat. City Bank - Grand Rapids.
Detroit Nat. Bank - Detroit.

Bank of
Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking

Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors, and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites

People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will

Borrow investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking

Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,

Non taxable. Five per cent. Yearly Interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

WILL FRANCIS
FURNITURE
AND
JOBBING SHOP,
South Terrace,
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

All classes of furniture made to order, furniture repaired, a full stock of all kind promptly attended to, and satisfaction guaranteed.
Manufacturer of BED SPRINGS.
Give me call.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.

I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.

Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.

Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequaled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 2[illegible] souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc,
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters
& Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames
made to order.

All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building.
Correspondence solicited.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.

My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete.

If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 30 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention.

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will exchange work for farmers on short notice.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get reference.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

DO YOU
KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS?

DEALING!

It represents something you like and appreciate

It illustrates our method of doing business. It means square dealing. Don't you see this is what we preach, practice and guarantee.

HONEST VALUES,
LATEST STYLES,
FAIREST PRICES,

Put before you in opening our elegant new stock of Early Spring Styles in

BOOTS & SHOES

You'll find them the newest, the best, the cheapest. Prices, qualities and styles as you like them. Come and we will treat you right. Remember Square Dealing at

D. SHERWOOD & CO'S

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid
FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,

I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Zephyrs at greatly reduced prices for cash only.

Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $3.00 will receive a present of her choice of any untrimmed hat in the store.

Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. [illegible] Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

C[illegible] & GEIER, Attorneys at Law, [illegible] Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAI[illegible] & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DA[illegible] CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. [illegible] BERT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. GARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 110, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 263, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 106, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 156, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron Sec.
First Vice President—F. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Sudfeld.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Fairmeier.
Corresponding Committee—[illegible], W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Rev. W. Crouter, S. W. Miller, S. M. Sec, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Berdan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequaled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
R. A. Campbell, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central located. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE,
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Travelling Public. Good stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

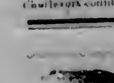
ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and work will be done at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St. Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address,
JOHN MUNROE, Jr., [illegible]

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.



N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Weed's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.
"Mackinac Short Line."
Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West read down		Stations	Going East read up
	5 45 p m	[illegible]	11 10 a m
7 [illegible]	6 [illegible]	St. Ignace	8 [illegible]	5 55 p m
10 [illegible]	[illegible]	Newberry	6 21	2 16
12 30	9 40	Seney	[illegible]
	10 42	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 31	Au Train	3 25	9 05
5 30	12 40	Marquette	2 15	7 15
	12 50	Marquette	2 [illegible]
	1 55	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 40
	5 30	Houghton	9 20
	6 [illegible]	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M. T. & [illegible] Boats, M. C. & G. R. [illegible] RAILROAD.
E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad
IN EFFECT SEPTEMBER 27, 1886.
(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No 6	No 8	No 4
Mackinaw City Lv	7 15 a m	9 30 p m
Petoskey	8 30	10 50
Boyne Falls	9 16	11 30
Mancelona	10 18	12 30
Walton Junc.	11 50	1 58	5 15 p m
Cadillac Ar	12 40	2 50	6 10
Cadillac Lv	12 45	3 03	6 30
Le Roy	1 24	6 42	7 07
Reed City Ar	1 55	7 20	7 40
Reed City Lv	2 15	7 35	8 00
Big Rapids	2 46	8 11	8 31
Stanwood	3 05	8 30	8 55
Howard City	3 33	9 03	9 26
D G H & M Cross	4 40	10 14	10 35
Grand Rapids Ar	4 55	10 30	10 50
Grand Rapids Lv	7 15	5 15	11 45
Plainwell	8 36	6 41	1 12
Kalamazoo Ar	9 05	7 10	1 40
Kalamazoo Lv	9 10	7 30	2 00
Sturgis	10 27	8 59	3 28
Ft Wayne Ar	12 40	11 20	6 00
Ft Wayne Lv	1 00	11 45
Richmond	4 20	[illegible]
Cincinnati Ar	7 30	7 25

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No 3	No 5	No 7
Cincinnati, leave	7 35 a m	7 20 p m
Richmond	10 30	[illegible]
Fort Wayne Ar	1 50	1 15
Fort Wayne Lv	2 10	1 35
Sturgis	4 54	[illegible]
Kalamazoo Ar	5 45	6 35
Kalamazoo Lv	5 50	7 30
Plainwell	6 16	7 48
Grand Rapids	7 40	8 50
D. G. H. & M cross	[illegible]	[illegible]
Howard City	12 52	6 18
Stanwood	1 23	[illegible]
Big Rapids	1 43	7 00
Reed City	2 15	7 43
Le Roy	3 08	8 30
Cadillac	3 43	9 00
Walton Junc.	4 45	[illegible]
Mancelona	6 15	11 30
Boyne Falls	7 13	[illegible]
Petoskey	[illegible]	[illegible]
Mackinaw City	[illegible]	[illegible]

A. B. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

THE GRASSY ROAD.

A Plea for Country Beauties Which Modern Fashions Tend to Obliterate.

I would say a few earnest words in intercession for a patient, venerable neighbor of ours and yours, who has few champions, who suffers in silence, who is fast becoming discouraged at the treatment of his thankless posterity, and who thus, year by year, is yielding up his hold among us. Country people everywhere among the hills, let me introduce to you the "old grassy road," the "mountain turnpike," the old "wood road," the "lane"—thus to bespeak the aid of the local vocabulary in fixing the identity I would bring to your mind—for there is an "old Marlborough road" in every town; if not, then more's the pity.

These ancient highways spread like a net over our New England hills, a net whose meshes are fast being lost among the growth which has sprung up around them. These old roads are all akin—essentially the same everywhere. Possessing in spirit a common origin, the history of one is repeated in all. It is the track of the pioneer who opened up the privileges we now enjoy; it is the scar of a hard-fought battle, the mark of courage, fortitude, and heroic self-sacrifice, the road our forefathers trod, and now in many instances the last eloquent visible link between the unworthy present and noble ancestral memories which should be kept green. I would turn the eyes of the errant into this forgotten path, and if possible keep it worn by reverent footsteps, and guarded against the impending invasion—that "improving" hand of "progress."

For it is manifest on every hand that the acquisition of prosperity among our country towns is fast crowding out our rural lanes and ancient roads, tearing up their venerable landmarks, obliterating their footprints, smoothing away their mounds, and ploughing up their ashes. This seems little less than sacrilege—the deplorable fruit of that rage for "rural improvement" which is now a terror in the air, following in the train of wealth and prosperity and a certain era in the history of every growing town. Not but that in its proper place, where it pertains and ministers to individual home comforts, it may be highly proper and desirable; but when it sweeps the country not unlike a scourge of locusts, and at length drives the would-be "country" pilgrim or native inhabitant to the limits of the township to find a bit of nature "unadorned," is it not time to cry halt?

Even the great metropolis finds suburbs—a verdant rim which may be reached by horse-cars.

In truth I wonder at the apathy with which these ancient weed-grown footprints are viewed by the average village mind. Even though blind to natural beauty, is there no other awakening touch to which such might respond amid surroundings where every visible feature is eloquent with that spirit which makes the whole world kin?

It has been my fortune recently to have become possessed of an ideal grassy road, or rather, I should say, more properly, of a companionable charge which it carries tenderly and inseparably in its bosom * * * This is my farm. It is 'way up there, the old road circling along its edge and winding away somewhere into the clouds. I have never yet found its end, and never shall. Ere this I have known a certain restlessness, but now I am content "to breathe my native air in my own ground." I shall live out my appointed days ere I exhaust this single path: what need then of guide-books to Europe—to see the world, the Continent, the Orient? I could sit within this realm and fill my portfolio with them all. Here is my cross and crescent. What is the roar of Niagara compared to this still small voice—the Alpen peaks, the Matterhorn? Indeed, my grassy road has carried me much higher than these.

The features of those old roads, as I have said, are alike in all. How naturally are the feet of the saunterer drawn thither! and even when he would take his leave to seek some distant hunting ground, or familiar wood or brook, how irresistibly is he induced to procrastinate!

This free, unrestrained meandering course of the grassy road possesses a continuous irresistible charm—the ever-recurring vista with the invariable tantalizing curve beyond. How does that elusive beckoning curve coquette with your fancy! What will be the prospect?—hill or valley, shimmering pond, rippling river, or billowing field, dusty wood, or hazy tremulous distance of blue hills? There is all the mystery of a to-morrow haunting that elusive curve. Yes, a witching presence hovers there; it is the spirit of the path, luring you on and on with ever-enticing promises, never disappointing you, never satisfying you. Now we shall catch her in yonder closed covert among the junipers; there is no escape; but lo! she has sped a hundred feet beyond, where in the guise of jutting fence beam beneath the beckoning aspens she points you still onward; and what is that! a well-known voice, now strangely modulated to my fancy, cries plainly now. If never before, "Come, more yet." Yes, "more yet," this is the very watchword of the grassy road. There is a segment of eternity in that beautiful curve beyond.

There are all sorts of lessons as we turn the leaves, loitering by the way. Sitting here under my favorite tree, as is my wont, like Hamlet at the feet of his mistress, eager and expectant, though to it admitted with spirit not precisely akin to his, I await my entertainment. The play begins immediately. A bell note from the country rings the curtain up; a tanager flits by as though to fire the foot-lights; and ere we are fairly seated a mysterious presence steals upon the stage and rivets our attention—a more ominous prologue than I could wish. Note the sombre garb, the stealthy approach. I recognize him, and his is an unwelcome shadow among these bushes. But the intruder has observed us, and is off again as fast as his black wings can take him. This is the bird whose flocks we observed scampering around the nose of the cow pasturing in the field near by. It is said that they seek the insects aroused into activity by her cropping, but I half suspect it is as much the sweetness of that scented breath that attracts them. William Hamilton Gibson, in Harper's Magazine for November.

The other evening at a Detroit reception the floral decorations were very elaborate and tasteful. "Isn't this exquisite?" asked a lady of her husband, indicating a flower which bears some resemblance to a daisy. "Look!" she added, "you could almost expect to hear it coo." "Well, yes," was the cautious reply. Then looking more critically: "Of course, I can see the bill, and—" "O, never mind that," responded the lady. "You'll see all the bills you care to between now and New-Year's."—Detroit Free Press.

Cottonwood Substitute for Poplar.

Among the varieties of lumber the supply of which is already becoming limited may be mentioned whitewood or tulip tree, known in the south as poplar. In some portions of the south cottonwood is taking the place of whitewood. In Chicago, the Timberman says, cottonwood lumber has made its appearance and large future contracts will be made if favorable transportation rates can be secured. This timber finds its true home south, central Illinois being its northern limit of successful growth. It is found in the river bottoms, although it attains considerable size even well up in Wisconsin and Iowa on the Mississippi bottoms. In the south it is a common tree of the low lands, single trees yielding from 2,000 to 5,000 feet of lumber each. Tennessee is rich in this timber and available to our markets, once the value of the lumber is fairly established. So far as can be learned its principal use has been for pump logs and other uses for conveying water. Whitewood heretofore has been used for this purpose. In price as compared with whitewood in the St. Louis market cottonwood lumber sells at $14 and whitewood at $18 per thousand feet.

An Old Virginia Tradition.

Once in the life of every man he hears the seven whistlers' call. They are strange birds, on whom mortal eyes have never rested, the whistle of whose wings sometimes falls upon the startled ear. And there is always a portent of something momentous for good or evil, even though they may not "dree their weird" for weeks after the seven whistlers' "call." Like all portents, their coming is mostly in the gloaming. For then, after all, is the "witching hour." There is in the quiet of a secluded country-side in the twilight hush that comes down from the mountain, and the twilight shadows which fall from the heavens, a mystical significance of another world, and of the flimsy structure of the veil intervening, which is to be found at no other hour of the twenty-four.

It is then, by some lonely wood pond, or some valley circled by the woods, that the hush is broken by a faint, far-beat, distinct note in the air, not on earth or in the sky overhead, taken up and repeated six times, and ever growing clearer and more distinct, and finally pealing away with a rush of wings and a sound of passing like that which in all the Mediterranean isles signaled the death of "the Great Pan"—when Christ was born.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

Meal Worms for Birds.

"There are quite a number of men in New York who make a living at catching meal worms and selling them to our trade," said the proprietor of a bird store to a reporter of the Mail and Express recently.

"You laugh, but it is a fact. There is a man who has furnished me with these worms for the last five years. Step this way and I'll show you how they come to us."

The reporter followed the bird dealer into a back room, where on the shelf stood a row of small tin boxes. The dealer took down a box and opened the lid. The can was half full of small crustaceous worms of yellow and brown color.

They measured about an eighth of an inch in thickness and an inch and a half in length.

"These boxes," said the proprietor, hold about a thousand worms and cost at this season of the year $1 per box. Most of the meal worms are caught in the big grain warehouses on the river front, in flour mills and old feed stores. A good man at the business can make $10 per week. They catch them with their hands or use a sieve. A great many worms are consumed in the course of a year. Mocking birds and nearly all the birds with soft bills are very partial to them. Besides they are healthy. It is said that meal worms are good eating and taste like shrimp, but I never tried them."—New York Mail.

Geological Conditions of North America.

The geological history of North America, like that of Europe, indicates that from a very remote period there have been changes of climate; ancient periods of cold as well as of warmth. It is urged that these are due not so much to variations in the supply of heat from the sun, or to changes, secular or periodic, in the relative position of the earth as to geographical alterations on its surface. Paleontological and biological evidence has next to be considered. This also, on the whole, is favorable to the view already expressed. Recent investigations tend to show that to the majority of marine animals the greater depths of the sea are as impassable as the land itself. Where many species of invertebrata are common to the opposite shores of a great ocean, it may be inferred that these have made their way along coast-lines past or present. Now, of the existing mollusks of Europe and Canada 54 per cent of the shallow water forms and about 85 per cent of the deeper sea forms are common, and the same holds of other marine invertebrates. This fact suggests that comparatively shallow water, and sometimes even land, must formerly have divided the Atlantic from the Arctic basin. Their separation is no modern feature, for from the Cambrian age onward we find "on the two sides of the ocean many species of invertebrate animals which were either identical or so closely allied as to be possibly 'varietal' forms. In like manner the early plants of the upper silurian, Devonian, and carboniferous present many identical species; but this identity becomes less marked in the vegetation of the more modern times." This might be held to indicate that the European and North American continents had become more and more widely separated; but it is pointed out that the earlier flora consisted mainly of cryptogamous plants, the spores of which in modern times have proved capable of transmission for great distances. Some, indeed, were actually fitted for flotation. Yet another argument is advanced from the biological side: "While many plants and marine invertebrates are common to the two sides of the Atlantic, it is different with land animals, and especially vertebrates. I do not know that any fossil insects, or land snails, or millipedes of Europe and America are specifically identical, and of the numerous species of batrachians of the carboniferous and reptiles of the mesozoic all seem to be distinct on the two sides. The same appears to be the case with the tertiary mammals, until, in the latter stages of that great period, we find such genera as the horse, the camel, and the elephant appearing on the two sides of the Atlantic; but even then the species seem different, except in the case of a few northern forms."—Sir W. Dawson Before the British Association.

Will-Making.

Considering that the will of the late Samuel J. Tilden is to be contested on the ground that it is not properly drawn, and considering, moreover, that while living Mr. Tilden had the reputation of being a remarkably shrewd and sagacious lawyer, it ought to be apparent to the average man in the community who desires to obtain posthumous fame as a public benefactor that the proper way to secure this end is to [illegible] his money while living to the public charities or benefactions he may select, and not leave his estate a prey to the avariciousness of his legal heirs. It is true that there is a certain degree of risk attending the method of disposing of one's property during one's life. If, for example, a wealthy individual in this country saw fit to give a half or three-quarters of his fortune to found some public institution, the chances are that his prospective heirs would have him shut up in an insane asylum, or have the management of his property taken out of his hands in consequence of his manifest incapacity. Perhaps the safest way is to leave a will donating small amounts of property to certain rich and influential corporations, with the idea that, if an attempt is made to break the testament, these corporations will do all they can to uphold the integrity of the will, and thus act as shields and defenders to the other and weaker inheritors.—Boston Herald.

Cat's Eyes and Moonstones.

"Here is something for the lover of fine jewels," said Mr. Ed Smith, himself a connoisseur in gems, and he opened a small velvet box about the size of a thimble, and displayed something that shone like moonlight.

"That's what it is, condensed moonlight," said Mr. Smith. "There is the opaline glory without the color and the shifting light. It is the cold, pale brilliancy of moonshine, and has never before been worked. It is the Ceylon moonstone, or moonlight quartz."

The stone was set in a lady's brooch, of small oval size. The faces of two children were carved in the moonstone, which was surrounded by a circle of diamonds.

"We prize it very highly, as it is the coming gem," continued Mr. Smith. "It cannot be imitated any more than the moonlight can. The water has petrified with the rare brilliancy of a tropical moon held in its depths. It took centuries to solidify it, but only a moment to imprison that glory of whiteness. It gives the arbitrary belle of the present a new fashion. It is much more pellucid than opal, which is water petrified with multitudes of infinitesimal fish in it, which was developed by microscopical power. There are no fish in the moonstone. The shifting colors of the opal are caused by the expansion of the fish under heat."

"And not by any adverse fate?"

"Certainly not. The superstition set forth by Sir Walter Scott in 'Anne of Geierstein' is very charming but does not coincide with facts. The moonstone and the cat's-eye will be the leading styles in gems for gentlemen's wear this season. And the ladies will wear the moonstone as a substitute for their favorite pearls, which it surpasses in beauty."—Detroit Free Press.

Why Men Become Bald.

"Did you ever notice what classes of men are most commonly bald?" asked an expert hair-dresser of a New York Mail and Express reporter the other day. "That throws a good deal of light on the causes of baldness. People give all kinds of explanations for it—dissipation, cutting the hair too short, letting it grow too long, smoking, drinking strong coffee, worry, wearing high hats, wearing low hats, wearing your hat indoors, not wearing it outdoors, late hours, and a hundred other things. Now you will notice that there are no classes of men more frequently bald than retail salesmen, bookkeepers, and office clerks in certain lines of business. Why should baldness affect them more than others? Because they habitually stand or sit nearly every evening under gas-lights. Bookkeepers always have a strong light right over their heads or just in front of them. So do clerks who have to work at night. Retail salesmen sell goods at night directly under two powerful burners, and most of the time their heads are not more than two or three feet from the flame. The artificial heat dries out the hair, makes it brittle and unhealthy, and finally kills it at the root. If you will pass your hand through your hair after you have been standing under a gas-light for a few moments you will see at once how it is. Although you may not have noticed the heat on your head, your hair, if you've got any, will be hot to the roots. You'll be surprised to observe, too, at what a distance from the light the hair will absorb the heat. Now there is nothing so bad for the hair as getting it dry. That is why the use of water on it is so injurious because it evaporates so readily and takes with it the natural oil of the hair. Your hair should be moist all the time and with the oil that is secreted by the little cells at the roots. When the oil is continually and rapidly dried out, as it is when the head is kept heated by gas-light, the cell dries up and the hair falls out. People who sit under the gas-light should wear some kind of a cool, non-conducting headgear to protect themselves. I have an idea, too, that after the electric light has been in universal use for a generation or two baldness will be as scarce as it was before gas-lights and night work got common together."

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartonia, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." Free Trial Bottles at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life, strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. ... [illegible] ... $1.00 each. [illegible]
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, [illegible]
3. Back to the Old Home. [illegible]
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, [illegible]
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, [illegible]
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, [illegible]
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. [illegible]
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, [illegible]
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, [illegible]
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, [illegible]
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, [illegible]
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, [illegible]
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, [illegible]
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, [illegible]
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. [illegible]
20. Manual of Etiquette for ladies and gentlemen, [illegible]
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, [illegible]
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, [illegible]
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, [illegible]
24. 57 Popular Ballads. [illegible]
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, [illegible]
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," [illegible]
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, [illegible]
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, [illegible]
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, [illegible]
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, [illegible]
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," [illegible]
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, [illegible]
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, [illegible]
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, [illegible]
39. Robinson Crusoe. [illegible]
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. [illegible]
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, [illegible]
42. Gems of the Poets, [illegible]
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. [illegible]
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

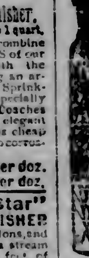
GRENADES!
Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
PRICES.
Pints, - Per Doz., $10.00.
Quarts, - " " 15.00.

"STAR"
Tubular Fire Extinguisher.
Glass Tube, 30x2½ in. Holds 1 quart.



In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant in ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No corrosion possible.
Plain, $12.00 per doz.
Ornamt'd, 15.00 per doz.

The "Star"
EXTINGUISHER
Holds 5 gallons, and will force a stream through 6 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone.
Price, $60.00 Each.

"STAR" CHEMICAL.

Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt 450 lbs.
PRICE.
$200.00 EACH.

Four years of practical use have demonstrated these to be the only reliable and thoroughly efficient Hand Fire appliances made. We use the same chemical liquid in all, and guarantee fully. Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials.
The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

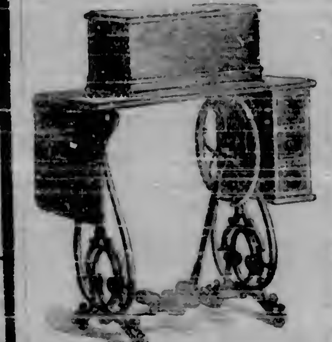
SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
[illegible]
If your Agent [illegible]
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

NEW Double Action "TRAHERN" FORCE PUMP.
Simplest, Cheapest, Most Durable, Works Easy!
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.



AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP

[illegible testimonial] REV. ROBT. COPE.
[illegible testimonial] REV. S. H. KIMMELL.

Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.
W. JOHNSTON & CO.,
DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
[illegible]
J. L. PRICE.

M. LITNEY. JOS STEIMEL.
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS
Dealers in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer
Bridge Street [illegible] South of Bridge [illegible]

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, Publishers

A [illegible] has passed the Rhode Island House providing for a Constitutional Convention every ten years, beginning in April, 1889.

THE OLDEST member of the Inter-State Commission is Judge Cooley, of Michigan, who is 63, and the youngest is Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont, who is 46.

THE DEMOCRATS of Chicago have nominated Carter H. Harrison for mayor, John H. McAvoy for treasurer, C. F. Allen for attorney, and Henry Stuckert for clerk.

[illegible], one of the faculty of the Law Department of Michigan University, has accepted the senior professorship of law at Cornell University, with a salary of $3,500 per annum.

A NEW food for cattle recently patented by a German consists of wood sawdust mixed with certain chemicals and "other matter," the composition forming a "very nourishing and wholesome" food for pigs, cattle, and horses.

M PHILIPPOTEAUX, the French painter, has been engaged for six years to paint huge pictures for cycloramic exhibition in the chief cities of Europe. The first will represent Niagara Falls, and will be shown in London next fall.

THE TRADE Convention between Cuba and Porto Rico on one hand and the United States on the other, which was to have terminated in April, has been prolonged to November, in order to give time for the negotiation of a treaty.

S. W. ADKINS, of Minneapolis, claims a large amount of property in the heart of Duluth, which, he claims, was deeded to his father by Waconta, an Indian chief, who owned the site of Duluth, and who died in 1851. The property is worth $10,000,000.

SENATOR LELAND STANFORD, of California, says of his projected university that the buildings will be grouped in a quadrangle, will be constructed of California sandstone, and will be Moorish in design. Work upon seven of the buildings will be begun this summer.

A deaf and dumb printing-office has been opened at Berlin for the purpose of instructing intelligent boys in the art preservative. It has taken the form of a private institution, where the boys will also be cared for in case of sickness and their general education looked after.

WILLIAM J. HAYNES, of St. Louis, who will be 100 years old if he lives until December next, was on the staff of Gen. Jackson at the battle of New Orleans, was engineer of the first steamboat that arrived at St. Louis from the south, and ran the first locomotive that ever left St. Louis for the west.

THE CANADIAN government vainly advertised for proposals for ocean mail service to Great Britain. The contract with the Allan Line at an annual subsidy of $126,000, is about to expire. The Pacific Railway company will undertake the service if its steamers be permitted to call at Portland and Boston for homeward cargoes.

EDWARD C. SCRUGGS, of Nashville, Tenn., has made in the last four months $60,000 by real-estate investments in his neighborhood. Mr. Scruggs is totally blind from the effects of a gunshot wound received about fifteen years ago. His constant companion is a clever negro boy, who gives him occasional pointers about land, people, etc.

THERE is not an unmarried woman in Turkey who can both read and write the Turkish language, and there are but few men who are able to do so. It requires six years of hard study to acquire these accomplishments. When you hear of a Turk with the title bey prefixed to his name you may know that he is one of the few educated men in that country, as the title is only conferred upon those who can both read and write.

THE SECRETARY of the Nebraska Board of Agriculture makes a very favorable report of the financial condition of the farmers of that State. He estimates that the value of rural indebtedness has been reduced one-half in ten years. The rate of interest is 6 per cent., and by contract may be as high as 10. The proportion of farms mortgaged is quite small. Farmers have some town property and personal property interests, both rural and urban.

THE ACT to amend the act to prohibit the importation and immigration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor in the United States went into effect on the 23d inst. The acting Secretary of the Treasury is preparing the regulations essential to its proper enforcement. It is said at the department that the delay is caused by the difficulty experienced in reconciling seemingly inconsistent provisions contained in the act.

INTELLIGENT MEXICANS expect that under the new and reduced tariff the foreign trade of their country will increase largely. Indeed, they expect that importations will increase so largely that the revenue derived from them will be larger than it now is. The foreign trade of the country has not hitherto been very extensive. In 1884 the total value of imports and exports was about $92,000,000, and about $22,000,000 of this trade, or not quite one-fourth of the whole, was with the United States. Our trade with Mexico has been growing of late. In 1880 we sold $7,800,000 worth of goods to the Mexicans, and bought from them $7,200,000 worth. In 1883 our sales to them had increased to $16,500,000 and our purchases from them to $8,000,000. In 1884 our sales to them decreased about $3,500,000, but it is understood that this was in anticipation of the early ratification of the reciprocity treaty. Under the new tariff, which goes much further than the treaty on the Mexican side, we may expect to see this trade grow much more [illegible]

CONDENSED NEWS.

Latest Intelligence From all Parts of the World.

FIRE RECORD.

A flour mill at Omro, Wis., was burned Thursday morning. Loss $15,000.

The entire business portion of Dunbar, Neb., was destroyed by fire Thursday. Loss $35,000; insurance light.

A fire at Gainesville, Texas, destroyed property to the amount of about $25,000.

A frame boarding house at the Colby Mine, near Bessemer, Mich., was destroyed by fire early Wednesday morning, twelve men perishing in the flames. Of nine others, who escaped by jumping from windows, a half dozen were seriously injured.

The Warsaw Salt Works, at Warsaw, N. Y., were burned. Loss, $80,000 to $100,000.

Fifty cottages at Chautauqua, N. Y., were destroyed by fire Sunday night.

The Grand Central Theatre and two adjoining buildings, at Troy, N. Y., were burned Sunday night. Two men who slept in the theatre are supposed to have perished.

The Morrison Hotel, at Buffalo, N. Y., was destroyed by fire Saturday night. The guests all escaped.

CASUALTIES.

Passenger trains on the Pan-handle Road collided Thursday night in a cut near Hagenbuch Station, Ohio. No passengers were injured. Engineer Butterworth was slightly wounded.

Jacob Bread died, Wednesday night, at his home in Newark, O., from the results of a scalding in the face from a pan of boiling water thrown by his wife. She is now a raving maniac.

William Elder, aged 80 years, was run over and killed by a passenger train on the Rock Island R. R., near Peoria, Ill., on Thursday.

As the new iron bridge over the Big Otter River, near Liberty, Va., on the Norfolk and Western Railroad, was being completed Thursday by a large corps of workmen, a freight train in crossing broke through and killed nine workmen.

Albert Taylor Cowie, paymaster's clerk; J. Oates, apothecary; H. H. Hesse, armorer; and William Foster, coxswain, of the United States training ship Saratoga, were drowned on the 24th ult. at San Fernando by the swamping of a small boat.

There have been more earthquake shocks at Summerville, S. C.

A mixed train on the Louisville and Evansville R. R. plunged through a trestle near the Wabash river, demolishing several cars and killing the brakeman, John Samuels.

John Duryea, at the County Hospital in Chicago, while taking an alcohol bath, upset the alcohol and died from injuries resulting.

The losses on the cattle ranges of Manitoba, are stated to be from 36 to 50 per cent. from severe cold weather.

John Relzers died, on Thursday, from the effects of falling through a skylight in Chicago.

The Whitaker Quaker Church at Buffalo, Kas., was blown to atoms by a giant-powder explosion Saturday night. Frank Van Meter was arrested for the deed.

John Berens, a roofer in Chicago, fell from the roof of a building, fifty feet to the floor, and was killed Tuesday.

D. A. Brown was crushed between cars and killed, at Tiffin, Ohio, on Tuesday.

E. C. Anthony's powder mill, near Negaunee, Mich., blew up Monday afternoon. L. H. Stanley and his son Albert were killed.

The flood at Bismarck is the worst ever known there. The ice-gorge at Sibley Island is six miles long and thirty feet high. The current in the river channel flows at the rate of ten miles an hour. Northern Pacific trains to the westward are blocked, and stages can not reach Fort Yates.

Great floods are reported from the breaking of gorges in the Missouri River in Dakota. Bismarck and Mandan were under water and many houses have been swept away.

CRIMES AND CRIMINALS.

A New York baker named Topher, who was out of work and crazy with drink, tried to kill his wife with an ax Wednesday and then cut his own throat. He will die.

The Pennsylvania Board of Pardons Wednesday refused a rehearing in the case of Milton Weston.

The sentence to death of janitor Titus, at Trenton, N. J., has been commuted to imprisonment for life.

Chas. B. Trescott, lately general manager of the Silk Mills Co., at Springfield, Mass., has been arrested for embezzlement.

A jury in ex-Ald. Cleary's case has been obtained, and the taking of testimony has begun in New York City.

Wednesday afternoon, at Detroit, the dead bodies of Charles Govin, a merchant tailor, and his wife were found in their home. It is suspected to be a case of murder and suicide with poison.

A stock buyer named Poole, of Forreston, Ill., last week bought from the farmers of that vicinity a lot of stock, said to be worth $4,000, sold the same in Chicago, took the proceeds, and left for Australia.

George S. Bailey, the Labor Representative from East St. Louis in the Illinois Legislature, was shot at by an unknown person at Springfield Tuesday night. The ball penetrated two coats, a pamphlet, a leather-covered book of rules, and was finally stopped by the cover of a thick memorandum book.

Willie Sell, tried, convicted, and sentenced in Missouri, to be hanged on charge of murdering his father, mother, brother, and sister nearly a year ago, has at last confessed to the crime, giving all the horrid particulars. He is only 16 years of age.

Jacob Kuebler, under arrest in Chicago, on suspicion of "putting out of the way" F. Wirth, has confessed that Wirth was murdered and thrown into the river.

The trial of Schwartz and Watt for the murder of Express Messenger Nicholl was begun Monday at Morris, Ill.

Quite a riot occurred in Detroit, Mich., Sunday between the Poles in a quarrel about St. Albertus Polish Catholic Church. Half a dozen policemen were badly hurt, but none fatally.

Victoria Loftus' troupe of British Blondes were pretty roughly handled at Milwaukee, Sunday night, because of dissatisfaction with their performance.

The keepers of a Cincinnati eating-house were tried Friday for refusing to permit a colored attorney to dine in their place. The jury disagreed.

Daniel Allen, who poisoned Henry Wright, the husband of his paramour, was [illegible]

Horace Greeley Douglass, postmaster at Plainfield, Ind., has fled, after gutting the office and withdrawing from the village bank all the money and stamps on deposit.

INDUSTRIAL.

At a meeting of wrought iron pipe manufacturers Wednesday, at Pittsburgh, Pa., last year's prices were reaffirmed.

The Mt. Vernon Bridge Company, of Mt. Vernon, Ohio, has been awarded the contract for the new aqueduct bridge across the Potomac.

The Coke Syndicate and Coke Producers Association, at Pittsburgh, on Tuesday, agreed to continue the pool for three years.

The brick-makers at the Star Fire-brick Works, at Pittsburgh, Pa., have been granted an advance in wages ranging from 15 to 25 per cent.

The Eau Claire (Wis.) Bakery Company, a Knights of Labor co-operative association, made an assignment Monday.

The negro miners at Grape Creek, Ill., who were imported to fill the places of striking miners, after getting provisions on a month's credit, struck for 3 cents more per bushel.

The Shenango and Alleghany coal miners, who struck the first of the year, have decided to go back to work.

WASHINGTON.

One Bragdon, alias St. Clair, is to be tried by the government for fleecing pension claimants in Kansas.

The Secretary of the Interior declines to concur in Commissioner Sparks's recommendation that the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad be enjoined from cutting timber on lands within its indemnity in the State of Wisconsin.

Secretary Manning's successor will not be appointed before April 1.

Another call for $10,000,000 three per cent. bonds has been issued.

The President has appointed the following interstate commissioners: Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan, for the term of six years; William R. Morrison, of Illinois, for the term of five years; Augustus Schoonmaker, of New York, for the term four years; Aldace F. Walker, of Vermont, for the term of three years; Walter L. Bragg, of Alabama, for the term of two years.

The President appointed Whitfield Walker Collector of Internal Revenue for the District of Florida.

Instructions have been issued to the assistant treasurers at New York, Philadelphia, and Boston to receive deposits for one and two dollar silver certificates, and to resume the issue of those notes.

A physician in Washington declares that President Cleveland is in danger from lack of exercise, and is steadily gaining in weight.

The Treasury Department has taken adverse action on the application of the officers of the "Ee Wong Joss House" of San Francisco, a society established for alleged religious purposes, for the free entry of a figure of a dragon representing the God or Joss, Ho Wong.

St. Louis has been designated by the acting Secretary of the Treasury as a central reserve city for National Banks, under the act passed by the last session of Congress.

POLITICAL.

Carter Harrison, the present Mayor of Chicago, was re-nominated on Wednesday by the Democratic convention in that city. This makes the fifth time he has been a candidate for this position.

The Republicans of Chicago nominated John A. Roche for Mayor, C. H. Plautz for Treasurer, D. W. Nickerson for Clerk, and Hempstead Washburne for Attorney.

Judge John B. Shipman, of Coldwater, Mich., has been nominated by the Fusionists for Circuit Judge.

Senator Edmunds has expressed the opinion that President Cleveland will be the nominee of the Democratic party in 1888.

Congressman William Springer and Assistant Postmaster General Stevenson will attend the dinner of the Boston Bay State Club. Mr. Springer is down for a speech. The club is composed of Democrats.

GENERAL.

A decree has been ordered for the sale of the New York, Rutland & Montreal Railway to pay off $350,000 worth of certificates issued by Receiver Van Valkenburg.

The Edmiston and Waddell Company, of Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturers of agricultural implements, failed Thursday, with liabilities of $200,000, and no assets to speak of.

Eliza Weathersby, wife of Nat Goodwin, the comedian, died at New York Thursday night from the effects of a surgical operation for the removal of a tumor.

Thomas B. Burkirk, of Indiana, has been appointed agent of the internal revenue service.

The National Wagon Makers' Association was in session in Chicago, on Wednesday.

Senator Sherman, at Birmingham, Ala., was not allowed to receive a delegation of colored men in his room at the hotel where he stopped.

About one thousand Germans in Chicago, cabled a congratulatory message to the Emperor William, on Tuesday night.

The Story, will case which has excited so much attention for a few years in Chicago, has been decided by the Supreme Court of the State, reversing the judgment of the lower court.

John A. Logan, Jr., and Miss Edith Andrews were married Tuesday, at Youngstown, Ohio, and soon afterward left for Florida. The bride's father gave the couple a check for $50,000, and her uncle presented government bonds of the same value.

The citizens of Bloomington, Ill., Monday night, without regard to politics, organized a law and order league. The attendance at the meeting was large and enthusiastic. An executive council of thirty-six from each ward was appointed.

On the 272d ballot at Palestine, Texas, Monday night, William H. Martin was nominated by the Democratic Convention to succeed Senator Reagan in Congress.

Lieut. Gen. Sheridan passed through Chicago on his way West, on a tour of inspection.

Caruthers has signed to pitch for the St. Louis Browns at a salary of $3,000.

The reporters of all the morning papers, in New York, are represented among the members of the Knights of Labor.

The wrought iron pipe manufacturers were in session at Pittsburg, on Wednesday.

The Crosby high license bill, applying only to New York City and Brooklyn, passed the New York Assembly Wednesday [illegible] grades of licenses, ranging in price from $100 to $1,000.

The German consulate, at New York, flew a new Imperial flag on Tuesday, in honor of Emperor William's birthday.

A foot of snow fell throughout the region of Saratoga, N. Y., on Tuesday.

Mrs. Kretchmer, of Bridgeport, Conn., recently gave birth to a child which has an elephant's head and a short trunk. She visited a menagerie last winter, and was frightened by the elephants.

Mr. Lawrence Barrett, the actor, has instructed his counsel, Colonel Ingersoll, to bring suit for $50,000 damages for malicious prosecution against the President of the American Exchange, its directors, and general manager.

The rubber-workers of New Brunswick and Milltown, N. J., threaten to abandon the Knights of Labor if they are not granted a charter for a National trade council.

Mr. Ira Shafer, counsel for the "boodler" Alderman McCleary, in New York, declared publicly, on Monday, that he would kill Mr. Pulitzer, editor of the World, on sight.

The fifteen Pinkerton men who have been on duty for the last month at the Elizabethport coal docks, at New York, were withdrawn Monday. All the strikers reported for work, and, with but few exceptions, were given employment.

There was a heavy frost in Mississippi as far south as Canton on Wednesday night.

Judge S. E. Sinclair, well known as a prominent politician and lawyer, died at his home in Fort Wayne, Ind.

Sixty-five hundred bales of cotton were sold in one lot, at Galveston, Texas, Wednesday.

FOREIGN.

M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador, had an audience with the Sultan, at which he expressed dissatisfaction with the action of the Ottoman ministry respecting the Bulgarian troubles. M. Nelidoff has sent a note to the porte pressing Turkey for payment of arrears in the war indemnity due Russia and reproaching the porte for spending money due Russia on the Turkish army and navy.

The Italian bark Luciano, which sailed from Cardenas for Philadelphia, has been given up as lost.

Seventy miners were killed by an explosion, Tuesday, in the Bulli colliery at Sydney, New South Wales.

Three shocks of earthquake were felt, Tuesday, at Travnik, Bosnia.

Advices from Suakin say that the British war ship Albacore has captured two slavers with a cargo of sixty slaves each going to Keddah.

The queen laid the foundation stone of the Victoria Assize court at Birmingham, Eng., Wednesday, and was enthusiastically received.

In the Spanish chamber of deputies, Senor Moret, minister of foreign affairs, announced that an agreement had been reached between the government and the United States under which the existing commercial modus vivendi will be prolonged to the end of July.

The Journal de St. Petersburg warmly and fully unites in Germany's congratulations to her Emperor. The Moscow Gazette extols, Emperor William's energy and his efforts to maintain peace and friendship between Germany and Russia. The Gazette also praises Prince Bismarck for his work in seconding the Emperor's efforts. The Novoe Vremya and the Novosti say they recognize the pacific significance of to-day's celebration in Germany.

Tuesday, the 90th birthday of the Emperor William, was celebrated in Berlin in a gorgeous manner. Great numbers of titled people, princes and representatives of crowned heads were present, and there was great rejoicing.

The removal of Col. Sassoulitch from the command of the Russian Grenadiers to a regiment on the Siberian frontier, has caused a sensation in the Russian capital.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade, says that anxiety prevails among agriculturists owing to the discovery of large numbers of the pupæ of the Hessian fly in the screenings of wheat from the thrashing machines throughout the provinces.

In the British House of Commons on Monday, the Rt. Hon. W. H. Smith said that the government would move that the new Irish crimes bill have precedence over all orders of the day.

Telegrams congratulating Emperor William on his birthday anniversary were received from all the German colonies. All the students of the universities of Munich, Leipsic, and Heidelberg went to Berlin to take part in the celebration.

It is reported that the Czar received a letter dated March 1 from the executive of the nihilist committee, informing him that at a sitting of the committee of Feb. 22 he was condemned to death, and that fifty members were appointed to execute the sentence.

It is reported a majority of the Bulgarian delegates are resolved to re-elect Alexander king of Bulgaria just as soon as the regents deem it opportune.

Mr. John Kynaston Cross, formerly member of Parliament hanged himself Saturday at Bolton. He had been ill and depressed since his defeat at the last election.

THE MARKETS.

CHICAGO.

BEEVES—Choice to Prime	$ 5.00	@	5.35
Good Shipping	4.60	@	5.15
Common	3.35	@	4.65
HOGS—Shipping Grades	5.67	@	5.85
FLOUR—Extra Spring	4.25	@	4.60
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	75½	@	75¾
CORN—No. 2	34½	@	36⅜
OATS—No. 2	24	@	25
POTATOES—New, per bu	44	@	52
BUTTER—Choice Cream'y	29	@	31
Fine Dairy	24	@	25
CHEESE—Full Cream Chd	12	@	12¼
Full Cream, new	12	@	13
EGGS—Fresh	13	@	14
PORK—Mess	20.65	@	26.00

NEW YORK.

BEEVES	$ 4.50	@	5.60
HOGS	4.00	@	6.30
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	90	@	91
CORN—No. 2	47	@	48
OATS White	38	@	42
PORK—New Mess	15.50	@	16.50

ST. LOUIS.

WHEAT—No. 2 Red	$ 79½	@	79¾
CORN—Mixed	34½	@	35¾
OATS—Mixed	27½	@	28
PORK—New Mess	17.50	@	18.00

CINCINNATI.

WHEAT—No. 2 Red	$ 81½	@	82
CORN—No. 2	39	@	39¼
OATS—No. 2	29½	@	30
PORK—Mess	17.00	@	17.50
HOGS	4.75	@	5.30

DETROIT.

WHEAT—No. 1 White			81½
Michigan Red			82
CORN			39
OATS—No. 2 White			32

MICHIGAN.

Condensed Reports of the Latest News from All Parts of the State.

Latest From Lansing.

SENATE.

In the Senate a bill was passed to revise the charter of the village of Williamston. The Judiciary Committee made an adverse report upon the bill to amend the act relating to revision and consolidation of the laws relative to the organization of insane asylums. The committee appointed to investigate the charges against Senator Post, which appeared in the St. Louis (Mich.) Post, the editor of which is an employe of the Senate, made a report exonerating the Senator, but declared the editor deserving of censure for not correcting the error when his attention was called to it.

Bills were passed to amend the act providing for the adjustment of rights and liabilities in the division of the territory of cities and towns; to facilitate the commencement of suits in justice courts; to authorize the transcript of a judgment from the docket of one Justice of the Peace to that of another; to amend act relative to executions and judgments; to provide for the publication of the proceedings of the Michigan Dairymen's Association; to define the qualifications of Deputy Sheriffs to be hereafter appointed in the State; to amend the act relative to the disposition of real and personal estate by will; to amend the act relative to criminal proceedings in Criminal Courts; to provide wives with property or maintenance from their husband's estate when neglected or deserted by them; to amend the act relative to exemption from military duty.

Bills passed: To amend the act relative to public instruction in primary schools; to make all debts for labor preferred claims against insolvent debtors, to amend the law relative to an advisory board of pardons; to provide for the conveyance of railroad property and franchises in certain cases (a substitute for the House bill). The Senate then went into committee of the whole, and the Committee on Judiciary reported adversely a bill to provide for taking depositions of witnesses in probate courts.

The Senate met, and after a short session, in which no business of importance was transacted, adjourned till Monday afternoon.

The Senate had a bare quorum on being called to order and, after hearing some reports of committees and some messages, adjourned.

Bills were passed to provide for the division of Ward Five, in Bay City; House bills to provide for the appointment of the State live stock veterinarian, and for the suppression of contagious and infectious disease among live stock; to regulate the time of holding the annual meeting for election of trustees in Union School No. 1, Jackson. Senators Deyo and Seymour were appointed on the part of the Senate members of the joint committee on resolutions upon the death of the late Adjutant General Robertson.

HOUSE.

The House spent most of its time in committee of the whole. The most important bill discussed was one providing for the conviction and punishment of convicts serving sentences in the State penal institutions who shall commit crimes punishable with imprisonment while there. It provides that upon conviction the court may in its discretion have the sentence commence at once or at the expiration of the sentence the convict is then serving. This brought out a discussion nearly as warm as that upon capital punishment. A bill passed to repeal the act organizing the township of Gustin. The House Committee on Railroads reported adversely on the bill to regulate the use and rental of telephones. Also a bill to prescribe the duties and prohibiting discrimination between parties using telephones.

Bills were passed to designate the place of holding elections in Midland, Midland county; to amend the law relative to the incorporation of companies for mining and smelting; to authorize the incorporation of park and summer resort associations; to authorize the incorporation of engineering societies. In honor of the day a resolution passed expressing sympathy with home rule for Ireland and indorsing the course of Gladstone and Parnell. The House then went into committee of the whole with the Hon. Patrick Stuart, of Wayne, in the chair and the afternoon was spent in celebrating the anniversary in a suitable manner. At a joint session of the House and Senate Judiciary Committee an agreement was reached to report a bill fixing the age of consent (or rather the age of protection) for females at 15 years.

The House concurred in an amendment to the so-called Pinkerton bill; to facilitate the disposal of State part paid swamp, school, and other lands; to prevent the carrying of concealed weapons, and providing punishment for the same; to regulate the sale of personal chattels; to amend the act for locating, erecting, organizing, and managing an asylum for insane criminals; to amend the act relative to the powers and duties of boards of supervisors; to amend the act relative to transportation of Texas cattle through the State; to amend the act providing for the treatment of dependent children at the university hospital; to prevent males above the age of 15 years taking indecent liberties with the opposite sex under 15 years, and the concurrent resolution for the appointment of a special committee to investigate the business of fire and marine insurance companies.

After a very short session, in which nothing of importance was done, the House adjourned till Monday evening.

The House was called to order at 2 p. m. and spent nearly the entire session in committee of the whole. The most important bills under discussion was one for the protection of game, and for the prevention and correction of errors in elections. Mr. Bates offered a concurrent resolution that, in tribute to the memory of the late Adjutant General Robertson, the House and Senate meet in joint session and that appropriate services be held. Messrs. Bates, Thomas, Williams, and Manly were appointed by Speaker Markey a committee on resolutions on the part of the House. A resolution was adopted to [illegible] period carries over the spring election.

Bills were passed to authorize the licensing of corporations for improving the science, art, and practice of pharmacy; to prohibit appeals from orders of Probate Courts; removing executive administrators, etc., in certain cases; relative to the protection of game; for the incorporation of companies for the purpose of buying and selling brood animals; to provide for the punishment of crimes committed by convicts while serving sentence; the bill amending the laws relative to the support of minors whose fathers are living; to amend the act relative to the incorporation of mutual fire insurance companies; the bill relative to the duties of commissioners on claims against the estate of deceased persons and providing for their compensation; to amend the act relative to public instruction in primary schools; to change the name of the Buck family to that of Clark; to amend the act relative to duplicate tax rolls in villages.

STATE ITEMS.

—A creamery is to be started at St. John's.

—The Michigan lumber camps are breaking up.

—There are 1,569 students in the State University.

—A G. A. R. Post has been organized in Sandusky.

—Sand Lake shipped sixty car loads of potatoes last week.

—A St. George's society is being organized at Manceloua.

—North Branch has put up $800 for State telephone connections.

—A Rogers City party is building a large shingle mill near that city.

—Mecosta veterans are talking of forming another G. A. R. Post.

—The Knights of Labor at the Sault have placed a full village ticket in the field.

—A Young Women's Christian Association was organized at Plainwell, Wednesday.

—The business men of Bronson are to organize a stock company to manufacture brooms.

—The Ingham County Pioneer Society will prepare a history of the settlement of the county.

—Mail service from New Baltimore to Starrville will be increased to three trips a week after April 1.

—Over $250,000 worth of improvements were made in Mount Clemens during the past year and a half.

—Larry Clay voted illegally in Mecosta county at the last election and was fined $60 for the offense Saturday.

—A movement is on foot at Jackson looking to the organization of a co-operative manufacturing institution.

—The St. Joseph river recently flooded the farm of a Michigan man and washed away fifteen acres of his land.

—The business men of East Saginaw are trying to secure the Northwestern District Fair for their city this year.

—A co-operative store and warehouse are being built at East Lake by the Manistee Township Workingmen's Company.

—Last year the mills of Baraga county cut nearly 54,000,000 feet of lumber, nearly 41,000,000 shingles, and 6,000,000 feet of laths.

—Prof. Frederic H. Pease, of the State Normal School, and Miss Abbie J. Hunter were married not long since at the residence of the bride's parents at Kalamazoo.

—Last year the Democrats elected, with one exception, their entire ticket at Cheboygan. At the election lately the Republicans elected all but one trustee on their ticket.

—One of the youngest canvassers on record is Lulu Slade, who is only five years of age, and has been selling artificial flowers in various parts of Saginaw City for the past week.

—At Lockwood Camp, near Munising, James Rice was shot by Maurice Kelley. The injured man was brought to the Northwestern Hospital in Marquette. Kelley escaped to the woods, but was captured.

—During the coming summer a United States geological surveying party will make a tour of the upper peninsula of Michigan, and will thoroughly investigate the supposed copper bearing regions.

—The people of New Haven are considerably excited over the recent sudden disappearance of Michael Hart, a 14-year-old lad. He was ill at the time, and it is thought by a few that he wandered away and died.

—Myrtie Peck, the equestrienne, was married recently to Bert Stillman, of Sturgis. She is also said to be still suing on notes given by a young man who promised to marry her some time ago and failed to keep his promise.

—J. Delaney, of Howard, has a piece of Basswood, which, by natural growth, has taken the exact shape of a man's hand. It shows the wrist, palm, thumb, and four fingers, with apparent seams of a glove on the back of the hand.

—An old miser living in a wretched hut near Howell, was found in a fainting condition from lack of proper food. He was carried home and put to bed. Then his neighbors took some of his hoarded dollars and bought him new furniture, new clothes, and good food.

—The case of Erastus W. Hash, of Jackson, vs. T. C. Brooks et al., contractors, to recover pay for grading twelve miles of the Grand Trunk Railroad in 1832, was ended on the 19th inst. The jury after remaining out all night returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $20,486.

—The old Northwestern iron mine at Metropolitan, in the Felch Mountain iron district, has been bought by Mayor John K. Stack, of Escanaba, Henry M. Atkinson, of Metropolitan, and Chicago parties. The work of unwatering the mine will be begun Monday, and ore shipping will be begun by May 1.

—Andrew Kester, a prominent farmer of the town of Deerfield, dropped dead of heart disease. He had just returned from attending the funeral of a relative in Canada, who had left him between $5,000 and $6,000, and the excitement, it is thought, was the direct cause of death. Mr. Kester had been supervisor, a member of the board of [illegible]

THE CAMP FIRE.

THE LOGAN ESCUTCHEON.

The members of U. S. Grant Post, in Chicago, recently presented Mrs. Logan a beautifully ornamented escutcheon, emblematic of Gen. Logan's brilliant career. The presentation speech was made by Chaplain Bolton, and the response by Gen. Logan's son, Manning (now known as John A. Logan). The occasion was one of extraordinary interest. The escutcheon is painted on canvas and is about thirty by twenty-four inches, handsomely framed. The painting is composed of three parts: The escutcheon proper, which is a shield; the crest, which shows the arms of the United States because of the National service—and a scroll at the bottom for the name and rank. The shield is divided into four parts. The two upper quarterings are emblazoned with the army insignia or devices, so arranged as to show the consecutive events of service—a Second Lieutenant's shoulder strap for service in the Mexican war; a Colonel's, Brigadier's, and Major General's straps, earned in the War of the Rebellion. The lower quarterings are emblazoned with the division corps and army flags of his several commands. On the cross which quarters the escutcheon in gold lettering on red ground are enumerated the features of Gen. Logan's service, battles participated in, wounds received, and various commands held during service. On a banner suspended from the base is given his civil record. From the scroll depend the badges of the various army and military societies with which he was connected. At the intersection of the cross is the seal of the State of Illinois. The whole makes a very handsome record or history of the services, both military and civil, of one of the greatest Generals of the late War of the Rebellion. The society badges represented are the Army of the Tennessee, Seventeenth Corps, Badge of Honor, Military Order of the Loyal Legion, and Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic.

AN EFFECTIVE REBUKE.

A piece of quiet irony, which suggests more than it says, is one of the most effective methods of administering reproof. But it must be delicately put, for the least bungling will make it a failure.

One day, while Gen. Robert E. Lee was visiting the lines at Petersburg, he asked an officer, riding with him, if a certain work he, Lee, had ordered was finished. The officer replied, after a little hesitation, that it was.

"Then let us ride to the spot and inspect it," said Lee.

On arriving there, he found that little progress had been made in the work, and the confused officer tried to excuse himself by saying, "I ordered it to be done at once, and I was told that it had been completed, but I did not think it necessary to verify the fact by a personal inspection."

"We must give our personal attention to the lines," said Gen. Lee, riding on. In a few minutes he began complimenting the officer's horse.

"Yes, sir," answered the officer, "he is a splendid animal, and I prize him the more highly because he is my wife's favorite riding horse."

"A magnificent horse, but I should not think him safe for Mrs. —— to ride," said Gen. Lee. "He's too spirited for a lady, and I would urge you by all means to take some of the mettle out of him before you permit your wife to ride him again. And, by the way, general, I would suggest to you that the rough paths along these trenches would be admirable ground over which to train him."

A REVOLUTIONARY PENSIONER.

A bill was introduced in the Pennsylvania Senate the other day to increase the pension of the only Revolutionary pensioner in the State. Mrs. Betz was married formerly to a drummer-boy of the Revolution when she was 16 years old. Her husband, Peter Betz, was then 55 years of age. Thirty-four years afterward the latter died, and since then his widow has been residing in that State. She is now 89 years old, and considering her age is quite vivacious. Peter Betz learned to play the drum on a half-bushel measure, and was taken into the army by a man named Thompson. He gave five years' service to his country, and, after having outlived his first wife, he married the woman who is now receiving the only Revolutionary pension in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Betz takes great delight in relating incidents of her husband's life. She is a widow at the request of Mr. Betz, who cautioned her never to marry again. She says on one occasion her husband and a comrade in the army were caught in the act of stealing geese from a farmer during a time when the soldiers were almost starved. Gen. Washington rebuked them for larceny, and added, "My children, you can steal geese, but don't let me know of it, as I would have to punish you." Notwithstanding this admonition, said the old lady, "my husband said Gen. Washington helped to eat the geese."

THE NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT G. A. R.

The Chairmen of the sub-committees of the General Executive Committee for the Twenty-first National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic held a meeting at their headquarters in the Lindell Hotel at St. Louis, last week, and prepared a circular for transmission to each of the 6,000 posts in the country, giving full information concerning accommodations, railroad rates, and all matters pertaining to the Encampment. The committee have determined to lose no time, and will push matters as rapidly as possible. Much has already been accomplished, and affairs are sufficiently advanced for the fact to be manifest that the coming Encampment will be by far the largest ever held. Fully 250,000 people will be in the city upon the occasion of the great parade, but should an even greater number be present there will be no difficulty in furnishing suitable accommodations, owing to the excellent arrangements which will be made by those having the matter in charge.

ITEMS.

One hundred additional monuments will be erected on the battle field of Gettysburg during the present year.

The Wisconsin Senate rejected a bill exempting [illegible]

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

SPRING POETRY.

THE RUSTIC ANANIAS.

When days of sunshine come between
The February blizzard [illegible]
With promises of spring to mock us,
The rustic [illegible]
That he, while roaming through the dells,
Or, woods, has seen an early crocus.

ANOTHER DISCOVERY.

He is the self same man who roves
In early March through leafless groves,
While overhead the storm cloud hovers,
And all the ground with snow is white,
And, to his unalloyed delight,
The trailing arbutus discovers.

TO GENTLE SPRING.

Hail, gentle spring!
Thus poets sing
When still are blowing April gales.
From stormy skies
The Spring replies,
And sleets and snows as well as hails.

HOW TO MAKE A BED.

Ordinary sheets, blankets and coverlids are too short and too narrow; they do not admit of a bed being well made. A quarter of a yard all round, beyond the edge of the mattrass, is necessary for tucking in and for overlaying at the top so that the shoulders may be covered. A worn but clean blanket should cover the upper mattrass in winter and over this the sheet should be spread smoothly and adequately. The bolster with its hemstitched linen cover, should be laid a few inches below the top of the mattrass so as to better support the shoulders when lying down, and give a better pitch to the pillows as they stand against the head of the bedstead. Blankets to be large enough must be of good quality; cheap blankets are always unsatisfactory because inadequate both in size and warmth. Care should be taken that they are not laid evenly together upon the bed, but the upper one lowered from the top of the other fully the depth of the bordering. This graduates the bulk and will prevent undue weight about the shoulders when the clothes are turned over, it also allows of abundant margin for "tucking in" at the foot; a matter of great importance, especially when a bed is occupied by two person.

The "foot" blanket is another important item. If the luxury of a narrow down coverlid can be afforded for the feet so much the better; it is a comfort that once enjoyed will never after be willingly dispensed with in cold weather. It should not be too wide or thick as a feather bed as they are made in Germany, but large enough to cover the larger half of the bed and extend over a few inches at the sides. The coverlid laid smoothly over this, all the clothes turned down twice at the top and the whole worked smoothly into the sides and end of the bedstead, the pillows only need to be placed in their proper position to render the bed-making complete.—Demorest's Magazine.

TAKE CARE OF STOCK.

Domestic animals, especially growing stock so not thrive without a copious supply of light. Fattening stock put on plenty of weight in darkness, but this is not thrift; it is cruelty and their flesh is not fit for consumption. Cleanliness may be observed, says the St. Louis Republican, one, by keeping the stall clean, and two by cleaning the animals themselves. Animals breath, as it were, through the pores of the skin, as well as by means of their lungs. Dirt stops up these pores and throws greater burdens upon the lungs promoting disease and acting prejudicially to the products as food for human consumption. There should be free and constant communication between the air and the pores, which is prevented by dirt on the skin, and for this reason also the air in the stable should be pure. Rubbing and grooming promotes this kind of healthfulness, and the cows udder should be washed occasionally and rubbed with a woolen cloth till thoroughly dry.

FOR HOUSE PLANTS.

Without good soil, no one can succeed in growing house plants well. We have little faith in chip dirt for plants for best results; we have great faith in what gardeners call "fibrous loam" for the same purpose. Those who lived in the country find it an easy matter to have a good lot of this article on hand at all times. City plant growers can procure the same of the florists at a small price per bushel. How to get it up is told in a few words. Procure sods to or three inches thick, from a rich pasture lot, or from the roadside, at some spot where the earth is good. Stack it up in some out-of-the-way place until wanted. Break this into pieces the size of acorns, and plants will find in it all the elements really needed to their existence. Or if it seems poor, add a little old fine manure. No need of rubbing such soil through a fine sieve before using.

TO PREVENT BED-SORES.

When a person is obliged to lie constantly in one position as is the case with a broken leg, the pressure coming constantly on the same place bedsores must be guarded against. The lower part of the back is most frequently attacked. The nurse should pass her hand under it at least twice a day to see that the draw sheet is free from wrinkles and creases. Morning and night she must bathe it with a small sponge dipped in alcohol, or a solution of tannic acid, and when it is dry rub it with corn starch or buckwheat flour. It may seem impossible to her to get her hands underneath, but most beds will yield a little to pressure and by working a roll of old linen under the back above the place to be bathed, she will obtain a little space to work in. If in spite of precautions the back becomes sore an air cushion with a hole in the middle must be used to prevent the sore from coming in contact with any surface, or it cannot heal.—Elisabeth Robinson Scovil in Good Housekeeping.

DRAINING LAND.

Wet lands should be drained because we cannot unlock the fertility of the soil unless air takes the place of the water, says Prof. Scott in the Agricultural Gazette. We drain to let water into the soil, as much as to take it out—not merely to carry off the surplus water, but to make the fertilizing rain filter through the soil. Amongst other effects, draining improves the texture of soil by making it more porous, drier, looser, and more friable; it makes land more easily worked; it raises the temperature of the soil, it enables a greater variety of crop to be grown it gives an earlier harvest; and it makes manure more effectual. And even this does not exhaust the practical advantages of draining wet land.

BOUND TO THEMSELVES.

Two persons who have chosen each other out of all the species, with design to be each other's mutual comfort and entertainment, have in that action bound themselves to be good-humored, affable, discreet, forgiving, patient and joyful with respect to each other's frailties and imperfections to the end of their lives.

A COMFORTABLE HOME.

To make home really attractive, we must make it a perfect garden of comforts, a place of delight at whose threshold husband, father and sons may drop their burden of care, sure of solace and recreation at their own fireside. No time is ill-bestowed that is spent in the adornment of a home. Not too much fancy work but just enough to brighten and relieve—a few house plants, a bird, and some other bright objects. The windows of the stores that line the city streets for miles win many a purchase thro' tasteful arrangement of their goods, and so should our doors, set hospitably ajar, reveal cosy home interiors, whose warmth and harmony brightens and makes for friend and kin a little heaven here below.

HEART DECORATION.

"Sallie," said a good old grandmother to a young girl who was busily engaged in whitening her complexion and arranging her hair.

"What is it, grandma?

"You girls think of nothing but trying to improve nature.

"We are obliged to do that grandma. We are compelled to do a great deal of decorating nowadays in order to present a handsomer appearance."

"Yes my child, but when I was a young lady as girls used to decorate our hearts as well, and there wasn't an old maid in our county, but now the woods are full of them."

A BREAKFAST DISH.

A simple and delicious method of preparing potatoes for breakfast is a great favorite in the West Indies. Two pounds of peeled potatoes are washed and grated; four ounces each are added of sugar and butter melted, one teaspoonful each of salt and pepper, well mixed; placed in a baking dish and put into a brisk oven until done; it shows a delicate brown color.

HOT WATER FOR SPRAINS.

Hot water is the best thing that can be used to heal a sprain or bruise. The wounded part should be placed in water as hot as can be borne for fifteen minutes, and in all ordinary cases the pain will gradually disappear. Hot water applied by means of cloths is a sovereign remedy for neuralgia or pleurisy pains. For burns or scald apply cloths well saturated with cold alum water, keeping the injured parts covered from the air.

FOR SORE THROAT.

Every one has a cure for sore throat, but simple remedies appear to be most effectual. Salt and water is used by many as a gargle, but a little alum and honey dissolved in sage tea is better. An application of cloths wrung out of hot water and applied to the neck, changing as often as they begin to cool, has the most potency for removing inflammation of anything we ever tried. It should be kept up for a number of hours. During the evening is usually the most convenient time for applying this remedy.

—Scientific American.

SCRAP BOOK NOTES.

Colors near the face should be soft and indescribable.

Cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

Women of taste are content with a few things—and those good—in lieu of a quantity of cheap finery.

Salt fish are quickest and best freshened by soaking in sour milk.

Blue ointment and kerosene, mixed in equal proportions and applied to bedsteads, is an unfailing bug remedy, and a coat of whitewash is ditto for a log house.

A dress or jacket properly made and properly fitted by a good dressmaker though this costs more than one made by a novice, will look and hang well to the end, while the other will not.

Ladies who study economy will never adopt the outre in anything, for outre fashions never last long.

Salt will curdle new milk, hence in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

Kerosene will make your teakettle as bright as new. Saturated a woolen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from the clean varnished furniture.

He Wanted Watermelon.

A lady who has honored the editor by chatting with him for an hour told him, among other things, some anecdotes of the noble red men who in the days of her grandmother, still lingered, a forlorn and broken remnant, in the upper valleys of the Kennebec river. The feature of civilization to which these half-tamed savages seem to have taken most kindly was begging, and numberless were the requests which they proffered, in wheedling tone and with suppliant manner, to the white brothers who dwelt in undisputed possession of the land once owned by the dusky ancestors of the petitioners. "One of the things which they begged for worst," the lady said, "was for grandfather's tragt. Especially did one old Indian plead: 'Enemost water, so quite water; enemost pumpkin, no quite punkin; berry much me want him.'" "But what did he mean?" the editor asked stupidly. The lady laughed. "If you were a darky," she answered, "you would soon guess." And then the hearer divined that the noble savage hankered for watermelon.—Boston Courier.

ANNIE'S TRIAL.

It was about five minutes after the second and last whistle had blown at Dart's shoe factory when Annie Veiga came running up the street, panting and red of face. John Dart, standing on the steps talking with two strangers, smiled as she came up and said in slightly surprised tones:

"You are late this morning, Miss Veiga—something never before known."

"Yes, sir. I am sorry, but I overslept myself."

"Up late last night—had a beau, perhaps?" suggested John, roguishly.

"No, sir," retorted Annie, promptly and rather snappishly, for, even though he was the nephew of William Dart, the great shoe man, and the prospective heir to all his wealth, she considered he was taking a liberty, especially before strangers. Perhaps pretty and prim little Annie had some other reason, too, for resenting his remark.

"Pretty girl," said one of the strangers after she had passed.

"Yes," assented John, "and about the neatest, quickest girl ever in the workroom," and then the stranger began talking again very earnestly, as before Annie came up the steps.

"Well," said John, "of course you may satisfy yourself, but I can tell you beforehand there is not one of our girls whom we do not trust. It will take you about all day, for they live in all directions from here, if you have to search their rooms. As uncle says I must go with you in that case, the sooner it is over the better for me." Then they all three went up-stairs to the girl's workroom.

"Will those who stopped at Dingus' jewelry store last night, on the way home from work, please stand up?" said John. Over half of them stood up, while John took down their names and the numbers of their rooms and the detectives watched each face keenly. So far no one was disturbed by a guilty conscience. After ascertaining beyond a doubt that all who had been been in the store reported, John announced:

"We have received word that a valuable amount of jewelry was stolen from this firm last night at about the hour you were there, therefore suspicion has fallen upon you, and each girl must allow her room to be searched if the goods are not previously found upon her person."

So the search began. A quiet trusty girl, much older than the others, and who had not been with them the evening before, was appointed to conduct the personal investigation in another room. One after another left the workroom to return in a few minutes declared innocent, until the officers were satisfied none of the goods were at the factory.

"Now," said John, when the last girl had returned, "will each one of you give me your keys in turn, for I must accompany this officer in his search while the other remains here."

"Not this morning," spoke up Annie Veiga, quickly while the smart detective felt the jewels in his grasp, so to speak, and the reward in his pockets. John looked surprised—and turned a trifle pale as he looked into Annie's flushed, guilty face.

"Yes, of course, this morning," he answered gravely. "What difference is it, Miss Annie?"

"None," answered Annie, hastily; but as John took her key the detective, thinking it best to search her room at once instead of in her turn, she burst out crying and seemed so broken down the remaining officer felt justified in placing her under arrest.

John had visited Annie's room before, just once, not many evenings before. He had taken her a book to read and a small basket of fruit, thinking that as neat a way to begin his courtship as any. He had thought as he left that evening it was the prettiest, brightest little room he had ever seen, far exceeding any in his uncle's grand mansion. He had little thought the next time he climbed the stairs to room No. 32 would be upon such a painful errand. He could not believe sweet little Annie guilty until it was proved, yet he climbed the steps unwillingly, and with more unwilling fingers turned in the lock the key Annie had surrendered. When the door was open he stood for a moment irresolute. The room seemed the same, yet not the same either.

Where, the evening he had called, a pretty Japanese screen had stood, was now a rather shabby though scrupulously clean little stove and thereon a skillet with a few potatoes left from the morning's meal; and a dainty bed with covers thrown back and pillows airing, was drawn out where had stood a small book cabinet he had particularly noticed. John reassured himself he was in the right door by several little articles on the walls, and while the busy detective was diving around in Annie's one trunk and the bureau drawers looking for the lost treasure John was looking around at this little jewel of a room, a fairy's paradise as it seemed to him. Across the foot of the bed was a dainty night-dress, to be sure made of cheap muslin and trimmed in crochet lace, but John did not know the difference between it and one of linen trimmed in finest thread. Two small slippers were set precisely under the bed and over a stool by their side was a pair of red stockings, turned wrong side out as though to air. Indeed, I am telling the truth when I tell it that while the detective's back was turned searching Annie's small dish cupboard John quickly stuffed that pair of red stockings in his coat pocket. Why he did so he could never satisfactorily explain.

Then, as he sat there on the bed looking around upon the tidy disorder, it came across him what was the reason of Annie's confusion and distress, for, astute as mankind is generally believed to be he could dimly imagine that no little woman as neat as Annie could endure to have her castle caught in such confusion. Perhaps had it pedestrian ctective alone she would not mind the and then John smiled compla to himself. It was her neat-fitting dress and dainty linen collars and always spotless white aprons that had first attracted John's attention; and then it was the pretty face, with its pleasant smile and independent eyes, that had increased the interest until it had culminated in his meanly pocketing her red stockings

At last the detective gave up in despair.

"She has hidden them some place else," he said shortly.

"She never had them at all," replied John calmly.

"Then what made her act so guilty," questioned the other, almost believing himself in her innocence.

"Don't know," answered John laconically. When they returned to the factory there was quite a confusion and hubbub, for the jewels had been found by another detective employed by Dingus in the possession of a notorious pickpocket, who disguised as a woman, had slipped into the store with the crowd of factory-girls. Everybody was glad, and congratulated Annie—even the smart detective did, although he could not help wishing she had been so considerate as to assist him to gain that reward. But Annie could not look John straight in the face. Poor child! what feelings would have been hers had she known the enormous bulge in John's jacket pocket was caused by her very identical red stockings laid out to air that morning? John, of whom she never dreamed as other than "Mr. Dart," even though she worked faster when he came her way, and perhaps felt more anxiety about the smooth masses of light brown hair than at any other time?

Well when the two officers had gone, and all had settled to work again, John came to Annie's chair and said kindly:

"Miss Annie, that detective turned everything in your room in such awful confusion it will take you all day to straighten it up again, so, if you like; I have gotten permission for you to take the remainder of the day, and no reduction to be made."

"Thank you—you are very kind," she murmured, but she would not look at him and seemed so confused that big, good-natured John turned away in pure kindness and let her make her escape unnoticed.

Annie fled homeward, dashed into No. 32, glanced wildly over the room then burst into tears.

"O dear! O dear!" she sobbed. "There was my nightdress on the bed, and my slippers, and my bed not up—and, O! potatoes in the skillet! O, he will think I am a regular sloven! Why couldn't it happen any other time than when I had to sleep so late I couldn't even eat my breakfast! O, dear he will never like me again. He couldn't after seeing such a looking room." She did not stop to think that her castle looked worse when they had left than when they entered. But as the disorder worried her so much she could not sit still and cry she began her task.

It was some time before the detective's work was undone—everything in trim order, with the mattress rolled up and the bed folded against the wall like a book cabinet and the few dishes washed, and the tiny stove blacked and the screen set around it, and the one table covered with a gayly-embroidered cloth, all of which transformed the kitchen and bedroom into a cozy little sitting-room as though by a fairy's wand. It was a dainty, little, place nothing expensive, but exquisite in the taste and tact displayed. The prevailing colors were deep red and pale blue and gold, with many neutral tints blended in the various bits of fancy work. On a bracket was a bit of white statuary set on a delicate matting of the tender green leaves of a growing vine—the only costly extravagance in the room, and Annie well knew how long it took her to save enough to buy it. She had selected her room for its south window, and therein were standing two geranium plants in full bloom—one a deep double red, the other a soft single white flower.

As Annie was viewing these little luxuries with commendable pride and gradually plucking up spirits, she suddenly bethought her of her stockings. She did not remember of picking them up, and as she only had three pairs, it was important that none of them should be misplaced. Therefore she began to search, when a loud rap, which she had heard once before at the door, caused her to glance hastily in the glass and then timidly open the door to the knocker. It was noon. The whistle had blown just a few minutes before, and, instead of going to his dinner, here was Mr. John Dart standing at her door.

"Won't you come in?" asked Annie with a downcast face.

"That's what I came for," responded John, honestly, and in he walked. Then he turned around, and, taking her hands in his own in the time honored and approved fashion, he said.

"I have been thinking of you this long while, Annie, and now I feel I cannot wait any longer. You are alone in the world and I am almost so, although uncle is very good. Let us make each other happy, and have a pretty home like this with"—glancing around the room—"with posies in every window."

O, of course Annie said "Yes"—who wouldn't? And when the quarter to 1 whistle blew John (who was very punctual) went from Room 32 to the factory as one walking on air—mayhap his empty stomach had something to do with the lightish feeling, but he never thought of that, of course. Annie sat and laughed and cried to think how happy she was, and spent the remainder of her holiday until evening building air-castles and John came back and began to put solid foundations to the same by means of his pocket-book.

They were married two months afterward, and the next day John gave his wife a small bundle rolled up in white paper and tied with blue ribbon. Full of wonder, Mrs. John untied the ribbon and beheld—her lost red stockings!

"Why, John!" she exclaimed, instinctively running her hand down to the toe. But there were no holes—only two or three dainty little darns, and it is safe to predict that John's socks will never suffer.

Woman Suffrage Unpopular.

Fourteen of the seventeen prominent women of Seattle, W. T., who were interviewed on the woman suffrage question said that they were glad that the law had been declared void.

INTER-STATE COMMERCE.

Synopsis of the Bill Which Goes Into Effect April 4.

The Inter-State Commerce law goes into effect April 4. It places all the Inter-State carriers of the country under Government control, provides a commission of five persons for the enforcement of the law, prohibits discriminating rates and the charging of more for a shorter than for a longer haul, prohibits pooling, requires the posting of schedules of rates, prevents the issuing of free passes except to employes or officers of the common carriers, and gives persons claiming to be damaged by the transportation companies the option of making complaint to the Railway Commission or of bringing suit on their own behalf in the United States Circuit or District Courts. Its features appear in detail from the following summary by sections:

Sec. 1 provides that the act shall apply to all common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property, wholly in or in part, by rail road from one State or Territory to another State or Territory of the United States, or from any part of the United States to or through an adjacent foreign country. Reasonable and just charges for the transportation of passengers or freights are made compulsory.

Sec. 2 prohibits discriminating rates "under substantially similar circumstances and conditions as between persons."

Sec. 3 makes it unlawful to give "undue or unreasonable preference" to any person, firm, corporation, or locality, or any particular description of traffic as compared with any other person, firm, corporation, or locality.

Sec. 4 is the famous "shorter and longer" haul provision, which declares that it shall be unlawful "for any common carrier subject to the provisions of this act to charge or receive any greater compensation in the aggregate for the transportation of passengers or of like kind of property, under substantially similar circumstances and conditions, for a shorter than for a longer distance over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer distance." But the commission, upon application, may, in special cases, authorize the common carrier to charge less for longer than for shorter distances for the transportation of passengers or property.

Sec. 5 is the one which prohibits pooling, making it unlawful for any common carrier to enter into any contract, agreement or combination with any other common carrier for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads, or for the division of the earnings of such railroads, making each day of the continuance of such pooling a separate offense.

Sec. 6 requires common carriers to print and keep for public inspection schedules showing the rates and fares and charges for the transportation of passengers and property which any such common carrier has established. Terminal charges and rules and regulations which in any wise change or affect the aggregate of such charges shall be plainly stated. Schedules must be plainly printed in large type and kept in each railroad station for public inspection. Ten days' public notice of an intention to advance rates or fares must be given before such advance can go into effect. Reductions may be made without previous public notice, but when made must be immediately posted. When rates have been established, deviation therefrom shall be unlawful. Established schedules and all agreements with other common carriers must be promptly filed with the Railway Commission created by this act. Violation of this section will subject the offender to punishment for contempt.

Sec. 7 declares that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier to enter into any combination to prevent continuous carriage of freight or passengers, either by breaking bulk, or stoppage, or interruption not made in good faith for some necessary purpose.

Sec. 8. The violation of any provision of this act by any common carrier shall make the said common carrier liable to the person or persons injured thereby for the full amount of damages sustained in consequence of any such violation of the provisions of this act.

Sec. 9 gives to the person or persons claiming to be damaged by any common carrier the option either of making complaint to the Railway Commission as hereafter provided or of bringing suit in his or their own behalf for the recovery of damages in any District or Circuit Court of the United States of competent jurisdiction. But no person or persons shall have the right to pursue both remedies at the same time, and must choose one or the other at the beginning of his act on. The right to send for a person or papers is bestowed upon the court before which the action may be brought.

Sec. 10. The penalty for violation of this act by any common carrier, corporation, director or officer, receiver or trustee of any railway company is a fine of $500 for each offense.

Sec. 11 provides for the establishment of a Railway Commission of five Commissioners, to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The first Commissioners to be appointed are to serve for two, three, four, five, and six years, respectively, but their successors are to serve for terms of six years each. The President has the power to remove Commissioners for malfeasance in office. Not more than than three Commissioners shall be appointed from the same political party. No railway official can be appointed as a member of the commission. No Commissioner can engage in any other business.

Sec. 12 authorizes the commission to make full inquiry into the management or business of all railway companies or other common carriers subject to the provisions of this act, and to acquire the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers. The courts of the United States are required to reinforce the powers of the commission.

Sec. 13. Persons, firms, corporations, etc., may apply to the commission by petition, stating the facts upon which their grievances are based; whereupon the commission may summon the common carrier to appear before it and satisfy the complaint. If no such appearance shall be made, it shall become the duty of the commission to investigate said complaint and provide an appropriate remedy. No complaint shall be dismissed on account of the absence of direct damage to the complaint.

Sec. 14 Reports of investigation must in all cases be made by the commission, and entered of record, and a copy furnished to the party who may have complained, and to any common carrier that may have been complained of.

Sec. 15. The commission must deliver to each common carrier concerned a copy of its report in respect to any case in which an investigation has been made, together with a notice to the common carrier to cease and desist from its violation of the law or to make reparation for the injury complained of or found to have been done.

Sec. 16. When common carriers shall violate or refuse to obey any lawful order of the commission it shall be the duty of the commission to reply in a summary way by petition to the Circuit Court of the United States, and the Court shall have power to hear and determine the matter on due notice to the common carrier interested or complained of. And the court shall have the authority to impose a fine not exceeding $500 upon every common carrier or other person disobeying its writ of injunction or other proper process for every day after the day named that such carrier or other person shall fail to obey its injunction or process.

Sec. 17. The commission may conduct its proceedings in such a manner as will best conduce to the proper dispatch of business and the ends of justice.

Sec. 18. The Commissioners shall recive an annual salary of $7,500. The Secretary of the commission shall receive an annual salary of $3,500.

Sec. 19. The principal office of the commission shall be in City of Washington.

Sec. 20. The commission is authorized to require annual reports from railroads, including specific answers to all questions upon which the commission may need information.

Sec. 21. The commission is required to make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior, to be by him transmitted to Congress, the same to be made before Dec. 1 in each year.

Sec. 22. Nothing in this act shall prevent the carriage, storage, or handling of property for the United States at reduced rates, or prevent railroads from giving free carriage to their own officers and employes, or prevent the principal officers of any railroad company or companies from exchanging passes or tickets with other railroad companies for their officers and employes. Nothing in this act shall abridge remedies now existing at common law, but the provisions of this act are in addition to such remedies. No pending litigation shall be in any way affected by this act.

Sec. 23 appropriates $100,000 for the use and purposes of this act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888.

An Extraordinary Premonition.

The Midland Advertiser, published at Wednesbury, Eng., contains a singular narrative. A girl named Louisa Benu, living with her mother in Queen street, Wednesbury, some time ago expressed a desire to go to America, and her friends ultimately yielded to her wishes. A suggestion, however, was made to her at the last moment that she should go to Australia, and, despite her mother's remonstrances, she decided to go there. The family were poor, and great difficulty was experienced in collecting the necessary funds and in providing the girl with an outfit. Her box was forwarded to London, and she followed to join the Kapunda. Then followed the most extraordinary part of the affair. The mother, who was prostrated with grief, began to have strange visions. Repeatedly she imagined she saw a large rock jutting out from the ocean, and that upon this rock there was a large bird. Then she would see a ship loaded with passengers strike against the rock and sink.

She fancied she could hear the shouts of the sailors and the shrieks of the women on board, and frequently both at night and day, the strange hallucination occupied her mind. The day before the ship sailed she was in the kitchen, when a cry of "O, mother!" seemed to come from the cellar. Even now the woman affirms that it was Louisa who shouted, and that it was not the result of an excited and imaginative brain. Mrs. Benu was so alarmed that she at once telegraphed for her daughter to come back. The girl was at the time on board ship, and for a moment she hesitated to obey. The doctor on board the vessel advised her to stop, but the schoolmaster urged her to obey her mother. She decided to leave the ship and go home, but her luggage was not given to her, as it could not be got, and everything she possessed, except what she wore, had to be left in the ship. Until the news of the loss of the vessel was conveyed to her she regretted she had not remained on board. Several of her companions are included among the list of the drowned, and she is thus able to realize the narrowness of her escape.

Freezing Does not Destroy.

Dr. John S. Billings, U. S. A., has sent the following valuable data to the Sanitary Engineer: "It is well known that freezing water does not destroy the vitality of all living organisms contained in it, although it does appear to kill some of them. To settle the question as to the effect of freezing on the bacillus of typhoid I have had the following experiments made: Jan. 10, 1887, five c. c. of sterilized water in a test tube was inoculated with typhoid bacillus and exposed to the outer air during the following night at a temperature of about 10 deg. Fahrenheit. It was found solidly frozen in the morning. Jan. 12, 2 p. m., this frozen mass was thawed, and from it there were inoculated three gelatine and one Agar tubes. Jan. 13, 10 a. m., there was decided typical development of the typhoid bacillus in the Agar tube and in two of the gelatine tubes. Evidently, therefore, the vitality of the typhoid bacillus is not destroyed by freezing."

HUMOROUS.

"Oh, whistle and I'll come to you, my lad,"
She promised with girlish bravado;
But she started on a run the other way
When he started out on the Mikado.
—Somerville Journal.

De Forest. "Where did you learn to make such mince pie, Mrs. McDoodle? What tender recollections it revives!" Mrs. McDoodle (tenderly): "Home and mother, I suppose." De Forest: "No, not exactly that, it reminds me of the dreams I had last night."

"Why do you wear your low necked dress to the theater?" asked a sensible woman of her butterfly sister. "To please the men, of course," was the vain reply. "And don't you think you would succeed better," said the other, if you removed your hat instead of your waist." —Life.

Mike (a shaky creditor)—"Shure, didn't ye git my tillgram last Friday ordtherin' tin barls av muymusz." Pat—"Faith, Mike, I did; but shure when I saw by the wrotin' that it wasn't yersilf that sint it at all, at all. I gist trated it as a forgery and ignured it intoirely." —Chicago Rambler.

A Harvard professor has made the calculation that if men were really as big as they sometimes feel, there would be room in the United States for only two professors, three lawyers, two doctors, and a reporter on a Philadelphia paper. The rest of us would be crowded into the sea and have to swim for it. —Detroit Press.

First Lady—"Ise gwine ter chutch to tank de Land dey ain't no' erfquakes. Aint yo gwine, too, my sister." Second Lady—"No! no! my sister, I no gwine! Euty de brick chutch?" First Lady—"De brick chutch fo' true; but don' yo' trus' de Laud?" Second Lady—"I trus' no Land, aw, my slater. I trus' um, but I neber fool wid um." —Life.

"Seen the new boy who has moved in around the corner?" "Yaas." "Found out anything?" "Lots. His father used to work in a saw-mill, and his mother was a dressmaker." "Humph! Who wants to know anything of the father and mother? What we want to find out is whether we kin lick the boy or have got to run for him." —Exchange.

About Five.

"My husband was arrested last night, sir," she said to the Sergeant at the Central Station.

"Yes'm."

"It was for being drunk, sir."

"Yes, I know."

"Well, I called to ask you how I'm to get him off? How many witnesses must I bring down to swear that he was perfectly sober?" —Detroit Free Press.

The Guilty One.

"Have any of you children been at this cake? Have you, Tommy?"

"No, sir."

"Have you, Johnny?"

"No, sir."

"Have you, Willie?"

"No, sir."

"Have you, Sarah?"

Sarah—"Pa, didn't you tell us the other day at the supper table that little children should be seen but not heard?" —Texas Siftings.

Johnny's Composition on Medicine.

"There is two kinds of medicine besides the kind you Rub On and the first kind is the Soft Kind which you take with a spoon while A man holds your head and you kick and Riggle some because it tastes so and the other kind is the Hard kind which is called Pills and it is the Hardest of the whole because it is so Hard to go Down but it does not make any difference which kind you Take when you get it Took you wish you Had not for it makes quite a Row in your Stomach and Riots Around. —Exchange.

He Spoke Hastily.

"Dear me, how noisy the children are," remarked Araminta to Richelieu, as childish voices penetrated the stillness of the front parlor.

"Ah, yes," sighed Richelieu; "childhood is ever joyous. It is so refreshing to muse upon its thoughtless gaieties." He glanced out of the window. Heavens! A long Germantown comforter, which he had left in the hall a few minutes before, was attached to a sled loaded with youngsters, and Araminta's two brothers were tugging at it like twin Herculeses. —Detroit Free Press.

How to Increase It.

Wife:—Let me read you, my dear, a few sensible remarks I have here about increasing your circulation.

Husband (editor N. Y. daily): What's the use? I understand it better than anybody else. Slap in all the murders, rake over all the divorce cases and scandals carefully, for the most racy details; cater to the masses; sing of the wrongs of the workingmen, give your readers "pictures;" write up graphically all robberies, assaults and and elopements; lie like thunder about the circulation you have got. That's about what they say, isn't it?

Wife:—No, not exactly. This says take a walk before breakfast and use Dr. Curcall's liver pills for the blood. —Life.

Honest But Boastful.

A Sunday School teacher began his questioning at the end of the old year with the query, "Are you better than you were last year?"

A good many of the little fellows bad replied, "Yes, sir;" but a croupy boy on the back seat had the courage of his convictions.

"I haint no better nor I ever wuz," he said; "but," he added, by way of softening the harsh statement, "I got the sorest froat of anybody in this class—I—I—I—most got dipferia."

His inflamed larynx might not have been a means of grace, but his honesty certainly was. —Youth's Companion.

The First Meerschaum.

The first meerschaum pipe was carved the early part of the Thirty Years' war, and Wallenstein is said to have bought it. Now the average number of pipes turned out in the center of pipe manufacture in Germany is 540,000 real meerschaums, 500,000 imitation meerschaums, 800,000,000 wooden pipes of great variety and many millions of clay bowls.

A Cornwall, N. Y., florist [illegible] 000 violets to New York [illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 6, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

A Chestnut.

Stockman & Iddings, the enterprising hardware firm, were recently appointed agents for the sale of a patent electric door or alarm bell, which is operated by pressing a button. The bell and battery can be placed in any part of the premises, and are connected with the button by a small insulated wire. They have a sample in operation at their store. The button is beside the desk at which works Mr. Iddings, and the bell is in another part of the store.

Mr. Stockman returned from Florida last week loaded with oranges and the biggest kind of fish stories.

On Saturday Morris sat by the register telling how thick the fish were in the Halifax river, when—

Jing-a-ling-a-ling!

Harvey had quietly reached around and gently touched the button. Morris was not "onto" the bell racket yet, and he looked around for the machine.

Then he opened out again with the statement that in one day he had caught 421—

Jing-a-ling-a-ling!!

Again his optics searched for the bell, while Harvey seemed as intent upon his ledger as if he had never heard of a "chestnut bell."

The narrative continued, and had reached a point where the exploits of Bert Mason were reached. A glowing account of how Bert had wrestled with a shark of large proportions, when—

Jing-a-ling-a-ling-a-ling!!!

Harvey did not recover his innocent look in time, and Morris discovered the button, and from that followed the wires to the mischievous bell.

A sudden and energetic hustle, and Morris had Harvey in transit toward the door, and through it to the snow bank in front. Then Morris sat upon his partner until he begged and promised to "cheese the racket" until C. Y. Cook gets home.

When C. Y. comes, and gets down to business, the bell will be operated for all it is worth.

Ironton.

We're going to tone our irregularity down now for a while.

Elder Hodges has gone to Manistee temporarily.

Sleighing is "busted" and nearly every one is in a hurry to finish up winter's work.

Thompson Trimble and Willie Bird fetched the new gas pipe for the furnace from Boyne Falls, Friday. It is 75 feet long and weighs 6,200 pounds.

J. M. Harris was in Detroit and Lansing last week.

Much sympathy is felt here for Leon Otoshquabno (Indian), who last Friday buried his 16 year old daughter, as this is the fifth child he has lost in a short time with consumption.

Mrs. Pope is spending her vacation at Charlevoix.

The general exercises at the close of the winter term were of a special order and called forth marked applause from the patrons present. The term closed with a good interest manifest.

We are pleased to note the increased visiting of the parents to the schools. For the mutual benefit of pupils and teachers it is equally good and the teachers are in dead earnest when they solicit visits from the parents. Don't wait for the "last day," but drop in a half hour every time you can, and make suggestions. Let us have a unanimous co-operation for the remainder of the year and all enjoy the surprise of grand results.

Almond Bird has traded his oxen off for a horse.

Rev. W. G. Clark preached in the Congregational church on Sunday afternoon.

The ladies Aid Society netted $25 at their sale and supper.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Teachers in Sunday school are all requested to be present on Tuesday evening, as important business is to come before the meeting.

Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at the usual hour. Come and bring your friends.

Sabbath services will be appropriate to Easter both morning and evening.

Young people's meeting will be in charge of Rev. W. G. Clark. Topic "Encouragement to Prayer," Matt 7 7.

Harry B. Sayles, the Evangelist, will open a two weeks' course of revival meetings at the rink, commencing Sunday, April 17th.

Congregational Church

Thursday evening at 7 o'clock, Matthew 25, 31-46. Teachers' meeting after.

Sunday services as usual. Sunday school at noon.

Baptist Church.

The Ladies Society of the Baptist church wish publicly to thank Rev. W. H. McCartney, Dr. J. A. Carlston, Prof. H. M. Enos and A. D. Cruickshank, for the able and instructive lectures delivered by them in the Home course. Charlevoix may well take a reasonable pride that we have in our midst the material for so valuable an entertainment as the course of lectures has provided.

MRS. R. W. KANE, Sec.

Usual services morning and evening. Preaching at Hilton's school house at 3 p. m.

Elsewhere.

Rev. Mr Hodge, who recently resigned the pastorate of the Ironton Congregational church, has removed to Reed City.

Hazings from Hayes.

D. E. Scroggie cut his foot badly last week in Saunby's tie camp.

Mrs. D. E. Scroggie has been very sick, but is improving under the care of Dr. Lewis.

The storm on election day kept one-half of our voters at home. We have 188 registered voters and 94 ballots were cast.

Hayes is coming to the front with both feet. The prohibition amendment has 52 majority. The state Republican ticket has a majority over Democrat and Greenback. The township Republican ticket elected, except a tie on clerk.

The effort made on Monday to create a feeling of distrust against Republicans, by the clerk and supervisor sneakingly bringing a poor order to town meeting, that had been issued by E. H. Burgess during his administration, and reading the itemized account to the assembled public with a great deal of gusto, reverted upon them like a boomerang, when it was ascertained that the items were purchased for the burial of a poor squaw. Mr Burgess gave Alex Rosenthal an order for five dollars and told him to let the parties have that amount of goods for the burial of the woman, and the poor broken-hearted children of the forest after purchasing a shawl and a few yards of print, expended the remainder for some ribbon and a couple of wax flowers in order to bury their mother and sister in accordance with their usual customs. Mr. Burgess never sold goods to Indians out of his store at his own figures, and drew the pay for the same out of the poor fund.

Beginning to "Crawfish."

The free expression of public sentiment in the United States has apparently done something to bring Canada to a realizing sense of the temper of this country with reference to the fisheries matter, while the democratic administration which ought to have been the prime and powerful mover in this direction has been dilatory, subservient and cowardly. At least the general discussion of the question here appears to be having a salutary effect upon the utterances of several of the Canadian newspapers, and doubtless though them upon the people and officers of the dominion. The Toronto Mail seems to have taken a particularly careful survey of the situation, and it now expresses the opinion that "there is good ground for saying that the American govern- …

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

WE GREET YOU

FRIENDS AND PATRONS!

WITH A NEW AND SPARKLING STOCK OF LATEST NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS, FANCY GOODS, CARPETS, ETC., ETC.

We invite you most cordially to call in and let us show you our goods, whether you wish to buy or not. All the leading wash fabrics are represented on our counters, such as Batistes sateens, both plain and figured, Manilla Cloth, Pongees Chambrays, Ginghams, Nainsooks, Crinkled Seersuckers, etc. Our wool goods comprise all that is desirable, in fact brings New York counters at your doors and gives all the advantage of city life. We invite you for

SEEING IS BELIEVING AND BELIEVING IS BUYING.

Very truly yours,

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Prior to inventory we are offering great bargains in every line of goods.

We are determined to reduce our stock one-half during this month, and to accomplish this we are making great sacrifices.

Close buyers will do well to inspect our stock.

J. L. HURD & CO.

WE MEAN TO SELL OUT!

WE MUST SELL OUT!

Rosenthal & Sons

Mammoth Stock of Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods will have to be disposed of by August First.

Purchasers can doubtless see that to this end we will make great reductions on all goods and we have decided for our customers' benefit, to sell,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

As this large stock cannot be easily transported.

Therefore it will be also for our benefit to make sacrifices.

Now is your Time to Buy!

AND DON'T FORGET IT!

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF, THAT WE MEAN WHAT WE SAY. BUSINESS!

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO.—50 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 13, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 907

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

—HEADQUARTERS—

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT

TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

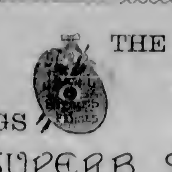
Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS

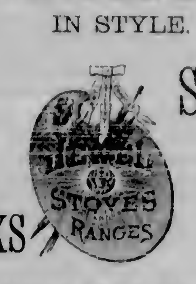


THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works



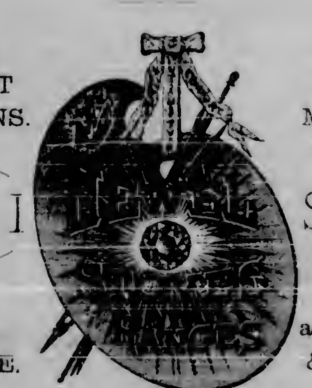
Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS.

THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I



S & I

THE MOST DURABLE.

Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,

AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

A Large Fresh Stock of Groceries

JUST OPENED AT

WILLSEE & CO'S

We call especial attention to something fine in Corn Beef at 8c. Try our Tea and Coffee stock. You will find it to your advantage to call and see us.

ALL KINDS OF COUNTRY PRODUCE WANTED.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ 75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Note the change in the card of Will Francis.

—Mrs Buzzell of Port Clinton, O., is at Major Green's for a few weeks.

—Hon. Richard Knight of Banks, is seriously ill. Dr. Chamberlain of this place, attends him.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. have a new advertisement in this issue announcing a closing out sale. Read it.

—Mr. John Ward of Marion, began the erection of a new residence on his farm last week. It will be a handsome dwelling.

—The large and handsome line of spring hats and caps in G. W. Miller's show window, attracts a good deal of attention.

—If the legislature would give us local option, what a grand majority Charlevoix and adjoining counties would give in its favor.

Rev. Mr. Stinchcomb's daughter was married at Traverse City last week and they say it was the affair of the season in the wedding line.

—Mr. Al Mather and Miss Minnie Green of Battle Creek, two well-known resort young people, were married last week. Their new home is in Dakota.

—Egbert Carpenter and wife and C. Y. Cook arrived from Florida, Saturday evening. The were on the road from Petoskey ten hours, owing to the condition of the roads.

—The new dress of the Petoskey Record is one of the handsomest in Northern Michigan, and that's saying a good deal. Bro. Hontecon edits a model paper. Very little "rot" finds its way into the Record.

A law has passed the House providing that the questions for teachers' examinations shall be first sent under seal to the Judge of Probate, and that they shall not be opened until the time for examination, to avoid improper use.

Reynard, the East Jordan saloonist, has been in town considerable of late, looking up his chances for opening up here. Now that the Amendment is lost he will set himself about getting bonds, the amount of which will be fixed by the Council on the 19th of April.

—Commander Fairchilds of the G. A. R., suggests that on April 27, the 65th anniversary of Gen. Grant's birth, all posts hold a "feast of patriotism," to which all their fellow citizens shall be invited, and on which occasion contributions will be asked for a Grant memorial.

—A meeting of the Board of Directors of the D., C. & E. R. R. Co., was held in this village on Thursday afternoon. Kalkaska was represented by Mr. Drake, Bellaire was not represented. The Board voted to put an engineer at work as soon as practicable and to that end appointed a committee.

—A new rule has been issued by the G. R. & I. under which all operators, freight agents, etc., are obliged to give bonds, which will cost the employe six dollars and fifty cents per year. This sum, by a peculiar arrangement goes into the pocket of the railroad, and really amounts to paying the railroad a bonus of that amount for privilege of working for them. It remains to be seen whether or not the employes will quietly submit to it.

—A lodge of the Marine Engineers' Association, with a membership of ten, was organized in this village one evening last week. The following are the officers: Past President, O. S. Washburn, President, John M. Ackert; Vice President, R. O'Neill; Secretary, H. D. Wood; Financial Secretary, Gurley Beak; Corresponding Secretary, George Pappin; Treasurer, Leslie Giddings; Chaplain, John Anderson; Conductor, Thomas E. Nowland; Doorkeeper, Leroy Hamlin.

Boyne Statesman: Orlando Ross, of Petoskey, has bought the Washman place, on Bear Lake.—Examination of A. C. Joles was held at the court house last Saturday. His trial is set down for the next term of court, and bail placed at $1,000. He is now awaiting trial in jail, not being able to secure bail.—The council have elected Lewis McWain Village Marshal, and Wm. Baker, Poundmaster, also changed the date of regular meetings to the first and third Wednesday of each month.

—The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Chicago Summer Resort Company was held Tuesday, and the following gentlemen were elected directors for the ensuing year: I. W. Scoville, S. M. Moore, C. F. Gates, N. H. Blatchford, R. M. Cherrie, Luman Burr, R. L. North, I. R. Kraus, F. B. Rockford. Subsequently the new board of directors elected the following officers, S. M. Moore, President; N. H. Blatchford, Vice President, W. C. Warner, Secretary and Treasurer. The club-house and grounds at Charlevoix, Mich., were reported in better condition than ever before.—Inter Ocean.

—Boyne Falls voted to build a town hall.

—The ice in the bay went out Monday night.

—Lorenzo Cook has moved into the Bridge St. House.

—Miss Spaulding returned from Norwood, yesterday.

—The vote on the Prohibition Amendment at Boyne Falls was a tie.

—Round Lake is free from ice, and that in Pine Lake is showing signs of decay.

—S. M. See & Sons will receive a large line of furniture on the Friant next week.

—Will Washburne has purchased the Harsha property adjoining the park on Main street.

—Mr. J. Lewek of Petoskey, has charge of Rosenthal & Son's store during Alex's absence.

—Al. Washburn's mother has returned, and the little brick house on Main street is again open.

—Frank Craine will be found at Geo. Miller's to receive all old accounts due F. W. Craine & Co.

—Nicholls mill is undergoing a thorough overhauling, and is receiving several new improvements.

—The Loyal Legion meets as usual in Green's hall on Saturday. A full and prompt attendance is desired.

—The oldest inhabitants are pretty unanimous in the statement that more snow melted Saturday than ever before in one day.

—Preaching at the Ironton M. E. church next Sabbath morning, and at Johnson's school house in the afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—The new firm of Emrey Bros. in their new advertisement this week call attention to their stock of general merchandise. They already report a large trade.

—A new lumber camp is being established east from Williamsburg, in one of the John Torrent tracts of pine. The logs will be taken to the Boardman River by a pole road.

—L. E. Allen, the harbor contractor, has secured a dredge of Buttars & Peters, of Ludington. It is the same machine that worked on this harbor the last contract. Work will be commenced about June 1st.

—The Pine Lake Lumber Co., of Dwight's Landing, on South Arm, have leased Stroud's saw mill at Horton's Bay. There are now but three mills on our inland waters, including Nicholls', that they do not control.

Richard Lake, formerly of Eveline, when last heard from, was sick in Kansas City, Mo. Mrs. Lake is keeping a boarding house in Toronto. One daughter is with her, and the other is with relatives elsewhere in Canada. Mrs. Lake and her two lovely daughters have many friends here and in Eveline.

—East Jordan Enterprise: The family of Martin Staley of Eveline, are still very sick with what is now termed scarlet fever. We understand that his daughter Ida has lost the entire use of her limbs. Dr. Foster, of East Jordan, is attending.—School in district No. 3 of Eveline, commences next Monday with Mr. Robinson, our county surveyor, of near Boyne Falls, as teacher.—Jake Bisnett has leased his farm to John Ward, of Central lake—Al. J. Preece and wife took their departure Monday noon for Toronto, which place they will make their home in the future. Just before they started the band, of which Al had been a member from its organization, marched to his residence and gave him and his wife a serenade.—Last Wednesday our town was thrown into commotion by the report that D. H. Jerrue had gone to the wall; in other words, failed. Everyone had a different cause for the downfall, and if all the stories were put together and printed in book form they would make the author of Arabian Nights blush, and cause him to sink into utter oblivion. No sooner had the report got fully under headway, than bills began to be presented, and Dan going down his side pocket pulled out the "wherewith" and settled up every account presented. Friday evening, Mr. Jerrue accompanied by his wife and son, went Monday on a visit as far as Mancelona, which was food for more thought and gossip. But the absurdity was laughable in the extreme. One thing in particular puzzled a good many, and that was when Dan left town Friday night he wore a silk hat, which overcame him 'mensely, which caused more guesses to be made.

Norwood Notes.

School commenced on Monday.

Easter service on Sunday by the children of the Sunday school.

The snow is nearly gone and the roads will soon be dry if the present warm weather lasts.

Mr. Nash started his mill at this place on Monday.

It don't act much like a good sugar season.

There will be a maple sugar social at the town hall on Friday evening of this week.

E. L. Stafford is putting in the crib-work of Smillcon's dock at Little Island and has it nearly done.

The first boat of the season arrived at this dock on Saturday. It was a small sail vessel from Antrim City formerly owned by Mr. Stigar. It came on the ice.

Marine Jottings.

Negotiations for the sale of the tug Higgie are still pending.

Leroy Hamlin goes as engineer on the Clara Belle this season.

The schooner Arctic is waiting for a "slant," to get here from Chicago.

Capt. A. H. ("Sandy") Bennett, will sail the tug Bob Stephenson this season.

Clear water in Lake Huron can be seen from Cheboygan, and everything is clear above the Manitous.

The schooner Dewey, whose trouble was reported last week from Frankfort, got out of the ice safely last Friday.

The steamer Gordon is having her sides and cabin raised about two feet, which will not only improve her appearance, but also make her more convenient.

The propeller Sanford got fast in the ice and broke her wheel above Frankfort, Friday, and the tug Hall went out and took off her passengers and freight.

The Northern Line steamers were to have been ready to leave Chicago yesterday. It is understood that they will stop at Emrey Bros.' dock again this season, as will also the Friant.

Navigation is open at Charlevoix. The current of the river nearly reaches the open water of Lake Michigan, as we go to press, and but a short belt of ice remains in the bay.

The propeller Faxton has been "looked over" to the tune of $1,500 this spring, under the auspices of a Chicago ship carpenter. Hurd's dock will again be headquarters for the Faxton and Grand Rapids.

The steamer Friant has temporarily taken the place of the Sanford on the Manistee and Frankfort route until the latter gets a new wheel. The Friant will be here, however, as soon as she can get through the ice.

The schooner Mocking Bird is receiving a new main-topmast, and will be fitted out immediately. Downer is to send her to Chicago with ties, first trip, and will probably continue to freight her during the season.

The steam barge now building at Grand Haven for Gill & Son of Northport, will be ready for business in about a month. It has been christened the "Alice M. Gill," after the little daughter of Wilber F. Gill.

The Elections.

Later and more complete returns give the Republican majority on the State ticket a much larger figure than was first estimated. The Detroit Free Press says a careful examination of the returns leads to the conclusion that the vote will be nearly as heavy as that cast at the state election last fall; that the Republican state ticket will have a plurality of 25,000; that the vote cast for O'Brien J. Atkinson will reach 30,000, and that for the prohibition candidate will be in the neighborhood of 18,000.

The salaries amendment was carried by a safe majority.

The apparent majority against the prohibitory amendment is about 3,000. Glaring frauds are reported from several localities, especially from Gogebic county, where Wisconsin voters were imported by wholesale. The latter county will be contested, but if thrown out it will not change the result.

Religious.

Revival Services.

Gospel meetings will be conducted at Opera Hall for two weeks, beginning Sunday next, at 3 p. m., under the direction of Harry B. Sayles, the evangelist. You are invited to attend all the following meetings: Praise and preaching service every evening, except Saturday, at 7:30; Bible readings every day, except Monday, at 3 o'clock p. m.; all day service Tuesday,—10:30 to 12 m., subject, prayer and praise,—3:00 to 4:30 p. m., subject, confession, humiliation, and consecration; Children's meetings Wednesdays and Saturdays at 4:15 p. m.; testimony and inquiry meetings will follow each preaching service. Invite your friends; send your children; come yourself.

Mr. Harry Sayles, whose meetings are announced for April 17, is not a minister, but a layman like Mr. Moody and others, whose work has been of great service in many parts of Michigan and other states. Mr. Sayles has just returned from Mobile, Alabama, to his home in Ypsilanti, from which place he will come to Charlevoix. He sings the gospel as well as preaches it, and this is an attractive feature of the services conducted by him. Some of the people of our village are already acquainted with Mr. Sayles and we are assured by them that meetings may be anticipated with great interest.

M. E. Church.

To teach requires knowledge; knowledge implies study. Meeting for study from 7:30 to 8.30 every Tuesday evening.

"Prayer is appointed to convey the blessings God designs to give." Except we use the means how can we hope to reap the benefits. Thursday evening is set apart for this service. Let nothing interfere with your presence. Take part in the meeting.

Next Sabbath morning services as usual, followed by Sunday school.

Baptist Church

Sunday morning services and Sabbath school as usual.

Congregational Church

Usual services Sunday morning, and Sunday school following.

Old papers for sale at this office.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, - Publishers

American millers annually supply the West Indies with 400,000 barrels of flour, shipped principally from New York.

The Baltic parliamentary committee on naval reform urges the immediate withdrawal of the bayonets and cutlasses now in use.

Emperor William received 1,643 congratulatory telegrams on his recent birthday. Sixty of the number were sent from the United States.

The owners of the yacht Dauntless attribute his defeat in the recent race to the interference of the owner, Mr. Colt, who was on board.

Iowa railroad property has just been assessed at $38,000,000 for purposes of taxation, an increase of $1,000,000 over last year's valuation.

C. M. Henderson, a shoe manufacturer of Chicago, has accepted an offer of $25,000 from the citizens of Dixon, Illinois, to locate his factory at that place.

The will of the late Capt. James B. Eads has been presented for probate in New York. The bulk of his fortune is divided among his family and relatives.

Professor Proctor believes in the existence of the sea serpent, and has written an essay for a magazine to show that people are wrong in regarding it as a myth.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Latest Intelligence From all Parts of the World.

FIRE RECORD.

Fire destroyed the Keith exchange at Greenville, Miss., and nine stores, with a total damage of over $21,000.

Mathew M[illegible] and his three children were burned to death in his own dwelling at [illegible], N. Y., Tuesday morning. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The [illegible] building at Troy, N. Y., was destroyed by fire, Tuesday morning, and the Boardman building was damaged. Loss about $100,000. Firemen think there is some mystery about the origin of the fire.

The West Point cotton mills, near West Point, Ga., were totally destroyed by fire Tuesday morning.

Fires at Jackson, Mich., destroyed property to the amount of $22,000; at St. Louis, Mo., loss $25,000.

The extensive shoe factory of Pingree & Smith, at Detroit, was destroyed by fire Wednesday evening, entailing a loss of about $325,000. Three firemen sustained fatal injuries.

CASUALTIES.

While a boiler was being tested Thursday morning at Erie, Pa., the plate gave way, the escaping steam terribly scalding four men.

An explosion of gas occurred in the Von Storch mine of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company at Scranton, Pa., Wednesday, killing three men and wounding eight.

The boiler of the sealing steamer, Eagle, exploded off St. John, N. F., Wednesday, and the crew of 200 are reported lost.

A man named J. T. Brooks, a carpenter, fell through an elevated shaft in a building in Chicago, a distance of one hundred feet, and when his companions went to pick him up he jumped and laughed in their [illegible]

[illegible]

FOR IRELAND.

Mr. Gladstone's Great Speech—The Tories Weakening—From Parnell.

Resolutions of the Illinois Legislature Sympathizing with Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone closed his great speech in opposition to coercive measures in Ireland on the night of the 19th ult. It is widely commented upon as an effective exposure of the less[illegible] of the government's reasons for demanding coercion. The strength of his reasoning is admitted by Conservatives, and felt keenly by Unionist Liberals, more of whom have threatened to secede unless the coercion bill be reduced to simple provisions against boycotting and the plan of campaign. Gladstone renewed his defiance of the government to attempt to enforce cloture. The Gladstonians are confident that they can delay the passage of the bill until May, and in the meanwhile are hopeful that the evolution of events will overthrow the whole scheme.

The Radical societies throughout England are passing resolutions against the coercion bill, pronouncing it impolitic and unjust. The English Radical press denounce the measure in language of passionate indignation.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Such a measure subjects a nation of white skinned, Christian and civilized people to arbitrary interference with the elementary liberties and rights of man, and would justify separation. If the Irish rose in revolt they would have our hearty sympathy and support. If they did not wish to revolt against such a system they would deserve our intimate contempt.

[illegible]

HUMOROUS.

"Hark! the chimes, the music swells,"
Cried Frank, "give me a ring of bells;"
Kate whispered while the music rolled,
"I'd rather have a ring of gold."

"Why is a small boy like a woman?" said a certain man to his troublesome wife. No response. "Because he will make a man grown," said the conundrumist.—Brooklyn Union.

A Milwaukee girl fell from a roof and [illegible] in a snow bank. "Are you hurt?" asked a gentleman, who hurried to her relief. "Not a bit!" was the cheerful reply. "Do you suppose I have been tobogganing all winter for nothing?"—Burlington Free Press.

"So your husband hasn't any worruk, Mrs. Sullivan, all on account of the strike? Naythur has mine, but luck to it." "Well, how is it, then, ye's walkin' about lookin so happy loike, with a new sealskin jacket an'—" "It, it's jist the walkin' as does it. Me husband's dilligit, ye see—a walkin' wan."

Old lady (to street urchin)—"Wouldn't you like to be a good little boy and go to Sunday school and be taught not to swear or say wicked things?" Little boy—"No'm. Me fadder's goin' to git me a job on de canal to drive mules soon's navigation opens, an I mustn't do anythin' to interfere wid de buzziness."—New York Sun.

There were few Connecticut women of the last century who did not keep a diary. We quote this from a diary of 1790: "We had roast pork for dinner, and Dr. S——, who carved, held [illegible]

[illegible]

COUNTRY LIFE AND WORK.

AN EMPTY NEST.

A grave old man and a maiden fair
Walked together at early morn;
The thrushes up in the [illegible], [illegible]
Sang to the farmer planting his corn.
And O! how sweet was the fresh-scented morn,
And O! how fair were the budding trees!
For daisy's silver and daffodil's gold
Were full of the happy honey bees.

"Oh, look! there's an empty nest," she said;
"And I wonder where sing the last year's birds?"
Then the old man quickly raised his head,
Though scarcely he noted her musing words;
He tore the nest from the swaying tree,
He flung to the winds its moss and hay,
And said: "When an empty nest you see,
Be sure that you throw it far away."

"But why?" she asked with a sorrowing face—
"Why may not the pretty home abide?"
"Because," he answered, "'twill be a place
In which the worm and the slug will hide.
Last year 'twas fair enough in its way
It was full of love and merry with song;
But days that are gone must not spoil to-day,
Nor dead joys do the living joys wrong."

The maiden heard with a thoughtful face—
Her first false love had gone far away—
And she thought, "Is my heart become a place
For anger and grief and hate to stay?
Down, heart, with thy sad, forsaken nest!
Fling far thy selfish and idle pain,
The love that is sure is the best—"
And she went with a smile to her work again.
Mary A. Barr in Harper's Magazine.

FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Father Clarkson, of the Iowa State Register, discourses of things a half century ago as follows: "Fifty-four years ago, the coming fall, the agricultural editor of the Register built a brick [illegible] should all be ready before the cleaning is commenced. By beginning at the top of the house and coming down, doing a room at a time, never displacing the furniture of a second room until the first has been set in order, and by allowing an interval of a day or two between the cleaning of the different apartments much friction will be avoided. Indeed, with a little management and an extra stock of good temper the whole house from roof to cellar will be put right without the jarring of a single nerve. And as for the gentlemen of the family, they will hardly be aware, save by the visible results, that any such extensive overhauling has been in process.

[illegible]

WATERING HORSES.

A well known horseman protests against watering horses immediately after they are fed. You must remember, he says, the fact, that much of what they have taken is dry food, and when they drink it is often about as men do at dinner when they take two or three tumblers of ice water. If a horse drinks a pail of water, he puts into his stomach from five to eight quarts, and that is almost the full capacity of the stomach. What must happen? The material in the stomach already will be forced out, and it is forced into the larger intestines undigested and with a loss of value of the food from not being properly digested, so that there can be no such assimilation as if it were digested in the stomach [illegible]

[illegible]

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Ark of Safety.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, delivered the following, recently, in Des Moines, Ia., taking for his text: "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." [Genesis, vii., 1.

We do not need the Bible to prove the Deluge. The geologist's hammer announces it. Sea shells and marine formations on the top of some of the highest mountains of the earth prove that at some time the waters washed over the top of the Alps and the Andes. In what way the catastrophe came, we know not—whether by the stroke of a comet, or by flashes of lightning changing the air into water, or by a stroke of the hand of God, like the stroke of the axe between the horns of the ox, the earth staggered. To meet the catastrophe, God ordered a great ship built. It was to be without prow, for it was to sail to no shore. It was to be without helm, for no human hand should guide it. It was a vast structure, probably as large as two or three Cunard steamers. It was the Great Eastern of olden time. The ship is done. The door is open. The lizards crawl in. The cattle walk in. The grasshoppers hop in. The birds fly in. The invitation goes forth to Noah:

Come thou and all thy house into the ark.

Just one human family embark on the strange voyage, and I hear the door slam shut. A great storm sweeps along the hills and beads the cedars [illegible]

[illegible]

mittance. The perplexities of life shall come up and knock on the door, but no admittance. Safe forever! All the agony of earth in one wave dashing against the bulwarks of the ship of celestial light shall not break them down. Howl on, ye winds, and rage, ye seas!

If the ark of Christ is so grand a place in which to live, and die, and triumph, come into the ark. Know well that the door that shut Noah in shut the world out; and though, when the pitiless storm came pelting on their heads, they beat upon the door, saying, "Let me in!" the door did not open. For 120 years they were invited.

But meanwhile the storm was brewing. The fountains of heaven were filling up. The pry was being placed beneath the foundations of the great deep. The last year had come, the last month, the last week, the last day, the last hour, the last moment. In an awful dash, an ocean dropped from the sky, and another rolled up from beneath; and God rolled the earth and sky into one wave of universal destruction.

So men now put off going into the ark. They say they will wait twenty years first. They will have a little longer time with their worldly associates. They will wait until they get older.

I have no doubt that derision kept many people out of the ark. The world laughed to see a man go in, and said:

[illegible]

The Last of the Buffaloes.

I was told when I came here two months ago that if I wanted to find out what was trustworthy concerning the extermination of the buffalo, Capt. Jack Bridges was the man to see. As Bridges was then hunting in the Sierra[illegible] Mountains in Mexico, I took the cars to Gallego, where, through the courtesy of R. E. [illegible], Superintendent of the Mexican Central Railroad Company, I was provided with an inoffensive bronco to ride over to Bridges' camp, some thirty-eight miles.

Capt. Jack, who for years past has been one of the most distinguished and fearless hunters in the West, was the first man to make a contract to provide a large number of buffalo hides. The idea suggested itself to a pelt-dealing firm in Leavenworth, Kas., who sent for Bridges, telling him to procure 1,200 hides at once, as they wished to try them in the English market. Bridges signed the contract, and, hiring a lot of "skinners," began his destructive warfare against the bison. In five weeks and four days he killed with his own hand 1,143 buffaloes, and the hides of these animals constituted the first shipment of buffalo-robes to Europe. While the contract was very lucrative, owing to the great abundance of the animals, the slaughter disgusted Bridges, who was a natural-born sportsman, so much that he refused to be instrumental in the future in any wholesale destruction of good meat. He [illegible]

[illegible]

A RETURN.

The charm of the golden times,
The glow of the autumn day,
And the garden walks with their murmuring bees,
Soothe all my cares away.

My soul is sick of the strife
Where passions never are stilled;
But here, in the rest of a simple life
God's promise is [illegible].

[illegible]

Then trouble and pain depart,
And comfort and peace draw near,
And all the fires of a [illegible] heart
Like phantoms disappear.

And the autumn lands grow fair
With a light that seems divine;
And the treasures I left in childhood there,
[illegible]
—The Quiver.

A CASHIER'S STORY.

I am an old bank cashier—country bank, if you please. I began work in that situation nearly thirty years ago, and the changes in our bank since then have been few and far between. Some of the old men have been replaced; we have increased our capital stock; we have a vault with a time-lock, the directors' [illegible] pulled on my boots and gone for my overcoat.

[illegible]

"You are not going out?" exclaimed mother and sister in chorus.

"Yes, to the bank."

"At this time of night, and in this storm! You must be crazy."

"But I feel an impulse to go. Indeed, I can't wait another minute."

I snatched my revolver from the hall-tree drawer and buttoned my overcoat as I ran. I had a savage bulldog about the house as a burglar alarm, and when I had run a quarter of a mile I found him at my heels. I was so excited and under such a spell that I scarcely noticed the storm, which had driven everybody from the streets and closed all places of business. I ran on until I was within half a block of the bank. Then I came to a dead halt and asked myself what could be wrong that I noted so much like an idiot. If a messenger had come to my house with the information that the bank building was on fire I could not have hurried on faster or had a stronger feeling that my presence was necessary. Well, here I was in the storm-swept street, the building looming up before me in the darkness, and seemed to be all right, and what excuse could I make for myself? I felt ashamed for a moment, and then the old feeling came over me stronger than ever.

I felt it my duty to enter the bank and make an examination, and the dog, as if possessed of the same feeling, led the way. I had carried the [illegible]

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 13, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

The Republicans carried Chicago at the recent election by [illegible] majority. It was a contest between Socialism and law and order, and Socialism was downed.

The political campaigns are disclosing some queer coincidences, as for instance the holding of political meetings on Sunday by the third party Prohibitionists and the Chicago Anarchists.

More than one-half the copper product last year came from the Lake Superior region. This is something which Michigan feels rightly proud of. The ore is not only of an excellent quantity but shows no diminution.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune has been to the trouble of overhauling the record of the foolish person whom Mr. Cleveland appointed and maintained at the head of the General Land Office. It is found that of 120 decisions which this luminary has made, fifty-five have been reversed, sixteen have been modified and only forty-nine have been affirmed. And yet Sparks remains.

The St. Paul [illegible] warns Michigan people to keep an eye on the Mormons. [illegible]

[illegible]

Northern Michigan News.

J. I. Atkins has purchased Capt. Lucas' boat house and boats at Petoskey, and will have them fitted out in excellent shape for the summer trade.

Daniel McGinnis, of Walton, was shot in a drunken row at Fife Lake recently. McGinnis goes around with a ball in his head and now, [illegible] his skull is also cracked from a blow.

A special train, containing about 200 men, passed through Petoskey one day recently, bound north. The men were on their way to commence work on the Marquette and St. Mary railroad.

Perry Hannah has just purchased $250,000 worth of real estate in Chicago. It is understood, however, that this does not indicate his removal from Traverse City, but is simply an investment.

The speculation fever has struck Ann Arbor, and the rich young editor of the Courier, Mr. J. E. Beal, has gone to the Soo to speculate. It will take him about one month to drop the $70,000 left him by his uncle, the late Rice A. Beal.

The only inmate of the county jail at St. Ignace, probably put out because he could not take part in the various contests, threw down the stove in the jail lately, and was nearly smothered with smoke, before his calls for help were heard.

Petoskey Democrat: Joseph Balfour, of Bear Lake cut ten cords of wood from one maple tree last week. [illegible]

[illegible]

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be [illegible] to D. M. [illegible], Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

New York Evening Schools.

One of the most useful schools in New York City is the Evening High School. More than twenty years ago the superintendent of schools and his assistants, saw the necessity of having an evening school organized, in which the higher branches of learning could be taught to young men and adults, and recommended such a school to the consideration of the board of education. That body favored the proposition, and in the fall of 1866, organized the evening high school with Dr. Thomas Hunter as principal. Over seven hundred pupils entered at the opening. Since then annual sessions have been held from the first of October to the first of April, the attendance ranging from twelve hundred at the opening night to eight hundred at the close of the term.

Twenty-five teachers are now employed, who give instruction in English, French, German and Latin, higher mathematics and arithmetic, anatomy, physiology and chemistry, besides many other practical branches. Classes in higher arithmetic and book keeping are taught those useful branches, and qualified to enter mercantile pursuits, while those in anatomy, physiology and chemistry are acquiring knowledge of sciences which will greatly aid them in preparing for such professions as they may select.

[illegible]

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

Probate Notice.

[illegible]

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

[illegible]

Pan-Zama Baba

[illegible]

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, O. D. Wood, A. Butters, A. Fox, F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

[illegible]

CORRESPONDENTS:
[illegible]

Bank of
Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Its Officers
Security in Banking
This Bank Invites
This Bank Will
Parties Seeking
Investment Notes.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
AND
JOBBING SHOP.
Will also do
Contracting & Building.
Shop on South Terrace.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
By Water and Rail
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS.
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building.
Correspondence solicited.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

CROSS & SONS,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.
My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver Headed Canes etc.
is complete.
If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
ON
Charlevoix Summer Resorts.
Carpenters and Painters.
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches.
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
J. BEAUVAIS.

DO YOU
KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS?
DEALING!
It represents something you like and appreciate
It illustrates our method of doing business. It means square dealing. Don't you see this is what we preach, practice and guarantee.
HONEST VALUES,
LATEST STYLES,
FAIREST PRICES,
Put before you in opening our elegant new stock of Early Spring Styles in
BOOTS & SHOES
D. SHERWOOD & CO'S

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid
FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CHURCH, HALE & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Butters Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible], Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey, Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at Law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. LARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st., Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. [illegible]

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 231, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

[illegible]

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible]

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
R. A. Campbell, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible]

NEWMAN HOUSE.
[illegible]
Charlevoix, Mich.

[illegible]

PILE DRIVER.

[illegible]

SURVEYORS.

[illegible]

DENTIST.

[illegible]

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.

[illegible]

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

[illegible]

MISSING LINKS.

North Carolina has a settlement called Pinch a Penny.

A desolate town in the heart of Arizona bears the somewhat appropriate name of "Total Wreck."

It is estimated that about one hundred thousand species of flowering plants are now known to botanists.

A medical writer in Harper's declares that life is but a temporary victor over the causes that produce death.

A Sydney paper avers that the Prince of Wales gives to ladies diamond latchkeys which are worn as a sort of decoration.

An amateur once asked Liszt how to play the piano with soul. The genial master replied: "You must first of all have a soul."

A English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of 81,000 acres of land in Tehama county, California, for grazing purposes.

A Philadelphia optician says that there are more people wearing glasses in that city than in Boston and New York combined.

Mark Walton died 205 years ago, and the fishing clubs of London are taking steps to set up a statue of him in Winchester Cathedral.

The biggest "big gun" in the world is a 112-ton bellower, with which Humbert, of Italy, expects to salute the first king who assaults him.

A well-known oculist who has examined the eyes of 1,000 persons who work by the incandescent electric light found in no case any particularly injurious effects.

A Burlington, Vt., man takes railroad rails, has them painted black and the flange bored for wires, and then uses them for fence posts. The effect is said to be unique and striking.

The type-writer, now in such common [illegible]

[illegible]

GAMBETTA.

A Description of Madame Adam's Salon—A Coterie of French Celebrities.

As we were in the habit of passing some of the winter months in the south of France, we used to receive before our departure, and our salon was the first to open. We ceased our receptions just at the moment when everybody is overwhelmed with invitations, and running from salon to salon without having time to stop in any one; and then, on our return, we re-opened our salon just when other people were closing theirs. Adam had often spoken to me of Laurent-Pichat's evenings, at which he was a regular attendant. He talked to me especially about a young man whose name began to be mentioned a good deal in our circle, Gambetta, who told the men of 1848 what he thought of them, without mincing his words, saying again and again that their traditions must be broken; that it was no good troubling about the dogmas of the party, which hampered its action, like swaddling clothes kept too long around the body of a child, and that this naive policy must be replaced by a march, step for step, in the path traced by the enemy.

"To try to conquer with projectiles flung from too great a height is mere silliness," said M. Leon Gambetta; "we are under the Empire, let us combat the Empire with the methods of the Empire. It is useless to put on dancing shoes in order to walk in a sewer; let us put on sewermen's boots. M. Louis Blanc if he returned, would vote again, from principle, for the return of Prince Napoleon. Facts never touch principles, however much they give them the lie. Very good; let us wipe out the principle, and let us take account of the fact only. If we shut ourselves up in our doctrines, we shall never triumph. We must drive Napoleon III. back upon his own men, and overthrow Rouher with the enemies of Rouher [illegible]

[illegible]

... cases as this everybody is embarrassed. My old friend Jules de Lasteyrie, a "Lafayette" in manners, and generally so kind, said to me in a whisper, "A frock coat I can admit—yes; but I cannot go so far as that."

It was Lasteyrie's arm which I should have taken to go in to dinner, and I replied: "And yet, my dear friend, the only way to rehabilitate that at my table is to give it the best place. It is you whom I deprive, but you will approve me."

He put on his air of a grand gentleman, and answered. "You are quite right, that is what must be done. We shall be better able to judge the man thus, and we shall see if he understands and if he has anything of the 'grand' nature in him."

I took Gambetta's arm, to his profound astonishment, and placed him at table on my right hand, while Jules de Lasteyrie sat at my left.

Hardly had we taken our seats when Gambetta leaned toward me and whispered, "Madame, I shall never forget a lesson given in this manner."

This place on my right hand Gambetta was destined to keep in my house.—Madame Juliette Adam, in Harper's Magazine for November.

Servants' Wages.

It must be admitted that all dealings with female house servants are entrusted to women. They, then are responsible for the prices paid for the work they have to offer; and it is equally clear that they are paying for it at the ratio with which nothing else in the labor market is comparable. Are female servants scarce? Certainly not. Look at the crowded benches in our so-called "intelligence [Heaven save the mark!] offices;" glance at the long line of steerage passengers, as they defile at Castle Garden from the crowded decks of our emigrant ships. Hundreds of women [illegible]

[illegible]

An Answer Wanted.

[illegible]

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

[illegible]

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

GRENADES:
Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
PRICES.
Pints, - Per Doz., $10.00.
Quarts, - " " 15.00.
"STAR"
Tubular Fire Extinguisher.
Plain, $12.00 per doz.
Ornamt'd, 15.00 per doz.
The "Star"
EXTINGUISHER
Price, $80.00 Each.
"STAR" CHEMICAL.
PRICE.
$200.00 EACH.
The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

NEW Double Action "TRAHERN" FORCE PUMP.
Simplest, Cheapest, Most Durable, Works Easy!
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD
TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
Will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
W. JOHNSTON & CO.
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.

Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS
Dealers in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
Milwaukee
Export and Lager Beer

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN

SMITH & PARMELEE, - PUBLISHERS

Benton's Departure from Congress

The close of the session reminds me of the last night of the Thirty-third Congress in the House of Representatives. The Senate sent over 14[illegible] amendments to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and it was 8 o'clock in the morning before they were disposed of by a committee of conference. Mr. Pratt then asked whether it would be in order to have the restaurant servants bring in breakfast. "Let me amend the question," said Mike Walsh, "by having cocktails and whisky punches introduced also." A conversational debate followed, during which some very clever things were said, and at last the Sergeant-at-Arms reported a quorum present. Several bills were then passed under a suspension of the rules, and during the taking of the yeas and nays the clerk called Mr. Benton's name, when that gentleman appeared at the door of the main aisle and protested, with violent gesticulation, against his name being called. He said he was an ex-member, and that the session that day was a libel on the Sabbath. Some confusion followed this episode, when the Speaker pro tem., Mr. Orr, told the gentleman that he was out of order. "I am not a member, sir," growled Mr. Benton. "Then," promptly retorted Mr. Orr, "if the gentleman is not a member, the doorkeeper will put him out." Mr. Benton did not say another word, but taking the package in which he had tied up the contents of his desk, he left the House, thus, on March 4, 1855, closing a Congressional career that he had commenced in the Senate [illegible]

"CRUSH THE DEAD LEAVES."

"Crush the dead leaves under thy feet,"
Gaze not on them with mournful sigh;
Think not earth has no glory left
Because a few of its frail things die;
Spring-time will bring fresh verdure as sweet—
"Crush the dead leaves under thy feet."

Look not back with despairing heart,
Think not life's morning has been in vain;
Rich, broad fields lie before thee yet
Ready to yield their golden grain.
Autumn may bring thee fruitage sweet—
"Crush the dead leaves under thy feet."

Murmur not if the shadows fall
Thick and dark on thy earthly way,
Hearts there are which must walk in shade,
Till they reach the light of eternal day.
Life is not long, and the years are fleet—
"Crush the dead leaves under thy feet."

Bravely work, with a steadfast soul;
Make others happy, and thou shalt find
Happiness flowing back into thy heart;
A quiet peace and contented mind.
If earth be lonely, then heaven is sweet—
"Crush the dead leaves under thy feet."

—[Mrs. Harry Don.

PETERKIN.

"Be you actilly cryin', Jeminy?" queried 'Squire Eaton, as he came into the tidy, cheery kitchen which was the pride of Jeminy Eaton's heart.

"Yes, I be, Azarier," snapped the wife of his bosom, as she frizzled the dried beef and then turned from the jar "some o' them plums Azarier relished so much."

"The Square" was cold, "he'd ben travelin' all the afternoon," from the store to his farm.

"The critters," two sleek, slow-going oxen, "allus took their own time" in travelin', and the Squire invariably made a day of it when he was "obleeged [illegible]

[illegible] went out to the currant bushes; there'd been a beatin' rain that night, and jest at my feet lay somethin' green an' gold an' blue a glitterin'. Pickin' it up, I saw 'twas a bird not quite dead, and a stranger in these parts. Jeminy warmed it to life, an' it chanced to be the sweetest singer I ever heard. Jeminy picked her les an' sold 'em to buy a cage, an' home wouldn't be home without Peterkin. He allus had sech tender, lovin' ways, nestlin' up to a feller's neck, an' tryin' ter tell you how he loved you. An' Jeminy sot as much by him as I hev. Only the desire to save me, wrackin' my old bones with extra work, to git our tax money, made her think of sellin' the bird, an' when you spoke o' slayin' him, she just went into fits o' cryin', an' then thinks I, mebbe by walkin' fast, I kin get him afore he's killed.

"I must tell you, darter, somethin' boun' ter be done, if this slaughter of birds continues, or the bugs and worms will destroy our crops. What's the use o' we farmers buyin' fine fruit trees ter hev 'em destroyed by some pest? I've been a farmer a long, long time, an' sech a thing as barren plum, pear, peach, cherry and apple trees, was a rarity. To be sure, we had our good an' poor fruit seasons, an' we youngsters was afeared the birds 'd hook too many cherries, an' berries, but we certainly didn't hev so many pesterments with our trees, until the birds were destroyed, first by boys an' hunters, then because silly wimmen wanted 'em ter hat trimmin'.

"Old as I be, I do love to see purty bonnets, an' I allus git Jeminy one, but I couldn't abide to see her traipsin' about with two dried-up dead birds, their beaks and eyes lookin' despisable to me, stuck up on her gray head. Jeminy read to me of a fine lady whose ball dress was trimmed with the plumage of three hundred birds [illegible]

THE YOUNG FOLKS.

The Child and the Snowflake.

One day as she stood at the window, watching the busy street, and wondering why she alone of all children was crippled and thin and weak, a snowflake came sailing down through the December sky, paused a moment at the window and then crept in at a broken pane and rested on her wasted hand. The child smiled and was glad, and said:

"Did you pity me, that you came to see me?"

"I have only pity for the poor and helpless," replied the snowflake.

"Where are your companions?"

"They will be here. I had a race with them and I reached earth first."

"It was so good of you to come in and see me," whispered the child. "Do you know that I am lame and ill, and that no one loves me? All the sunshine and the happiness seem for others—all the suffering and the shadows for me. I wish I had been a snowflake. It must be so jolly to go roving about as—"

The snowflake had disappeared, and in its place was a tiny drop of water. The child was grieved, and she wept that her poor ray of sunshine had been dimmed almost as it reached her. But other flakes came and danced before the window and made merry and called to her:

"Come and be merry with us! A child should not weep and grieve."

"But I have no friends!" she answered.

"Then the snowflakes will be your friends. Almost every day we will come to talk with you."

"Do you know of heaven?" whispered the child as she dried her tears.

"It is a long, long way off," was the [illegible]

[illegible] snowy plumage, which the spectators were astonished to find was a living rat.

It is probable that it had been borne from its domicile, and observing the goose, hastened to it as a refuge. On the goose making land, the rat leaped from its back and scampered away.

A little boy of our acquaintance has an uncle who is a carpenter. Jamie delights to watch him at his work. One day Uncle John was cutting out a mortise, and he stopped to look in to see how deep it was, squinting his eyes up in a funny way. "O Uncle John," called Jamie, "let me look in! My eyes are littler than yours."

A youthful traveler on the Baltimore & Ohio Road was curious to know the meaning of certain sign-posts along the track. "Conductor," asked he, "What does W. and R. mean?" "Why, ring and whistle," was the reply. "I can see well enough how W. stands for wring, but I can't see how R. stands for whistle."—Harper's Bazar.

A minister's little boy, who had apparently heard liberal views upon the subject of woman's influence and duties in the world, made a practical application of his theories. When asked by his father why he did not rise earlier one morning, he replied: "Well, you didn't." "True, but I did not retire so early as you did. I had to conduct a prayer meeting." "That wasn't any reason for not going to bed. Mother can hold prayer meetings just as well as you can."—Boston Journal.

Little Grace took little Ted's toy elephant away from him and wouldn't give it back. Ted ran at his sister like a tow headed fury and Grace gave him a sounding slap on the face. Ted's cries brought their mother to the scene of action and she carried him off to bed, leaving the aggressor [illegible]

[illegible]

MICHIGAN.

Condensed Reports of the Latest News from All Parts of the State.

Latest From Lansing.

SENATE.

Bills were passed to amend the charter of Battle Creek; to incorporate the village of Eagle, Clinton county; bill to amend certain sections of the act relative to taking private property for public uses in cities and villages; to cede to the United States jurisdiction over the land now and to be occupied in enlarging and improving the "Lake Superior Ship Canal Railway and Iron Company, and the Portage Lake and River Improvement Company." The Judiciary Committee reported adversely a certain bill to prevent swindling. Senator J. W. Babcock has introduced a bill to eliminate from the statutes all obsolete and inoperative laws. The Governor in it is empowered to appoint a commission of revision to report to the next legislature.

The Senate passed a concurrent resolution to loan the state camp equipage to the Knights of Pythias, and following bills: To amend the act providing for compulsory education in certain cases; to legalize the proceedings in issuing bonds of the Township of Warren, Midland county; to authorize the Calhoun County Agricultural Society to mortgage its real estate; to provide for publishing the proceedings of Boards of Supervisors in newspapers in counties; providing for the incorporation and regulating of building and loan associations.

The Senate passed bills to establish a municipal court in the city of East Saginaw; to revise the Muskegon City charter; to restrict [illegible]

[illegible] the whole; after nine amendments the bill passed. Nothing else of importance was considered.

The house bills passed to amend the act creating the State Bureau of Labor; authorizing the State Board of Auditors to refund $160 to Daniel H. Walters, by reason of over valuation of land sold him by the State, and to authorize the township board of Portsmouth, in Bay county, to borrow money. The most important bill considered was Mr. Webber's appropriating $7,000 to purchase land for use of the Ionia House of Correction. There were several lively tilts between members, and the bill was finally defeated. The House went into committee of the whole; Mr. Webber's garnishee bill was under consideration, and after a long discussion passed the committee. The bill passed the House to revise the laws providing for the incorporation of manufacturing companies.

STATE ITEMS.

—The vessel owners at Cheboygan are after a dry-dock.

—It will cost $600 to number the houses in Port Huron.

—Navigation on Lake Superior is expected to open April 21.

—Lansing is to be lighted by electricity after the 1st of May.

—Leslie people are forming a co-operative building association.

—A post of the Sons of Veterans has been organized at Lawton.

—The insane asylum of Kalamazoo County contains thirty-nine inmates.

—Detroit parties are talking of establishing a capsule factory at Ionia.

—An effort is being made to induce some capitalist to establish a bank at Capac.

[illegible]

SCIENTIFIC.

In the case of trees which bear in alternate years, judicious thinning will often result in considerable fruit in the off years.

A proper, safe working load for wire ropes is as follows: One-half inch in diameter, 1,000 pounds; five-eighths rope, 1,500 pounds; three-fourths rope, 3,500 pounds; one inch rope, 6,000 pounds. This is for nineteen wires to the strand, hemp centers.

The attention of all electricians is called to the fact the French Government has offered a prize of 50,000 francs (about $10,000) for a scheme rendering the application of electricity possible and economical as a means of heat, light, chemical action, mechanical purposes, and medical purposes. The adjudication of the prize is left to the Academy of Science at Paris, and correspondence from all nations is invited.

Dr. Gilles de la Tourette has recently published a monograph upon normal locomotion and the variations of the gait caused by the diseases of the nervous system. He found, from a comparison of a large number of cases, that the average length of pace is, for men, 25 inches; for women, 20 inches. The step with the right foot is somewhat longer than that with the left. The feet are separated laterally in walking about 4½ inches in men and about 5 inches in women.

An easy and reputed effective method of restoring faded ink on old manuscripts is to moisten the paper with water and then paint over with a soft brush dipped in ammonium sulphide. Most inks contain iron generally combined with an organic acid which in process of time becomes de[illegible]

Romances of the Custer Massacre.

What tragedies and mysteries, stranger than any revealed on the mimic stage, transpire in our every day life and elude even the keen quest of the reporters. Among those who were gazetted as having perished in the Custer massacre was Lieut. Harrington, a dashing young officer, who had previously wedded Miss Berard, of West Point. No trace of his body was ever discovered. Not a bone, or a button, or a scrap of uniform which had belonged to him could be found on the fatal field. About two years ago and nearly a decade after the butchery, the wife declared that she had received a message telling her that her husband was not dead, and she resolved to set out in search of him. She never explained her reasons for believing him alive, but she could not be dissuaded from her purpose.

Finally she set out, some of her relatives going with her. While passing through the Indian Territory she one day disappeared as suddenly and absolutely as if the ground had opened and swallowed her. From that day to this no trace of her has been discovered. Whether she wandered away in a fit of mental aberration induced by her grief or deliberately separated from her party can not be determined. All that is known is that she vanished without warning and that her fate is an enigma.

Another romance originating in the Custer massacre is identified with the gold watch worn by Lieut. Crittenden, who also perished by the vengeful bullets or knives of Sitting Bull's people. The watch was a present which his father, Gen. Crittenden, had purchased in England some time before. It became the booty of a [illegible]

A Traveler's Ingenuity.

A striking instance of ingenuity in taking advantage of the resources of nature in an emergency is found in Sir Samuel Baker's account of his travels in Abyssinia. His stock of soap had become exhausted, and as he possessed abundance of various kinds of fat, he determined to convert a quantity of this grease into soap. For this purpose he required both potash and lime; and how were these to be obtained? The [illegible] tree, he found, was rich in potash; he therefore burned a large quantity and made a strong lye with the ashes, which he concentrated by boiling. There was no limestone; but the river produced a plentiful supply of oyster shells, which, if burned, produce excellent lime. What was next wanted was a kiln in which to burn the shells, and this he constructed out of one of the great ant hills which rise to ten feet high, common to those valleys, and which possess a very hard external crust. Two natives hollowed out one of those hills; a draught hole was made below from the outside; the hollow was loaded with wood and filled with some six bushels of oyster shells, which were again covered with fuel; and after burning twenty-four hours a supply of excellent lime was obtained. Then commenced his soap-boiling, which was effected in a large copper pot of Egyptian manufacture. The ingredients of potash, lime and fat were then carefully mixed; and, after boiling [illegible] having been constantly [illegible] obtained excellent [illegible] had in all about forty [illegible]

Mrs. E. A. Blake, of Hinsdale, N. H., has used Piso's Cure for Consumption for severe Bronchial troubles, and finds it superior to any thing she ever tried. She is never without it in the house.

[illegible] claims twenty millions.

[illegible] New York [illegible] nearly a month with a [illegible] having tried several [illegible] relief, finally used [illegible] Cure which, he says, [illegible] and effectual."

[illegible] has won the fight and [illegible] fares on its street cars.

[illegible] Malarial Infection

[illegible]

[illegible] vetoed the lottery [illegible] by the legislature.

[illegible] in the World

[illegible] Medical Discovery" [illegible]

[illegible] four female missionaries [illegible] million of women.

[illegible] True To-Day.

[illegible] C. Spencer, late [illegible] Secretary of the United States wrote [illegible] Pond's Extract [illegible]

[illegible] latest explosive, [illegible] in English.

[illegible] of Battenberg, is [illegible] autumn.

[illegible] gave her Castoria.
[illegible] cried for Castoria.
[illegible] clung to Castoria.
[illegible] gave them Castoria.

[illegible] people have [illegible] Los Angeles, Cal., [illegible] weeks.

DYSPEPSIA

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

PHYSICIANS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT

DETECTIVES

"This is all right, 'Hood's Sarsaparilla,' Can't Fool me Twice."

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine. In very many respects it is so different from any and all other medicines ever offered to the public that it is with peculiar force and propriety that it may be said to be "Peculiar to Itself." It is peculiar to itself, in a strictly medicinal sense, in three important particulars viz.: first, in the combination of remedial agents used; second, in the proportion in which they are mixed; third, in the process by which the active curative properties of the preparation are secured.

These three important points make Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar in its medicinal merit, as it accomplishes cures wholly unprecedented in the history of medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is also peculiar in its general appearance. Note the neatness in every detail in the way it is put up, the well-printed wrapper, the explicit directions, the care taken to prevent breakage or injury. Remember that every wrapper bears the fac simile of the signature of the proprietors.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar in the phenomenal record of the sales it has attained, never equalled by any other preparation in so short a time. Older medicines have been forced to stand aside when real medicinal merit was considered, and to-day Hood's Sarsaparilla stands the leading medicine of its kind in the country. It is peculiar in its strength and economy. 100 doses one dollar. It is a concentrated extract from Sarsaparilla, Dock, Juniper Berries, Mandrake, Dandelion, and other valuable vegetable remedies, and is much stronger than any similar preparation upon the market. Hence, much smaller doses of Hood's Sarsaparilla are necessary than is the case with other medicines. A dollar bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla contains an average of more than 100 doses, and will last a month, while others will average to last not over a week. Hence on the simple question of economy Hood's Sarsaparilla is given a decided preference. If you have never tried this medicine, do so this season. Do not be induced to take any other, but be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar to Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

DR. JOSEPH A. SEWELL'S TREATISE ON HOG CHOLERA. Its Prevention and Cure. Sent Free. C. S. Jenks & Co., Bloomington, Ill.

Free! Free! Free! DR. J. P. BARNUM, the well known Louisville druggist, will send free of charge on request for it, a circular containing a most valuable list of superior toilet articles and medicinal remedies of real value. Dr. Barnum is Professor of Chemistry in Louisville School of Pharmacy, and Chemist for L. and N. R. R. Co., and American Plate Glass Co. He makes a specialty of all kinds of chemical examinations, and refers to Courier Journal Co., or any bank in Louisville. Address C. P. BARNUM & CO., Louisville, Ky.

PENNYROYAL PILLS "CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH." The Original and Only Genuine. Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Indispensable to LADIES. Ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. Chichester Chemical Co., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

Highest Award of Medals in Europe and America. The neatest, quickest, safest and most powerful remedy known for Rheumatism, Pleurisy, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, colds in the chest and all aches and pains. Endorsed by 5,000 Physicians and Druggists of the highest repute. Benson's Plasters promptly relieve and cure where other plasters and greasy salves, liniments and lotions, are absolutely useless. Beware of imitations under similar sounding names, such as "Capsicum," "Capsicin," "Capsicine," as they are utterly worthless [illegible] Ask for BENSON'S AND TAKE NO OTHERS. All druggists. SEABURY & JOHNSON, Proprietors, New York.

A Skin of Beauty is a Joy Forever.

DR. T. FELIX GOURAUD'S Oriental Cream or Magical Beautifier.

Removes Tan, Pimples, Freckles, Moth Patches, Rash and Skin diseases, and every blemish on beauty, and defies detection. It has stood the test of 30 years, and is so harmless we taste it to be sure the preparation is properly made. Accept no counterfeit of similar name. The distinguished Dr. L. A. Sayer said to a lady of the haut ton (a patient): "As you ladies will use them, I recommend 'Gouraud's Cream' as the least harmful of all the Skin preparations." [illegible] FERD. T. HOPKINS, Manager, 48 Bond St., N. Y. For sale by all Druggists and Fancy Goods Dealers throughout the U. S., Canada and Europe. Beware of base imitations. $1,000 Reward for arrest and proof of any one selling the same.

DR. KILMER'S OCEAN-WEED HEART REMEDY

A Corrector, Regulator, Nerve-Rest.

"The Heart is the Seat of Life."

One of every five we meet has some form of Heart Disease, and is in constant danger of Apoplexy or Sudden Death.

SYMPTOMS and DISEASE, For which this Remedy should be taken: Heart-pains, Palpitation, Heart-dropsy, Skip-beats, Throbbing, Spasms (Fits), Numbness, Purple-lips, Poor-blood, Shaky-Nerves, Syncopia, Faint-spells, Hot flashes, Paralysis, Heart-sympathetic.

THIS REMEDY IS A SPECIFIC.

Price $1.00—6 bottles $5.00.

Prepared at Dr. Kilmer's Dispensary, Binghamton, N. Y., U. S. A.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

PATENTS Obtained for $20 by H. B. Meriwether, Attorney, St. Louis, Mo. Advice free.

$5 TO $8 A DAY. Samples worth $1.50 FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Write BREWSTER SAFETY REIN HOLDER CO., Holly, Mich.

HOME STUDY. Book-keeping, Business Forms, Penmanship, Arithmetic, Shorthand, etc., thoroughly taught by mail. Circulars free. BRYANT'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, Buffalo, N. Y.

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York.

TELEPHONES —FOR— PRIVATE LINES Straight or Crooked. Call Bells, Ear-Phone, etc. Four Styles. Patents. Prices Low. Send for Illustrated Circular. E. E. Harbert & Co., 151 La Salle St., Chicago.

OPIUM MORPHINE HABIT CURED AT HOME. NO PAIN. [illegible] THE HUMANE REMEDY CO., LAFAYETTE, Ind.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest.

CATARRH

Sold by druggists or sent by mail. 50c. E. T. Hazeltine, Warren, Pa.

One Agent (Merchant only) wanted in every town for TANSILL'S PUNCH 5¢

We believe your "Tansill's Punch" 5-cent cigar to be the best in America for the money. W. H. Sherman & Co., [illegible] Address R. W. TANSILL & CO., Chicago.

FITS STOPPED FREE. Marvelous success. Insane Persons Restored. Dr. KLINE'S GREAT NERVE RESTORER for all Brain & Nerve Diseases. [illegible] Send names, P. O. and express address of afflicted to Dr. KLINE, 931 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa. Druggists. BEWARE OF IMITATING FRAUDS.

M. N. P. Co. CHICAGO—No. 46.

SWAYNE'S

THROAT & LUNG TROUBLES CONQUERED BY SWAYNE'S WILD CHERRY

SWAYNE'S VERMIFUGE THE CHILDREN'S MEDICINE

TO KEEP HEALTHY 1. EXERCISE DAILY 2. EAT GOOD FOOD 3. BE CHEERFUL 4. USE SWAYNE'S PILLS

SWAYNE'S PANACEA PURIFIES SYPHILITIC BLOOD.

LONDON HAIR RESTORER (ENGLISH) DR. SWAYNE & SON, SOLE AGENT.

SWAYNE'S OINTMENT THE GREAT CURE FOR ITCHING PILES & SKIN HUMOR

SYMPTOMS [illegible] SWAYNE'S OINTMENT [illegible] DR. SWAYNE & SON, PHILADELPHIA.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established. 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 13, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Northern Michigan.

A lady served as one of the election clerks at Big Rapids. Men must go.

The Oddfellows of Mancelona are making preparations to organize an Encampment.

Ramsdell carried but one town in Grand Traverse county, that being Green Lake, by 10 votes.

Herald: Scarcely any doubt remains of the re-election of Judge Ramsdell by 200 or more majority.

Mancelona Herald: A minstrel troupe is about to organize in this village. Neighboring towns will take warning.

Connable & Sons are preparing for the opening of the fishing season at Petoskey, and anticipate a larger business than ever before.

It cost a St. Ignace man $26 to rush into the arms of a strange woman and kiss her the other day, and he claimed it was all a mistake, at that.

The Traverse City fire department is to be represented by a running team at the state firemen's convention to be held at Grand Rapids next month.

East Jordan hopes soon to have a new opera house, which when completed will be as fine a building of its size as any one of its kind in the state of Michigan.

The register of deeds office is one of the busiest places in the Soo. He and his clerk are kept busy recording the numerous transfers of property, and examining titles.—Chippewa County News.

Jos. H. Spires, who succeeds Col. Billings in the management of Park Place hotel, is an experienced hotel man. He formerly had charge of the Cutler house in Grand Haven, one of the best hotels in the state.

J. H. Angell, of Spencer Creek, died last Friday afternoon and was buried Sunday. The funeral was under the auspices of Spencer Creek lodge I. O. O. F., assisted by the Mancelona and Westwood lodges of the same order.

Rev. J. C. Van Auken, formerly of Northport, but at present located at Sault St. Marie, has been making some lucky hits in real estate transactions. Last week he got hold of $7,000 worth of lots which he will let go of at a proper time.

Elk Rapids and Mancelona did nobly on the salary amendment. The vote in Elk Rapids stood 232 in favor of the amendment and none against it, and in Mancelona 110 in favor of it and only 8 votes against it. This showing speaks well for the intelligence of the voters of this northern county.

At a meeting held by Elder Robinson of East Jordan recently, considerable commotion was awakened by the actions of a maniac, who entered the room and began making assault upon the men, women and children, stating that he was acting by command of the Almighty. Sheriff Jerrue was called and the man put under arrest but he was finally handed over to the care of his friends.

The Antrim Board of Supervisors is as follows: Banks, D. H. Stebbins; Central Lake, John Read; Echo, William Bennett; Jordan, Benton L. Cadkins; Warner, James D. Rogers; Mancelona, Geo. H. Bender; Custer, Wm. J. Cait; Helena, Henry Lyon; Milton, Alexander Campbell; Elk Rapids, Milton B. Lang; Kearney, Coleman W. Doolittle; Forest Home, Thomas D. Austin.

Some idea of the recent real estate craze at Sault St. Marie may be gathered from two transactions: A lot on the main business street that sold six weeks ago for $62 per front foot brought a month later $80 per foot; two days afterward $100, two days more $125, next day $150, and sold last Saturday week for $200. Another instance, a piece of seventeen acres was purchased a year ago for $1,000 three weeks ago for $17,000, and last Friday week for $32,000. Farms three out miles have jumped from $10 an acre to $75.

The Marquette Journal thinks that the Gogebic iron mines are going to experience difficulty in securing vessels to carry away their ore the coming season. It says the Marquette and Menominee mines will be very certain to send 3,000,000 tons to market by water during the season of 1887. Adding 400,000 for the Vermillion mines, and putting the maximum for which tonnage can be procured at 4,500,000 tons, and the outside figure for Gogebic mines would be 1,100,000. They could secure vessels easily enough by paying extra rates, but this they cannot afford to do.

Cheboygan Tribune: James Barclay arrived home from the Spanish River, Ont., region, where he had been spending some weeks looking over quite an amount of standing pine timber. He says the pine is not of a high grade, there being but little uppers, but is excellent common, free of black knots and shakes. The country is well watered with streams, but very rough and logging is much more expensive than in this region. He left Toronto Monday morning. He talked with many business men and he says the great majority are not in sympathy with the stand of the Canadian officials upon the fishery question. He says there is a large force of men at work on the extension of the road to the Soo, that the road is but little used and is in terrible condition as far as the rails are laid. Last Friday morning they came near having a bad accident. The tender run off the track on a bridge that was sixty feet above the river and was only held up by a small margin of the ties on one side.

Township Officers.

Following is a list of Supervisors, Clerks and Treasurers of the several Townships in Charlevoix county:

CHARLEVOIX.

Supervisor, F. J. Meech; Clerk, H. S. Harsha; Treasurer, H. Bedford.

BEAR LAKE.

Supervisor, John Kilborn; Clerk, A. Sutleff; Treasurer, D. H. Harrington.

BOYNE VALLEY.

Supervisor, Wm. A. Nelson; Clerk, W. R. Vliet; Treas., H. H. Eaton.

RESORT.

Supervisor, J. B. Williams; Clerk, S. S. Shepard; Treasurer, Luther Odell.

SOUTH ARM.

Supervisor Frank H. Ramsay; Clerk, L. C. Madison; Treas., H. L. Page.

MELROSE.

Supervisor, A. K. Smith; Clerk, W. Wiggins; Treasurer, O. S. Carl.

SPRINGVALE.

Supervisor, Jacob Leveck; Clerk, A. C. Madlen; Treas., W. Whitman.

HAYES.

Supervisor, Fred Smith; Clerk, C. H. Whitford; Treasurer, M. Cooper.

MARION.

Supervisor, Geo. Cooper; Clerk, W. D. Thompson; Treasurer, John A. Johnson.

EVANGELINE.

Supervisor, J. L. Heirigel; Clerk, W. J. Lewis; Treas., E. F. Allen.

EVELINE.

Supervisor, Asa Smith; Clerk, R. A. Miller; Treasurer, S. B. Brown.

NORWOOD.

Supervisor, Wm. Harris; Clerk, W. F. Pearl; Treas., James O'Brien.

Chandler, Wilson and Hudson not yet in. At the time of our going to press this morning, the vote of the county was not canvassed.

Grand Rapids Eagle: There are before the Legislature several bills relating to the control or regulation of the liquor traffic. They have been waiting for the outcome of the April election, consequently have been but little discussed as yet. The members naturally wanted first to know whether the people would vote to indorse their resolution for submitting an amendment which was not an amendment, not having been agreed to as such. The vote appears to be in doubt at this writing, but the official State canvass will definitely determine it. If the whole vote is in favor of the amendment, and if such a vote is taken as making it a part of the Constitution, the next duty of the Legislature will be to frame and pass some sort of a law to enforce as well as may be its provisions. If it is defeated, the Legislature still has the same power to pass a prohibitory law that it had when the law of 1855 was passed. But it is probable that the members will turn their attention to amending and improving, if possible, the liquor-tax law. Advice on that subject may be deemed gratuitous, but suggestions are in order. The Eagle is disposed to favor a measure increasing somewhat the tax upon dealers, and imposing stringent regulations to prevent abuses and such evils as might flow from abuses of the traffic. It is generally conceded that without strong police regulations the traffic in alcoholic liquors as a beverage is demoralizing or liable to become so. An increase of the tax, with vigilant surveillance of the traffic is believed to be the most efficient policy for the promotion of temperance, so far as the law of force can further that object. Another measure might be the granting of local option to counties; so that where the preponderance in favor of absolute prohibition is strong enough to guarantee its enforcement, that can be adopted by popular vote. Still another measure would seem to be good policy—that of a wider application of the funds arising from the tax than is made under the present law. It has been much urged in the recent canvass that the country towns generally received no benefit from the tax, while on the other hand they were compelled to share the common burden of county jails and the courts. There is some force in that complaint. Our legislature will do well to take these features of the current discussions into careful consideration, and to amend the laws accordingly, in the direction of the greatest efficiency attainable for the maintenance of good order and sobriety.

The New York legislature has appropriated $500,000 for the improvement of the Erie canal. Gov. Hill did not sign the bill, but allowed it to become a law without his signature. If the money is judiciously expended it will be a good investment for that state and certainly for the entire west. The grain producing section of the United States is especially interested in that highway. New York City largely owes its supremacy to that canal, and the prairie region its earlier development. Railroads have come to be the great reliance for transportation, but the canal, by forming a complete connection between lake and ocean, supplies a constant and incalculably valuable protection against extortionate transportation charges for grain. Any improvement in canal facilities is a National benefit, extending alike to the producing West and the consuming East.

The Republican party is the only political party in the country that by its principles or promises can furnish a safeguard against socialism, lawlessness and anarchy.

Rev. Frank Cressey, editor of the Center, the prohibition organ of the state, has discovered that he voted the wrong amendment ticket, voting against the measure, at which there is so much guying.

—The East Jordan Enterprise is bound to keep to the front in the matter of enterprise. Last week it devoted ten lines to election returns.

—Morgan Bates, at one time proprietor of the Marshall Statesman, is reporting the Haddock trial at Sioux City, Ia., for the Chicago News, and is doing excellent work.

Haxings from Hayes.

William P. McNally is making arrangements to build a house on his farm.

C. H. Whitford was chosen clerk at the breaking of the tie last Wednesday.

Jacob and Willis Chew bought 40 acres of section 11 last Saturday. Consideration, $550.

Geo. McRoberts returned from his visit to Muir last Friday.

Truman Case moved to Triple Rock last Monday. He intends keeping a boarding house.

The Petoskey Lime Co. have commenced work on their new deck and will complete it at once.

School commenced at the Hoggard school district last Monday. Nellie Burnett, teacher.

Navigation upon our highways just at present, is terrible.

The woods are blooming with leeks. The flavor of our butterine will soon be not loud but deep.

The winter wheat comes from under its covering of snow in good condition, and the prospect is favorable for a good crop.

There is no ice visible on the lake between Little Traverse bay and the Beavers. The roar of the waves once more sounds natural.

Ironton.

Frank Noyes goes to St. Ignace to run the tug Saugatuck this season.

Julia Clark, wife of Ed Clark, died on Friday.

Miss Ella Lloyd of Boyne City, visited her sister Mrs. Musen, last week.

H. H. Society meet at the home of Mrs. Purvis on Wednesday night. A full attendance is desired.

The furnace will be running in a few days.

Tom Fuller has bought a house and lot of John Vaughn. Mr. Vaughn having moved to his farm in South Arm.

A stove pipe through the roof of Tom Fuller's house was the cause of a little fire scare on Saturday afternoon. Very little damage was done.

Election is over and things have relapsed into the usual routine.

Misfortune again overtakes W. S. Johnson & Co., of Good Harbor. Friday night last fire destroyed their stock of goods at that place, valued at about $2,500. No insurance. The building which was entirely lost, belonged to S. S. Burnett.

Henry Ward Beecher, some time before his death, was asked what he thought of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll. His reply was characteristic: "Bob is a good fellow," he said, "but he is trying to do in thought what nature has never been able to do in physics—create a vacuum, and what is worse, he is trying to do what nature would be ashamed to do—make us believe the vacuum is desirable."

The controversy between Secretary Endicott and General Sheridan as to which of them is best qualified to command the army is still raging with unabated violence, and the former has been revoking some of the latter's assignments on the ground that they were unfit to be made. The efficiency of the military service is not likely to be seriously impaired by this unseemly quarrel, but the spectacle of a novice in military affairs like Phil Sheridan opposing his opinions to those of an expert in the science of war like old Mr. Endicott is as we have already observed, disheartening and demoralizing. Secretary Endicott's acquaintance with military science was acquired, it is true, wholly from his attendance at a militia muster in Salem, Mass., in the wet summer of 1858, but we believe that in the entire course of his experience as a soldier Sheridan is the only man who ever cared to argue army questions with him.—Philadelphia Press.

Notice.

We, the undersigned, hereby agree to close our places of business on Sunday morning at 8 o'clock. All patrons will take due notice and govern themselves accordingly. This agreement holds good until further notice.

A. J. McLeod,
John McCabe.
G. W. Jefferies.

For Sale—Wm Stevens, Jr., of Charlevoix, has a fine span of heavy horses for sale.

Tin-types cheap at the photograph gallery.

A large line of mattresses and springs just received at See & Son's furniture store.

Wood wanted at this office on subscription.

House for sale. Inquire of S. M. See, Charlevoix.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

To Rent. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

For Sale—A pair of work horses in good condition, will sell cheap for cash if sold in the next ten days. Enquire of R. L. Allen, 1½ miles west of Ironton.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

A Congressman's Discovery.

From the Chicago Tribune.

"What's the use of a man publishing a dictionary," broke forth the Hon. Frank Lawler the other day to a friend who had dropped in to see him, "if he can't put in anything but common, one-horse words! Here's a book I paid $12 for," continued the exasperated statesman, "and I can't find the word 'pavetology' anywhere in it. You can look all through the C's and S's yourself, if you don't believe me."

"But," suggested the friend, "perhaps you haven't gone at it in the right way. Have you looked in the index?"

"Thunder!" ejaculated the Hon. Frank, "I never thought of that." And he opened the book again and looked in the front and back parts. After a few moments' search he threw the volume on the floor and exclaimed in a tone of the deepest disgust:

"I'll be e-sentially dag-gone if the idiot that printed this dictionary didn't leave out the index!"

Why Advertising Pays.

All see the advantage of advertising a business, and its helpfulness in getting a new enterprise well on its feet. Not all, however, understand just why it could not be dropped, or, at any rate, why its proportions cannot be greatly reduced after trade once gets moving to a proprietor's doors. One reason why he must keep on making his usual announcements is drawn from the conditions of commerce in our day. There was a time, when, perhaps, a man's sign over his door sufficiently called attention to his business, and in connection with his local reputation in the mouth of his neighborhood, placed him prominently in the public eye. Such a time could only be when nobody did more than that—when that was the course pursued by dealers generally. Today, however, attention is called only when it is compelled; so many other dealers are placing themselves before the public gaze that he will never be seen if he does not get in line with them. And this is why he cannot stop advertising. Others will keep on forcing the public to notice them, and no attention will be paid him if he is content to be modest and let the pushers rush their headlines in front of the public. In crowding times like these he will be hustled to the rear, out of sight, if he does not crowd, too. This is why he cannot well stop spending money for advertising, even after he is well known.—American Artisan.

For Sale—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. Hurd.

Notice of Dissolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the Copartnership heretofore existing under the firm name and style of "F. W. Craine & Co." for the purpose of carrying on the Dry Goods business in the village of Charlevoix, Michigan, is mutually dissolved on this 31st day of March, A. D. 1887, and F. W. Craine is authorized to collect all debts now due said firm, and W. M. Gow assumes all liabilities contracted to this date.

Dated at Charlevoix, Mich., March 31, 1887.

W. M. Gow
Frank W. Craine.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

WE GREET YOU

FRIENDS AND PATRONS!

WITH A NEW AND SPARKLING STOCK OF LATEST NOVELTIES IN DRESS GOODS, FANCY GOODS, CARPETS, ETC., ETC.

We invite you most cordially to call in and let us show you our goods, whether you wish to buy or not. All the leading wash fabrics are represented on our counters, such as Batistes sateens, both plain and figured, Manilla Cloth, Pongees Chambrays, Ginghams, Nainsooks, Crinkled Seersuckers, etc. Our wool goods comprise all that is desirable, in fact brings New York counters at your doors and gives all the advantage of city life. We invite you for

SEEING IS BELIEVING AND BELIEVING IS BUYING.

Very truly yours,

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Closing Out Sale.

Owing to a change in our business to take place May 1st, we offer until that date, our entire stock at a great sacrifice.

We do not expect everybody to take advantage of this sale, but to those who do, we promise great benefits.

Ignorant people are not always able to read. Slow people can read but often and wont. Dead ones can't, but real live ones can and will. It is the latter class who profit by it and whom we shall save many

HARD EARNED DOLLARS!

We have a large quantity of seasonable dress goods, worsteds, table linens, napkins, damasks, piques, towels, curtain nets, shades, gloves, hosiery, tickings, denims, jeans, cottonades, sheetings, shirtings, etc. Space will not admit of quoted prices but it is sufficient to say they are very low enough. Now is the time to lay in a stock of Groceries.

Clover and Timothy seed at lowest prices.

J. L. HURD & CO.

WE MEAN TO SELL OUT!

WE MUST SELL OUT!

Rosenthal & Sons

Mammoth Stock of Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods will have to be disposed of by August First.

Purchasers can doubtless see that to this end we will make great reductions on all goods and we have decided for our customers' benefit, to sell,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

As this large stock cannot be easily transported.

Therefore it will be also for our benefit to make sacrifices.

Now is your Time to Buy!

AND DON'T FORGET IT!

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF, THAT WE MEAN WHAT WE SAY, BUSINESS!

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO.—53 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 20, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 908

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes

THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS

of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

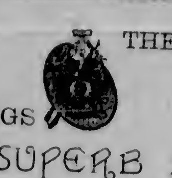
Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS



THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

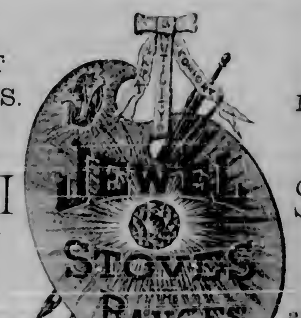
Detroit Stove Works

Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS.

S & I



THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I

THE MOST DURABLE.

Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

A Large Fresh Stock of Groceries

JUST OPENED AT

WILLSEE & CO'S

We call especial attention to something fine in Corn Beef at 8c. Try our Tea and Coffee stock. You will find it to your advantage to call and see us.

ALL KINDS OF COUNTRY PRODUCE WANTED.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1.50 | Six months $.75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Street cleaning has begun.

—The painters are all busy.

—Alick Rosenthal is back again in the store.

—Remember the meetings at Opera Hall every evening.

—Work on the Smithson Lumber Co's dock progresses.

—H. B. Chapman is stopping with editor Clark, of Harbor Springs.

—Lewis E. Smith is out with a dray, and is doing a good business already.

—The venerable James Inwood is again about the street greeting his many friends.

—The Jos. H. Keene Dramatic Co. will hold forth at Opera Hall, May 5th, 6th and 7th.

—Ben Ingalls, of Boyne City, has been spending a week or more in town, on business.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co., expect a consignment of grain by first vessel from Milwaukee.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co. have erected a shed on their premises for storing agricultural implements.

—Rev. C. F. VanAuken returned home yesterday, but whether to remain or not is not yet determined.

The Smithson Cottage has received a new coat of the Sherwin Williams paint. Mr. Chas. Swallow is the artist.

—L. D. Bartholomew & Co. call attention to their line of paints, etc., this week, in their illustrated advertisement.

—The resignation of Chief Grier, of the Fire Department, is to be regretted. Mr. Grier is popular with the department, and has been an efficient and painstaking officer.

—The House, at Lansing, a week ago Tuesday, defeated the bill providing municipal suffrage for women, by a vote of 50 to 32. Mr. Dougherty made the motion that defeated it.

—Mr. Lee Thomas, of St. Johns, has been added to the force in Frank E. Wood's barber rooms, which starts the third chair. Mr. Thomas is a clarinet soloist of more than average ability.

—F. J. Meech was elected Superintendent of the Charlevoix Manufacturing Co. Saturday evening, A. Buttars having resigned. The factory started last week, and work on the Belvedere is being rushed.

—Petoskey Record: The Charlevoix SENTINEL says that Morris Stockman is back from Florida and is telling such thundering lies about the fish he caught down there, that the folks are ringing door bells and telephone bells on him all over town.

—Harold B. Sayles, the evangelist, commenced a series of services at Opera Hall last Sunday evening. The attendance thus far has been large, and the interest is increasing. Mr. Sayles is a strong and logical speaker, deeply interested in his work, and is, withal, a fine singer, possessing a tenor voice of rare sweetness and power. The meetings will continue this week and next.

—Capt. Harrison Miller of the Point Betsey Life Saving station, writes us a characteristic letter, from which we extract the following: "I am well, and I hope that, by the grace of God, that you and yours are the same. I arrived at Frankfort on the 15th of March; found the people very kind and open-hearted, and you may be sure I was not long in getting acquainted with them. Some of them think that I am "lightning on a limb," for I never was so full of the devil as I have been since I came here. You may think from that remark that I have been drinking, but I have not been in a saloon since I came, nor I don't intend to. I opened the station April 1st, with seven men. We practice every day in the week, except Sunday, at something. I keep a watch all of the time, night and day from the tower, and in thick or stormy weather two men patrol the beach, one north and the other south. When on watch each man stands two hours. He has a clock to punch every half hour. So you see I can tell in the morning if he has been sleeping. When on patrol there is a post 2½ miles each way. There is a hole in the post, and in the hole a key that fits the clock. The key is kept there by a clasp, and locked with a pad lock. So the patrolman has to go to the post, unlock the pad-lock, take out the key and punch the clock. So you see the men cannot fool the keepers. I wish you and I'd were up here to see us go through the beach apparatus drill. I am not yet an expert at it, but I will be before I quit. We have been here but one week, and we can send a man from the "pole" to the "wreck," distand 75 yards, in seven minutes. I have been a little lonesome since I came, but I will be all right when I get my family up to Frankfort. Ed Bedford is doing the cooking until his wife comes. I get the SENTINEL every week."

—Council meeting to-morrow night.

—G. W. Crosier is in Lansing this week.

—Miss Rose Cody is expected home next Saturday.

—Judge Ramsdell's majority is something over 365.

—Charlie Gotham is back in his old place in the factory.

—The government pier-light has begun business for the season.

—James F. Wood returned to his home last week from Ludington.

—Kindergarten opens again next Monday, and the little nuisances will be got rid of.

—Capt. Berdan declines to be Marshall this year. It will be hard to fill his place.

—O. W. Smith will enlarge his store this season, and erect a band pagoda adjoining.

—L. E. Allen has taken the contract of repairing and strengthening the bridge pier protection.

—Oscar Upright returned Saturday from a northern trip in the interest of the Rifenburg Milling Co.

—Harold F. Sayles, the evangelist, every evening this week and next. Preaching, bible reading and song.

—There will be no preaching at Black's school house next Sabbath on account of the revival meeting being held in Charlevoix.

—Where will you buy your carpets and spring dress goods, is the question A. T. Washburn & Co., ask you this week in their new advertisement.

—D. S. Way's photograph gallery, at the old Bradbeer stand, is gaining a reputation for doing excellent work. Call and "secure the shadow ere the substance fails."

—The Misses Ahlrich have a fine display of millinery and fancy goods at their rooms in the Ingleside building. They make dressmaking by the tailor system a specialty. Notice their card elsewhere.

—Prof. B. Katthain, practical piano tuner, from Bay City, Mich., who has successfully tuned pianos here for the past two summers, will be in Charlevoix again about May 19th. Traveling piano tuners are persons whom piano owners should be shy of, as a poor tuner will injure an instrument more than he benefits it. We can personally recommend Prof. Katthain as a reliable and efficient tuner. Save your work for him, and you will be sure to have it well done.

Marine Jottings.

The tug Martin is about the harbor.

The tug Campbell was launched yesterday.

A new foremast was put in the schooner Charlotte Raab last week.

The tug Elliott was launched last week. The tug Anspach has set one gang of nets.

The steamer Algomah left on the 15th for her first trip to Mackinac Island, and got there in good shape.

Henry Norton of Manitowoc, has sold the schooner Graham Brothers to Anton Johnson of the same place, for $1,500.

Capt. Fred Lawrence will have command of the schooner Sardinia this season and he is busy getting her ready for commission.

The steamer Saginaw Valley will this season be commanded by Capt. James Gibson, well known here. She will run between Buffalo and Green Bay.

The steamer Gazelle was launched Monday. Her hull has been painted black. Capt. John Mason and engineer James Ackert are in their old places.

Captain Theodore Saveland has secured the schooner John C. Baur for the season at a rental of $1,000, and will command her in place of Capt. John Wright.

Capt. Robertson of the new barge, Alice M., of Northport, writes that the engine and boilers have been placed aboard and that she will be ready for her first trip in May. Eph Small, formerly mate of the City of Grand Rapids, will go as mate on the new barge.

The Ogdensburg and Chicago line for the coming season will comprise the following steamers: W. L. Frost, W. J. Averill, W. A. Haskell, John Pridgeon Jr., Newberg, B. W. Blanchard, and St. Paul, all will run between Ogdensburg and Chicago in connection with the Vermont Central railroad.

Petoskey Democrat: While in Harbor Springs, we looked over the Gracie Barker in her new dress. Mr. Crysler has had the popular little steamer thoroughly overhauled and repaired. She is now a perfect image of the Thomas Friant, only on a smaller scale. The addition of the upper deck gives almost double the passenger capacity she had before, besides adding greatly to the beauty of her appearance.

Navigation is said to have been open last week. It is not so open as it was, however. The ice has come back in the bay, and our spring joyousness is turned to chilly disappointment. The steamer Lawrence has made a trip to Manistique, via Frankfort, and returned to Chicago. She was to have left for here and the straits. The Friant, at Grand Haven, and the tug Hall, at Frankfort, are waiting "till the ice rolls by" to come to their summer work.

Northern Michigan.

Missaukee county was a tie on the prohibition amendment—418 votes being cast each way.

Cadillac is bound to have electric lights, and about sixty citizens have already subscribed toward them.

More than one hundred conversions is the result of the long series of revival meetings held at East Jordan.

Gill's mill on Bear Lake has shut down for the present. The cut the past winter was 900,000 feet, all hardwood.

Geo. C. Sweet will manufacture cedar shingle in South Arm this summer. He is fitting up with new machinery.

The officials of the Chicago and West Michigan railroad are said to be in Boston at present arranging for funds to push their northern line.

The improvements made in Clam river at Cadillac last year, are seen to be of much value this spring, as the waters are confined within the channel instead of spreading all over the flats.

Judge Ramsdell has no reason to find fault with his support in Cheboygan county. The official canvass shows that he ran ahead of the Republican state ticket, leading Campbell ninety eight votes.

Private information has been received at Sault Ste. Marie that the contract for building the international bridge over the Sault Rapids was let on the 4th inst, and work will be commenced at an early day.

Mrs. Newberry, keeper of a boarding house at Cheboygan, has drawn $15,000 in a southern lottery. The boarders, who have been living on oleo for two years past, consider themselves as much in luck as Mrs. Newberry.

A Grand Rapids telegram to the Detroit News says the government authorities have commenced suit against the bondsmen of Myron W. Scranton, postmaster at Sault Ste. Marie, to cover $600 shortage, alleged to be due Uncle Sam.

Ketchum in the St. Ignace Republican of Saturday, says the work on Plank's grand hotel on Mackinac Island is progressing finely; 26 teams hauling lumber over the ice from Mackinaw City; 40 mechanics sawing boards and 40 men at work with pick and shovel.

A Kalkaska special says: Con Mullen of Springfield broke in and entered the house of Levi A. Lewis, his neighbor, and attempted to kill him. Lewis was stabbed over the heart, but not fatally, and Mullen is abed languishing from a broken head. Legal proceedings will be commenced forthwith to bring the offender to justice.

Elk Rapids Progress: While outside, Mr. E. S. Noble saw Manager Mulliken of the C. & W. M., who says that that road will come up the shore, and that they never had a thought of going anywhere else. We thought it rather strange that one of the foremost railroad men in the state should care to knock around the hills in the center of the county for picturesque scenery.

A gentleman passed through this city March 22d last to the Soo. He again passed through the city April 3, bound for his home in lower Michigan. He bought $12,000 worth of Soo boom, sold out for $2,000, and has taken home $10,000 worth of experience. "I am going to dig a hole in my cellar and put my $2,000 in it," he said, "and then I'm going to work for a living. I ain't in no hurry to get rich, now."—St. Ignace Republican.

Lightning monkeyed around the residence of J. E. Darrah, at Clarion, one night recently, and in its monkeyings the chimney was driven through the roof, some of the brick falling on Mrs. Darrah's bed; the family bedstead in which Mrs. Darrah was sleeping was upset, the bed in the hired man's room was upset, and the ashes cleaned out of the cookstove. The house was full of people, but nobody was injured.

Kalkaska Leader: Alf. G. Drake visited Charlevoix last week to attend a meeting of the directors of the D. C. & E. R. R., where and when arrangements were made to send surveyors out to look up a practicable route for the line and do such other preliminary work as may be necessary. If there are any who think for a moment that the above mentioned railroad is to be only a paper one they may as well undeceive themselves. It is bound to be commenced at an early day, and completed in the not far distant future.

Northport news: Mrs. Jack Litney of Sutton's Bay, who was down here last week to consult Mrs. Dr. Copp, has gone to Chicago for medical treatment.—The mill at Gill's Pier has started up for the season, with the prospects of a bigger cut than ever before.—John Calhoun has rented the Nelson farm, two miles west of town, and will cultivate it.—Jay Donaldson has packed up and gone to the "Soo." Before leaving he sold his stock of liquors to John Terhilde, of Sutton's Bay.—Henry Litney has closed out his business at Omena and will soon locate in Traverse City as the Grand Traverse representative of the firm of Gunderson & Barker, of Chicago.—When N. C. Morgan goes to the "Soo" there will be an excellent chance for some good hotel man to get hold of the Bay View house, which became so deservedly popular last season.

—Look at the address label on your paper, and see how you stand with the printer.

THE SENTINEL
CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN
SMITH & PARMELEE, - Publishers

BRITISH imports and exports during the month of March increased £1,900,000 and £400,000, respectively, as compared with the same month last year.

AT THE request of the Ameer of Afghanistan, an English engineer has gone to consult with him regarding the construction of a railway from Cabul to Herat.

THE Strasburg papers report increased expulsions of French sympathizers and the vigorous prosecution of the searching of houses for compromising documents.

THE Belgian Chamber of Deputies has passed, by a vote of 86 to 9, the bill permitting the Free Congo State to issue a lottery loan to the amount of 150,000,000 francs.

AN ORDER has been entered in the Common Pleas Court, at Cleveland, for the sale of the Nickel Plate Road for not less than $10,000,000. Thirty days' notice will be given.

RETURNS to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue show quite clearly an increasing consumption of beer and a marked decrease in the amount of whisky taken out of bond.

THE National banks are not withdrawing their circulation with the retirement of the 3 per cent bonds as was expected, but are substituting 4 and 4½ per cents for the called bonds.

THE new Director of Public Safety of Philadelphia has notified the police that they will be held strictly responsible for

CONDENSED NEWS.

Latest Intelligence From all Parts of the World.

FIRE RECORD.

Fire Friday morning destroyed several business buildings at Addison N. Y. The loss will reach $50,000.

A five story tenement house in New York City burned Thursday, the 200 occupants having a narrow escape.

A block of buildings was burned at West Brookfield, Mass. Loss $50,000.

Fire in the Sebastian Wagon Company's factory, New York, destroyed property to the amount of $30,000.

Fire in the building at Boston, Mass., occupied by Wright & Potter, State printers, and a dozen other firms caused a loss of nearly $200,000.

In New Liberty, Ia. John Killeen's stables, with thirty-seven blooded horses, were destroyed by fire. Loss $50,000. No insurance.

Half a block, corner of Canal and Jackson streets, Chicago occupied by a cork factory, and several meat markets, burned Tuesday night. Loss $150,000.

Clarksville, Tenn., was visited by four fires Sunday, with losses aggregating $250,000. Many of the finest buildings were destroyed.

The Hotel del Monte, at Monterey, Cal., burned Saturday night. There were nearly three hundred guests in the building. All escaped, many losing their luggage, jewels, and other personal property. The total loss is estimated at $1,500,000. The hotel was not insured, and was owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Company. The fire was incendiary.

CASUALTIES.

Two young men blew out the gas upon retiring at Chicago, Thursday night, one was dead in the morning.

[illegible]

Warren Long, a prominent farmer, was shot and killed near the hall by Edward Carr, who was drunk and had been quite quarrelsome and having been knocked down and kicked out of the hotel. He was captured, offering no resistance.

A gang of counterfeiters from Franklin county, were arrested and brought to Chattanooga. The officials have been watching them for six months, and finally pounced down upon two well known and highly respected residents, J. M. and A. M. Peepins. With them was taken William Horn, an old time counterfeiter. On the premises were found dies, molds, metals, etc., to make a complete outfit, and about $600 of bogus silver money.

Mrs. C. H. Hegner, of St. Paul, fatally shot John Murphy, a barber, for slandering her.

Forty of the inmates of the Cook county (Ill.) Bridewell, who revolted and refused to work were glad enough to surrender and go to work, after having been handcuffed to the doors of their cells one night.

At Peru Ind., Deputy Sheriff Robert Miller, assaulted Charles M. Emerick, proprietor of the Opera House, for slandering Mrs. Miller. When down, Miller kicked his victim, breaking his neck, resulting in instantaneous death.

Four negroes, who killed a white boy last fall, were taken from jail at Yorkville, S. C., and hanged.

Michael O'Keen, a policeman, of Chicago, was shot and fatally wounded Sunday night by Timothy O'Grady, an ex-convict.

The special grand jury to investigate

[illegible]

Ex-Sheriff Cyrus W. Berry, of Peoria, Ill., has been appointed deputy marshal of the United States district for the southern division of the northern district of Illinois.

Commodore Charles Green, United States Navy (retired), died suddenly Thursday, at Providence, aged 76 years.

Gen. Thomas W. Conway, Secretary of the State Temperance League of New York died suddenly on Thursday night.

Railway officials have generally expressed the opinion that the temporary suspension of the long and short haul clause by the Inter-State Commission is the entering wedge that will split the whole log. They argue that every railroad in the country can justly make the same claim as that contended for by the southern lines.

From dispatches from St. John's New Brunswick, it is learned, that an American fishing vessel was chased by an English fishery cruiser, for coming within the three mile limit for bait. The cruiser fired a blank shot at her but she got away.

The indicted County Commissioners of Cook county, Ill., having refused to resign, it is rumored that the State Legislature, now in session, will be asked to pass a bill with an emergency clause, declaring their seats vacant.

The Inter State Commerce Commission have suspended for ninety days the long and short haul section of the law for the benefit of the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee R. R.

Claims for damages aggregating $120,000 have been filed against P. J. Talbot and L. H. Harlow

[illegible]

JOHN G. SAXE.

The Nation's Wit and Humorist a Victim of Melancholy.

From Sunshine to Shadow.

John Godfrey Saxe, the poet, died at the residence of his son, Charles Saxe, in Albany, N. Y., on the 31st of March. He was born in Highgate, Franklin county, Vt., June 2, 1816. He graduated at Middlebury College in 1839, was admitted to the bar at St. Albans in 1843, and practiced in his native county until March, 1850. From 1851 to 1856, he was editor and proprietor of the Burlington Sentinel, and in 1856 was state's attorney.

He was the nation's wit and humorist, whose delicious rhymes brought to himself fame and a competence, and to many a household the cheerful smile or hearty laugh. Even across the sea he was known as "the Thomas Hood of America". For some years he had been dead to all the world. Few people knew that he was yet alive. The victim of a deep seated, ever present melancholy, his closing years were touchingly sad and uneventful, the never ceasing care of the few relatives that were spared him even failing to rid him of the deep gloom in which unhappily his mind was shrouded. Up to the year 1875, John G. Saxe was a splendid and conspicuous specimen of virile manhood. He stood six feet two inches tall, proudly erect and muscular, with a large, round, and finely poised head set upon broad and stalwart shoulders.

The beginning of the end was the [illegible]

[illegible]

ult. to meet in Cincinnati in February, 1888.

TRADE REVIEW.

The Weather and the Inter-State Commerce Law—The Month's Business.

R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly trade review call attention to the snow in Virginia, rendering roads nearly impassable, and the Canadian railroads blocked by drifts, making the distribution of products difficult. They say: "But for the extraordinary demand to anticipate the Inter-State act and its change of rates this retarding weather would have been more seriously felt. As it is, dry goods and boot and shoe dealers complain that from regions buried in snow small orders come for summer clothing, and deep mud and bad roads in many States arrest movements of produce. The business of the past month has been remarkably large, not only at New York and Boston, but Chicago reports a phenomenal record, and other cities as well. Largely this business has been in anticipation of demands for thirty days to come, or more. Hence it is scarcely possible that a noteworthy unseasonable reaction should not be felt. The opinion grows that the Inter State act will help the railroads rather than commerce. Its evident tendency is to raise lower charges on local traffic, which is the smaller, and higher charges on the long through traffic, which for important roads is the larger. Neither uncertainty nor

[illegible]

HUMOROUS.

"It hurt me worse than you, my lad,
To punish you for being bad."
The howling son,
When dad has done,
Thinks, "golly, don't I wish it had!"
—[Texas Siftings.

"What shall I write about?" inquired the would-be poet, entering the editorial sanctum. "You had better right about face," replied the editor, pointing to the door.

Dennis was the pride of his corps,
He a very fine uniform wore,
He could play at bezique,
And with infinite clique
At the canteen would run up a score.
—[New York Morning Journal.

A very wealthy young woman questions her confessor: "Is it a sin, father," she asks, "to take pleasure in having people call me beautiful?" "Certainly, my child, it is always wicked to encourage falsehood."

Oh, lay aside the sausage meat,
And eke the buckwheat-cake,
There skims the golden gosling fleet
Across the placid lake.
The vernal zephyrs softly blow,
And set sweet scents afloat—
The overshoe has got to go,
As has the overcoat.
—[Puck.

"This mind-reading of which I hear,
It puzzles me completely,"
She looked up at her bashful beau,
And said, as she smiled sweetly,
"Why, I can read your mind with ease."

[illegible]

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

IMPATIENCE.

Like to impatient children when the sky
Frowns on some merry [illegible] for festal day
To cheat [illegible] happy hearts of out-door play,
We fret when [illegible] shows us fly,
And every cloud and [illegible] magnify,
Till thus we waste [illegible] manhood's strength, as they
Their zest for pleasure in some in-door way,
Our age scarce wiser than their infancy.

If we could chafe and chase the clouds afar
Rather than borrowed gloom upon them bring,
Our gain its lack of grace might palliate,
But leave us yet with needless [illegible] war,
That brave defiance to all fate would fling,
And by endurance make us strong and great.

—William C. Richards, in Harper's Magazine for March.

FOR THE CHICKS.

Probably one of the best standard soft foods for young or adult fowls is ground oats and barley meal, and if occasionally mixed with boiled potatoes, turnips and carrots, so much the better. This food should be given only in the morning and fed moderately warm. Buckwheat is excellent food, and when fowls get accustomed to it they eat it readily and it tends to stimulate the egg organs to generous activity. Good barley and oats and Indian corn may be supplied, but as I have said, to supply only such

[illegible]

to send the requisite information for $1

Darkness is necessary. The "Miller" that deposits the eggs from which moths are hatched, only moves in light; the moths themselves work in darkness. Hang the furs in a very dark closet, and keep the door shut, keep it always dark, and you can have no trouble. But, as closet doors are often left open, the better way is to inclose the articles loosely in a paper box, put this in a pillowcase, or wrap around with cloth, and hang up in a dark closet. Camphor, spices, or perfumes, are of no use. Continual darkness is sufficient. And do not take out the furs in June and July to give them an "airing," for even then cometh the enemy, and it may be that in fifteen minutes after exposure, has deposited a hundred eggs. If you consider an airing indispensible, give the furs a good switching and put them quickly back.

ABOUT PLOWS.

A writer in the Farmer's Review says: "I want to live to see an improvement in ploughs. I do not think the surface soil, which is the richest, should be turned down to the bottom of the furrow, nor that a foot or fourteen inches wide should be turned over at once, but I think the "coming plough" should be

[illegible]

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A Live Church.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage recently delivered the following in the tabernacle of Brooklyn, taking for his text: Unto the angel of the Church in Smyrna write: These things saith the first and the last, which was dead and is alive.

I know thy works, and tribulation, and poverty, but thou art rich. [Rev. ii., 8, 9.

Smyrna was a great city of the ancients, bounded on three sides by mountains. It was the central emporium of the Levantine trade. In that prosperous and brilliant city there was a Christain church established. After it had existed for a while it was rocked down by an earthquake. It was rebuilt. Then it was consumed by a conflagration that swept over the entire city. That church went through fire and trouble and disaster, but kept on to great spiritual prosperity. The fact was, that church had the grace of God, an ever active principle. Had it been otherwise, all the grandeur of architecture and all the pomp of surroundings would only have been the ornament of death—the garlands of a coffin, the plumes of a hearse.

[illegible]

the pit, we would recoil, crying out: "Avaunt, thou dream of hell!"

They are not always going to be children. They are coming up to be the men and women of this country. That spark of iniquity that might now be put out with one drop of the water of life will become the conflagration of every green thing that God ever planted in the soul. That which ought to have been a temple of the Holy Ghost will become a scarred and blistered ruin—every light quenched and every altar in the dust. That petty thief, who slips into your store and takes a yard of your cloth from your counter, will become the highwayman of the forest, or the burglar at midnight, picking the lock of your money safe and blowing up your store to hide the villainy. A great army, with staggering step, and bloodshot eye, and drunken hoot, they are coming on—gathering recruits from every groggshop and den of infamy in the land, to take the ballot box and laugh at the elections.

The hard knuckled fist of ruffianism will have more power than the gentle hand of intelligence and sobriety. Men, bloated, and with the signature of

[illegible]

A STORY OF DUBLIN.

After the Rebellion of 1798 a number of unfortunate rebels were executed in the City of Dublin, and the scene of their last agony was, in general, one of the bridges which then spanned the Liffey. Thus Carlisle Bridge, Church Street Bridge (as then named), Queen's Bridge, and Bloody Bridge all had their records of hangings and beheadings, and most of them were for some time adorned with ghastly trophies in the shape of the heads of notorious insurgents. At this period, too, vast numbers of wretched peasants, who were suspected of complicity in the insurrection, were daily slaughtered by the hands of the yeomanry, cavalry, and other troops which scoured all the surrounding country.

The bodies of these poor wretches were publicly exposed in various parts of the city. Very many were to be seen lying in front of the Royal Barracks. In the Castle-Yard they were laid

[illegible]

[illegible] got a shock, and fell back a step [illegible]. He had heard many a tale of ghosts and sprites, but [illegible] at [illegible] of the imagination. It took him a few minutes to recover his [illegible] but his natural audacity came to his help, and he composed himself sufficiently to reason on the appearance. "It is this cursed rum," thought he, "[illegible] in the horrors. I never imagined it could bring up such a very natural-looking wench as this, however."

As if divining his thought, the figure suddenly rose from the form and presented to the watchman a pale and beautiful face, which looked reproachfully and sadly at him. Peter spoke up.

"What do you want with me? Ghost or no ghost, I'd as soon have your room as your company this minute."

The figure made a step toward the door, and at the same moment the face assumed an inexpressibly pleading look, while a lovely hand beckoned Peter in an appealing fashion to follow. Naturally enough, Peter was slow to accept this dubious invitation, and the figure took [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] called [illegible], opening the door [illegible] I told you [illegible]."

Peter [illegible] as a lady appeared in the doorway.

"Merciful heavens," he cried. "The ghost herself!" The lady trembled violently, and would have fallen but that her husband sprung to her assistance and placed her in a chair.

Peter told his wonderful story and declared that the apparition which visited him in the watchhouse was the exact counterpart of the lady before him.

"This is most strange," said the wife and her voice thrilled through Peter as he recognized the musical tones in which the apparition had addressed him. "You remember dearest, I told you that, at the very hour in which you were saved by this brave man, I was lying in a death-swoon in the room in Church street, where you found me just recovering on your most unexpected arrival. I have never had the least memory of what happened while I lay in this swoon, but it seems my spirit did what in the body I know nothing of. It is indeed most [illegible]

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 20, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

The amendment to increase the salaries of State officers, has been defeated by about 25,000.

That was a forcible question of a workingman at a Chicago political meeting recently, where a raving Anarchist was letting out his venom when the workingman said: "Stop! I want to know, before going any further, whether this is a meeting of American workingmen or foreign Anarchists? Do we fight under the stars and stripes or under the red flag?" He was hissed down for his patriotic question. But it is a question that will have to be decided in this country, sooner or later, and there can be but one answer.

It is a sorry comment upon English civilization, sententiously remarks the New York Tribune, that Ireland should have been conquered four hundred years ago and yet cannot be trusted to convict its own murderers. History records no failure in the subject race so complete and disastrous as this. The island has been ruled by England century after century, and yet force bills, the suspension of habeas corpus and the most unusual expedients for securing the conviction of criminals are considered necessary by the Government of the day.

The Secretary of the Navy has ordered the Kearsarge repaired. This is the vessel which fought and sunk the famous rebel ship, Alabama, June 19, 1864, off the harbor of Cherbourg, in France. The Alabama was the most destructive of the rebel cruisers which preyed on our merchant commerce. This vessel alone captured some sixty-one merchant vessels, which were burned or otherwise destroyed, together with other property, all of which has been rated at over $10,000,000. The engagement between the Kearsarge and the Alabama was one of the most remarkable that was fought on the ocean during our civil war. The repair of the old hull is simply in the line of our idea to preserve old war relics.

United States Senator H. M. Teller of Denver, Colorado, is confident of a Republican victory in 1888, and thinks that Senator Allison, with a good Eastern man for second place, would perhaps be the safest man for carrying New York, as he is a financial leader, and has no party enemies. The man, he says, is already stirring the people up, but he has some enemies for certain reasons, but he considers him a strong and available man. Cleveland, he says, is morally certain of a renomination, but claims that he cannot carry New York even without the third party in the field. The Senator feels the necessity of silver playing an important part in the finances of the country, and says the prejudice against it is not so great as bankers like to represent.

The evictions which have begun on one of Lord Lansdowne's estates in Ireland are evidently of a barbarous character. One of the tenants evicted lately was paying $3,800 rent for land which a Government commission valued at $2,100. The only wonder is how a tenant could pay such an extortionate charge. Adjoining landlords have made a reduction of forty per cent in their rents, but Lord Lansdowne's tenants asked only twenty per cent, and even this he has refused. It is not surprising that the friends of Home Rule found it extremely difficult to prevent a collision with the police engaged in evicting the Lansdowne tenants. Safe in Canada where is drawing a handsome salary as Governor General, Lord Landsdowne apparently thinks he can afford to resort to rack-renting in Ireland, but he is not likely to get much comfort out of the operation.

Mr. Blaine's sudden sickness, out at Fort Gibson, raised a greater fever throughout the country than that which attacked him. The country's feverishness was simply a condition of anxiety. Mr. Blaine caught cold; it affected his throat and lungs; he had a cough and a little fever; he has a good constitution, and is rapidly recovering. With 999 men out of a thousand such a case would never have found its way into the newspapers. But with his prominence it gives a chance for several doctors to air themselves in learned talk about "bronchitis" and "slight pneumonia of the left lung," and the "good condition of his circulatory apparatus," and "easy and free expectoration," and "no disturbance of digestion." When a lady once asked Senator Thurman what he took for his catarrh he replied "Three handkerchiefs a day ma'am." That seems to be about the extent of Mr. Blaine's needs, though one doctor reports that he "has taken his nourishment and his medicine easily and without discomfort."

Northern Michigan News.

Judge Fallass exchanged places with Judge Ramsdell at Traverse City last week, the latter presiding in the Missaukee court in Lake City.

The saloon keepers of Marquette, forty in number, have had a meeting and given a pledge to Mayor Nestor strictly to observe Sunday closing. They promise to make it hot for any violator of the agreement.

The railroad company have let the contract for grading the bed for the double track between Petoskey and Harbor Springs junction. This will do away with the great danger of collisions during the resort season, when trains are constantly going back and forth.

W. S. Johnson, of Sutton's Bay, has had two stocks of goods burned at Good Harbor within the past few months, the last fire which occurred on the second, caused a loss of $1,000 with no insurance. He is now stocking up a third time at Good Harbor. The fires were no doubt the work of an incendiary.

Petoskey Record: Orson Cook, who lives about two miles from Boyne Falls, left his home for that place one morning recently to do some trading, intending to return in an hour or so, and not even wearing a coat, the day being warm. Nothing whatever has been heard from him since, and his wife is nearly crazed with anxiety.

The case of Herbert C. Balch, as administrator vs. G. R. & I. R. R. Co, Pratt, Hatch & Davis for plaintiff, and T. J. O'Brien for defendants, was tried at Traverse City last week. The suit was brought for the killing of H. P. Balch at Cadillac last fall. Mr. Campbell, of Grand Rapids, and Mr. Failthorp, of Petoskey, appeared for the defendants. The jury brought in a verdict against the Company for $4,000.

An Ishpeming dispatch says: Late telegraphic reports from Sault Ste. Marie indicate that the inflated real estate boom is completely "busted." During its continuance, under the guidance of Minneapolis and Duluth real estate agents, something like three million dollars in transfers were made, but many pieces of land were sold half a dozen times. Part of the boomers are now here and part in Marquette. Marquette may be the next sufferer from a portable boom, though citizens do not wish it.

Harbor Springs Republican: James M. Barbeck, whose illness was announced last week, died at his residence in this village at about 10 o'clock p. m., Monday night. The deceased was born Feb. 29, 1818. His early childhood was spent in Vermont. He was for several years a resident of Racine, Wis. He moved from there to Northport, this state, where he resided until he removed to this place which was nearly thirteen years ago. He was elected to fill several important offices in this county, village and township from time to time, and has always represented himself in nearly all the enterprises, organizations, etc., which have been started in the place, and has accumulated considerable property.

Harbor Springs Independent: Petoskey is making great preparations for the ball season, and are laying the ropes for the best club in this part of the state. They have re-engaged pitcher Hoyt and catcher Miller, and have also signed our two "Gs," Gish and Garver. They have secured the two boys a good situation, with no time lost while playing or practicing, and in addition "put up" a considerable sum for their season's work on the diamond. With any kind of an out and in field Petoskey should now have a club that can whip any of the teams in the Northern Michigan league, and one with which they will not be afraid to tackle Cheboygan. It now looks as though Harbor Springs would have to hobble along this season with a "scrub" nine, and help Petoskey yell when Dave makes home runs.

East Jordan Enterprise: At the charter election Monday the following persons were elected to office: Dr. J. H. Bennett, President; James E. Potter, Geo. Martin, and Isaac Bartlett, Trustees two years; Wm. P. Porter, Geo. W Fast and J. C. Jordan, Trustees one year; Clerk, A. L. Coulter; Treasurer, C. W. Dunham; Street Commissioner, Geo. Hayner; Assessor, H. P. Barbour; Constable, Wm. H. Coleman. Orlando Blair's friends in the middle of the forenoon, decided to run him against Mr. Potter, and he received 76 votes to Mr. Potter's 83. H. W. King ran against Wm. P. Porter, and received 74 votes. ——Frank Cater, John Crawford, Blacksmith Charlie and R. L. Macumber, left Monday for Sault Ste. Marie. ——A new election will be held in the Township of Wilson for supervisor. ——While Louis McSaba was crossing the arm on Sunday, with a bag full of stones slung across his back, he fell into an air hole. His loud cries for help attracted the attention of Charles Rohr, who extricated him from his perilous position, a much wetter if not a wiser Indian.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

Relations of Teachers and Parents.

The discussion of this question at the last teachers' meeting was specially interesting to all present. Rev. W. G. Clark led in an address which was full of valuable suggestions. He remarked that both teachers and parents ought always to recognize the existence and the rights of each other. Teachers should remember that children come from homes. They have home interests and home duties; they are subject to home influences, and their characters are the result, to a large extent, of inheritance and home training. They cannot be handled like so many stones that are simply to be broken. School is not a mechanical arrangement whereby a certain amount of learning can be put into the children. When sent to school they should be put into the care of thoughtful friends. The children are loved at home; they should be loved at school. Much of the dissatisfaction felt by parents and teachers arises from a failure to recognize the just rights of each other. Neither can claim all the time of the child. Too much work is often crowded upon him in school. Teachers feel too much responsibility for his progress; supposing that great results are expected, they crowd the work beyond the ability of the pupil, and to such an extent as to interfere with his proper home duties. This forced growth appears well at first, but leads to early decay. The teacher's business is to develop his intellectual faculties; that of the parent, is to care for his physical, and principally for his moral welfare. The teacher must recognize the parents responsibility and not monopolize the time and energy of the child by too much work.

Again parents are too often inconsiderate as to the time properly belonging to the school. They trespass upon the rights of the teacher when they make it necessary for the pupil, or permit him to fail in being punctual and regular in his attendance, allowing him for very trifling causes to disturb the whole school by tardiness, or delay his classmates, and impose additional work upon the teacher by absence.

Teachers must work according to the material they have. They should know what the child is at home, and should take means to ascertain this. They cannot be familiarly acquainted with all the parents, yet they need not be entirely ignorant regarding them. It is the business of the parent to find out and get acquainted with teachers. Both parties may sometimes seem to be thoughtless of each other, but patience and forbearance are needed. The teacher ought to be in sympathy with the child in enabling him to discover himself; to find out his talent and encourage him to cultivate it.

***

To the question "Is it desirable that parents visit the schools more?" Miss Mason replied that if parents would more frequently attend the school sessions they would give the teachers an opportunity to learn something of the children as to their characters and habits, which would powerfully assist toward their proper management. She had greatly felt the lack of this help in her own experience. She read a short extract from an educational journal, touching on this subject.

***

Miss Waterbury responded to the question "Should children be taught with a view to 'showing off' in the presence of visitors?" In the sense in which the question might generally be understood, she would answer, no. The aim of school training should not be to provide for a display of proficiency on special occasions; but there are many things valuable in themselves, that may be profitably taught, and as children are expected to entertain visitors to a certain extent, some such exercises which would do credit to them, and at the same time please the parents, deserve attention. Pupils will be helped in all their work by the ability to acquit themselves with success, in the presence of visitors. All the work done, should be so thorough that it will be creditable to the pupil under any circumstances.

***

Prof. Allen was present and supplemented the remarks of Mr. Clark on the subject of the teachers becoming acquainted with the pupil through the parent. Teachers should endeavor to "put themselves in the place" of the the pupil and to see things from the pupil's standpoint. It would often materially modify their estimate of the pupil's character and motives, and enable them to deal more intelligently and justly.

***

Several questions of interest were found in the query-box and discussed briefly.

Go to Scott's shop for a first class job of horseshoeing.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix.

Notice of Dissolution of Co-Partnership

[illegible] ... W. M. Gow assumes all liabilities contracted by this firm.

Dated at Charlevoix, Mich., March 31, 1887.
W. M. GOW,
FRANK W. CRAINE.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Carson ... [illegible] ... 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day ... [illegible] ... Township Thirty-four (34) North, of Range Five (5) West.

Dated, Feb. 26, 1887.
WILLIAM CONVOY,
as Guardian of Richard Carson Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 188[illegible] executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife) to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 188[illegible] ... [illegible] ... Friday, June 17th, 1887.

Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK of Detroit,
Mortgagee.
D. V. CASE,
Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 14th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and Phebe E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Otis Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan ... [illegible] ... on Thursday the 30th day of June, A. D. 1887 ... [illegible]

Dated March 7, 1887.
OTIS ROSS,
Mortgagee.
JAMES H. JOHNSON,
Attorney for Mortgagee.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will ... [illegible] ... March 25th, 1887, East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887 ... [illegible]
WM. HARRIS, Sec., Norwood.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by [illegible].

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ABOVE QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES ... [illegible]
PAN-ZAMA MED. CO.,
Frankfort, Ind.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building.
Correspondence solicited.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.
Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.
Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.
DIRECTORS.
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.
CAPITAL ... $25,000
SURPLUS ... 2,000
The liability of stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. [illegible] of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. ... [illegible]
CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK — NEW YORK
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK — [illegible]
NAT. CITY BANK — GRAND RAPIDS
DETROIT NAT. BANK — DETROIT

Bank of
Charlevoix,
W. F. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.
CAPITAL, $25,000
Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its capital and conservative management.
Its Officers
Never Speculate. ...
Security in Banking
... [illegible]
This Bank Invites
... [illegible]
This Bank Will
... [illegible]
Parties Seeking
... [illegible]
Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. Yearly Interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.
We Solicit Your Patronage.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
AND
JOBBING SHOP.
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
in Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and horse power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Beidan's residence.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING,
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the centre of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of 200,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.
My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete.
If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.
All classes of Repairing done quickly
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
ON
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 70 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH"
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL.
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
... [illegible]
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

DO YOU
KNOW WHAT THIS MEANS?
DEALING!
It represents something you like and appreciate
It illustrates our method of doing business. It means square dealins. Don't you see this is what we preach, practice and guarantee.
HONEST VALUES,
LATEST STYLES,
FAIREST PRICES,
Put before you in opening our elegant new stock of Early Spring styles in
BOOTS & SHOES
... [illegible]
D. SHERWOOD & CO'S

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix.

CRUICKSHANK & GREER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH H. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

FAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey, Mich.

HART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. G. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, 2 doors west of [illegible], Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, [illegible], Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Dexter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Convene on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F. Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second and Thursday [illegible] month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 158, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows Hall.

U. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 1[illegible], K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the houses of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron Lee.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Jas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. B. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Liddings, W. A. Brown and C. V. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. B. Barbour, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, J. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, B. Hetlau.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the traveling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
R. A. Campbell, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only livery in connection.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

A LLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and [illegible] ... E. N. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNGER'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock work and Builders ... [illegible]
JOHN MUNGER, Jr., [illegible] Manager, South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. B. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible] county Surveyor Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Rooms in Wood's Drug Store.
Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.

"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan

[timetable illegible: stations include Detroit, St. Ignace, Newberry, Seney, Au Train, Marquette, Negaunee, Ishpeming, L'Anse, Houghton, Calumet]

F. W. ALLEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Marquette.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

In effect September 27, 1886.

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

[timetable illegible: stations include Mackinaw City, Petoskey, Boyne Falls, Mancelona, Walton Junc., Cadillac, Le Roy, Reed City, Big Rapids, Stanwood, Howard City, D. H. & M. Cross, Grand Rapids, Plainwell, Kalamazoo, Sturgis, Fort Wayne, Richmond, Cincinnati]

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

BONAPARTE.

Napoleon the First a Desperate Adventurer, Who Played for Empire With Loaded Dice.

I have just come from one of my visits to the tomb of Napoleon, writes Henry Watterson to the Courier-Journal. It is altogether the most beautiful, and at the same time the most imposing sepulcher in the world. The sarcophagus, of the richest porphyry, stands in a lowered crypt or vestibule, or basin, and, instead of looking up, you look down upon it. The canopy, erected in the Hotel des Invalides to incase this patriotic and martial shrine, is magnificent, surpassing anything of the kind known to ancient or modern times. It is connected with the great chapel of this home for the old and disabled soldiers of France, and has within it lesser chapels and niches, which contain other monuments and tombs, that to the great Bonaparte occupying the rotunda beneath the dome. Subdued light from many-colored stained-glass windows fitfully illuminates the place, effigies in gold and marble decorate it, and, from a massive altar of precious stones and metals, death seems to smile upon life.

To my mind Napoleon Bonaparte exists as a type of all that is wicked and monstrous in human nature and destiny; an arch-fiend, with frenzied gift of military ambition and genius; and in no sense worthy of such a temple. It could find, indeed, no adequate reason for being, except that it stands not alone as a monument to a famous warrior, but also as a symbol of national pride and glory. Illogical as it may be, and unchristian, yet as long as might can force its way against right, I suppose men and women will continue to fall down and worship mere prowess.

Bonaparte was not a statesman and he was not a patriot. He was not even a Frenchman. He was a vulgar foreign adventurer, who had discovered a new trick of war, precisely as a gambler might discover a new trick of cheating, and, greatly favored by fortune, he played his marked cards successfully until they were revealed to other experts and began to be played back upon him, when down he went, like any other charlatan. He had neither the self-restraints of a great character nor the sagacity of a great intellect. That he was, personally, a coarse, vainglorious bully and egotist we have abundant testimony for believing, and none to the contrary; and, though he has lain in this gorgeous mausoleum less than half a century, and, though the land is full of memorials which he caused to be erected in his honor, no lineament of his can be found which is not distinctly a curse. He founded neither a system nor a dynasty. The code to which he attached his name was none of his. The one successor, bearing that name, who followed him upon the throne, was not a Bonaparte at all, but notoriously the illegitimate son of a Dutch admiral by Hortense, the daughter of Josephine, whose case in equity was thus at last made good. Even in this direction, however, the line was stopped; and there is about as much likelihood of the son of Plon Plon wearing the imperial purple as of the statue upon the Colonne Vendome descending from its elevation and taking the reins of power.

The one titled race in France meaner than the Bonapartes—the Orleans family—are in an equally poor way of recovering their lost supremacy; so that whatever may have been the past of French history, the future, under the republic, begins to wear a tolerably hopeful aspect. The only part of the population who would, if they could, restore monarchical government are the shop-keepers and the nymphs du pave of Paris, with whom prosperity and debauchery are more or less synonymous terms. The mass and the body of the people are republicans.

But, to return to the first Napoleon. He came to Paris when old things were passing away, and where, amid the universal shipwreck, great opportunities presented themselves to unscrupulous intrepidity. Of this the young Corsican had abundance. Throughout his entire career he showed an astounding lack of reflection and forecast. He was daring and self-confident, indefatigable and resolute, unprincipled and inconsiderate. That he was a born soldier there can be no doubt; and to the usual retinue of brilliant soldierly qualities, such as decision and dash, magnetism and enthusiasm, he united the genius of a discoverer, or an inventor. He had worked out of his inner consciousness a new theory in the science of field operations.

All that was wanting to develop this was a command. The minister of war had a mistress of whom he was tired. She was pretty and sprightly, and Napoleon fell in love with her, and, being willing to marry her, got the army of Italy as her dower. The highway to fortune was accordingly opened to him, and by the application of his original art of war victory after victory was achieved; he rose to the head of affairs; he captured the revolution; he erected upon the ashes of the old monarchy an empire far eclipsing it in glory, sending the dissensions of the national assembly and the horrors of the reign of terror to the rear, and bringing to the front a martial spirit which made the people one again and bore down all before it.

Bronze cannon reared;
France, with rebellious might,
Felt her heart swell.

And all went well with the Bonapartes. At last, when peace had been won and war had been made, Napoleon found himself master of the world. He had created a new map of Europe; he had supplanted many dynasties with a single family. Joseph was king in Spain, Louis was king in Holland, Jerome was king in Westphalia, a sister was queen here, a step-daughter queen there, and the principalities and dukedoms were filled with the field marshals and favorites of the wonderful little man. All this before he was out of his thirties. Mark the sequel. Four short lines suffice to tell it:

He fought, and half the world was his;
He died without a road his own,
And borrowed from his enemies
Six feet of ground to lie upon.

And this, observe, not when he was old and infirm, and had lost his brain-power, his vital energy, and his grip, but in the prime of his manhood. Yet there are those who still persist in thinking that he was a great man.

A correspondent in Mexico explains why the Mexican calls the American a "Gringo." She says that when the American army invaded Mexico a favorite song in the camps was Burns' "Green Grow the Rushes, O." The Mexicans heard it repeated over and over, and finally began to call the Americans by the first two words, which they pronounced "grin go." Hence "Gringo."

Chili has granted the widow of Vice Admiral Lynch a pension of $6,000 a year.

A CHAT ABOUT LINCOLN.

Recollections of Twenty-three Years of Life in the White House.

He spoke of the martyred Lincoln, and bending over said fervently: "He had all those simple ways, my friend, that make great men." He was Thomas F. Pendel, Lincoln's body-guard, and now serving his twenty-third year in the white house.

"So you want to hear about Lincoln," he said to his interviewer, as he rubbed his eyes to aid a memory of two decades ago. "I might as well lead up to that great man's end by saying that on Nov. 3, 1864, Sergt. Cronan, Andrew Smith, Alfonso Dunn, and myself were assigned to duty at the white house. I am the only survivor. We were taken to Mr. Lincoln's room, given instructions, and went on duty. The real inwardness of the matter was that the president had received many threatening letters, and at the time precaution was necessary. Everybody had to be watched, even women. I tell you, sir," with his eyes lighting up, "those fiery southern women were dangerous. I had been at the white house but a short time when the president chose me as his guard. I walked with him everywhere. As a coincidence, one day, when we were on the street, I said: 'Mr. President, Senator Harlan is a good man.' 'A very good man,' he replied. The senator afterward became a member of the president's cabinet and also father-in-law of the president's son, Robert Lincoln. One day he said to me, as we were coming out of Secretary Stanton's house: 'Well, Pendleton,'—he and Mrs. Lincoln always called me that,—'I have received a good many threatening letters, but I'm not afraid.' 'But, Mr. President,' said I, 'many a brave man has lost his life because he did not fear.' 'That's so,' he replied, 'that's so.'

"Again, to show you how frank he was, I asked him how tall he was. He laughed and said: 'I am just six foot three in my stocking feet.' The devotion between Mr. Lincoln and his little son Tad, who always called him 'Papa-day,' was something for a study. Whenever the president returned to the white house, no matter how brief had been his absence, he would pick that boy up in his arms, hug him, and carry him up-stairs to his room with him. I never shall forget how Tad interested himself in my behalf.

"The president was at his desk when Tad opened the door and said. 'Good morning, Papa-day, will you do me a favor?' 'My son, you know I will,' he answered. 'Well, then, sir, just sign that.' The president read the document, looked at the boy proudly, half amused, and, picking up his pen, inscribed his name. This is the document, said the old man, huskily, as he held out a bit of faded paper that shook because his hand trembled:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, Dec. 31, 1864.—These presents witness that Thomas F. Pendel is duly appointed an usher in the place of Edward McManus, now dismissed.
A. LINCOLN.

"This boy was only 13 years old," continued Mr. Pendel. "He was very fond of me. He would meet me on the stairway and say: 'Tom Pen, you go up-stairs and ask mamma may I go to the theater and tell her you'll take care of me.' I would go and say, 'Mrs. Lincoln, Tad wants to go to the theater; may he?' 'No, I don't think he had better,' she would say. 'I'll go with him and take good care of him.' 'Will you be sure to do it, Pendleton? Well, then, I guess he may go.'

"It was my duty to stand in front of the president's desk when he was receiving business visitors. Of all the requests!—and he would listen to anybody. One day two southern women came and said: 'Mr. President, won't you give us a pass to Richmond?' 'No, I won't,' was the plain answer. They sat down sullenly, and after awhile the president called them up, and said: 'Yes, I will give you a pass to Richmond,' writing one on his knee at the time. 'I would rather have you there, because if you stay here you'll just inform the confederacy of what we are doing.' A young officer who wanted to be transferred to Hancock's corps submitted the necessary papers to him. When at length he called for the president's decision he inquired very bluntly: 'Well, have you looked at the papers?' 'Yes,' said the president. 'Well, is there anything more you want?' 'Hancock says you are a gallant officer, sir,' said Mr. Lincoln sternly, looking him in the eye, 'but you are not a sober officer.' That settled it."

Mr. Pendel was nearing the blackest spot in his memory—the night of the assassination.

"On one dark rainy day the president and myself walked over to Secretary Stanton's office in the war department. He and Mr. Lincoln held a conference, and then we started back again. On the stairway of the department we met a stranger who looked at the president and he looked at him. I watched them both intently. The man passed on his way up-stairs, and the president kept going down, but Mr. Lincoln kept his eyes on him. When the stranger reached the head of the stairs he turned and peered over the balustrade, and when we reached the pavement the president spoke for the first time. 'Pendleton,' he said, 'I received a letter from New York yesterday telling me that a man answering his description and dressed just like him was on his way to Washington to kill me.'

"Then came that terrible night. Mr. Ashmer, of New York, Mr. Colfax, speaker of the house, and Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln were chatting in the parlor before starting for the theater. Richmond had fallen and the house was illuminated. Do you know the reason the president went to the theater that night? It had been advertised that Grant would be there, but he couldn't, and Mr. Lincoln went so that the people would not be disappointed. I saw the party off, and sent a guard to look after them. About 11 o'clock the bell rang and when I answered it a man said: 'Do you know they have tried to cut Secretary Seward's throat?' I said: 'No; it can't be.' A few moments later he returned, breathless and exclaimed: 'Yes, it's so. The cavalry are up and down the avenue.' Then I grew uneasy about the president, and sent out messengers. A few minutes afterward I saw Senator Sumner coming up the hill, followed by a crowd of men and boys, and he gasped, 'How about the president?' He had hardly finished talking when Commissioner Newton arrived and said: 'The president has been shot through the back of the head.' I went to Capt. Lincoln's room. He had just returned from the front, and I said: 'Captain, something has happened to the president.' I told the military secretary plainly what it was. He turned white as death, and said: 'Don't let anyone come in the house.' I was going down-stairs when little Tad, who had been to the National theater, rushed into my arms and sobbed: 'Oh, Tom Pen, somebody has killed papa-day.' It was an awful night. I rushed through crowds on the streets to Peterson's tailor shop, where the president had been taken, passed the line of guards, and Mrs. Lincoln met me in one of the parlors, with hair disheveled and almost wild. 'Oh, Pendleton,' she cried, 'if you had been there it would not have happened.'

The Chances of Matrimony.

A man who has studied the various phases of the matrimonial market has come to the conclusion that every woman has some chance to marry, it may be one to fifty, or it may be ten to one she will. Representing a woman's entire chance at 100, he has made out the following table to show the chance at certain points of time:

	Per cent
Between the ages of 15 and 20 years,	14 1-2
Between the ages of 20 and 25 years,	52
Between the ages of 25 and 30 years,	18
Between the ages of 30 and 35 years,	15 1-2
Between the ages of 35 and 40 years,	3 3-4
Between the ages of 40 and 45 years,	2 1-2
Between the ages of 45 and 50 years,	5-8 of 1
Between the ages of 50 and 60 years,	1-4 of 1

After 60 it is one-tenth of 1 per cent, or one chance in 1,000.—New York Mail and Express.

The Bank of England Note.

"The Bank of England note," says the Family Tutor, "possesses no security which may not be known by any person who will make himself acquainted with the following characteristics of the paper, the plate printing, and the type printing of the note. The paper is distinguished:

"1. By its peculiar color, such as is neither sold in the shops nor used for any other purpose.

"2. By its thinness and transparency—qualities which prevent any portion of the printing on the note being washed or scratched out without a hole being made.

"3. By its characteristic feel, which consists of a singular crispness and toughness, owing to the fact that the bank paper is made from new linen and cotton, not from rags.

"4. By the peculiar wire-mark or water-mark, which can only be produced when the paper is in a state of pulp; consequently the forger must procure a mold and make his own paper, both requiring the skill of such first-rate artisans as are not likely to be met with in the haunts of crime.

"5. By the three deckle or rough edges. These edges are produced when the paper is in pulp, two notes being placed in the mold and divided lengthways. The deckle is the raw edge of the paper and cannot be imitated by cutting.

"6. By the strength of the paper; a bank-note will lift a hundred-weight if carefully adjusted.

"The printing is of two kinds, type and plate. The paper is moistened by water driven through its pores by the pressure of the atmosphere; 30,000 double notes are thus moistened in the space of an hour. The ink used is made at the bank from linseed-oil and the charred husks and vines of Rhenish grapes. This gives a peculiar velvety black to the mark in the left-hand corner of the note.

"The notes are numbered by a machine which cannot err; and, lastly, are authorized by the signature of the clerk. The bank-notes are printed on the side of the paper which receives the water-mark, so that if the paper be split the unprinted surface only retains the slightest trace of that mark."—English Ex.

Once Bitten Twice Shy.

Some years ago Kaiser Wilhelm held a reception at Bonn. One of the officers who had the honor of being presented had been hitherto unknown to the emperor, and the adjutant, who had made inquiries, whispered to his majesty: "Has just been promoted captain." The emperor spoke kindly to the young man, and complimented him on his promotion. Quite startled at the happy news the officer, whose turn had not yet come to be raised to a captaincy, hastened to report the matter to the colonel, who lost no time in seeking an interview with the adjutant, when it turned out that the latter had mistaken the young lieutenant for his elder brother, who had been recently advanced to the rank of captain. The adjutant penitently confessed his mistake to the emperor. But his majesty only smiled, saying: "If I have complimented Herr M. on his promotion it must remain so." Not long since there was a levee at court. Herr von B., who had recently been promoted to the rank of major, appeared, still wearing a captain's uniform, and was presented to the emperor. Again the adjutant whispered: "Has just been promoted major." The emperor turned round with a knowing smile and said, in genuine Berlinese: "Nay, my good friend, not to be caught this time!"—Bonner Zeitung.

The Same Old Line.

They were old friends, and had been sweethearts in their younger days. There was silver in her hair and snow on his, and they sat and talked of the times when they were young. They did not say how many years ago the adventures happened. They did not speak of dates. It was "when we were young." Their first meeting, their first kiss, their first quarrel, their last meeting, their last kiss, their last quarrel were all gone over. Perhaps they both warmed a little over the recollections. At last he said:

"Ay, Jennie, an' I hae na loved anybody since you. I hae never forgotten you."

"John," she said, with a little moistening of the eye. "You're just as big a leear as ever—an' I believe ye, jist the same."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head, everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Dr. G. W. Crouter's.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. ... [illegible]
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

GRENADES.
Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
PRICES.
Pints. - Per Doz. $10.00.
Quarts. - " " 15.00.
"STAR"
Tubular Fire Extinguisher.
Glass Tube, 10x2¼ in. Holds 1 quart.
In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant in ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No rust; no corrosion possible.
Plain, $12.00 per doz.
Ornam't'd, 15.00 per doz.
The "Star" EXTINGUISHER
Holds 4 gallons, and will force a stream through 5 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone.
Price, $60.00 Each.
"STAR" CHEMICAL.
Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt. 450 lbs.
PRICE.
$200.00 EACH.
Four years of practical use have demonstrated these to be the only reliable and thoroughly efficient Hand Fire appliances made. We use the same chemical liquid in all, and guarantee fully. Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials.
The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
The Beam is not bolted to the handles, but by means of a steel [illegible] is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, ... [illegible]
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

Good PAINT
An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the
SHERWIN-WILLIAMS
COLORED LEADS.
Also
St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
[testimonials illegible]
Sold by all Druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00.
W. JOHNSTON & CO.,
DETROIT, MICHIGAN

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
JAY L. PRICE

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
... [illegible]
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS
Dealers in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
[illegible] St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, - MICHIGAN
SMITH & PARMELEE, - PUBLISHERS

To be in Fashion, Be a Little Fast.

At the present day one note of fashion is undoubtedly to be "fast;" and it is especially required of every married couple that they shall unite a profound indifference for each other, with a corresponding fondness for the husband or wife, as the case may be, of some other person. "So far has this gone," says the cultured and fastidious Epoch, "that a man of fashion in New York or Boston would think twice before taking a walk with his wife in broad daylight, and certain really affectionate husbands are under the painful necessity of carrying on a kind of clandestine intimacy with their own wives. All this comes very hard on some people who are by nature incapable of what is called a 'flirtation' but who are bound to be 'in the swim,' cost what it may. Every one is familiar with that frequent but always pitiable sight of a middle-aged man, who, if he consulted his inclinations, would be sitting at home in slippers, surrounded by his family, trying to give an appearance of wickedness, in the corner of a ball-room, to some perfectly colorless tete-a-tete! And perhaps this spectacle is heightened by the fact that his wife, a great little woman, whose conversational powers find their appropriate field in the nursery, is at the same time making an equally ineffectual attempt to pose as a married flirt. Other notes of fashion are sometimes thought to be the possession of a fur-lined overcoat or a pair of bob-tail roans, but these are external and accidental circumstances, such as might confer distinction in a savage tribe, but surely not in this enlightened community. It would perhaps be more true to say that a frank and noisy behavior is a present note of fashion, and ...

NEARING THE HARBOR.

Across a barren reach of land
I hear the moaning sea;
The restless waves die on the strand,
In minor melody.
And far and wide,
At eventide,
The sailors' songs ring free.

I live within the past again,
I am a boy once more;
The drifting years with joy and pain,
Forgotten that before.
Again with glee
I hail the sea,
And bid farewell to shore.

My mother kissed my boyish lips,
My father loved me true,
But my heart anchored with the ships
That sailed the billows blue.
I left my home
To cross the foam,
And see lands strange and new.

For forty years, in storm and calm,
I sailed the briny sea.
Her voice is soothing as a psalm,
At evening fall, to me,
And rocked to rest
Upon her breast,
In dreams I seem to be.

I had a wife and children fair,
They left me long ago,
And crossed the silent waters where
Nor storm nor tempests blow.
With outstretched hand
On happy lands
They wait my coming slow.

The clouds are lowering, dark and gray,
A storm broods o'er the deep,
The sea birds whirl athwart the spray;
I listen half asleep—
I am so old
Life's morning gold
Of memories I keep.

I sail alone upon a sea,
The harbor lies before,
And never storms shall keep from me
The ones I loved of yore.
So fair it lies
To my dim eyes,
The haven of that shore.

—LUCY MELROSE STAPLETON.

FAITHFUL BARNABY.

... all felt relieved when, on the fifth day of their journey, and only about forty miles from St. Louis (having made extra time by driving long hours), he called to Barnaby and said:

"My man, I will get down here. My road lies over yon and I'll take the nearest way; but I'll see you again. Good day, gentlemen," and whirling upon his heel, before Barnaby could recover from his surprise enough to make a reply, he disappeared in some thick bushes that lined the road side.

Revolving in his mind the strange passenger's conduct, Barnaby became more than ever convinced that something was wrong.

"Now, I wonder who that dum skunk is," he soliloquized as he drove onward. "There's been so many of them cussed 'agents' about hyar lately that ye kan't tell an honest man when ye see him. Like as not thar'll be trouble 'fore I can git to Saint Looey. But I'll be ready for 'em, and if they stops me somethin' is goin' to drop, sure."

About nightfall the last station was reached. Horses were changed, rough refreshments secured, and away they rattled at a brisk pace for St. Louis. When darkness had fully settled down Barnaby pulled up his horses and jumped out, called the men from the coach and said:

"Gents, I believe that feller we left back thar means mischief. Down hyar about ten miles is Murdock's gap, a hard place, and more'n one stage has been stopped thar. I've got the mail on board, and she am goin' through; besides, thar's the wemin, and if them road agents gits hands on them they'll handle 'em rough. Have your guns ready, and if they try to stop us, give it to 'em rough, and don't blame me if we don't git to St. Louis to-night."

With this he again mounted the box and drove on. Some of the passengers pooh-poohed the idea, while others seemed to believe there might be something in what the driver said. ...

FOR THE LADIES.

Gossip About Women. Fashion Notes for Woman at Home, Etc.

...

MICHIGAN.

Condensed Reports of the Latest News from All Parts of the State.

Latest From Lansing.

SENATE.

The Senate passed a bill prohibiting the use of stoves or heaters in railway cars after Nov. 1, 1888, unless inclosed in closets built of boiler iron; also a bill prohibiting the use of any freight car not provided with an automatic coupler in the State after Jan. 1, 1889. Also a bill appropriating $78,000 for the use of the State public school at Coldwater. The Senate adjourned until April 6, to allow members to attend to election duties.

HOUSE.

The excitement of the session was in the House over a bill to abolish the board of councilmen in the city of Detroit. It passed just as amended in committee of the whole; bills were passed making a general appropriation for the State public school at Coldwater; regulating the carrying, yarding and feeding of Texas cattle; abolishing two of the four justice courts in the city of Ann Arbor; for the completion of the report of the biographical and historical work commenced by the centennial commissioner, and numerous bills of a local nature. The House adjourned till April 6.

STATE ITEMS.

—The city debt of Hillsdale is $68,000.

—Jonesville has two faith cure practitioners.

—A Kalamazoo club is named Insouciance.

—Vassar girls are organizing an athletic club.

—A new school building is needed at North Branch.

...

Baraga, Menominee, Delta, Alger, Marquette, and Schoolcraft. It is claimed to have on it some of the finest timber in Michigan, and embraces a large amount of mineral lands in the Gogebic range.

—At the recent county examination of teachers for certificates at Lapeer there were 131 applicants from all over the county—2 for first grade certificates, 6 for second grade, and the remainder for third grade. The board estimated that about five-eighths of the number would pass the required average and be granted certificates.

—The tunnel being driven under the river at Port Huron is dug eight feet in diameter and is then lined with blocks two feet long and one foot thick, cut beveling, so as to fill the circle, making a wall one foot thick. When this becomes soaked with water it will be very tight. The clay is soft, like putty, dark blue, and very sticky.

—Fire in the Bronson block in Jackson, lately did damage by fire and water to the extent of $10,000, but the block was saved. W. N. Woodman's loss is $7,000, insured for $4,000; J. H. Roff, grocer, lost $2,500, insured for $1,000. Law offices on the second floor suffer a loss of about $2,000. The building was insured for $9,000. The fire originated in B. J. Carter's job printing office.

—The agitation of graveyard insurance in Michigan is accomplishing excellent results. C. D. Warner, President of the Loyal Life Association of Reading, resigned and made a public statement disclaiming until now any knowledge of the workings of his company, of which he claims he was only a figure head. "I do not wish," he says, "to identify myself or have my name connected with a company whose agents deal in human life. I have no sympathy with or toleration for a company that allows its agents to deal ...

SCIENTIFIC.

It appears after an experiment of several months, that ferry boats plying between San Francisco and Oakland, which had been fitted up for burning petroleum have now gone back to coal. The economy, as we understand, so far as the consumption of fuel is concerned, is said to be decidedly in favor of petroleum, but the trouble in its use came from the intense heat produced, by which, or by the peculiar nature of the combustion, the iron of both the furnaces and boilers began to indicate rapid deterioration—hence the return to coal.

It is not long since we spoke of the benefits conferred on the farmer by the inventor. The following statement is a good illustration of our views as then presented. It is taken from our contemporary, the New England Farmer. "By the use of mowing machines and horse rakes and a horse hay fork, two boys in Connecticut last summer cut, raked, and helped to stow away 100 tons of hay, while their father was disabled from work by illness. Under such conditions a farmer is apt to feel like blessing the man who invents labor saving machinery.—Scientific American.

SUCCESSFUL HATCHING OF SALMON IN AUSTRALIA.

According to the Colonies and India, the last experiment in sending salmon ova to the Antipodes appears to have been a great success. In January, 1885, a shipment of eggs was made by Mr. James Youl, by desire of the Tasmanian Government, and the bulk of the eggs reached the colony in good condition, development of the embryo having been suspended by means of Haslam's refrigerating machinery. The eggs have developed into "fry," and the "fry" into "smolts," for several young salmon about 8 inches long ...

TIRED OUT!
BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC

ELY'S CREAM BALM
CATARRH
HAY-FEVER

BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER

"THE FAVORITE"
BAUER PIANO
JULIUS BAUER & CO., CHICAGO.

OAKLAWN
PERCHERON HORSES.

300 to 400 IMPORTED ANNUALLY
M. W. DUNHAM,
Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois.

FITS STOPPED FREE

PENNYROYAL PILLS
"CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH."
The Original and Only Genuine.
Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless imitations. Indispensable to LADIES. Ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. Chichester Chemical Co., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa.
Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

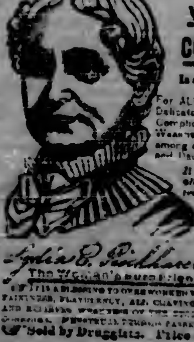
PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION

M. N. P. Co. CHICAGO—No. 50.

HOME STUDY
PATENTS
LADY
PENSIONS
RUPTURE
HOG CHOLERA
TELEPHONES
DETECTIVES
OPIUM MORPHINE HABIT

Spring Medicine
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Tones and Strengthens
Hood's Sarsaparilla
100 Doses One Dollar

Children Cry FOR PITCHER'S Castoria



LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

LIVER, BLOOD AND LUNG DISEASES.

LIVER DISEASE AND HEART TROUBLE. MRS. MARY A. MCCLURE, Columbus, Kans., writes: "I addressed you in November, 1884, in regard to my health, being afflicted with liver disease, heart trouble, and female weakness. I was advised to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Favorite Prescription and Pellets. I used one bottle of the 'Prescription,' five of the 'Discovery,' and four of the 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets.' My health began to improve under the use of your medicine, and my strength came back. My difficulties have all disappeared. I can work hard all day, or walk four or five miles a day, and stand it well; and when I began using the medicine I could scarcely walk across the room, most of the time, and I did not think I could ever feel well again. I have a little baby girl eight months old. Although she is a little delicate in size and appearance, she is healthy. I give your remedies all the credit for curing me, as I took no other treatment after beginning their use. I am very grateful for your kindness, and thank God and thank you that I am as well as I am after years of suffering."

LIVER DISEASE. MRS. I. V. WEBBER, of Yorkshire, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., writes: "I wish to say a few words in praise of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets.' For five years previous to taking them I was a great sufferer; I had a severe pain in my right side continually, was unable to do my own work. I am happy to say I am now well and strong, thanks to your medicines."

Chronic Diarrhea Cured.—D. LAZARRE, Esq., 275 and 277 Decatur Street, New Orleans, La., writes: "I used three bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and it has cured me of chronic diarrhea. My bowels are now regular."

GENERAL DEBILITY. MRS. PARMELIA BRUNDAGE, of 161 Lock Street, Lockport, N. Y., writes: "I was troubled with chills, nervous and general debility, with frequent sore throat, and my mouth was badly cankered. My liver was inactive, and I suffered much from dyspepsia. I am pleased to say that your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets' have cured me of all these ailments and I cannot say enough in their praise. I must also say a word in reference to your 'Favorite Prescription,' as it has proven itself a most excellent medicine for weak females. It has been used in my family with excellent results."

Dyspepsia.—JAMES L. COLBY, Esq., of Yucatan, Houston Co., Minn., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion, and would eat heartily and grow poor at the same time. I experienced heartburn, sour stomach, and many other disagreeable symptoms common to that disorder. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' and I am now entirely free from the dyspepsia, and am, in fact, healthier than I have been for five years. I weigh one hundred and seventy-one and one-half pounds, and have done as much work the past summer as I have ever done in the same length of time in my life. I never took a medicine that seemed to tone up the muscles and invigorate the whole system equal to your 'Discovery' and 'Pellets.'"

INVIGORATES THE SYSTEM.

Dyspepsia.—THERESA A. CASS, of Springfield, Mo., writes: "I was troubled one year with liver complaint, dyspepsia, and sleeplessness, but your 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me."

Chills and Fever.—Rev. H. E. MOSLEY, Montmorenci, S. C., writes: "Last August I thought I would die with chills and fever. I took your 'Discovery' and it stopped them in a very short time."

"THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, and bodily health and vigor will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

INDIGESTION BOILS, BLOTCHES. Rev. F. ASBURY HOWELL, Pastor of the M. E. Church, of Silverton, N. J., says: "I was afflicted with catarrh and indigestion. Boils and blotches began to arise on the surface of the skin, and I experienced a tired feeling and dullness. I began the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as directed by him for such complaints, and in one week's time I began to feel like a new man, and am now sound and well. The 'Pleasant Purgative Pellets' are the best remedy for bilious or sick headache, or tightness about the chest, and bad taste in the mouth, that I have ever used. My wife could not walk across the floor when she began to take your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Now she can walk quite a little ways, and do some light work."

HIP-JOINT DISEASE. MRS. IDA M. STRONG, of Ainsworth, Ind., writes: "My little boy had been troubled with hip-joint disease for two years. When he commenced the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' he was confined to his bed, and could not be moved without suffering great pain. But now, thanks to your 'Discovery,' he is able to be up all the time, and can walk with the help of crutches. He does not suffer any pain, and can eat and sleep as well as any one. It has only been about three months since he commenced using your medicine. I cannot find words with which to express my gratitude for the benefit he has received through you."

A TERRIBLE AFFLICTION. Skin Disease.—The "Democrat and News," of Cambridge, Maryland, says: "Mrs. ELIZA ANN POOLE, wife of Leonard Poole, of Williamsburg, Dorchester Co., Md., has been cured of a bad case of Eczema by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The disease appeared first in her feet, extended to the knees, covering the whole of the lower limbs from feet to knees, then attacked the elbows and became so severe as to prostrate her. After being treated by several physicians for a year or two she commenced the use of the medicine named above. She soon began to mend and is now well and hearty. Mrs. Poole thinks the medicine has saved her life and prolonged her days."

Mr. T. A. AYRES, of East New Market, Dorchester County, Md., vouches for the above facts.

CONSUMPTION, WEAK LUNGS, SPITTING OF BLOOD.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath ...

GIVEN UP TO DIE. WASTED TO A SKELETON. BLEEDING FROM LUNGS.

Price $1.00 per Bottle, or Six Bottles for $5.00.
WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Proprietors, No. 663 Main Street, BUFFALO, N. Y.

PAINT YOUR BUGGY for ONE DOLLAR

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 20, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

The Saloon in Politics.

The "saloon in politics" is a subject that is being pretty thoroughly discussed nowadays, not only in Michigan, but in New York and many other States. It has come to be generally understood that the saloon has become a dangerous factor in politics. This is certainly true wherever it has become the dominant factor, as it has in so many of the large cities. There the saloon element has been solidified and courted until it has been made to feel its importance as a controlling power in political contests.

The danger of permitting this solidified element to dictate and control elections begins to be more fully realized than ever before. Gradually have the liquor dealers and saloon keepers been centralizing as a political power, and now conscious of their strength, they, in many places, bid defiance to all law and order. They want all the other laws strictly enforced except those to which they are amenable. They have come to regard themselves as a privileged class — privileged to violate every liquor law enacted for the purpose of holding them within certain lines for the public good. They have defied these laws with a feeling of security based upon their recognized political power. They have ignored law and order because they have felt that they were stronger than the sentiment in favor of law and order.

The responsibility, however, of these violations has not rested wholly on the saloon keeper, although he is the offending party. Public sentiment has been playing the role of a coward in this great "moral drama" and must bear its just share of criticism and censure. There are hopeful signs, however, that the people are beginning to tire of the dominant saloon in politics, and that public sentiment is rapidly setting against it. This is seen in a general demand for further legislation for the control of the traffic, and for the thorough enforcement of the laws in every particular.

The legislature can if it will at once enact such measures as will, at least in a great degree, satisfy this demand. After that it will remain for the people to do their duty and see to it that the laws are enforced.—Detroit Tribune.

Ironton.

Listen for the big whistle; the furnace goes into blast this week.

School opened with an enrollment of 65.

The boys played their first game of base ball on Saturday.

Mrs. John Peterson is home from her visit to Pennsylvania.

Crossing the arm on the ice is played out for this year.

The committee for examining the ferry and making arrangements for starting it on a free basis, met on Tuesday.

Mr. Tom Shouts took a zero bath off Bedwin's dock on Saturday; inducement, treacherous ice.

The schools will observe Arbor day by planting trees in the school yard.

Mr. and Mrs. Shouts, Geo. McMulkin and Miss Annie Williams visited friends in Mancelona last week.

The bill providing for capital punishment in Michigan in certain cases, passed the House on the 8th inst., fifty-three members voting for the bill, or two more than a majority. It is said that the Senate is evenly divided on the measure.

As a rule the democratic press of the state is opposed to displeasing the saloons by the enactment of more stringent liquor laws. One of the ablest edited democratic papers of Michigan—the Jackson Patriot—says "let the law stand substantially as it is." Public sentiment is now in favor of placing further restrictions on the traffic, and the laws should keep abreast with public sentiment.

There is little doubt that a speculative boom, such as has recently struck the town of Sault Ste. Marie, is a damage to a place. A boom that is real, and not speculative—a boom that is caused and kept going by an influx of genuine settlers and new business enterprises—is an excellent thing; and so much of the Sault Ste. Marie boom as means growth and capital is good. But a boom of non-residents buying property to hold for a speculation, not intending to move into the town and build it up themselves, but merely to make it more difficult and costly for other people to do so, by raising the values of property that real settlers must buy is a damage and hindrance to growth. It takes from the attractiveness of the place, since it reduces the chances of making a profit by buying property and settling there, and since it may prevent men of moderate means from settling there at all. In time Sault Ste. Marie must become a large city. Nature has done so much for it that, when there is a settled country back of it, and abundant and cheap transportation facilities, it must almost necessarily become a great manufacturing and trading center. But this may be many years ahead; and discounting the promise of the future so heavily and so long in advance is an evil rather than a good, and an evil which operates to more or less postpone the time when it will become a large city. It is to be hoped that the speculative boom, which hinders the real boom, is over, and that its effects will pass away shortly, so that the real and healthy boom may cease to be hindered. Moderate prices for real estate, so that the actual settler will be attracted by the prospect of a sure rise in values, are best for every town which hopes to grow; and the sooner Sault Ste. Marie gets down to such prices the better it will be for her future.—State Republican.

Common Council.

At the meeting of the Village Council on Thursday evening, A. E. Mason was elected President pro tem.

The election of Marshal was laid on the table one week.

J. A. Carlstein, M. D., was elected Health Officer.

John Bell was elected poundmaster.

Trustee Smith moved that the liquor bonds be fixed at $6,000. Trustee Eaton moved an amendment that they be $4,000. Laid on the table one week.

Druggists' bonds were fixed at $1,000.

Committee instructed to procure blank vouchers for the use of the village.

The resignation of C. J. Grier, as Chief of the Fire Department, was laid on the table one week.

Trustee Newman moved that the Chief of the Fire Department receive the sum of $25 per year. Laid on the table one week.

The following bills were allowed:

S. T. [illegible], 1 day filling cisterns,	$ 1 [illegible]
Ed Preston, "	1 50
J. W. [illegible], labor	[illegible]
A. McCall, clearing snow from cisterns,	7[illegible]
Smith & Parmelee, election proclamations,	[illegible]
J. Milo Eaton, drawing contracts,	[illegible]
A. Cameron, labor and material pub. building,	1 [illegible]
Gurley Beck, street commissioner,	1 75
Chas Swallow, painting and calcimining,	[illegible]
Wm Hooton, snow plow, during blizzard,	[illegible]

Lansing dispatch to the New York Tribune: Members of the Legislature ascribe the wonderful vote for prohibition to the efforts of the women at the polls. Surprising stories are told of how they stood in line snatching ballots "No" on them from the hands of passing voters, substituting "Yes" ballots and following the ticket up to the ballot box to see that the voter did as they wished. They were very successful with men of intemperate habits. Representatives who acted as inspectors of election at home, say they witnessed numerous cases where liquor sellers and their friends voted for prohibition.

Chicago Inter Ocean: The Governor General of Canada in his speech at the opening of Parliament yesterday took pains to say that measures had been taken to protect the inshore fisheries, and the recommendation for a canal to connect Lake Superior with Lake Huron, "in order to provide against possible interruption of the navigation of our great inland waters," is not altogether of a pacific character. With a canal from Lake Superior to Lake Huron and another from Lake Huron or Georgian Bay to Lake Ontario, and with British gunboats swarming up the St. Lawrence, Canada may fancy she would be in condition to lock horns with the United States. In the meantime what is the United States doing to provide against possible interruption of the navigation of our great inland waters? What has Congress done to provide for the passage of boats from the Mississippi to Lakes Michigan and Superior? Canada seems to take it for granted that the United States could control the Straits at Sault Ste. Marie, as we could, and with an inland water-way from the Mississippi the whole chain of lakes would be more American than Canadian.

Detroit Tribune: Undoubtedly a majority of the legislators at Lansing are in favor of largely increasing the tax restriction of the liquor traffic. The tax law will probably be further amended so as to provide that the revenue from the tax shall go into the county fund for the benefit of the county. So far, so good; but this is not enough. More than half the counties of the state have just voted against the tax system and in favor of prohibition. Let the legislature pass a county option law in conjunction with the new high tax law, and every county in the state can have prohibition or high taxation just as it may decide by a majority of its electors. This would give the prohibition counties the privilege they ask and it would be a long stride in the direction of practical temperance reform. The TRIBUNE certainly hopes the republicans of the legislature will take a bold and courageous stand on this question. They cannot afford to do otherwise. The republican party of Michigan is for temperance. Arrayed against it today is the entire saloon interest. The republican party will take no step backward. Its representatives at Lansing should improve the opportunity they now have before the session closes to take a long step forward.

Detroit Tribune: The absurd claim which some of our contemporaries made right after election that the salaries amendment had been carried, had no sort of a foundation, and it was too wild a guess to be generally believed. Of course it is a shame that it was defeated, but it seems to be useless to try to increase the salaries of our state officers at all unless there can be union of action and intelligent effort of all political parties. If another salaries amendment is ever to be submitted we hope it will be considered and treated entirely on its merits and in a business like way. At the proper time let the state central committees of the various parties unite in recommending the submission of another salaries amendment by the next legislature, and follow this with united appeals to the people to support it at the polls and we believe it would go through by a large majority. The amendment increasing the salary of circuit judges to $2,500 was finally carried when the state central committee of all parties jointly recommended its adoption. Several previous attempts had failed simply because there was no intelligent effort or union of action in the matter. When the honest judgment of the voters of the state is fairly appealed to in the way suggested, we do not believe they will refuse to grant reasonable salaries to our state officers. No poor man can afford to be governor of Michigan at the present salary of $1,000 a year; or secretary of state at $800 a year, and so on. When these meager salaries were fixed the state was not what it is now. It is a disgrace to Michigan to render a poor man ineligible to the gubernatorial chair by refusing to vote the office a salary large enough to pay its incumbent's expenses.

Old papers for sale at this office.

Additional Local News.

—The saloon bonds will be fixed to-morrow night.

—Stround & Dilworth have put in a log turner in their mill at Horton's Bay. They expect to start up again this week.

—The firm of Gellick & Ingalls of this place, has been dissolved. Mr. Gellick has bought the property and will continue the business.

—Country people within a reasonable distance of town should attend the special meetings being held at Opera hall. Come and hear Mr. Sayles sing and speak.

Grand Rapids Eagle: Game and Fish Warden Smith is busily engaged in the duties assigned to him by the Governor, and with his able corps of deputies is on the watch for all violators. He expects soon to have an interesting test case which will go to the Supreme Court, and will then define the rights of fishermen in Michigan. The test case will be to prosecute some fishermen at Grand Haven. A bill is now in the hands of the committee at Lansing revising the game and fish laws, and it will be reported upon favorably at once, and will become a law. This will remedy the many defects of the old laws, and as soon as it is passed a pamphlet prepared containing all the game laws, will be sent all over the state. These laws protect an immense interest, and will be of great value to the commonwealth when they are properly enforced.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Tuesday evening Teacher's meeting at 6:30; all come.

Preaching on Sabbath morning at the usual hour to be followed by Sunday school.

Come let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before God our maker.

W. H. M.

G. A. R.

HEADQUARTERS,
Baxter Post No 110 G. A. R.
CHARLEVOIX, MICH., Apr 14, 1887
[Circular No. 1.]

His excellency, the Governor of Michigan having designated Monday April 25, 1887, as "Arbor Day," the undersigned respectfully requests each member of Baxter Post to plant at least one tree in our Post cemetery on said "Arbor Day." Each tree or trees planted to be named in honor of some comrade; and the name and location to be recorded in the cemetery records. The places in which trees are to be planted will be designated by the cemetery committee, at two o'clock p. m. on said day.

By order of
E. B. GREEN,
Post Commander

Mr. Chairman Weston of the Democratic State Central Committee, as a prophet, came within about 40,000 votes of predicting the result of the election. He predicted a Democratic victory by 10,000, and it come out Republican by about 30,000. Of course the Republicans are agreeably surprised. But where is Don D.? Is he trying to whisper the news in the President's ear.

Some of the Democrats are proposing General Philip Sheridan as candidate for President. Gen. Sheridan once characterized the controlling elements of the Democratic party as banditti. The mention of his name with that ticket seems to indicate a forgiving disposition. And there is no doubt that they would forgive him eagerly if he would but go over to the banditti side.

One requirement of the liquor tax law should be, in every instance, the full payment of the tax before the opening of any saloon; with heavy penalty obligations attached. Another provision should impose a severe penalty on officers who neglect any duty in the enforcement of the law. If still another could be added making it a crime for the public to shut its eyes to violation of the laws, that would be an excellent provision, also. But the legislature can't do it all. The laws can't do it all—they can't enforce themselves.

Fifty Republican members of the Senate and House met in caucus last week Tuesday night to discuss the liquor question. The sense of the meeting was decidedly for high license. It was decided that any drug stores wishing to sell liquor should pay the same tax as saloons. The limit of the license was fixed by the caucus as follows: For cities of 10,000 inhabitants or over, $700; for cities under 10,000, $500; for incorporated villages, $400; for townships, $300. No discrimination is proposed between wine and beer licenses, and no brewer or liquor dealer to be allowed to sign saloon bonds. The committee is to prepare a bill embodying these features.

Wood wanted at this office on subscription.

HORSE FOR SALE. Inquire of S. M. See, Charlevoix.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

O. D. Hilton, of Norwood township, has several milch cows for sale.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—A pair of work horses in good condition, will sell cheap for cash if sold in the next ten days. Enquire of R. L. Allen, 1½ miles west of Ironton.

FOR SALE. One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Masonic.

Special communication of Charlevoix Lodge No 282, F. & A. M., next Tuesday evening, April 26, for work on the 3d°. General attendance desired. Regular the Tuesday evening following, May 3d.

W. A. SMITH, W. M.

It is definitely stated that the Dominion Government will ask for an appropriation to build a canal at Sault Ste. Marie on the Canadian side to connect with the Sault River, Lakes Huron and Superior. It is understood that the desire of the government is to have an uninterrupted Canadian waterway from Lake Superior to the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date Nov. 15th A. D. 1881, made by and between Albert [illegible], bachelor of Charlevoix county, Michigan, party of the first part, to Morgan [illegible], Michigan, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, on the 19th day of Nov. A. D. 1881 in Liber 5 of Mortgages at page 117 [illegible] the sum of one hundred and sixty-five dollars, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described in said Mortgage on the 19th day of July A. D. 1887, at [illegible] o'clock in the forenoon of that day by sale at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the County building, in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix [illegible] south east quarter of the north east quarter of section thirty-two, of town thirty-two north of range five west, Charlevoix county Michigan.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April [illegible], A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MORGAN CURTIS, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date [illegible] 1881 made by and between [illegible] of Charlevoix, Michigan, party of the first part, to Mary E. Manley, of Wayne county, New York, party of the second part and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Charlevoix county Michigan, on the second day of Feb. A. D. 1881, in Liber 9 of Mortgages at page 2[illegible] and upon which there is now due and unpaid the sum of seventy-two dollars and no action having been taken either in law or equity to collect the same, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by statutory sale of the premises therein described at the front door of the County building in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for the county of Charlevoix, in which said county the lands described in said Mortgage are situated), at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the 19th day of July, A. D. 1887. The premises described in said mortgage are as follows: [illegible] Charlevoix county state of Michigan [illegible] with the accruing interest thereon.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 1[illegible]th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MARY E. MANLEY, Mortgagee.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET. BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

WHERE SHALL I BUY MY CARPET, AND WHAT SHALL I WEAR?

THESE ARE THE QUESTIONS AT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR AMONG THE LADIES

Not hard ones to answer. If you will step in and see the mammoth stock of fresh Spring Goods at A. T. Washburne & Co's. There is a wide range in fabrics this spring. We have the most approved patterns and colorings from the simplest wash goods, to the finest imported wool fabrics.

Our line of CORSETS is unsurpassed anywhere in the state, and we carry all the leading makes which our lady clerks will be glad to show you. Come in for we carry no dead stock. Everything fresh and at prices within your reach.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

Closing Out Sale.

Owing to a change in our business to take place May 1st, we offer until that date, our entire stock at a great sacrifice.

We do not expect everybody to take advantage of this sale, but to those who do, we promise great benefits.

Ignorant people are not always able to read. Slow people can read but often and wont. Dead ones can't, but real live ones can and will. It is the latter class who profit by it and whom we shall save many

HARD EARNED DOLLARS!

We have a large quantity of seasonable dress goods, worsteds, table linens, napkins, damasks, piques, towels, curtain nets, shades, gloves, hosiery, tickings, denims, jeans, cottonades, sheetings, shirtings, etc. Space will not admit of quoted prices but it is sufficient to say they are low enough. Now is the time to lay in a stock of Groceries.

Clover and Timothy seed at lowest prices.

J. L. HURD & CO.

WE MEAN TO SELL OUT!
WE MUST SELL OUT!

Rosenthal & Sons

Mammoth Stock of Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods will have to be disposed of by August First.

Purchasers can doubtless see that to this end we will make great reductions on all goods and we have decided for our customers' benefit, to sell,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

As this large stock cannot be easily transported.

Therefore it will be also for our benefit to make sacrifices.

Now is your Time to Buy!

AND DON'T FORGET IT!

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF, THAT WE MEAN WHAT WE SAY, BUSINESS!

ROSENTHAL & SON.

Charlevoix Sentinel
April 27, 1887
to
April 25, 1888

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XVIII. NO.—52 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27, 1887. WHOLE NO. 909

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

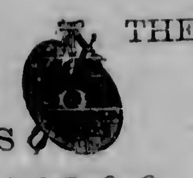
Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS



THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works

Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS.

S & I

THE MOST DURABLE.

THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I

Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

A Large Fresh Stock of Groceries

JUST OPENED AT

WILL SEE & CO'S

We call especial attention to something fine in Corn Beef at 8c. Try our Tea and Coffee stock. You will find it to your advantage to call and see us.

ALL KINDS OF COUNTRY PRODUCE WANTED.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $.75

Invariably in advance.

Local News.

—L. E. Allen is in Chicago.

—Bellaire has a Historical Society.

—Speckled trout will be ripe next Monday.

—Circuit court for Antrim county convenes at Bellaire, May 3.

—Our Ironton correspondence is unusually interesting this week.

—Assessor Byron See is snooping around finding out what folks are worth.

—Eugene Cole, of South Arm, left for California by propeller Lawrence Saturday.

—John Conaor is erecting a shoe shop on Bridge street near A. E. Mason's store.

—Capt. A. G. Aldrich left for Traverse City on Friday, to finish fitting out the steamer Faxton.

—Miss Lovie Kissner, sister of Mrs. H. V. Rifenburg, left on the Lawrence for her home in Clark, Ind.

—W. J. Getty, formerly on the Antrim county Board of Supervisors, is now Chairman of the Kalkaska board.

—D. Sherwood & Co., are in receipt of a large invoice of gents fine shoes. Call and see them. Note change in ad.

—Among the passengers to arrive on the Lawrence Friday were John O'Neill Sr., Al. Gilger, Sheriff Jerrue and Mr. Kinyon.

—Loyal Legion Attention! Fall in for drill and instruction at Green's hall Saturday afternoon at 3 sharp. By order of L. L. Sec'y.

—Jas. S. Martin has the contract for tending the bridge, and Jim's hickory stick has resumed its work of beating out the bridge plank.

—E. Empey of Banks has harvested a crop of 13 lambs from 6 ewes this spring. When it comes to lamb stories Banks beats the world.

—Hon. A. K. Dougherty superintended the repairs on the steamer Queen of the Lakes, at Elk Rapids, during his recent legislative vacation.

—On Wednesday 24,000 brook trout fry arrived and were taken by Will Knight, of Banks, to be equally divided between McCartney's creek in Banks, and Inwood's creek in Norwood.

—The corner stone of the Bardeen Paper Co's mill was laid at Otsego last week. The building will be a handsome structure of stone and brick, 66 feet wide and over an eighth of a mile long.

—Capt. Harrison Berdan retires from the village Marshal's office with the regrets of many of our citizens following him. There probably will never be a common council in Charlevoix that will not elect the old man Marshal when he wants it.

—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet at the home of Mrs. Waterman for prayer on Friday, at 2 p. m. The meeting will be adjourned in time for the Bible reading at the church. There will be no business meeting this week. Ladies remember this prayer meeting. Mrs. L. E. Mudge, Sec'y.

—The Opera Hall religious meetings, under the powerful leadership of Harold B. Sayles, are reaping a rich harvest. To many souls this year will indeed be the Anno Lucis. The attendance and interest are increasing, and under the influence of the preaching and song of Mr. Sayles, there is a steadily increasing evidence of good and lasting results.

—Will Barry, who assists President McLeod in slashing beefsteak and chopping sausage, is proud of a feat he performed one day last week, although Mac claims the credit as the result of his instruction. He took two large beeves from the village to the slaughter-house, killed and dressed them and brought them to the market, and the only help he had was "Jack," Mack's sagacious Scotch Coolie dog. The work was well and rapidly done.

—The Annual Meeting of the Masonic Mutual Benefit Association of Western Michigan was held in Grand Rapids one day last week. The Association is now in the twelfth year of its existence, with 5,311 members. During the past year there 38 deaths, and benefits were paid upon them to the amount of $58,000. Since the time of organization, now nearly 12 years, there has been paid out on policies $277,765. Charlevoix has several members of the Association.

Boyne Citizen: In the issue of March 18 the Citizen gave an account of the new locomotive nearly completed by Ephriam Shay. Yesterday a partial trial was made with her on a short track with a sharp curve and a grade of 30 inches to 100 feet. The locomotive shows fine mechanical skill and ran as noiselessly as a new sewing machine. Mr. Shay contemplates laying a tramway soon, but has not decided in what direction. He has track material for about twelve miles already made.

—Hon. A. Buttars is expected home Saturday.

—Miss Rose Cody returns on the Champlain to-day.

—The bridge-tender's bonds have been raised to $2,000.

—W. H. Downer is very busy loading vessels now-a-days.

—M. J. Stockman left for St. Ignace on business, yesterday

—F. J. Smith, the mail contractor, had a valuable horse die here lately.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. present a new announcement to the trading public, this week.

—Hon. Richard Knight of Banks, who has been seriously ill, is rapidly recovering.

—Charlevoix's loyal friend, Mr. J. S. Smithson, is expected to-day with his family.

—Regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge F. & A. M. next Tuesday evening.

—The Advance school opened last week Monday, with Miss Anna Cooper as teacher.

—Next to the SENTINEL the Detroit Evening Journal is the best marine paper in the state.

—The Charlevoix kindergarten opened Monday with a gratifying increase in attendance.

—Amos Fox and wife, and Geo. W. Miller and wife left Sunday on the Lawrence for Chicago.

—Capt. Robert O'Neill left Monday for Traverse City to take his position as mate of the Grand Rapids.

—Mrs. John Nicholls is still suffering from rheumatism, and is confined to her home most of the time.

—S. M. See left yesterday for Milwaukee on the schooner Florence Smith, after a stock of furniture.

—Kalkaska has put her saloon bonds at $3,000. East Jordan very sensibly puts her bonds at $6,000.

—Notice the date on your address label and if you are in arrears please consider this an invitation to settle.

—Miss Bertha Mills and Willie Mills, sister and brother of Mrs. L. E. Allen, have arrived for the summer.

—Rev. Page F. McClelland and others from Atwood, attended the Sayles meeting Monday evening last.

Harold B. Sayles don't weigh much physically, but he is a great big sledge-hammer in his chosen calling.

—The East Jordan Enterprise has been sold to H. C. Miley of Boyne City, one of the proprietors of the Boyne Citizen.

—Hon. F. J. Meech called at our office yesterday, and as a result, our editorial table is badly littered with saw-dust and shavings.

—J. P. Woodbury and Senator Stockbridge, of Kalamazoo, pledge $10,000 each toward a $40,000 Y. M. C. A. building in Kalamazoo.

—C. F. DeGolyer, the Chicago varnish manufacturer, has rented C. Y. Cook's cottage for the summer. The family are expected May 10th.

—Will H. Cooper has severed his connection with J. C. Glenn, of East Jordan, and expects to do the elegant as clerk of the Fountain City House, this summer.

—Mrs. John S. Estabrook, wife of Mayor Estabrook of East Saginaw, and a highly esteemed member of the Charlevoix summer resort, died last week Monday.

—Presiding Elder Stinchcomb of Traverse City, Rev. B. H. Whitman of Norwood and T. C. Bird of Eveline, were attendants at the Thursday evening Opera Hall revival meeting.

—Our readers will notice an improvement in our inside pages this week. Hereafter the SENTINEL will come to you pasted and perforated. We trust you will appreciate the change.

—Lorenzo Cook, the new manager of the Bridge Street House, has a card in this issue. Mr. Cook will endeavor in every way to keep this popular hotel up to its standard of excellence this season.

—Jas. A. Gellick has taken possession as sole proprietor of the Gellick & Ingalls business in this village. The SENTINEL is not a saloon paper and would like to see Jim in other business, but there are some good things to be said of him. He minds his own business, allows no turbulence about his place, and treats everybody with civility. If Charlevoix must have a saloon, we would rather it would be Jim than many others we could name.

—East Jordan Enterprise: River driving has commenced.——The bridge has been cleaned up.——The Jordan river is full of logs.——Local sports are shooting fish in the bayou this week.——Real estate has advanced 25 per cent in the last week.——W. L. French has purchased a lot on Second street of John Nicholls, of Charlevoix, and will erect thereon a large store house, size 46x60.——C. H. Whittington has commenced excavating for his new building on Main street, opposite the rink, which will be 24x40, two stories high.——Glenn & Porter are busily engaged repairing the Meech mill which they will run this season. Their yard is almost full of hardwood lumber, and if navigation does not open this week, they will have to shut down the mill until it is.

Marine Jottings.

The schooner John Schuette arrived Monday forenoon.

There are four schooners at Suttons Bay, which will fit out as soon as the ice moves.

The ice still hangs in Little Traverse Bay, but that in Grand Traverse Bay has disappeared.

Gill's steam barge will be provided with six staterooms for the accommodation of passengers.

The propeller Champlain is expected here from Chicago to-day or to-morrow. She left Milwaukee Monday.

The schooner Florence M. Smith is repainted and fitted out, and will continue to coin money for her owners.

The steamer Thomas Friant arrived in port Monday afternoon and is here yet awaiting the breaking up of Pine Lake.

Capt. Jas. Roberts of the tug Higgie, arrived Monday. Just what will be done with the Higgie has not yet been settled.

The steamer Lou Cummings arrived yesterday. She will begin her run between East Jordan and Harbor Springs next week.

The schooner Mocking Bird has undergone a thorough overhauling, and has been re-painted and is in good shape for the season's business.

The schooner G. H. Marsh, which cleared Sunday, had 18 feet put into her waist the past winter, greatly improving her model, as well as increasing her capacity.

The steamer Gazelle has received new decks and several new frames, and a new cabin has been constructed forward. But we must lose the dear little thing after all.

On Friday the steamer Gazelle was sold to St. Ignace parties, and will run between St. Ignace and Mackinac. This favorite boat will be missed from the South Arm route.

We learn that the barge Leland will go into the ore trade between Elk Rapids and Escanaba this season. Her owner, Mr. Slyfield, of St. Clair, expecting to move to the former place.

On Wednesday the steamer Clara Belle, owned by Stockman & Bartholomew, was sold to Capt. Jepson, of Manistee, for $2,600. The question of her remaining here is not yet definitely settled.

H. D. Wood has been engaged as engineer of the propeller Van Raalte, and has been engaged the past week in fitting her out. We congratulate Hi. on his promotion, and likewise congratulate the owners of the Van Raalte on securing the services of so reliable and competent a man.

Capt. H. G. Edwards has secured a berth as mate of the schooner Cleveland, which wintered at Harbor Springs. Cap Taylor, Wm. Hamlin and Walt Daniels, also of this place, ship in her before the mast. The Cleveland goes below with the ore now in her, and will return with coal for the Pine Lake Iron Co, probably taking out a cargo or iron.

Capt. Mel Thompson, who is to command the North Star the coming season, and Mr. John Kelley, who is to act as engineer of the same boat, are now here, putting their respective quarters in shape for the season. Mr. J. H. Lanway, the owner, intends that the Star's cabin will be as fine proportionately as any boat that sails into this port.—Enterprise.

The first arrival of the season was the schooner G. H. Marsh, Capt. John Freer. She came through the bridge about 9:30 Friday morning, behind the fishing tug Clara Elliott. About two in the afternoon the white hull of the propeller Lawrence appeared around the point and came through the bridge with all her colors flying. She loaded with ties for Emrey Bros., and left for Chicago Sunday night.

—Well, what will Charlevoix do on the Fourth of July?

—The bridge-tender's house should be removed to the south end of the bridge.

—Engineer Gurley Boak has the fire steamer so bright that you can see your face in her.

—Dr. Crouter returned from Lansing since our last issue, having been there in the interest of legislation affecting druggists.

—Rapid strides i Sault Ste. Marie advancing toward a metropolitan city! Street cars, electric lights, gas, daily newspapers, opera house, railroads, international bridge, water power, canal and factories, and in fact all the luxuries of a city to come this year. No flashy boom about the Soo, but good, solid, rapid and healthy growth. That's what's the matter, according to the head-lines of the Chippewa County News.

President Cleveland announces that he positively will not be a candidate for a re-nomination. There are thousands of stalwart republicans scattered around the country who regret this decision on the part of the president.

Sir John Macdonald admits the failure of the British Government's negotiations respecting the fisheries, but assert that they have "other resources to fall back upon." This probably means that the premier still cherishes the hope that his ally, Secretary Bayard, will pull Canadian chestnuts out of the fire.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

A FOUNDLING'S FATE
OR
The Maid of the Tyrolese Valley.

BY W. BIRD, ESQ.

CHAPTER I.

[illegible]

to live here at Volothel. Nineteen years ago a new-born infant was found at a chapel-door in Munich. The town received the parentless babe, and sent it into the country to be nursed. The mother of our new priest saw me—for the poor, forsaken child was myself!—and as her little boy Albert, her only offspring, was about to be sent away to study, she took me into her house, and brought me up with every care and affection."

"What a romantic tale!" cried Franzi's listener. "But how was it that you came here, in the dwelling of the vicar and his niece? I'm sure, had I been in your place, I would rather have preferred living with Madame Unterwald. Miss Isidora is so hard with you."

"Yes, she is a little harsh toward me sometimes," Franzi allowed, with a good-humored laugh. "But she has a kind heart in her breast, for all that. I have been told that she was a very different sort of a person some years ago from what she is now. I was treated by Albert's parents as if I had been their own daughter, and Albert himself regarded me as his sister. And now that he is to be a priest, the old couple wish me to be one of the garland maids; and Albert himself wishes it, I have been told."

"So much greater the honor," Katrina remarked, as she placed the wreath she had made on her companion's nut-brown tresses.

"Yes," answered the young damsel. "But what gratifies me most is, that Albert has remembered me. It is many long years since he saw me. I have no idea what he is like, and he can have no memory of my looks either"

"But you have not yet answered my question," said Katrina, admiring her handiwork from every side. "How was it that you came to live here?"

"Well, I can hardly explain that matter. Miss Isidora used to visit the Unterwalds, and, seeing me, took a fancy to me, and would not let my friends have any peace until they gave me up to her. She is very rich, it is supposed; so they thought she would prove a great benefactress to me. They could not have reclaimed me afterward, even had they wished to do so, for Miss Isidora had made them sign a certain paper, wherein it was stated that they resigned all right to me. I was about ten years old when she took me from the Unterwalds. Her disposition has soured considerably since that time."

"Ah, to have made your story quite complete, Albert ought to have married you. He was born a farmer, and he ought to have remained such to the end."

"Oh, Katrina!" exclaimed Franzi, turning to the speaker with a glowing face. "How can you talk such nonsense! It is wicked of you!"

"Indeed, it is nothing of the sort. His father would not be vexed were Albert to change his mind. I have heard that the old man deeply regrets that his son will not take his place when it shall become vacant. Unterwald does not like the thoughts of the old house being sold, and passing into the hands of a stranger. But, as far as I am concerned Albert may be priest or aught else, for I don't imagine he would marry me."

And so saying, Katrina laughed very heartily.

Franzi's toilet was now completed, and she was viewing her figure before, and on all sides, in a little glass which the other was holding for her.

"I am all right" she said, smiling, "and it is time that I should be on my way. Good-by, and thank you kindly for all the trouble you have taken in making me look so smart and nice. Don't let Miss Isidora miss me, if you can help it. I shall tell you all that happens when I return."

"Yes, yes, and mind that you enjoy yourself," the other answered.

"Of that you may be sure. Good-by Katrina!"

And with those words the damsel bounded off, with steps as buoyant as youth and health could make them.

Katrina watched her friend until a bend of the road hid her from view; then she went into the house, and set about performing her various duties.

Meanwhile, Franzi skipped along, singing to herself. The sun was shining brightly, and the damsel's heart was light as any feather. She was going among the friends whom she loved, and the recollection of that fact made her spirits rejoice.

Presently she uttered a sharp cry, and paused. A rough-looking man, who had suddenly rushed out of a smithy hard by, had confronted her.

"What frightens you so?" he said, in tones somewhat gentle. "Are you afraid that I shall spoil your pretty face, which I daily waste hours to catch a glimpse of?"

"Let me pass!" returned the girl, not caring to hide her evident dislike of the man. "What has my face to do with you? I do not ask you how long it is since you washed the smith's smut from your eyes!"

"They see well enough, with all the smut," he retorted. "But smut is healthy, and preserves the complexion."

At that Franzi burst into a fit of laughter.

"Why have you stopped me thus?" she demanded, by and by.

"To ask you to become my wife," he replied, very earnestly. "Say that you will, Franzi—oh, say yes, and in four weeks hence you shall wear the wedding-wreath!"

The girl blushed.

"Are you serious, Vigili?" returned she. "I thank you for your offer; but, although you are good-hearted, I do not like your wild and violent manners. I have heard strange things of you——"

"Yes, things that are not true," he interrupted Franzi by saying. "I only wish I knew the rascal who has been speaking ill of me; I'd break his neck for him, I would!"

"There! only see what a rage you are in at a few words only! Can you deny that you threw a hammer at the head of one of your workmen, in consequence of which his life was for some time despaired of? And people do say that you have behaved unkindly to your own mother. What, then, could a wife expect—a poor wife, who could bring to your house nothing but herself."

The blacksmith was silent for a few seconds. He looked both abashed and distressed.

"I'm ashamed to confess to you that your accusation against me is, in part, true," he said. "But, for the future, I will try to put a curb upon my temper—I will, indeed! Will you promise to let me have the first dance with you at the festival to-day?" he eagerly added.

"I must promise, I suppose, else you will keep me standing here forever," was her answer.

At this moment Franzi was joined by some girls in holiday costume, and Vigili disappeared to make himself ready to at-

[illegible]

Presently the clock gave notice to strike. At that the mother looked up, and dropped her beads. "The people have assembled," she said to her husband. "Shall we not warn our son of the hour?"

At this moment the door opened, and the expected one entered. One could see at a glance that he was the son of the house. He was very like his father, but he had his mother's mild and tender manners, and likewise her expressive blue eyes. Albert's face was full of kindness and purity; when you looked into it, you felt certain that it belonged to a strictly honorable and good man.

"Good morning, reverend and honored son," said Madame Unterwald, rising and embracing him, with affection and pride.

Her husband laughed at her speech and ridiculed it a little, adding, "He is my son, and if he were even to become a cardinal, he would still be the same to me; and so I may say, 'Good morning, Albert—good morning, to this your day of honor!'"

"Thanks, father!" answered the young priest, taking his sire's hand in his, and pressing it. "Let it be ever thus between us. How much I have to be grateful to you for! Through your generosity and love only have I reached this proud and happy hour, for which I have looked and yearned so long."

"Say no more, my son," returned the old man. "I have but performed a parent's duty toward you."

"I am aware, father, that I have not chosen the life you wished me to follow."

"That is true, Albert; and I can not help regretting the fact," the other answered, rather mournfully. "It pains me to think that my only son will see my large estate pass into a stranger's hands. But you have chosen your path, and a man's will is his kingdom."

"And I hope, father that I have chosen well," the young priest rejoined.

"I hope so, too," the old man replied, with fervor. "And to-day, at your first mass, I will pray, with my whole heart and soul, that you may go through life as you have begun it, and that you may never say to yourself, 'I wish I had taken my father's advice.'"

"Father, without a doubt, my heart belongs to my holy calling; never for one moment can I ever change."

"After to-day it will be too late to do so," murmured Unterwald, passing a handkerchief across his eyes, which were overflowing with tears.

Albert's mother, who had retired to the window during the above conversation, here approached her husband and her son.

"The people are all waiting," she said to the latter.

"I am ready, mother," Albert answered. And with these words he threw the long casement wide, and stepped out amid the throng, his parents following him.

The moment the young priest appeared there was a buzz of voices among the people; and then men and women and boys and girls fell spontaneously upon their knees to receive the blessing of the holy man as he passed onward and onward.

Among the many faces that greeted his gaze, he recognized those of his old school mates and playfellows. Now he was about to pass the garland maids, in the ranks of whom knelt Franzi, with folded hands. As he drew near her, she looked up, and, as he blessed her, she shrank at the tones of his well-remembered voice. He started for a moment, looked at her, drew his breath quickly, and then passed on.

CHAPTER II.

The chapel bells had begun to ring merrily, and trumpets were sounding, and the village musicians now struck up a march as for a wedding. Was not Albert about to take the church as his bride? He had no time now to inquire who the pale girl was whose features had startled him but now.

The young priest and the people had now entered the sacred edifice. Albert seated himself in the flower-decked chair which had been prepared for him, and the garland girls closed around him like bridesmaids around a bride.

Then the elder priests commenced the ceremony.

Meanwhile, Albert sat like one in a dream. He could see through the chapel windows green fields and whispering woods, and happy children at play. Anon, the scene seemed to change, and once more his eyes met the deep and earnest looks of the pale garland maid.

The old priests had now concluded; the organ's notes were heard again, and the choir poured forth a volume of sweet sounds—then those sounds died away, and all left the holy place in the same order in which they had entered it.

The young priest and the elder ones, with some few others, repaired to the house of the Unterwalds, where there was a table luxuriously spread for them, and some fine old wine to drink.

For the villagers, they went to the inn of Volothel, and there regaled themselves with excellent cheer. They joked, and they laughed loudly. At one of the tables sat Vigili, the blacksmith. He was looking very angry because he could not obtain a seat near Franzi. The whole village knew of his love for her, but no one for a moment thought that Franzi would ever learn to care for so rough-mannered a fellow.

By and by the mistress of the inn brought in an enormous cake—it was termed the cake of honor—which she placed in the center of a large table, that all might view its ornaments, and read the various mottoes it bore.

This cake, like the garland maids, is a part and parcel of the ceremony always observed in this part of Tyrol whenever a new priest first enters upon the duties of his sacred calling. At its appearance the people rise, select their partners, the music is heard, and the dance begins.

The young priest and his parents now entered.

The first to rise and hurry off in search of a partner for the dance was Vigili. But quick as he had been, he was too late. The old vicar, who had to present Albert with his partner for the dance—the last he would ever have—had been so engaged in eating a slice of "honor cake," that he had almost forgotten his duty; and, when the recollection of what he had to do suddenly flashed across his memory, he had no time to seek the girl of the highest rank present, but in his haste, took the nearest. It was Franzi.

As the vicar presented her to Albert, Vigili rushed up with a flushed face and wrathful looks.

But Franzi was so much astonished at the honor done her, that she saw nothing of her would-be lover.

Albert took her hand, the music burst forth, and together they started off round the room.

He felt as in a dream as he held the girl to his side, and his feet kept time to the enlivening strain. This was not like the end of his former life, he thought, but the beginning of a new one. Thrice he circled the floor; then the young priest had done; he dared dance no more; the rest of the dancing was for the happy world.

He led his partner to a seat by the now vacant table, and filled two glasses, then he took the bridegroom's wreath from around his arm, and put it over her glass like a frame. As his last partner in his last dance, that wreath belonged to her now.

"May you live long, reverend sir," Franzi said, in a broken voice, as she raised her glass, and struck it against his.

"Thanks! How glad I am that you came to the festival."

"How could I stay away from it?" she answered, artlessly. "I am very happy to find myself so kindly remembered by you."

"Did you think that I should forget you, Franzi?"

"No, sir," she replied, quietly.

"But at first I did not know you."

"Ah, that is very likely. You have been away from Volothel a long time."

"True. But it is not that. You are so changed—so tall——" "And beautiful," he would have added, but the word was not suffered to pass his lips.

At this moment Vigili placed himself opposite to the two speakers, and, with his back against the wall, stood wrathfully watching them.

As Albert's eye fell upon him, he dropped Franzi's hand, which he had just taken, and said, "Look at that man there; he seems as if he were vexed because I am talking to you. Is he your lover?" he added, feeling reluctant to speak that word to her.

The maiden blushed. "I have no lover, sir," she answered. "That is the blacksmith's son—Vigili. He wants me to marry him."

"And will you marry him?"

"What better can I do, reverend sir?"

"True," he rejoined, rising abruptly. "Farewell, Franzi. Love and be happy. Think sometimes of the time when we were children together, and—of to-day."

And then he turned and walked slowly away.

Vigili now approached Franzi, who was watching her late companion as he disappeared amid the throng of guests.

"So," growled the blacksmith, this is the way in which you keep your promises?"

The damsel answered him very quickly. "I promised you the first dance, and I am waiting for you."

"The first dance, forsooth! How can that be, when you have already been dancing?"

"With his reverence! That was quite another thing, and wholly apart from all others. But you are not my lover, and consequently have no business to assume these airs toward me. If I were already your wife, you could not be more jealous of me than you are. But not even if you were a goldsmith would I dance with you now."

And so saying, she started up from her seat, and left him.

Vigili raised his muscular right arm, and clenched his hand tightly.

"Chut! she's like the rest of the womenfolk, as giddy as a goose! I've a good mind to think no more about her." And with that he seated himself at the table, drew toward him a bottle of wine, and filled a glass, which he straightway lifted to his lips and drained at a single draught.

* * * * * * *

When Albert quitted the side of Franzi, he immediately and secretly left the inn, repaired to his parents' house, and sought his chamber. The dwelling was vacant, for all the domestics were making merry at the festival with their master and mistress.

Albert felt suddenly depressed. He knew not wherefore, but he was unable to rest five minutes in one place. He wandered out of one apartment into another, and wondered what had caused his unusual restlessness of both body and mind.

How little he had known his own heart when he thought he could bid adieu to the world without one sigh of regret! Something had just shone across his path like a blaze of lightning, and he now saw what he had lost, which to think of, even, he remembered would be a sin.

He fell upon his knees, and besought heaven to give him the strength he now so much required.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

PHYSIC-TIPPLERS.

A Plea for Temperance in the Use of Medicinal Beverages.

(Philadelphia Record.)

One of the most interesting of the papers read before the State sanitary convention, held in this city last May, was in the form of a warning against intemperance in the use of drugs. The writer, Dr. Frank Woodbury, of this city, has permitted the publication of this noteworthy contribution to popular knowledge in advance of the annual report of the convention, and it is certainly worthy of careful study. The habit of taking into the system drugs of whose ultimate effects the partaker is either ignorant or supremely careless has grown very common of late among a large class of people who are usually credited with more than ordinary intelligence. Dr. Woodbury's experience leads him to the conclusion that it has attained to such considerable proportions as to command attention and consideration from all medical practitioners. He finds the physic-tippler and medicine-bibber everywhere—not the solicitous and overanxious citizen, who, with every slight cold or sore joint, rushes off to a doctor for a course of constitutional treatment, not altogether the devotees of narcotic and stimulant drugs, but a great mass of people who use almost every description of real or pretended medicament without knowledge and without stint. Even the comparatively harmless and innocuous soda-water fountain has been diverted to the uses of the physic-tippler, for upon inquiry Dr. Woodbury found that numerous powerful tinctures, and elixirs, as well as potassium and sodium bromide, soda mint, sodium bicarbonate, acid phosphate, and aromatic spirits of ammonia, were regularly served out to patrons of soda-water fountains in the drug stores. Probably very few of the these customers could give a logical or pathological reason for this form of indulgence in extemporized mixtures, which might or might not prove harmless, but which, in any case, could not be classed as remedial agents. For overmedication is a danger against which the physician guards no less carefully than against the earlier stages of an acute disease. He knows when to administer and when to withhold. But the slave of a habit of drugging often persists until an enfeebled digestion and a collapsed nervous system sound imperative notes of warning.

In the immense increase noted of late years in the preparations of narcotic and alkaline drugs, as well as in the continuous accessions to the amount of capital invested in making patent medicines, Dr. Woodbury finds reasons for believing that the practice of medicine-bibbing is more than keeping pace with the growth of wealth and population. Especially has there been increase in the demand for those drugs that act specifically upon the nervous system. But a few years ago the bromides were little known or used; at the present time it is estimated that over 200 tons are annually used in this country. Chloral hydrate has been in use but fifteen years, yet its consumption in Europe and America now amounts to many hundreds of tons each year, while of the opium products, of ether, chloroform, and the iodides, there is a constant flow from a severely-taxed yet apparently-exhaustless source of supply. Dr. Woodbury tells of a formula for a mixture containing chloral which he saw conspicuously posted behind a druggist's counter. It was found on inquiry that the posting was merely a matter of convenience, since the calls for the mixture were exceedingly frequent. Alcoholic mixtures he learned were similarly redemanded, often for months after the occasion for their use had passed away. Intemperance in drugs and medicines, it appears, is no less common than are other forms of self-indulgence.

Dragons' Bones.

In the folk-lore of many of the tribes that live along the borders of northern and eastern Asia are found tales quite as marvelous and wonderful as those handed down to the boys and girls of the warmer and more civilized countries of the South, in which fairies, heroic giants, and gods are the principal figures,—the offspring of vivid tropical imaginations. But in the tales related to the children of the far-away ice country, the main characters are gigantic animals and monsters of strange appearance; and as the northern story-tellers are not noted for their imaginative powers, we are led to look for some solid foundation of fact upon which the originators of the myths must have built their wondrous tales. The Chinese legends abound in dragons and unicorns; and in Canton, to-day, may be purchased "dragons' bones and teeth," which form part of the regular stock of the native druggists.

In the "Chinese Repository" is a quotation from Li She Chan, the author of a Chinese medical book. He says, concerning dragons' bones:

"The bones are found on banks of rivers and in caves of the earth, places where the dragon died, and can be collected at any time."

In the far north, "dragons' bones" were very common, but they were usually considered there to have belonged to gigantic birds. To prove their belief, the natives showed the claws, three or four feet long, of these monsters, which, if they had ever existed, must have far exceeded in size the roc of the "Arabian Nights." Quaint tales of these were told on winter evenings, perhaps, to native boys and girls; and little reason had the children to doubt them, for the claws were so plentiful that their fathers used them, as the Chukches of eastern Siberia do strips of whalebone, to make their bows, which they use for hunting, more elastic.

Finally, an English naturalist, while studying Chinese folk-lore, made the discovery that the "dragon's bones and teeth" were no more nor less than the remains of a great extinct rhinoceros. Soon after, a scientist traveling in northern Siberia, heard the natives talking about the gigantic birds I have just mentioned, and being shown a "claw," he saw that it, too, was in reality, a horn of a monster rhinoceros that in past ages had lived in that far-off land of ice.—Charles Frederick Holder, in St. Nicholas.

An Early Reminiscence.

A writer, a lady whose name is not given, records this reminiscence of her first meeting with Dickens when he was a young man:

It was at the house of a relative of mine. I was first introduced to his wife in the sanctuary of the bedroom, where I was arranging my hair before the glass. I thought her a pretty little woman, with the heavy-lidded, large, blue eyes, so much admired by men. The nose was a little retroussé, the forehead good, mouth small, round and red-lipped, with a pleasant, smiling expression, notwithstanding the sleepy look of the slow-moving eyes. The weakest part of the face was the chin, which melted too suddenly into the throat. I went down with a fluttering heart to be introduced to Boz.

The first ideas that flashed through me were: What a fine, characteristic face! What marvelous eyes! And what horrid taste in dress!

He wore his hair long in "admired disorder" and it suited the picturesque style of his head; but he had on a surtout with a very wide collar, very much thrown back, showing a vast expanse of waistcoat, drab trousers and drab boots with patent leather toes, and the whole effect (apart from his fine head) gave evidence of a loud taste of costume.—E. H. Stoddard.

The Distribution of Earthquakes.

In the present condition of the earth's crust, so far as the brief historic record goes to show, earthquakes of an intensity menacing to man are limited to certain regions which probably do not altogether include more than one-fourth of the area of the lands, though shocks of a less degree of violence appear to be common to every part of the surface of the continents. The regions of recurrent shocks of considerable violence are so irregularly distributed that they cannot be adequately noted in this brief essay. They include, in Europe, Ireland, Portugal, Spain, and Southern Italy, the region of the Lower Danube, and some of the islands of the Grecian Archipelago. In Asia, the larger part of Asia Minor, several limited areas in Hindostan, the greater part of the eastern littoral region of Asia, and the islands of the Japanese and Malayan Archipelagoes are subjected to destructive shocks.

In Africa, there is, save in Egypt, little architecture to suffer from earthquake disturbances, and even little history to record it. Egypt seems to have been, on the whole, singularly exempt from great earthquakes, while the western portion of the Mediterranean face of the continent shares the disturbances from which the Spanish peninsula has repeatedly suffered. The vast Australian and Polynesian district of the Pacific affords a number of regions of great earthquake activity, of which New Zealand is the only one where we have anything like good observations for even a few score years. It may be said, however, that the greater part of this vast area seems to be more exempt from these indications of activity in the crust than any other equally extensive part of the earth's surface.

We now come to the twin continents, North and South America. The obvious resemblances in the physical configuration of these continents lead us to expect a likeness in their conditions of stability. This resemblance in a certain measure exists. The western shore of both of these continents, the seaward face of the great Cordilleran range of mountains, is the seat of the most frequent and, on the whole, the most energetic disturbances which occur within their limits, while the eastern shore of each is comparatively little assailed by shocks. The northern, or Venezuelan, district of South America, which is apparently the seat of an active mountain growth, of which there is no parallel in the northern continent, is a district of recurrent shocks of great violence, such as have never been observed in high latitudes on our own continent. On the other hand, the region from the mouth of the Amazon to the La Plata River, which corresponds to our seaboard Atlantic States, and the provinces of Canada, enjoys an immunity for disturbances probably not exceeded by any other equally extensive area occupied by the Ayran race, while the corresponding region in North America is much less fortunate.—Scribner's Magazine.

Kind-Hearted Insects.

The Bible has made ants famous for industry and foresight, and modern naturalists find few animals more worthy of study. These insects not only are surprisingly intelligent, but manifest a lively regard for each others' welfare, as the following incident well illustrates. It is taken from Mr. Belt's "Naturalist in Nicaragua:"

One day while watching a small column of these foraging ants, I placed a little stone on one of them to secure it. The next that approached, as soon as it discovered its situation, ran back in an agitated manner to communicate the intelligence to the others. They rushed to the rescue. Some bit at the stone, and tried to move it; others seized the prisoner by the legs, and tugged with such force that I thought its legs would be pulled off, but they persevered till they got the captive free.

I next covered one up with a piece of clay, leaving only the ends of his antennæ projecting. It was soon discovered by its fellows, which set to work immediately, and by biting off pieces of the clay, soon liberated it. Another time I found a very few of them passing along at intervals. I confined one of these under a piece of clay, at a little distance from the line, with its head projecting. Several ants passed it, but at last one discovered it, and tried to pull it out, but could not. It immediately set off at a great rate, and I thought it had deserted its comrade; but it had only gone for assistance, for in a short time about a dozen ants came hurrying up, evidently fully informed of the circumstances of the case, for they made directly for their imprisoned comrade, and soon set him free. The excitement and ardor with which they carried on their unflagging exertions could not have been greater if they had been human beings.

It Startled Him.

He was a clerk in a shoe store, but rather new to the business. When a pretty girl tripped in and asked for shoes he inquired politely:

"What number do you wear?"

"Why, two, of course," she snapped; "how many feet do you suppose I have?"

"I—I—meant what size?" he stammered.

"Oh! size 3, and D— wide," she responded, carelessly.

He fainted before a brother clerk could explain that the width of shoes was regulated alphabetically and no profanity was intended.—Detroit Free Press.

Simply Disgusting.

Office-seeker—I called, sir, to ask you to request the President to give me a foreign mission or something.

The President's Pastor—Excuse me, sir; but you are the 105th office-seeker who has been here to-day, and I have had to explain to each and all that I have had no influence with the Administration.

"No influence with the President?"

"Certainly not."

"Well, I didn't suppose he was such a heathen as that."—Omaha World.

The world is a comedy to those who think, a tragedy to those who feel.—Horace Walpole.

The Wet Blanket.

There are few of us who have not made the acquaintance of the wet blanket, and have not experienced its chilling effects, and suffered influenzas and pneumonias from its contact. We have often received it, no doubt, from a quarter from which we least expected it, and have, it may be, in our turn bestowed it where it was equally unwelcome. What a tendency it has to kill our little enthusiasms with its frosty touch, to accent our ignorances, to arrest our progress, to annihilate our pet conceits! She who does not know the wet blanket is a fortunate being, perhaps, but she lacks this means of development and discipline, although most of us would vastly prefer to remain undeveloped and undisciplined to the end of our days. It is not cheerful to be matured by misfortune; one would rather submit to the natural process of time. The wet blanket renders us self-conscious and shrinking; it makes us feel as if we were too insignificant, too stupid, to accomplish anything serious or serviceable. It is worse than a narcotic for stupefying the faculties and benumbing the activities; one could no more live under its constant application than under that of a chronic blister; it is a species of torture which, although slight, ends by paralyzing effort, spontaneity and originality. There are instances, however, where the wet blanket has not been applied often enough—where it would be rather remediable than otherwise in counteracting self-sufficiency and other deep-seated ailments. It is as good as physic for those whose stomachs are disordered by too sweet an opinion of themselves and contempt for others, or as salicylic acid for the mentally rheumatic. There are wives who have become so docile under its influence that they not only dare not say their souls are their own, but no longer believe the fantasy, who never venture to give an opinion on any subject till they have found out which way the wind blows, who have had their intellect eliminated by this dampening method. Indeed, the wet blanket is largely used in the domestic circle, and one can usually count among one's friends a few who keep it constantly on hand, and do not scruple to use it in order to subdue high spirits, contented minds, and lofty aspirations; like the cold compress, it is a sure means of reducing the temperature and bringing the fever of high emprise down to the normal pulse of commonplace repose. However medical this treatment may prove, we all like to swallow our bitters voluntarily, and not have them thrust upon us like greatness; and to whatever school of medicine we may belong, we place little confidence in the saving grace of the wet blanket for our own personal disorders, however we may insist on its efficacy with regard to others.—Harper's Bazar.

What Is an Instinct?

Instinct is usually defined as the faculty of acting in such a way as to produce certain ends, without foresight of the ends, and without previous education in the performance. That instincts, as thus defined, exist on an enormous scale in the animal kingdom needs no proof. They are the functional correlatives of structure. With the presence of a certain organ goes, one may say, almost always a native aptitude for its use.

A very common way of talking about these admirably definite tendencies to act is by naming abstractly the purpose they subserve, such as self-preservation, or defense, or care for eggs and young—and saying the animal has an instinctive fear of death and love of life, or that she has an instinct of self-preservation, or an instinct of maternity and the like. But this represents the animal as obeying abstractions which, not once in a million cases, is it possible it can have framed. The strict physiological way of interpreting the facts leads to far clearer results. The actions we call instinctive, all conform to the general reflex type; they are called forth by determinate sensory stimuli in contact with the animal's body, or at a distance in his environment. The cat runs after the mouse, runs or shows fight before the dog, avoids falling from walls and trees, shuns fire and water, etc., not because he has any notion either of life or of death, or of self, or of preservation. He has probably attained to no one of these conceptions in such a way as to react definitely upon it. He acts in each case separately, and simply because he cannot help it; being so framed that when that particular running thing called a mouse appears in his field of vision he must pursue; that when that particular barking and obstreperous thing called a dog appears there, he must retire, if at a distance, and scratch if close by; that he must withdraw his feet from water and his face from flame, etc. His nervous system is to a great extent a preorganized bundle of such reactions—they are as fatal as sneezing, and as exactly correlated to their special excitants as it is to its own. Although the naturalist may, for his own convenience, class these reactions under general heads, he must not forget that in the animal it is a particular sensation or perception or image which calls them forth.—Prof. William James, in Scribner's Magazine.

Some Mitigating Circumstances.

"See here, Jones, I want to talk to you a moment," said an Austin philanthropist; "don't you know you are not doing your duty by your children in not sending them to school? That's not the way a fond father should treat his children."

"Well, now, I don't know about that," replied Jones. "I don't believe you fully realize what you are talking about. Now, I have a brother whose oldest son was sent up for two years for horse-stealing, and the judge, in sentencing him, said that his ignorance and lack of early education were strong mitigating circumstances in the case; and instead of making the sentence ten years, which he would have done had the boy never received any education, he would make it only two. Now, do you suppose I am going to rob my boys of those mitigating circumstances that have already been such a bonanza in the family? No, sir; before I do, I hope my right arm will cleave to the roof of my mouth!"—Texas Siftings.

True to the Last.

A groceryman was dying of consumption.

"Ah," sighed his pastor, "the sands of life are slowly running out, but he sweetens his last hours by the consolations of religion."

"Ugh," grunted a deacon who had bought groceries of him, "the ruling passion strong in death; he still puts sugar in his sand, I see."—Washington Critic.

There is nothing so minute or inconsiderable that I would not rather know it than not.—Johnson.

PITH AND POINT.

Pages-in-waiting—MSS. held over by the magazine publisher.

Printer's ink is a great thing, yet printers sink much money in it, sometimes.

A lad cannot expect to be dressed up like a man until he is through being dressed down like a boy.

A married man who never took a drink in his life, will see double when his wife presents him with twins.

The ideal wife gets out of bed, lights the fire and has the breakfast prepared before she calls the ideal husband.

The man who "can either take it or leave it alone" usually has a little drop in the house in readiness for an emergency.

"I know what four o'clock a. m. and four o'clock p. m. mean," said old Beezum to his wife, "but what is this four o'clock t. that we are invited to?"—Texas Siftings.

"Henry," asked the fond wife of her sick husband, "would you not like to see somebody?" and he faintly responded, "No, I'm not see sick."—Commercial Bulletin.

When a young lady runs off and marries a coachman a great fuss is made about it; but every day some bride marries a groom and nothing is thought of that.—Brooklyn Union.

Trust him little who praises all; him less who censures all, and him least who is indifferent to all. In fact, don't trust anybody if you can get ready money.—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

"That fellow calls himself a soldier, and he never smelt powder," said Jones to Smith. "Never smelt powder, eh?" "No, sir." "I think you're wrong, I saw him kissing a society girl the other night."—Boston Courier.

POOR FELLOW.

The man who never advertised his store
Sat down one night a little while to think,
And after meditation rose and swore;
This place is deader than a roller rink.

Boston Courier.

John and Ida married lived
In Idaho forlorn,
'Cause John hung round the tavern
And let Idaho the corn.

Texas Siftings.

"What do you consider the most difficult thing in the world?" asked an inquisitive old lady of the President of a college. "Ah," sighed the learned man, who had a family of grown-up daughters, "the most difficult thing, I find, is to convince a woman that she should wear her old stockings on a muddy day."—Chicago Ledger.

PLEASE SING WITHOUT LINING.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
He does not love to lie in bed,
While matin bells are loudly rung
And caustic taunts at him are flung?
If such there be, go, mark him well,
And ring for him the daylight bell.
For happier than that wretch forlorn,
With joyous snores I'll hail the morn,
And as the sun up-climbing goes,
Make the day hideous with my nose.

Burdette, in Brooklyn Eagle.

Fogg—I've been writing something here; but I don't know whether to publish it or not. What do you think of it? Brown (after looking over a few pages)—To be frank with you, I don't believe anybody but a fool would buy such a book; certainly nobody but a fool would ever read it. Fogg—Thank you, I'll publish it. The man who writes only for the wise men is a fool; he who writes for fools is a wise man. He has a hundred readers to the other's one.—Boston Transcript.

John Smith, familiarly known as "Shemoka John," formerly of McCalmont Township, now deceased, was a great tobacco-chewer in his day. He would bite off a chunk as large as an elephant's ear, and twist it around with great satisfaction. One day, while mastering a fresh invoice of plug, he noticed that it produced a peculiar crackling and grating sound and tasted nasty. He looked at the plug and saw that a mouse had been embedded in it, and that he had bitten it in two and had half of it in his mouth at that moment. That was his last chew of tobacco.—Punxsutawney Spirit.

Some Baboo English.

The following document, which was recently received by a European gentlemen, is a superb specimen of Baboo English:

Honored Sir: We begs to bring to your kind notice the following facts, which are quite genuine, i. e., your Secretary, Mr. ——, Esq., comes to the mills when he is quite intoxicated, totally, daily, and not only that, he strikes the works peoples with that heavy ponderous stick that he was wont to carry always with him, therefore the works people are always fearing him and are quite disheartened to work while he stays over the works peoples. Me and my friend was forced to leave your Honor's service owing to his maltreatment, and moreover his vulgar language that he uses to us is something degrading and obnoxious to the human ears. We would not care much for his abusive language, but for his great partiality for liquor and dealing sundry blows with his stick. He almost killed one man with the same stick by dealing at him sundry blows, the victim's eye was bleeding blood severely, and Mr. ——, Esquire, beholding the fatality of the inflicted blows he gave the victim he gave Rupees six (6) to the victim to compensate for the atrocious deed he had committed. While he is in the intoxicated still he sits in his chair with his eyes rolling wildly in his head, and when he, your Honor's servants, was sent for by him we can hardly dare to enter his office, because we are fearing very much for that most ponderous stick. We sincerely hope your Honors will kindly look into these matters and have pity on us poor suffering clerks. We beg to remain, Sir, yours, &c.,

POOR SUFFERING CLERKS.

—Pall Mall Gazette.

Wanted Some on Account.

A few days ago a well-known negro man, who was the fortunate possessor of a fine lot on one of the leading resident streets of the city, sold his property for $10,000 cash. He was given a check for that amount, which was carried in due time to one of the banks. The paying teller asked the negro how much of the money he wanted in cash.

"I wants all that'ar paper calls fur," replied the negro.

"What! You don't want $10,000 in cash?"

"Jesso, sah."

"All right," answered the man who shuffles the bank bills, and in five minutes he began piling the money on the counter. As he laid the $500 packages on the counter the negro's eyes began to grow larger, and finally when twenty of the packages were placed before him his eyes looked as large as new moons. The negro looked intently at the stack of money for a moment and then, with a broad grin on his face, said:

"I'se jist paralyzed, boss; gimme $1.50 and you kin keep de rest of that till I call agin."—Chattanooga Times.

Though measured by feet, poetry is the kind of literary gush in which sentimental writers take a hand.

BILL NYE.

The Genial Humorist Tells How to Fire an Objectionable Suitor.

Mr. Nye—Noticing that you have given a great deal of advice free, I thought that possibly you would tell me the best method of getting rid of an impertinent young man, whose room is much preferable to his company.

Hoping that I do not intrude on your valuable time, Yours truly,

You do not say what you wish to get rid of the young man, nor do you state what is the matter with him; whether he is a poor conversationalist or too fluent in that line; whether the first two joints of his finger and thumb are yellow with cigarette stains, or what his leading characteristics are. Possibly he has fatty degeneration of the thinker.

However, you say he is an impudent young man, and I infer that you have gone through the preliminaries of gentle scorn and such things as that. Now what shall we do to make him fully understand that you do not want him to remain?

Perhaps you have such a thing as a younger brother about the house. If so bring him in and let him toy with the young man a few hours. You can excuse yourself while you ostensibly put on your other dress, and if you delay long enough you can cause the young man a great deal of intense suffering. You can take the right kind of a younger brother, with inflammatory hair and white eyes and warts on his thumbs and season cracks in the backs of his hands, and if you properly "sick" the boy on his prey and fasten the door securely, you can come back in an hour and do anything you want to with that young man. I know this to be true, for I have been young myself.

I have also been a boy.

There are other indignities which you might heap on an impudent and persistent young party who don't know enough to go home.

I have known young men who infested a house that way to be eradicated by means of very sad music. They do not die in the house.

Some music will drive away the bravest young man who ever tried to sit out a firm and wakeful parent.

Do you sing?

If so, let your selections be of a sad and melancholy nature, soaked with mushed tears. Should he undertake to draw near and console you, you might do as you think best about allowing him to do so. If you think he is simply practicing on you so that he can gracefully embrace another, you might induce him to crawl under the divan after something or other, and then while he gently backed out you could administer a severe reproof to him by means of a fence board. Some use a picket, but you will find that a fence board will hurt worse, and so give better satisfaction.

Another plan would be to avoid laughing at his funny anecdotes. Wait till he gets through with the anecdote and looks up in your eyes for a twinkle of merriment. That is the time to refrain from twinkling. Wait till he gets to the nub of the joke, as it were, and pricks up his ears to listen for a wild burst of silvery laughter. That is the time to hang on to your silvery laughter. It will give him a pained expression of countenance, and you will see him soon after look at his watch. When he completes his story, suddenly wake up and ask him if that is all. Few men can endure this for over two weeks.

Of course there are other and more radical methods of accomplishing the result you wish, but these are the ones more common in the best of society. I naturally supposed that you wanted the methods used in the best society, or you would have gone elsewhere instead of coming to me.

Should you finally wish to be more severe, however, you can invite a young girl to be present during the young man's stay. I would suggest that this young girl be a fluent talker on the subject of clothes. If you both keep the talk going pretty well while the young man looks at the album or gazes with a fixed stare through a stereoscope that hasn't any pictures in it, you will soon have his pachydermic pelt on the fence.

But there is a bare possibility that this young man is in love with you, and would think it humorous even if you were to fill him full of fine shot. In that case, I do not know what you ought to do. Love is a strange missive. It goes where it is not sent, and it refuses to go where it is sent.

If you could get him away by himself, it would be well enough, perhaps, to ask him if he loves you. That's the way I should do. The quicker a matter of that kind is disposed of the better. Ask him in a manly way if such is the case, and if he really does love you, and has reason to believe that you were paying attention to him all this time, you cannot in honor desert him now.

Sometimes a girl marries a man to get rid of him. I have known several cases of this kind. I once knew of a young woman who married a person in order to get rid of him, and it worked so well that he isn't at home once a month since they were married. He is the owner of a wooden leg, and the only way she can keep him at home is to get up early in the morning and conceal this limb in the hay mow at the barn.

Getting rid of a man is a very simple process if you are really in earnest about it. Some girls marry and feed their victims with bread that they have made themselves. That is a roundabout way of getting rid of a man.

Do not be discouraged. Let me know how you get on with the suggestions I have made above, and I am confident we will succeed.

Have you ever tried wearing a large, tall hat with a stuffed bluejay in it to the theater, and sitting in the seat just in front of him? Try it if you have not done so already, and if you do not get rid of him as well as a great number of law-abiding citizens, write me, and I will suggest something else.

Yours truly, BILL NYE.

A Royal Dinner.

Mr. Granville, in his diary, gives the following account of his interview with Emperor Napoleon III. on the 26th of June, 1855:

Yesterday morning arrived an invitation to dine at the Tuileries the same evening. I went there, was ushered into a room with eight or ten men in it, none of whom I knew except Count Bacciochi, whom I had met at Fould's the day before—three in uniform, the rest in plain clothes. A man, whom I supposed to be the aide-de-camp de service, came forward to receive me, and invited me to sit down. Presently the same, or another man, came and said: "Milord" (they all milorded me), vous vous mettrez a table, s'il vous plait, a cote de l'Empereur a sa droite. I was then taken into the next room, which adjoins the cabinet of the Emperor. In a few minutes His Majesty made his appearance: he immediately came up to me, bowed very civilly, and asked me the usual questions of when I came to Paris, etc. In a minute dinner was announced, and we went in. As we went in, he said to me: L'Imperatrice sera bien fachee de ne vous avoir pas vu. At dinner, which did not last above twenty-five minutes, he talked in sort of dropping conversation on different subjects, and I found him so easy to get on with that I ventured to start topics myself. After dinner we returned to the room we had left, and after coffee, seeing me staring about at the portraits, he said all his family were there, and he told me who they all were and the history of these portraits, which, he said, had made the tour of the world. After this he asked me to sit down, which I did at a round table by his side, and M. Visconti on the other side of me, and then we had a conversation which lasted at least an hour and a half, on every imaginable subject. It was impossible not to be struck with his simplicity, his being so natural and totally without an air of assumption of greatness, though not undignified, but perfectly comme il faut, with excellent manners, and easy, pleasant, fluent conversation. I was struck with his air of truth and frankness.

Two Humorists.

During the war Ferd Hamilton was assigned to duty as orderly to Gen. Fagan. Hamilton's character is a study. War, pestilence, nothing could destroy his peculiar individuality. One day Gen. Fagan called on a gentleman who lived several miles distant from the camp. Hamilton accompanied him. He rode at regulation distance behind the general. As they neared the house Fagan stopped at a large, heavy gate, of course expecting Hamilton to dismount and open it. Hamilton rode up and stopped. Fagan looked at him; he looked at Fagan. Fagan got down, without saying a word, and opened the gate. Hamilton rode through and waited until the general caught up with him. Fagan hitched his own horse, and, taking a seat on the gallery, began a conversation with the man whom he had come to see. Hamilton hitched his horse, took a seat near Fagan, leaned back, lighted a cob pipe, and took an active part in the conversation. Fagan was a strict disciplinarian, but he had such a sense of humor that, excusing himself, he went behind the house and laughed until he grew red in the face.

In the same command there was another humorist, a practical joker named Henry McNette, who is now a pilot on the Arkansaw River. Just at this time in the history of the confederacy rations became scarce. Parched corn and sweet potatoes do very well once in a long while, but are objectionable when taken as a steady diet. McNette noticed that Lieut. Nowlin frequently visited a farm house, the elegant country seat of Judge Beach. He had often seen the handsome Miss Beach, and he knew that Nowlin was paying special attentions to her. One day McNette went to Judge Beach's house and rang the door bell. When a servant appeared, McNette put his hat under his arm and asked if he could see Miss Beach. The servant crabbedly replied that he would see. Presently Miss Beach appeared.

"Is this Miss Beach?" McNette asked as he humbly bowed to the young lady.

"Lieut. Nowlin, who is very ill, ordered me to come over and ask you to send him a broiled chicken and anything else that you think he might relish."

"Well, sit down there," said the young lady. She would not allow any of the servants to prepare the meal. She broiled the chicken herself, and nicely arranging the "spread," gave it to McNette, who again bowed humbly. He went down into the woods and feasted. "There was enough for three men," he said, in speaking of the affair, "but on that occasion I was three men myself."

The next day Nowlin called on Miss Beach.

"I am surprised to see you," she said.

"Why?" he asked.

"Because of your illness."

"I haven't been ill."

"You haven't? How did you enjoy the chicken?"

"What chicken?"

"Why, one of your soldiers came here and said that you had sent for a broiled chicken. He was a—"

"Never mind. I know what sort of a man he is. I know him. He's that infernal Henry McNette."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Van Wyck's Trousers.

Senator Van Wyck of Nebraska, is probably the most bow-legged man that was ever in public life, and it is one of the traditions of the country he comes from that he has his pantaloons cut with a circular saw. The result is that those garments are very conspicuous for their baggy appearance and usually attracts attention and comment when he is walking away from a group of his friends.

One day, writes a Washington correspondent, Senator Vance of North Carolina, who is a great wag, was standing with a party of Senators, when Van Wyck passed. Says Vance:

"Do you see those pantaloons old Crazy Horse has got on? I never look at them without being reminded of a story of an old tar-heel down in my State who went to the circus for the first time in his life. When he came home he sat around the tavern one night drinking moonshine whisky and telling his friends what he had seen. He looked down upon them with an air of superiority, and they were rather meekly inquisitive.

One of them says: "Uncle Zeke, did you see the b'ar at the circus?"

"Yes," says Uncle Zeke; "I seen the b'ar."

"Well," says the questioner, "what kind of a b'ar was it, Uncle Zeke?"

"I never seen a b'ar afore," was the reply, "but it 'pears to me as if that mought be a right smart of a b'ar."

"Did you see the lion, Uncle Zeke?" put in another one.

"Yes, I seen the lion."

"Waal, what sort of a lion was it, Uncle Zeke?"

"I never seen a lion afore, but it 'peared to me that it mought be a right smart of a lion."

"Did you see the camel, Uncle Zeke?"

"Yes, I seen the camel."

"What sort of a camel was it?"

"Waal, I never seen a camel afore, but it appeared to me that it mought be a right smart of a camel."

"Did you see the elephant, Uncle Zeke?"

"Yes, I seen the elephant."

"What sort of an elephant was it, Uncle Zeke?"

"Waal, I never seen an elephant afore, but it 'peared to me that it mought be a right smart of an elephant, barring that he had a good deal of slack leather about his pants."

Nature never builded so perfect, but that Fashion tried to improve her work.

THE WESTERN BOOM.

St. Joseph, Mo., Still Leading All Competitors in Real Estate Deals and the Acquisition of Substantial Enterprises.

The most noticeable real estate activity continues to prevail at St. Joseph, Mo., says a correspondent of an Eastern paper. Packing houses and other industrial enterprises, among them the Louisiana Tobacco Works, are going in at a lively rate; one of the chief evidences of the growth of the city being the granting of a franchise to a syndicate of Kansas City capitalists for the construction of an extensive system of cable lines, to be commenced at once, and to cost $300,000. The best evidence, however, is in the showing of actual transactions closed in one week recently: W. A. P. McDonald bought 99 lots in Eastern Extension for $10,500. He sold 61 of them for $10,700, and sold balance at an advance of $29 per foot in cost. Sam Nave and J. S. Britton bought a lot in Patee's addition for $2,000 and sold for $3,000 in four days. W. H. Constable bought lot 2, block 54, St Joseph Extension, for $300, and sold for $550. J. S. Blackwilder, of Chicago, bought eighty feet, southeast corner of Third and Sylvanie, for $14,000, and has been offered nearly double that for it and refused it. J. M. Hill paid $7,000 for northeast corner of Second and Francis, and has since refused $18,000. C. W. Brown bought two lots on St. Joseph avenue for $1,300, and sold in six days for $3,000. John Kelly bought two lots in Eastern Extension; he paid $[illegible]; in thirty days he sold for $[illegible]; it has since been resold for $1,200. J. F. Tyler bought a lot in Eastern Extension for $[illegible] and sold to Hubbard for $500, who has since been offered $700. L. E. Carter bought a lot in January in Kemper's addition for $700. In three days after he was offered $1,000, and since then $2,000. He bought four lots in Robidoux addition for $1,600; sold for $6,000, and his purchaser sold for $8,000. Mrs. N. M. Brewster bought three lots for $500 and sold for $1,150 in three days, and in four days they were resold for $1,400. D. G. Griswold bought six lots in East St. Joseph for $200 and sold the next day for $750; also three others for $200 and resold in three weeks for $1,000.

One of the publishers of Hoye's Directory, speaking of the Western cities and the prevailing boom, writes as follows of St. Joseph, where he has just issued the Directory for 1887: "Not only has St. Joseph increased in population at a most satisfactory rate, there being an increase in one year of 5,846, while the total population in round numbers is shown to be 50,000, but she has undergone a spirited revival that augurs the outstripping of all competition. Ten years ago the city had scarcely a dozen manufactories, whereas the year '87 finds her with some 170 of all kinds, with thirteen railroads, the largest stockyards west of Chicago, some thirteen miles of streets, paved with asphaltum, and as many miles more under contract, with the electric motor soon to be in operation on two of the car lines, and the cable line an assured fact, and new enterprises springing up daily on every hand. The demand for real estate has been steady and active. For the past year St. Joseph has led almost continually the other cities of the United States in bank clearances, the per cent. of increase over 1885 reaching in one case 140.7, and up to date maintaining an average of almost 100. Down to Dec. 31, 1886, St. Joseph's jobbing houses did a business of $110,530,000, showing an increase in the business of 1886 over that of 1885 of $23,111,028. A fair indication of the increasing business may be sought in the fact that St. Joseph now employs a force of commercial travelers numbering 1,013 men."

St. Joseph, more than any other Western town, offers the best inducements to men of small capital to commence a manufacturing business, and to mechanics and laborers to find employment and build desirable homes.

The Science of Noses.

The nose, we all know, forms a prominent feature in everybody's career, but it has been left to M. Sophus Schack, a Danish disciple of Lavater, to find out that it is an infallible index to human character. He tells us in a book just published that his discovery is the result of a long and patient study of this facial organ among people of all nations. According to his experience, the moral and physical nature of a person can be gathered from the formation of his nose. A well-developed nose, he says, denotes strength and courage; a little turn-up nose indicates cunning and artfulness; a delicate, straight nose, taste and refinement; a curved nose, judgment and egotism; and a thick, misshapen nose, dullness and want of tact. But this is not all. "The nose," proceeds our physiognomist, "discloses to the intelligent observer the faculties possessed by the owner. It also indicates the intensity of his intellectual activity and the delicacy of his moral sentiments. Finally the nose, which belongs both to the mobile and immobile parts of our visage, reflects faithfully the fugitive movements of our inclinations." If all this be true, it is evident that people who desire to disguise their character or dissemble their passions must in future beware of their noses, or, rather, they must wear false ones.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Merely a Coincidence.

"I am sure," remarked Mrs. Finfrock, who keeps roomers and boarders, "that you will like the place very much, Mr. Adams. My boarders are always cheerful and happy. The scenery is so very cheering. Really, the outlook is inspiring."

"I have no doubt your house is a very pleasant home. As I am looking for such a place, I will come out and see it. Please direct me to it."

"It is very easily found. Take the green line to F street, and change on the white line, which you leave at J street. Then walk seven blocks down Q street and you are there. Just before you get to the home you will see Mr. Reed's sign. He is the undertaker. Then just on the other side of the marble yard is the office of Dr. Dwiggins. It's right there. You can't miss it."

"Is there a cemetery near by?"

"No, sir. What do you mean?"

"Oh, I just thought it would make such a happy combination of all the professions necessary for the proper disposition of your boarders after you were through with them."

Survivors of the Alamo.

It is an historical fact that the Alamo had no messenger of defeat, as all its defenders were mercilessly put to the sword, or to the gun, which is the same thing; but there are three persons still living who were in the fortress when it was captured. There is a Mexican lady in San Antonio named Perez, and her son, Alejos Perez, who were in the Alamo. Alejos Perez, who was a Deputy City Marshal of San Antonio a few years ago, having been born in the Alamo, was an infant at the time. It was to Mrs. Perez that Bowie, Travis, Crockett, and other leading heroes intrusted their watches, jewelry, etc., on the evening before the final assault. After the slaughter was over the Mexican soldiers broke open her trunk where the articles were and appropriated them. These two persons are the only ones living who were in the Thermopylæ of Texas when it fell.—Texas Siftings.

Works Both Ways.

Necessity is the mother of invention, and the inventor's wife and children are apt to find that invention is the mother of necessity.—Journal of Education.

A Life Made Miserable

By dyspepsia is scarcely worth the living. A capricious appetite, heartburn, puzzling nervous symptoms, increased action of the heart after eating, sinking in the abdomen between meals, and flatulence after, are among the successive torments of this harassing complaint. Two things only are needful for its removal. A resort to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and persistence in its use. These remedial measures being adopted, a cure is certain. Taken immediately before or after meals, this great stomachic promotes secretion of the gastric juice, the natural solvent of the food. The nervous and bilious symptoms consequent upon chronic indigestion disappear, as the complaint gradually yields to the corrective and invigorating influence of the Bitters. Appetite returns, sleep becomes more refreshing, and as a sequence, the body is efficiently nourished, muscular power increases, and the blood grows sanguine. Use the Bitters for chills and fever, and rheumatism.

Women Longer-Lived than Men.

In accordance with the doctrine of influx, and in accordance with the functions of the brain, we are compelled to recognize health and longevity as more closely associated with the higher than the lower faculties, the moral rather than the animal nature. This is the reason that woman, with a feebler body, but a stronger moral nature, ranks higher in health and longevity than man. And although from 4 to 5 per cent. more males are born, women are generally in predominance, often from 2 to 6 per cent. The researches of the Bureau of Statistics of Vienna show that about one-third more women than men reach an advanced age. De Verga asserts that of the sudden deaths there are about 100 women to 780 men. The inevitable inference is that the cultivation of virtue or religion is the surest road to longevity, and the indulgence in vice and crime the most certain ruin to the body and soul.

There is a curious illustration of these principles in the evidence of life insurance companies in reference to spirit drinking and abstinence. The two oldest life insurance companies of England, the General Provident and the United Kingdom, have made records for forty-five years which distinguish the total abstainers and the moderate drinkers. Drunkards they do not insure at all. The care with which lives are selected for insurance results in a smaller rate of mortality among the insured than in the entire population. This gain was but slight among those classed as moderate drinkers, for their mortality was only 3 per cent. less than the average mortality. But among the total abstainers it was 31 per cent less. Thus the proportion of deaths among moderate drinkers compared to that of total abstainers is as 97 to 69.—The Journal of Man.

Ex-Mayor Latrobe, Baltimore, Md., says the best cough medicine is Red Star Cough Cure. Dr. Samuel K. Cox, D. D., of Washington, D. C., after a careful analysis, pronounced it purely vegetable, and most excellent for throat troubles. Price, twenty-five cents a bottle.

Dogs, Coons, and 'Possums.

The relative degrees of courage between animals is strangely illustrated between the coon, the 'possum, and the dog. The 'possum will kill the coon, while the coon will beat the dog. Four 'possums will fight each other when they meet, biting at each other's under jaws. When they once get firmly clinched they will hang to it till one expires. The victor will then engage the first coon he meets. This is strange, in view of the fact that the 'possum is a cowardly animal, feigning death when sighted by hunters, and giving rise to the expression of "playing" 'possum. The coon fights at fashion—scratching and biting. The 'possum quietly proceeds to coil his tail around the coon's neck, choking him into submission. The vanquished coon will arise from his inglorious defeat, and meeting the dog, of which the 'possum stands in mortal dread, will engage him in combat, severely wounding, if not entirely killing, him. The hound dog is the only one which can match the coon, and yet the bulldog, which has been whipped by the coon, will make the hound dog run for dear life.

As the greatest pain cure, St. Jacobs Oil is recommended by public men of America and other countries. Hon. Billa Flint, Life-Senator of the Dominion Parliament, Canada, found it to act like a charm.

If the condensed breath collected on the cool window-panes of a room where a number of persons have been assembled be burned, a smell of singed hair will show the presence of organic matter; and if the condensed breath be allowed to remain on the windows for a few days, it will be found, on examination by microscope, that it is alive with animalculæ. It is the inhalation of air containing such putrescent matter which causes half the sick headaches, which might be avoided by a circulation of fresh air.

Above all other earthly ills,
I hate the big, old-fashioned pills;
By slow degrees they downward wend,
And often pause, or upward tend;
With such discomfort are they fraught,
Their good effects amount to naught.
Now, Dr. Pierce prepares a pill
That just exactly fills the bill—
A Pellet, rather, that is all
A Pleasant Purgative, and small;
Just try them as you feel their need,
You'll find that I speak truth, indeed.

Most of the time in hot water—the washerwoman.

"Rough on Dirt" whitens clothing yellowed by careless washing or use of cheap washing compounds. Washes everything from finest laces to heaviest blankets. There need be no fear in using this article. Does not rot nor yellow. 5 and 10 cents.

IF YOU ARE LOSING YOUR GRIP On life try "Wells' Health Renewer." Goes direct to weak spots. For weak men, delicate women.

"BUCHU-PAIBA."

Quick, complete cure, all annoying kidney diseases, catarrh of bladder, etc. $1.

If muslins, calicoes, etc., appear to not wear or wash as well as formerly the reason is in the use of inferior alkaline—soap-washing compounds that destroy the texture and neutralize the colors. Shun them! Use "Rough on Dirt."

As a raindrop foretells a storm, so does a pimple upon the human body indicate health-destroying virus in the blood, which can be neutralized and expelled only by Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic.

WELLS' HAIR BALSAM.

If gray, restores to original color. An elegant dressing; softens and beautifies. No oil nor grease. A tonic restorative. Stops hair coming out; strengthens, cleanses, heals scalp. 50c.

The best thing on earth to add to starch to give a good body and beautiful gloss is "Rough on Dirt," only washing compound that can be so used. Makes ironing easy and saves the starch. Has dirt-removing power double that of any other.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

25 cts. per year for illustrated monthly with elegant chromo. "Sunbeams," Port Jervis, N. Y.

If afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

The Morning Dress.

It is said that a lady's standing in society can easily be determined by her dress at the breakfast-table; an expensive, showy costume indicating that the wearer has not yet learned the proprieties. But no one need be afraid of being called "shoddy" if her loveliness is as apparent by daylight as at the hops. Perfect beauty is never the attendant of disease; above all, of those diseases peculiar to women, and which find a ready cure in Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription." Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

When he sighs for her and she sighs for him, sighin's of the times may be considered auspicious for a wedding.

The "old reliable"—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The object of a hotel bill of fare, between meals, is to prevent you finding out what you are going to eat.

Gold Fields.

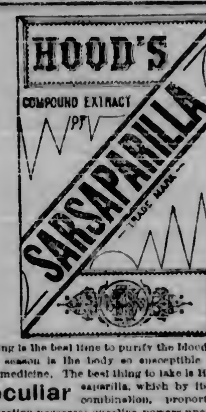
That pan out richly, are not so abundant as in the early California days, but those who write to Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, will, by return mail, receive, free, full information about work which they can do, and live at home, wherever they are located, that will pay them from $5 to $25 per day and upwards. Either sex, young or old. Capital not required; you are started in business free. Those who start at once are absolutely sure of snug little fortunes.

But few men can handle a hot lamp-chimney and say there is no place like home at the same time.

"I have been afflicted with an Affection of the Throat from childhood, caused by diphtheria, and have used various remedies, but have never found anything equal to Brown's Bronchial Troches."—Rev. G. M. F. Hampton, Pikeston, Ky. Sold only in boxes.

The proper thing to do when you have a surfeit of dust and heat is to surf it.

Indigestion, dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility relieved by taking Mensman's Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It contains blood-making, force-generating, and life-sustaining properties, is invaluable in all enfeebled conditions, whether the result of exhaustion, nervous prostration, overwork, or acute disease; particularly if resulting from pulmonary complaints. Hazard, Hazard & Co., proprietors, New York.



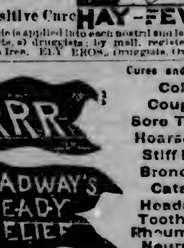
Spring is the best time to purify the blood, for at no other season is the body so susceptible to benefit from medicine. The best thing to take is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation possesses curative powers unequaled by any other medicine. Be sure to get Hood's. Do not be induced to take any other.

Peculiar

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

ELY'S CREAM BALM

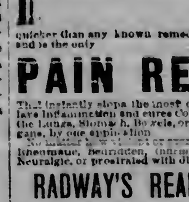


when applied into the nostrils will be absorbed effectually, cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores sense of taste and smell.

Not a Liquid or Snuff

A Quick Relief and Positive Cure

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cts. at druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cts. Circulars free. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N.Y.



Cures and Prevents Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Stiff Neck, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Headache, Toothache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Asthma, Frostbites, Chilblains.

quicker than any known remedy. It was the first and is the only

PAIN REMEDY

That instantly stops the most excruciating pains, allays Inflammation and cures Congestions, whether of the Lungs, Stomach, Bowels, or other glands or organs, by one application. [illegible] Rheumatic, Bedridden, Infirm, Crippled, Nervous, Neuralgic, or prostrated with diseases may suffer.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

will afford instant ease. Thirty to sixty drops in half tumbler of water will in a few minutes cure Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Nausea, Vomiting, Palpitation of the Heart, Malaria, Chills and Fever, Faintness, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Colic, Wind in the Bowels and all Internal Pains. Fifty Cents per Bottle. Sold by Druggists.

DR. RADWAY & CO., N. Y., Proprietors of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent and Dr. Radway's Pills.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

OPIUM and Morphine Habit Cured in 10 to 20 days. Refer to 1000 patients cured in all parts. Dr. Marsh, Quincy, Mich.

LOTS NEW TOWN of BENJAMIN, Wis. Gen. R. R. Plats apply MILWAUKEE MINING EXCHANGE, Milwaukee, Wis. Gogebic Stocks bought and sold. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D.C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

Will purify the BLOOD, regulate the LIVER and KIDNEYS and Restore the HEALTH and VIGOR of YOUTH. Dyspepsia, Want of Appetite, Indigestion, Lack of Strength and Tired Feeling absolutely cured. Bones, muscles and nerves receive new force. Enlivens the mind and supplies Brain Power.

LADIES Suffering from complaints peculiar to their sex will find in DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC a safe, speedy cure. Gives a clear, healthy complexion. All attempts at counterfeiting only adds to its popularity. Do not experiment—get ORIGINAL AND BEST. Dr. HARTER'S LIVER PILLS Cure Constipation, Liver Complaint and Sick Headache. Sample Dose and Dream Book mailed on receipt of two cents in postage. THE DR. HARTER MEDICINE CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

Why did the Women of this country use over thirteen million cakes of Procter & Gamble's Lenox Soap in 1886?

Buy a cake of Lenox and you will soon understand why.

BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER

THE BEST IN THE WORLD

[illegible]

Eclectic Shorthand [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER

KANSAS [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER

ADVERTISERS on advertising space [illegible] LORD & THOMAS. 45 to 49 Randolph [illegible] the Advertising Agency [illegible]

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

FOR HORSES.

UVILLA, W. VA., Nov. 17, 1886.

Recently I bought a young horse. He was taken very ill with Pneumonia. I tried to think of something to recover him. Concluded, what was good for a man would be good for a horse. So I got a bottle of Piso's Cure and gave him the greater part of it through the mouth. This helped him, and I continued giving same doses of the medicine until I had used two bottles. The horse then became perfectly sound. I can recommend Piso's Cure for the horse as well as for man.

N. S. J. SNYDER.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

OLD CHRONIC PILLS [illegible]

KIDDER'S PASTILLES [illegible] ASTHMA.

RUPTURE circular of instructions [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER

CATARRH CURED

Northern Pacific Railroad Company.

Fargo [illegible] Dec 17th 1886

Messrs B. J. [illegible] & Co. [illegible] Newark N.J.

Gentlemen, I am happy to inform you that your Catarrh [illegible] cured me of my dreadful Catarrh [illegible]

[illegible]

Very respectfully Yours [illegible] Fargo [illegible]

COMPLETE TREATMENT [illegible]

$5 [illegible] DETECTIVES [illegible]

293 COLUMBUS [illegible] MANURE SPREADERS [illegible]

OAKLAWN The Great Nursery of PERCHERON HORSES. 200 Imported Brood Mares of Choicest Families. LARGE NUMBERS. All Ages, both Sexes, IN STOCK.

[illegible] M. W. DUNHAM, Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois.

WIZARD OIL CONCERTS

[illegible] Hamlin's Wizard Oil. [illegible] Headache, Earache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, Lame Back, [illegible] RHEUMATISM, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Ulcers, Sores, Scalds, Frost Bites, [illegible] All Aches and Pains, [illegible] WIZARD OIL COMPANY, CHICAGO.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS The Original and Only Genuine. [illegible]

PISO'S CURE FOR [illegible] CONSUMPTION

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat. [illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 27, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

The Legislature has passed a bill ceding to the United States certain territory in Baraga county for the erection of a Government school house for Indians.

Henry George has finished his lecture tour and returned to his home in New York. The various titles to the soil of the United States remain substantially the same as when he started out.

Ex-Rebel General A. R. Lawton, of Georgia, has been appointed by the President to be United States Minister to Austria, and N. W. McConnell, of Tennessee, has been appointed Chief Justice of the Territory of Montana.

The alleged declaration of George William Curtis that Cleveland could not be elected if nominated has created consternation among administration men. It is reported that the president is much perturbed over Mr. Curtis' utterances.

Senator Stockbridge considers Michigan safely Republican for 1888. He thinks Mr. Blaine is the first choice of the state for President, but favors the nomination of any man who can be elected. Allison or Sherman would suit him. Principles and success are of more importance than men.

It is generally conceded that the Inter State Commerce Law is working a serious injustice upon the people. Railway managers are seeking to avoid the real spirit and intent of its provisions, and are doing all in their power to render it burdensome and even obnoxious to the public.

The Senate has passed the bills to prevent the unauthorized use of G. A. R. and loyal legion badges; to make possession of game or fish out of season prima facie evidence of violation of the game law; to protect electors who cannot read, from fraud and deception at the polls; and numerous petty bills.

The United States steamer Yantic arrived at Key West, Florida, last Thursday afternoon from Port au Principe, Hayti. It is reported that that while at Port au Principl, Commander Green positively and officially forbade the English men-of-war in that harbor to execute their threat of seizing the Tortugas Island.

Dan. C. Henderson, of the Allegan Journal, is being extensively boomed for the office of Adjutant General. Mr. Henderson was one of the few volunteer soldiers who refused promotion while in the service. He is one of the best newspaper men in the state, and we are confident that if appointed, he would fill the position creditably and well.

Word comes from Washington that Mr. Bayard intends to keep right on protesting against the unlawful conduct of the Canadians during the coming fishing season, and of course the Canadian cruisers will keep on seizing American fishing crafts and hauling down the American flag. Meanwhile the President will carry the Retaliation act snugly ensconced in his vest pocket.

Many a man would have given almost anything to have been permitted to look upon the face of Abraham Lincoln, which was exposed on Thursday for the first time in 22 years. Such a view was like looking upon the face of immortality. Those who viewed the remains, state that while the hair and beard had dropped off, the mould of the face and even the expression of the features was not only recognized, but pronounced remarkably natural.

No order has yet been made public by the railroads of the state calling in the legislative passes. The railroads were prompt in calling upon the newspapers for the transportation that had been well paid for in advertising, but the legislator continues to ride free. What has the legislator done for the railroads and when did he do it? The public is getting curious about this matter. If the railroad companies will not answer, the members of the legislature should.

To-day is designated by the Grand Army of the Republic as a Grant memorial day, it being the anniversary of his birth. This should be made permanent, as Grant was the leading soldier of the Republic, the greatest military figure in the greatest civil war of the century. It would be a pleasant and appropriate thing if a day could be set aside for celebrating jointly the memory of General Grant and of the two martyr Presidents, Lincoln and Garfield. All these were great men and great figures in the civil war, standing side by side in leadership and defense of the cause of the Republic. Let Grant's memorial day this year be made impressive and interesting.

Northern Michigan News.

Liquor bonds in Mancelona $5,000.

E. F. Dame of Northport, is keeping one eye peeled for violators of the fish and game laws.

The surveyor that surveyed the G. R. & I. R. R. route has been employed to survey the D., C. & E. R. R. and will commence from Kalkaska May 2d, 1887.

Wm. Wallace, living near Carpenter, pulled nine hundred bushels of turnips last week. They came out in good order, not being injured by the frost in the least.

The Mancelona Iron Furnace is contracting for 30,000 or 40,000 tons of iron ore for the coming season. The furnace is running steadily and still maintains the reputation of being one of the "smartest" institutions of the kind in the country.

Rev. W. G. Puddefoot of Traverse City, has handed in his resignation as pastor of the Congregational church at that place to take effect July 1st. Mr. Puddefoot will remove east to accept a prominent position with the home missionary society.

For the first time in the history of Cheboygan the law closing the saloons was enforced on Sunday of last week. Quite a number of the saloon men thought that the proclamation of President Gerow was not loaded, and in consequence have had to walk up to the captain's office and settle.

On Tuesday, the 19th of July, the Bay View camp meetings proper will commence and on the Wednesday following its close, the Bay View Chautauqua assembly will convene and close August 7. A very large attendance is expected, the assembly being a new feature is attracting much attention. It is undenominational and will embrace the active co operation of Methodists, Baptists, Congregationalists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians. John M. Hall, of Flint, is superintendent of the assembly. J. W. Moon is president of the camp ground association, and Rev. S. Reed, Flint, is secretary.

About the time that the late boom at the "Soo" began, a minister of that place returned from a trip among the brethren down south with $2,000 which he had raised among the churches of his denomination to aid in building a new church there. He hired a preacher who happened to be hung up there to preach for him and gave himself entirely to real estate transactions for two solid weeks, coming out with a clear profit of $10,000. As he made it on church capital it will be somewhat interesting to know whether he will turn in the whole $12,000 or hand over to the church the $2,000 and put the $10,000 into his pocket.

Petoskey Record: Last week on Thursday night a deaf mute arrived at the Clifton House, registered, and was shown to bed by the clerk and general factotum of the establishment, Frank Ferryman. Mr. Rowan is always up bright and early in the morning and attends to waking up guests who want to be called early. As Rowan was absent when the deaf gentleman come it occurred to Frank to put him down for a call early in the morning as an experiment. Friday morning about the time the first beams of the morning twilight were climbing over Mitchell street hill, Rowan turned out and examined the "call book," found that he had a man to be called at once. He proceeded to the room and give the usual raps, but received no reply. Then he hammered loudly, and listened without result. Thinking his guest an uncommon sound sleeper Joe renewed his assault upon the door with his fist and toe of his boot, adjoining him at the same time in no gentle tones to "get up." Still all was as silent as a grave inside. Then Joe began to get mad. He had kept the Clifton House for many years and had a pride in saying that no guest had ever lost a train, boat, or engagement, for want of waking, and he didn't propose to beaten now by this uncommon sleeper. So he went at it, and with each kick and yell he got madder. Every guest in the house thought the house was afire and some of them rushed into the halls. The family and domestics all hustled out of bed thinking there was an earthquake. About this time the long-geared and slab-sided clerk appeared at the foot of the stairs and when Joe at length stopped for breath, mildly inquired whether "he had got that deaf mute waked up yet." Joe stood still a moment getting his head around an idea and then he started. So did the clerk. Very early risers might have seen a tall, thin, young man make hasty exit, dodge 'round the house, climb over the big wood piles, and finally disappear in the back premises of Mongomery's shop, followed closely by an irate landlord with a club in his hand. It is said that Frank got his meals in the back kitchen and slept in Ross's barn until Sunday, when Joe's wrath had cooled down enough to permit the resumption of his duties without danger of bodily harm.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

Differentiation in Schools.

[Communication.]

A little while ago I sent you an article in relation to the 'why' of the difference in the male and female in their studies. I propose now to follow up the subject in a general way, hoping to see solutions given to the many perplexing questions now before the public, in relation to the progress and status of our cilization. In your professional experience as a teacher you must have seen great diversity of aptitude in your pupils. Some dull ones, some quick and vivacious, and some that you might call medium; showing a distinctive individuality in the pupils, which proves that there is a difference in the organic structure of each. Yet, amid all this diversity there is but one way to command the attention and respect of the pupil and that is through an earnest desire, shown to the pupil, that you are his guide and friend. Let that fact be made evident, and the work of the teacher is easy; like begets like by sympathy, this law of sympathy may be said to be as fixed as the law of the magnet and when properly understood by our educators, will revolutionize our present methods of training.

Strictly speaking, education means development, or drawing out. If the teacher understands the nature of what is to be developed or drawn out his work becomes easy to him, but if he does not understand the nature of the being he proposes to instruct, not all the Mathematics, Geography, History, Grammar, Civil Government, or any other study he may have acquired avails him one straw as a teacher. There is a development of our nature more essential than those studies just mentioned, which must have precedence in our schools before there can be permanent progress in society.

I appeal to the results flowing from our improved method of teaching as a criterion to measure by. No people are more educated than the American people, no children have better facilities for education than American children and no children show a more precocious development, intellectually than American children, but the showing is against us by bringing out the fact that with this precocious stimulation of intellectual power, there is a visible decline in physical stamina and development. You may ask what am I going to do about it? It is but little I can do, but I would have you think over the matter, look around at the practical working of our civilization and if you are satisfied with matters as they are, you will, as a matter of course, continue your present curriculum. If not satisfied, you may reverse your present method.

I have divided pupils into three grades: the quick, the slow and the medium. Now if you have made observation of this fact, you can see a difference in the general make-up of the physical conformation, indicating reasons of their difference in aptitude in acquiring lessons. Those of an encephalic or high nervous temperment, will be the ones to get their lessons first; those of a lymphatic, slow, easy temperment, will be the ones behind. The slow ones may come out ahead in the end, as their thinking apparatus has not acquired its vigor and strenth, the muscles are yet soft and flabby and the brain, the thinking part, is equally soft. The other, the nervous one, is smaller and finer in the muscular system and firmer in the brain tissue, consequently more vivacious and apt in learning. But the very fact of this precocious activity is one reason why we should be careful not to over stimulate; because this premature excitement of nervous energy, so much admired by the parent and encouraged by the teacher, works an incalculable amount of injury by developing out of all proportion the nervous system, which, to be healthy, must be based upon a solid healthy physical foundation. By our present system of training it will not take long to develop a race, whose nervous system will be in excess of their physical capacity; that is to say, we will have a race all run to brain, a race with a fifty horse power thinking apparatus set upon narrow, contracted, chest and shoulders, having only a five horse power pair of lungs and heart to drive it. This is perhaps a homely comparison, but is nevertheless a fact worthy of your serious consideration. ***

[The above from a correspondent touches one of the important questions of the day, with some hints deserving the attention of all interested in schools. For lack of space we have been compelled to omit some small portions of the article. We hope in a future number to express some opinions on the views advanced.—Ed.]

Concerning the answer given in a recent issue to question No. 29, a correspondent asks why it is if the mouth of the Mississippi river is farther from the center of the earth than its source, that the stream does not flow in the opposite direction, since by the attraction of the mass of the earth all bodies tend to move toward its center; in other words if the mouth of the stream is farther from the earth's center than its rise is it not really flowing up hill and contrary to the universal law of gravitation? Will some scientific correspondent explain?

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

(30) The English government paid $36 a head for the Hessians who fought against the Americans in the revolution.

(31) Cattle and hogs were introduced into America by Columbus in 1493.

(32) A white man is a "colored man."

(33) There are 2,000 lbs Avoirdupois and 2,430 lbs Troy in a ton of gold.

(34) The seed of an apple points toward the stem.

(35) The date of the invention of the Mariner's compass is not known exactly.

While it is the duty of the legislature to be deliberate and discreet in all legislation, it is especially desirable that it should make haste to amend and perfect the present liquor laws and enact such other laws as may in its judgment be wise and in the interest of temperance reform. The first day of May is almost here.

Notice.

The partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned, under the firm name and style of Gellick & Ingalls and doing business at Charlevoix, Michigan, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the said James A. Gellick will continue the business at the old stand, paying all debts of the firm and collect all partnership accounts.
Dated Charlevoix, Mich., April 18th, 1887.
JAS. A. GELLICK,
BENJ. F. INGALLS.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Covyou. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, William Covyou, Guardian of the estate of said Richard Covyou, by the Hon. Judge of Probate of Charlevoix county, on the 25th day of June, A. D. 1886, there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the premises hereinafter described, in the county of Charlevoix, in said State, on Saturday, the 2d day of April, A. D., 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, (subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of granting license therefor,) the following described real estate, to-wit: All that certain piece or parcel of land lying and being situate in the Township of Bear Lake, in the County of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, known and described as follows, to-wit: The south-east quarter (¼) of the south-west quarter (¼) of section nineteen, (19) Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Five (5) West.
Dated, Feb. 26, 1887.
WILLIAM COVYOU,
as Guardian of Richard Covyou, Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 1881 executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife), to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 1883, in liber 7 of mortgages on page 382, upon which the whole amount is due and unpaid to wit: The sum of one hundred and twelve and fifteen one hundredths dollars ($112.15) for the recovery of which no suit or proceedings at law have been commenced, will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by a statutory sale of the premises described therein as lot number one in section number fourteen, town number thirty-four north of range eight west (except five acres from the north east corner) containing fifty acres (according to the government survey) of land in Charlevoix County, Michigan to the highest bidder, at the front door of the county building (so called) in the village of Boyne City, in the county of Charlevoix (that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix), at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, June 17th, 1887.
Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit,
D. C. PAGE, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date Nov. 15th A. D. 1881, made by and between Albert Jubenville, batchelor of Charlevoix county, Michigan, party of the first part, to Morgan Curtis of Kalamazoo county, Michigan, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, on the 19th day of Nov. A. D. 1881 in Liber 5 of Mortgages at page 437 and by which default the power of sale in said Mortgage contained, has become operative and no suit or proceedings either in law or equity having been instituted to collect the amount due on said Mortgage, and there being due thereon the sum of One hundred and sixty-five dollars, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described in said Mortgage on the 19th day of July A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day by sale at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the County building, in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, wherein the lands described in said mortgage are situated), of the mortgaged premises described in said Mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said Mortgage. The premises described in said Mortgage are as follows: the south east quarter of the north east quarter of section thirty-two, of town thirty-two north of range five west, Charlevoix county, Michigan.
Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, MORGAN CURTIS,
Atty for Mortgagee. Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date December the first, 1883, made by and between David Norton and Hanah Norton, his wife of Charlevoix, Michigan, party of the first part, to Mary E. Manley, of Wayne county, New York, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the second day of Feb. A. D. 1884, in Liber 9 of Mortgages at page 2[illegible], and upon which there is now due and unpaid the sum of seventy-two dollars and no action having been taken either in law or equity to collect the same; therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by statutory sale of the premises therein described at the front door of the County building in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in which said county, the lands described in said Mortgage are situated), at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the 19th day of July, A. D. 1887. The premises described in said mortgage are as follows: the north-east quarter of the south-west quarter and the north west quarter of the south-east quarter of section twenty-four of town thirty-three, north of range seven west, Charlevoix county state of Michigan, said premises will be sold subject to the principal sum of Eight hundred dollars yet to become due on said Mortgage together with the accruing interest thereon.
Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, MARY E. MANLEY,
Atty for Mortgagee. Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain Indenture of mortgage bearing date the 13th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and Phebe E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Dix Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan, and recorded in the offices of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in liber "4" of mortgages on page 494 on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1882, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and upon which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of two thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars and thirty-two cents ($2,960.32) for principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the amount now due, or any part thereof, now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided there will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the village of Boyne City, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan (that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for said County of Charlevoix), on Thursday the 30th day of June, A. D. 1887, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of said day the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due upon said mortgage together with the costs and charges of sale and interest to wit: The south west quarter (¼) and the north west quarter (¼) and the north east quarter (¼) of the south east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-three (23) in township No. thirty-three (33) north of range No. seven (7) west, containing three hundred and sixty acres according to the United States survey. Also the north half (½) of the north east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty seven (27) in township No. thirty-three (33) north range No. seven (7) west containing eighty acres according to the United States survey in the County of Charlevoix in the State of Michigan.
Dated March 7, 1887. DIX ROSS,
JAMES H. JOHNSON, Mortgagee.
Attorney for Mortgagee.

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will occur as follows: Boyne City, Friday March 25th, 1887; East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887. Examinations will commence at 8:30 a. m., and end at 5:30 p. m. Candidates for first or second grades can write only at the examination at Boyne City, and may write until 5 o'clock, p. m.
WM. HARRIS, Sec., Norwood.

Notice of Dissolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the Co-partnership heretofore existing under the firm name and style of "F. W. Craine & Co." for the purpose of carrying on the Dry Goods business in the village of Charlevoix, Michigan, is mutually dissolved on this 31st day of March, A. D. 1887, and F. W. Craine is authorized to collect all debts now due said firm; and W. M. Dow assumes all liabilities contracted to this date.
Dated at Charlevoix, Mich., March 31, 1887.
W. M. DOW.
FRANK W. CRAINE.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.
Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.
Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.
DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.
CAPITAL $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000
The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Act 3174, Sec. 10 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.
Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.
We respectfully solicit your patronage.
CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - - DETROIT.

Bank of
Charlevoix,
W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.
CAPITAL, $25,000
Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.
Its Officers
Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to speculate with one's own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.
Security in Banking
Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,
This Bank Invites
People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.
This Bank Will
Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.
Parties Seeking
Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's
Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.
We Solicit Your Patronage.

BURNS & SCRUGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scruggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me, Satisfation Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
C. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

CROSS & SONS,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.
My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete.
If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modeled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES
Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?
If not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.
These goods cannot be equalled in the county
Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.

Ladies Look Out
For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for
D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & ORIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DAILEY, HORR & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Inglestde, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 110, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. L.—True Blues No. 167, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 104, R. A. M. meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Sulbolt.
Treasurer—Albert F. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. V. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, D. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Burdan.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
R. A. Campbell, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. G. R. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address,
JOHN MUNROE, Jr., Gen'l Manager,
South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. D. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST.

N. J. PERRY, Dentist.
Office in Weed's Drug Store,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.

"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West read down			Going East read up
	5 4 p m	Detroit	11 10 am
7 00 am	8 00 am	St Ignace	[illegible]	[illegible]
10 25	8 52	Newberry	6 21	2 05
12 20	9 30	Seney	5 15	12 35
	10 42	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 51	Au Train	3 25	9 05
5 30	12 00	Marquette	2 15	7 30
	12 50 am	Marquette	2 00 pm
	1 55	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 10
	6 30	Houghton	9 20
	6 35	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M T Co's boats, M C & G R & I R R & M H & O
E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

In effect September 27, 1886

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No 6	No 8	No 4
Mackinaw City Lv	7 15 a m	9 30 p m
Petoskey	8 21	10 51
Boyne Falls	9 16	11 30
Mancelona	10 18	12 30
Walton Junc.	11 50	1 50	5 15 p m
Cadillac Ar	12 40	2 50	6 10
Cadillac Lv	12 45	6 05	6 30
Le Roy	1 21	6 40	7 07
Reed City Ar	1 53	7 20	7 40
Reed City Lv	2 10	7 45	8 00
Big Rapids	2 40	8 11	8 33
Stanwood	3 05	8 30	8 55
Howard City	3 33	9 03	9 26
G R & M Cross	4 40	10 15	10 35
Grand Rapids Ar	4 55	10 30	10 50
Grand Rapids Lv	7 15	5 15	11 45
Plainwell	8 36	6 43	1 12
Kalamazoo Ar	9 05	7 10	1 40
Kalamazoo Lv	9 10	7 30	2 00
Sturgis	10 27	8 59	3 28
Ft Wayne Ar	12 40	11 20	6 00
Ft Wayne Lv	1 20	11 45
Richmond	4 30	3 35
Cincinnati Ar	7 30	7 25

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No 3	No 5	No 7
Cincinnati, leave	7 35 a m	7 20 p m
Richmond	10 20	10 00
Fort Wayne Ar	1 20	1 15
Fort Wayne Lv	2 10	3 00
Sturgis	4 24	5 25
Kalamazoo Ar	5 45	6 55
Kalamazoo Lv	[illegible]	7 20
Plainwell	6 16	7 48
Grand Rapids Ar	7 40	9 20
Grand Rapids Lv	11 30	4 55
D., G. H., & M. cross	11 40	5 10
Howard City	12 52	6 18
Stanwood	1 2[illegible]	6 18
Big Rapids	1 41	7 09
Reed City Ar	2 15	7 40
Reed City Lv	2 35	8 00
Le Roy	3 08	8 33
Cadillac Ar	3 45	9 10
Cadillac Lv	3 55	9 30
Walton Junc	4 45	10 25
Mancelona	6 16	11 50
Boyne Falls	7 13	12 52
Petoskey	7 10	1 30
Mackinaw City	9 50	2 05

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

A NEW ZEALAND QUAKE.

An Eye-Witness Tells of His Experiences with Lava and Scalding Mud.

Wonderland is the name given to the North Island of New Zealand by European tourists. Everybody recalls the great earthquake and volcanic outbursts that convulsed the country last June. A spectator, who has just returned from Tauranga, gives the following account of his experiences:

"At 2 o'clock in the morning of June 10 a heavy shock of earthquake occurred, and was shortly afterwards followed by a great glare and illumination over the southern sky. Smaller shocks followed in quick succession, till at 4:30 the great shock occurred, and very shortly afterwards showers of volcanic dust were swept along by a brisk southerly wind. The showers of dust got denser and denser, till at 9 o'clock it was perfectly dark, and lights had to be lit. For over an hour total darkness reigned, and the shower of dust fell in great sheets, almost blinding men who were out. The showers continued all day, and the whole face of the country was covered with dust over an inch thick. Shocks of earthquake occurred at intervals all the day.

"The Tarawera Mountain and its twin cone, Ruawahia, suddenly burst into activity. Seen from this place the spectacle was fearful, and it reminded one of Bulwer's descriptions of 'The Last Days of Pompeii' and of Martin's celebrated picture of 'The Last Day.' From 2 o'clock until about 5 immense volumes of flame were projecting to a great height, and dense clouds of smoke, steam, mud and ashes covered the sky and thunder and lightning were almost incessant. Flashes of lightning played through the pall of smoke in all directions. The effect of the corruscation was simply indescribable. Shortly before 6 o'clock showers of ashes reached here, but, fortunately, the wind shifted around to the southwest and blew for a time with almost hurricane force, turning the dense cloud before much damage was done. When the grit began falling many persons who passed the night with fear and trembling thought they were about to be overwhelmed and then began a stampede.

"Half-dressed women and children were to be seen flying for their lives along the Tauranga road towards Te Awahou to seek shelter in the native school-house there. Some did not think themselves safe even there and continued their flight. The lake rose considerably and a great many new springs burst up, which added to the people's fear of being engulfed. Shortly after daylight Mr. Edwin Robertson started out towards Wairoa to endeavor to ascertain the position of matters there, and was followed by Mr. Marchernan. When near Tikitapuhush they met a number of fugitives who gave accounts of balls of fire which had been flying about in all directions.

"The scene in among the hills on the Wairoa road was weird. The grit was still falling in light showers, and dense clouds obscured the sky. Vivid flashes of lightning and crashing peals of thunder were frequent. A strong southeast wind was then blowing and it was terribly cold. On arrival at the Tikitapu bush it was found necessary to fasten up the horses and leave the buggy, and the remainder of the journey had to be performed on foot. The whole country was covered several feet with clay mud, which made walking very heavy. Natives were met from time to time, and all gave the same account of the terrible catastrophe. All the vegetation along the route after passing the summit, between Rotorua and Tikitapu, was found to be completely destroyed and the aspect of the landscape changed. It resembled very much the appearance of an English landscape after a heavy snowstorm, but was of a dull gray color instead of being white. The beautiful Tikitapu bush was a thing of the past. The weight of the superincumbent mud and the force of wind have stripped off the leaves, broken off the branches and uprooted immense trees in all directions. The Blue Lake and Rotokakahi are simply mud water, which will take some time to clear. The outlet of the latter lake has been blocked up and the bridges are covered with clay mud nearly up to the top rail.

"On arriving at the village the full extent of the damage done was plainly visible. Nearly every building had been crushed in by the falling mud. The Snow Temperance Hall was completely flattened, and of the Terrace and Rotomahana hotels only the outer walls are standing in a terribly wrecked state.

"The party was glad to learn that a Mrs. Haszard had been dug out alive and comparatively uninjured. She had a miraculous escape. The falling beams lodged on a chiffonier and allowed just sufficient room to save her from being crushed to death. Two of the children were found dead beside her, her arm being around one of them.

"When the eruption was first seen it was like a small cloud on the mountain, shot with flashes of lightning of great brilliancy. Everybody went up to the old mission station and saw a sight that none can ever forget. Apparently the mount had three craters, and flames of fire were shooting up fully a thousand feet high. There seemed to be a continuous shower of balls of fire for miles around. As a storm appeared to be coming on we returned to the hotel, and shortly after what seemed to be heavy hailstones came pouring on the roof. This was succeeded by a fall of heavy stones, fire balls, and mud, the lava falling after the manner of rain. The weight of these substances upon the roof soon began to tell upon it. The first portion to give away was a detached kitchen and pantry, and then all collected together in the smoking-room. But soon the entire house came down and we had to run for it.

The wild man is coming to the front this fall. A Maine newspaper of repute says that one ten feet high was recently killed 100 miles north of Moosehead Lake. He had previously killed one of three hunters, and the other two got reenforcements and slew the giant, who was covered with long, brown hair. There also comes from Topeka, Kan., an account of the capture of a wild family, consisting of a man and woman and two children. They also had much hair on their faces and bodies, and the account says that on the top of the heads of the man and woman were evidences that they had been scalped. The theory advanced is that they were captured and scalped by Indians, and then escaped and became insane.

During some survey operations recently carried on in Bhopal and Malwa, in India, the natives imagined that the survey included a redistribution of husbands and wives. The couples were to be weighed, so declared report, and then married off anew in more suitable fashion as to age, size, etc. Surveying on the Assam frontier was not oversafe.

KATE CHASE SPRAGUE.

The Misery of a Brilliant, Beautiful Woman.

Kate Chase Sprague has been here attending the ceremony of removing her father's remains to Ohio. She looks very well and shows little signs of age or trouble. She was dressed in black, and it was a common remark that she had lost but little of the beauty for which she is so famous. She has much of the features of her father, and it has been often said that her ability is such that had she been a man she would have shone as he did. The greatest mistake of her life was in the marrying of Gov. Sprague of Rhode Island. It was not long after the marriage that she discovered this. Sprague's temper was entirely incompatible with hers. His rude actions cut into her finer feelings. I remember an instance which was told at the time of her divorce. It happened early in the sixties, and he annoyed her both at home and in society. It was at a dinner given by President Lincoln in honor of Chief-Justice Chase, shortly after his appointment as head of the Supreme Court. Chase sat at Mrs. Lincoln's right hand, and Kate Chase Sprague was seated on the other side of the table, just opposite. Senator Sprague escorted a distinguished lady to the dining-room, and his seat was a little bit further down the table. Shortly after the dinner began it was seen that Sprague had been drinking. He had taken a cocktail or so before coming to the White House, and the mixing of the whisky with the wine he found there reduced him in a short time to an intoxicated condition. Before the fish had been passed his tongue grew thick in his mouth, and at the serving of the first entree it was seen that he had sunk back into his chair and was breathing heavily in a drunken sleep. At this moment Mrs. Sprague saw him. She became pale, but did not lose her head. She went on with her conversation as gayly as though her husband was the brightest man at the dinner-table. But a moment later she caught her father's eye and by a glance called his attention to the situation. Chief-Justice Chase said in a low tone to Mrs. Lincoln: "I see that Senator Sprague is ill. Will you kindly have the butler assist him into the cloak-room?" Mrs. Lincoln whispered to a waiter, and the drunken Senator was quietly removed. He slept upon the sofa during the whole of the evening, and was taken home in his carriage still in a drunken stupor. This event is one that happened in public. A man who will so forget himself at a White House dinner must have been a perfect boor at home, and there is little doubt that Kate Chase Sprague was more sinned against than sinning.—Washington Letter.

The American Abroad.

These antiquity stores have made many fine old paintings, and they do a great business with Americans. The Dutch merchant who presided over the one above spoken of told me he had just sold about 8,000 guilders, or over $3,000, worth of goods to Robert Garrett, and that he made sales to Americans daily. He had great faith in American honesty, too, and when I admired a piece of this same old Flemish lace and regretted that I had not the time to get money from the bank before leaving to purchase it, he doubled it up and told me to take it along and send him the price at my leisure. "You can remit me," said he, "from Antwerp before you sail if you have time, or, if more convenient, take it with you and send me the money when you get home to America." But I said: "You don't know me. I am a stranger here, and I leave Amsterdam this afternoon. Saturday I sail for New York. You have no security for your money." "Give me your visiting card and your address and that is all I care for. I have often trusted Americans, and I am never deceived." An American merchant who did business in this way would be liable imprisonment for lunacy.—Cleveland Leader.

The "Hen Minister."

At an island on the coast of Maine, which is much resorted to, there is an esteemed local clergyman who is known to the summer residents, nearly all of whom are Bostonians, as the "hen minister." This is by reason of his telling, in season and out of season, a certain story which queerly illustrates the idea of faith.

"I preached a sermon one Sunday," the good minister will say, "on the doctrine of faith, in which I taught my hearers the good Christian doctrine that all things may be brought about by faith, instructing them that faith is the evidence of things not seen, the substance of things hoped for. There was a farmer's wife in the congregation who was greatly edified by the sermon, and came to me and told me that she now understood just what faith was.

"Next Sunday morning I overtook her on her way to church.

"'See here, parson,' says she, 'I don't think much of your teachin' about faith.'

"'Why not?' I asked.

"'Why,' says she, 'the other day I heard my speckled hen a-cacklin' like all to pay. 'Now,' says I, 'here is a chance to show what faith is. That speckled hen's egg is the evidence of things not seen; the substance of things hoped for. I have faith she's laid an egg, and I'm sure that when I go out to the shed I'll find it.' Lo I goes out and looks for it, and there wasn't any egg there, and that speckled hen hadn't laid any. Now, what's your faith good for, I'd like to know?'

"And then," the minister will say, "I told her what was the matter with her faith. 'It was meant as a rebuke to you that you didn't find any egg there,' I said. 'You'd ought to have trusted in God, and not in the hen!'"—Boston Record.

Australia's Rabbit Plague.

The farmers of Australia seem to be still troubled by rabbits, which breed in that country at a most enormous rate. One man has just accepted a tender for wire netting which is to make a rabbit-proof fence from Narromine to Bourke, and will extend over a distance of 203 miles. If the unfortunate rabbits search along to find the end of the obstruction they will be a bit weary before they have arrived at their destination. It is said that the work will cost £15,000, and at that rate, if a man could offer such a figure, it proves that the rabbit must be the most destructive animal in the antipodes.—Galignani's Messenger.

Mrs. Mark Hopkins, widow of one of the four original founders of the Pacific railroad, is the richest woman in California. Her fortune is estimated at $40,000,000. She divides her time between San Francisco and Great Barrington, Mass.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head, everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial Bottles of this Great Discovery for Consumption free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

Very Remarkable Recovery.

Mr. Geo. V. Willing, of Manchester, Mich., writes: "My wife has been almost helpless for five years, so helpless that she could not turn over in bed alone. She used two Bottles of Electric Bitters, and is so much improved that she is able now to do her own work."

Electric Bitters will do all that is claimed for them. Hundreds of testimonials attest their great curative powers. Only fifty cents a bottle at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES, the grandest and simplest known remedy for all Female Trouble to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable Lady Agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For medicine and particulars, Address
PAN-ZAMA MED. CO.,
Frankfort, Ind.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP.
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Burdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Inglestde Building.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

THE AMERICAN
MAGAZINE
BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.
This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.
PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.
Sample Copy of current number mailed upon receipt of 25 cts.; back numbers, 15 cts.
Premium List with either.
Address:
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth-bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. This is the book over which your grandmothers laughed till they cried, and it is just as funny to-day as it ever was.
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils," etc.
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott, none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 87 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke," etc.
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe, describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila.; illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $3.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

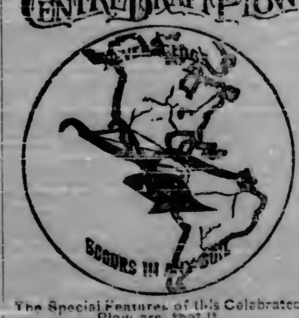
GRENADES.
Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
PRICES.
Pints, - Per Doz., $12.00
Quarts, " " 15.00
"STAR"
Tubular Fire Extinguisher.
Glass Tube, 10x2¼ in. Holds 1 quart.
In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant in ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No rust; no corrosion possible.
Plain, $12.00 per doz.
Ornamt'd, 15.00 per doz.
The "Star" EXTINGUISHER
Holds 5 gallons, and will force a stream through 6 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone.
Price, $60.00 Each.
"STAR" CHEMICAL.
Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt. 450 lbs.
PRICE.
$200.00 EACH.
Four years of practical use have demonstrated these to be the only reliable and thoroughly efficient Hand Fire appliances made. We use the same chemical liquid in all, and guarantee fully.
Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials.
The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

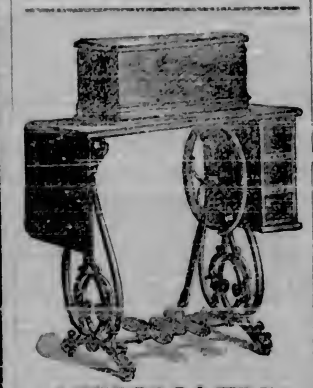


The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but—by means of a steel frame—is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, making a steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy.
If your Agent has none write us for price.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

Good PAINT
An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the
SHERWIN-WILLIAMS
COLORED LEADS
Also
St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.



AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinsy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
Dansville, Mich., Aug. 15, 1871.—I was attacked with a severe cold and threatened with lung fever while on a visit to Hudson, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment to preach on account of my severe coughing, but managed to get home and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup I had in the house, and my cough left me as soon as I commenced taking it, and I find permanent relief when I am attacked by cough or lung complaint.
REV. ROBT. COPE.
Howell, Mich., Oct. 20, 1870.—I have tried Dr. E. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year, as I had occasion, as a remedy for colds and Coughs, and found it a reliable medicine. I have used his Ague and Liver Syrup in my family with the best of success, curing my mother (whose age was over seventy years) of one of the hardest attacks of Fever and Ague after the second chill and fever. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who need them.
REV. S. B. KIMMELL.
Sold by all druggists. Price 25c., 50c., and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.
W. JOHNSTON & CO.,
DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security.
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dressed or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only.
Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $3.00 will receive a present of her choice of any untrimmed felt hat in the store.
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

GELLICK & INGALLS
Dealers in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep constantly on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge Sts 1st door south of Sentinel

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, APRIL 27, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Common Council.

At the council meeting Thursday evening the saloon bond question was taken from the table. The bonds were fixed at $6,000, by a vote of five to one.

Will See was elected Village Marshal and Harbor Master.

The fire department having recommended O. S. Washburn for its Chief, Mr. Washburn was duly appointed.

Messrs. A. J. Mudge, Nelson Ainslie and H. S. Harsha were appointed Fire Wardens.

The bond of F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, with E. H. Green and Henry Bennett as sureties, was approved.

The Treasurer's report showing an empty treasury, the Clerk was instructed to borrow $100 from the bank with which to pay outstanding orders.

The balance of the Marshal's salary, and the expense of arresting and boarding two drunks, in all amounting to $44, was audited.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Do not forget that your pastor looks for you on Sabbath morning at the usual services.

The Superintendent desires the presence of scholars and teachers at the S. S. session which follows morning preaching.

Elsewhere.

Preaching at Black's school house Sunday at 3 p. m.

Norwood Notes.

The ice has all left the bay.

The first vessel made her appearance on Thursday last.

They have a little boy at Charles Smith's.

Adelton Stafford who has been in Iowa for the past year returned last week.

The sugar social of last week netted the ladies ten dollars.

A barge with vessels in tow passed down on Sunday, so the straits must be open.

At the meeting of the town board on Saturday last, Robert Trimble was appointed township treasurer to fill vacancy of James O'Brian; Thad Lewis was appointed health office, Edwin Cook and Alfred Vandusen, board of review.

Northern Michigan.

William Elliott, deputy game and fish warden of Cheboygan county, has received instructions from Warden Smith, and is ready to go on the war path against violators of the game laws.

Collector Watson has opened all the sub-ports in this district. The district extends as far north as Mackinac and south to St. Joseph. One new port has been opened in the district, that of Portage Lake, or Onekema, between Manistee and Frankfort.

Passengers report the railroad track between Traverse City and Walton in very bad condition. Newspaper men are not supposed to know from personal experience, much about the condition of railroads these days. Members of the Legislature are better posted.—Traverse Bay Eagle.

Since the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Cadillac road has become a certainty, some of our people express alarm that it may be only a branch from a through line that will be adopted north-east of us. Such fears we believe are groundless. Cadillac will be on the main road, and will also be the western terminus for some time to come.—Cadillac Express.

Cheboygan Tribune: Last Sunday a letter was received at the postoffice from New Orleans addressed to Mrs. Mary R. Newberry. On the outside of the envelope were the words: "in haste" and "personal." In the envelope was a notice that a ticket purchased by Mrs. Newberry had drawn one-tenth of the capital prize of $150,000 in the Louisiana Lottery. Mrs. Newberry resides in one of R. Patterson's houses, on Water street, and keeps a boarding house. The investment in the ticket was made without her husband's knowledge, he having objected to former ventures in the lottery. To say that Mrs. Newberry rejoices over her good fortune, expresses it mildly, but she has not as yet dispensed with any of her boarders on account of her good luck.

Petoskey Record: When we struck this county four years ago, Sam Thatcher was living out in Springvale, and used to haul his farm truck into Petoskey for sale. We distinctly remember his working off a very ancient hen on us one day that first summer. Thinking that it would be a very good thing to have a correspondent in Springvale, we arranged with Sam to write us letters from his neighborhood, and supplied him with half a dollars' worth of stamped envelopes. We think we did get one letter from him, but we wouldn't swear to it at this late day. Then he went into politics—got elected County Clerk—moved the county seat to East Jordan—then moved the county seat to Boyne City—built a fine court house and settled down. To our amazement, we received from him the other day those stamped envelopes. At first it struck us as a case of conscience; but against that theory stood the fact that he had been in Charlevoix county politics for three years. Then we looked at the envelopes again. Behold printed across them in big bold type was the direction—"The Petoskey Record, Petoskey, Mich." That settled it.

Alexander Mitchell, the Milwaukee millionaire, died in New York one day last week.

Philadelphia Times: If Herr Most lived in Russia he would have danced a jig on the empty air or personally inspected the Siberian mines long ago. In some respects Russia is a great country.

THE SOLDIER DEAD.

Improvement of the Cemetery Grounds of Baxter Post, G. A. R.

The past week improvements have been going on at the G. A. R. cemetery grounds, adjoining the Township cemetery. The grounds are 282x116 in dimensions, and are beautifully laid out. Grant Avenue passes thro' the center, divided midway by Lincoln circle, designed for a monument site, while on the west, east, south and north, the grounds are bounded by Logan, Hancock, Farragut and Garfield Avenues, respectively. There are 108 lots in the cemetery.

On Monday "the boys" of Baxter Post did a grand thing in the planting of memorial trees—mostly for the dead, but a few in honor of living comrades. Following is a list of the trees, those who placed them, the command to which they belonged, and the soldier to whom dedicated:

1. By Surgeon David C. Chamberlain, 105th N. Y. Inf.; to General John A. Dix.
2. By Lorenzo D. Porter, U. S. Navy; to Charles Warren Bishop.
3. By Byron See, 35th N. Y. Infantry and 20th N. Y. Cav; to Gen. James S. Wadsworth.
4. By Caleb T. Boucher, 14th Mich. Inf.; General Jas. D. Morgan.
5. By M. J. Stockman, 5th Independent Ohio Sharpshooters; to Luke Abel and Gen. George H. Thomas.
6. By Leroy Hamlin, 18th N. Y. Cav.; Francis M. Cole.
7. By Wm. C. Lennox, 9th Illinois Cavalry; to Gen. Edward Hatch and
8. To Aldin E. Soule.
9. By David M. Colby, 1st N. Y. Artillery; to Capt. J. W. Woodbury.
10. Henry Cunningham, 97 N. Y. Infantry; to Colonel Wheleck.
11. Henry P. Miller, 75th Indiana, to Captain Isaac McMillan.
12. William Kanagy, 47th Ills; to Charles Jones.
13. E. B. Hodge, 14th N. Y. heavy artillery; to Col. E. G. Marshall.
14. John Litzau, 1st Illinois Light Artillery; to Jacob Brown.
15. Leonard Whitmoyer, 1st Mich. Infantry; to Capt. Wm. H. Frye.
16. Daniel J. Bigelow, 6th Ohio Cavalry; to Geo. Orr Bigelow.
17. Leonard Whitmoyer, 1st Mich. Infantry; to Augustus F. Dreyer.
18. Daniel Himebaugh, 29th Mich. Infantry; to Henry Ingalls.
19. Harrison Berdan, 5th Michigan Cavalry; to Gen. Geo. A. Custer.
20. Thomas Boak, 92d N. Y. Inf.; to Lemuel W. Skinner.
21. Josiah Gibson, 16th N. Y. Artillery; to Surgeon David C. Chamberlain.
22. E. H. Green, 107th Penn. Inf.; to Gen. John F. Reynolds.
23. S. M. See, 10th N. Y. Artillery; Col. Piper.
24. Thomas Kelley, 21st Pa. Cav.; to William Kelley.
25. Andrew Holmes, 1st Michigan Artillery; Gen. John A. Logan.
26. George O. Scott, 8th Michigan Cavalry; to James A. Strong.
27. David C. Nettleton, 2d Colorado Cavalry; Maj. J. Nelson Smith.
28. Samuel W. Salter, 13th N. Y. Infantry; to Geo. B. McClellan.
29. John A. Carlstein, 13th N. Y. Cav.; Gen. P. H. Sheridan.
30. Albert Brown 15th Iowa Inf.; to Gen. Belknap.
31. Samuel Cokely, 16th U. S. Infantry; Samuel Robinson.
32. Charles B. Glass, 20th N. Y. Cavalry; Gen. U. S. Grant.
33. Nelson Ainslie, 14th Infantry; to Major M. W. Quackenbush.
34. M. J. Bartlett; 10th Michigan Infantry; to Col. C. M. Lumm.
35. Henry Moore; 46th Illinois Infantry; Capt. Edward W. Pike.
36. James Awan-geshik, 1st Michigan Sharpshooters; to Col. C. V. DeLand.
37. Egbert Carpenter, 10th N. Y. Artillery; to Lieut. W. A. Horr.
38. Robert Miller, 106th N. Y.; to Major Edward H. Green.
39. W. H. McCartney, 22d N. Y. Infantry; to Morris J. Stockman.

At the last regular meeting of Baxter Post, they voted to observe Memorial day in a becoming manner. Committees were appointed to make the arrangements. The programme will appear in due time. Let every one, both citizens and soldiers, make up their minds to do their full share on that occasion.

Boston Herald: Two of the Northern States that voted for President Cleveland—Indiana and New Jersey—are in a bad way for the Democratic party.

Detroit Tribune: The opposition press errs in saying that Mr. Blaine would have vetoed the Crosby high license bill in New York if Gov. Hill hadn't. There was no truth in the report.

David Preston died suddenly Sunday morning at his residence on Bagg street, Detroit, aged 60 years. On Saturday afternoon he left the Preston bank about 4 o'clock, made some calls, and reached home in time for dinner. The evening he spent with his wife and all his unmarried children around him, reading aloud selections of prose and poetry. This was the most frequent and favored entertainment of the household circle. About 10 o'clock 'good night' was said, and the family separated and went to their rooms. Mr. Preston rested quietly until about 4 o'clock. Then he awoke suddenly and complained of a pain in his side. It did not seem serious. Mrs. Preston thought it was indigestion. So no doctor was called nor was the family disturbed. But a servant made a fire in the sitting room, and Mr. Preston took a cordial and went to sit before the fire. Afterwards his feet were bathed. Then he felt better and retired to bed. For half an hour he seemed restless and was up several times. After a little his arms became numb and he spoke of it. Mrs. Preston became alarmed. She awoke the family and telephoned to Dr. F. X. Spranger and another doctor who lived near. Before their arrival Mr. Preston had died painlessly and peacefully. "Functional affection of the heart," the doctors called it, "superinduced by the chronic complaint of which he was the victim." They did not add: "And aggravated by the intense worry and toil of the prohibition campaign."

Ironton.

Preaching at the M. E. church next Sabbath morning after the Sunday School session. All are cordially invited to be present.

Every one was out on Saturday morning to see the tug Martin go by on her way to East Jordan for the first time.

Eddie Jackson and Will Garland returned to St. Ignace last week. Dan McDonald left also for the place on Thursday.

Godfrey McDonald has moved off the Carter farm into the house on Dan's place. He will work that place and his own too this summer.

Bids for running the ferry will be received at Pervis' store until next Saturday at 10 a. m. Ferry to commence running May 2.

Through the kindness of Dr. Hill the Physiology class in the schools have the human bones to assist them in their study.

Viall, the photo man, says he will be here in his car from Thursday next until Monday.

Mrs. Wolcott returned from her western trip on Wednesday last.

Johnnie Race treated about 40 of the young people to warm sugar last Monday night in his sugar bush. He reports a good run of sap.

Miss Anna Morehouse has been very sick for a few days, but is better at present.

John F. Campbell of Grand Rapids, is now the book-keeper in the Company's office in the place of Mr. Cozzens.

Miss Pearl Lennox has been very sick for the past two weeks, but is now convalescing.

THE IRON CO'S IMPROVEMENTS.

The stack in the furnace was filled on Tuesday and the first cast made on Friday morning. She has been thoroughly overhauled and repaired during the past winter for the first time since she was built. Among the principal improvements are the following: The boilers have been concentrated at the west end of the works, re-set and all connected with pipes so that all the steam is available, if necessary. A new hearth and a new lining have been put in the stack and the bosh enlarged to 11 feet; a new gas flue has been added and the chimneys and smoke stack moved. All the machinery has been thoroughly overhauled and put in excellent order. Mr. Cherrie has had personal supervision of the repairs assisted by Mr. Jackson, machinist, of Florence Wis. It is expected that she will be making her full quota of tons in about a week from starting. John Scanlon who blowed her last year is still foundryman. His "keepers" are John Garland and Peter Knendson. Several thousand cords of wood are in the yard besides what is on the beach of the lake to be hauled in by the tug Bob Stevensen, which has been repaired at Charlevoix. Everything is in readiness for a prosperous run.

Banks.

Correspondence Bellaire Breeze:

Lewis Wray has bought the Jay Heater place on the state road and will build on it this summer.

George and Felix Coon have taken the job of putting the logs into the mill at Norwood this summer, and have gone there to work.

Atwood has a band at last. Their instruments will be here this week when Prof. Brown of Mancelona, who is teaching the Eastport band, will come and give the boys instruction.

Dwight Arnold has engaged to work for Wm. Knight the coming summer, Wm. Sweet for John Moore, Mr. VanDerberg for Tice Struik, Allen Sweet for John Smallegan, and Egbert Van de Street for Gwen Wood.

G. T. Bently is preparing to build a new house on his farm. Hiram Rogers and David Blissett expect to build new barns this summer. Joseph Laclair and Wm. Pankett are building additions to their barns. Simeon Blow will build a new house on his farm on the State road.

The following teachers have been employed in this township for the summer: Mrs. Bertha Byers at Atwood, Miss Minnie McEwan at Antrim, Miss Helen Hadcock in the Ingalls district, Mrs. Frankie Smith in the Empey district, and Miss Altha Wilkinson in the See district.

Governor Luce, Saturday morning settled the contest for the position of adjutant general by appointing D. B. Ainger of Charlotte, to that office. Col Ainger has been a dark horse in the race, but several very warm recommendations have been received in his favor. He is a native of Ohio and 43 year of age. He served four years in the war under Gen. Hayes and in 1878 was by Hayes appointed postmaster at Washington, D. C., but removed by President Arthur in 1882. He was for six years department commander of the G. A. R. post at Napoleon, Ohio, and was aide on Governor Alger's staff. He is at present editor of the Charlotte Republican and president of the Michigan Press association. The appointment is warmly commended and gives general satisfaction.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

To RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Havings from Hayes.

Henry Flickinger came up from Elkhart, Ind., last Wednesday and will remain with us through the summer.

A. R. Struthers will soon have his saw mill running. He contemplates putting in shingle machinery at an early date.

E. H. Burgess will put a shingle mill in operation at his place as quick as navigation opens up, for the purpose of manufacturing cedar shingles.

The Isle Aux Galets light shone forth last Saturday night for the first.

Loren Hamlin is improving the front of his premises with a half mile of board fence.

O. T. Booth commenced wiring in his farm last Monday.

Charley Tonsch moved into J. E. Chew's house last Thursday.

The plows have commenced running and the man who keeps a plow between him and his oxen for a few weeks now will be happy next fall.

Isaac Stauffer has been attending U. S. court at Grand Rapids as a juror the past six weeks. He will return again in May.

[The above items came too late for publication last week.—ED.]

Wild flowers are in bloom. We gathered a bonquet of May flowers last Thursday and dodged around a snow bank at the same time.

G. W. Ford was sowing wheat Thursday and G. O. Scott sowed oats the same day.

J. E. Chew on April 20 dug the crop of potatoes on the farm he lately bought, and they came out of the ground in as good condition as though dug in the fall.

There will be a basket social at G. O. Scott's residence on Friday evening for the benefit of the pastor of Burgess charge. Everybody cordially invited.

A Washington dispatch says: One of the oldest democratic congressmen from Illinois, who had much to do with creating the commerce law, and who for that reason says he does not want to be quoted, gave it as his opinion today that this law will be repealed at the next session of congress. He says that there will be twice as many petitions from the people by December praying for its repeal as were received in its favor in years past. He thinks it too complicated, and that its gives too much authority to the commission and too little benefit to shippers and travelers.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Highway Commissioner of the township of Charlevoix for the protection of the Iron Bridge across Pine river (consisting of driving of piles and furnishing material), until 2 o'clock p. m. of Monday, May 2d, 1887. Plans and specifications may be seen at the township clerk's office in the village of Charlevoix.
Dated April 21, 1887.
ROSWELL MUDGE.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE.
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

WHERE SHALL I BUY MY CARPET, AND WHAT SHALL I WEAR?

THESE ARE THE QUESTIONS AT THIS TIME OF THE YEAR AMONG THE LADIES.

Not hard ones to answer, if you will step in and see the mammoth stock of fresh Spring Goods at A. T. Washburne & Co's. There is a wide range in fabrics this spring. We have the most approved patterns and colorings from the simplest wash goods, to the finest imported wool fabrics.

Our line of CORSETS is unsurpassed anywhere in the state, and we carry all the leading makes which our lady clerks will be glad to show you. Come in for we carry no dead stock. Everything fresh and at prices within your reach.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE

The work of repairing our store building will begin next week, and our

Closing Out Sale,

will continue only until that time

Great Bargains in Everything,

J. L. HURD & CO.

We have a large quantity of seasonable dress goods, worsteds, table linens, napkins, damasks, piques, towels, curtain nets, shades, gloves, hosiery, tickings, denims, jeans, cottonades, sheetings, shirtings, etc. Space will not admit of quoted prices but it is sufficient to say they are low enough. Now is the time to lay in a stock of Groceries.

Clover and Timothy seed at lowest prices.

J. L. HURD & CO.

WE MEAN TO SELL OUT!

WE MUST SELL OUT!

Rosenthal & Sons

Mammoth Stock of Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods will have to be disposed of by August First.

Purchasers can doubtless see that to this end we will make great reductions on all goods and we have decided for our customers' benefit, to sell,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

As this large stock cannot be easily transported.

Therefore it will be also for our benefit to make sacrifices.

Now is your Time to Buy!

AND DON'T FORGET IT!

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF, THAT WE MEAN WHAT WE SAY, BUSINESS!

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—1 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1887. WHOLE NO. 910

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,

F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT

TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

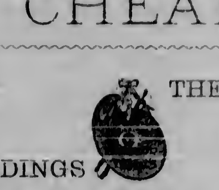
Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS



THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

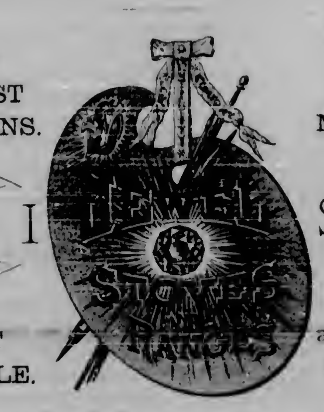
UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works

Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS. S & I THE MOST DURABLE.



THE OLDEST Manufactur's S & I Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,

AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Wait A Minute!

WHY NOT TRADE AT

WILL SEE & CO'S

Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.

A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.

Pine Lake Iron Co.

IRONTON, MICH.

GENERAL MERCHANDISE.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Nicholls' saw mill is in operation.

—Rev. D. H. Pierce was in town over Sunday.

—W. L. French of Kenosha, Wis., arrived yesterday.

—Rip Van Winkle at the Opera House to-morrow night.

—Hon. A. Battars returned from Lansing to remain Saturday.

—Cuyler Jermaine, an old resident of Traverse City, died last week.

—Admission 10, 20 and 30 cents to the Keane dramatic entertainments.

—Street Commissioner Boak is doing good work in cleaning the streets.

—Louie Campbell and Lon Smith of Petoskey, were in town over Sunday.

—Wm. Miller, of Marion, arrived back from Bald Knob, Arkansas, on Saturday.

—Bad sidewalks are very properly receiving the attention of the Street Commissioner.

Jos. Steimel, of the livery firm of Litney & Steimel, arrived from Sutton's Bay on Thursday.

—Harold F. Sayles, the evangelist, goes from here to Memphis, Mich., and from there to Menominee.

—Jas. Beauvais returned from Grand Haven last week, where he has been visiting his son and daughter.

—Will See & Co., in their new ad., ask you to wait a minute and think where you should buy your groceries.

—J. S. Smithson and family arrived Wednesday, and are domiciled in their elegant cottage for the summer.

—The congregation at the Sayles meeting on Sunday evening, was the largest crowd which ever assembled in Opera Hall.

—The handsome display of carpets and dress goods in the show windows of A. T. Washburn & Co. attracts many compliments.

—The Council held meetings on Thursday and Friday evenings. The only business done was the approval of the saloon bonds of James A. Gellick and Charles Chaloupka.

—Village Marshal See locked up four drunken Indians Saturday night, and emptied seven bottles of whiskey on the ground. Monday Justice McLeod fined them each $1 and costs.

—Kalamazoo Telegraph: The Charlevoix Sentinel cuts and pastes its edition now. The Sentinel always manages to cut off a good sized chunk of the best there is in the world.

—Ed F. Parmelee has been appointed observer for Charlevoix county for the State weather service. Thermometric reports, giving the temperature at 7 a. m., 2 and 9 p. m. daily, are sent monthly to the headquarters at Lansing.

—The Joseph H. Keane Dramatic Company appear at the Charlevoix opera house, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of this week in the following: Thursday evening, Rip Van Winkle; Friday evening, Mrs. Partington; Saturday evening, The Major and Solon Shingle.

—Civil Engineer Beardslee and Surveyor Jos. R. Dixon, with a corps of helpers, started out from Charlevoix Monday morning to survey the route of the proposed D. C. & E. R. R. They made their start from the Charlevoix Summer Resort grounds, and reached John Newman's place, in Marion, the first day.

—The last of the whitefish fry in the Detroit hatchery, about 3,500,000, was shipped recently to Bay City. The work has been in charge of A. W. Marks, overseer of the Petoskey hatchery. Mr. Marks, and others in the employ of the commission, now go to Paris, Mich., to engage in the construction of additional ponds for next season's product.

—All the railroads will give reduced passenger rates to the Northern Michigan Resorts this year. We are authorized by the railway officials to say that excursion tickets to the public at two cents a mile will be placed on sale early in the summer, good to return late in the fall. Also that for several days before and after the Bay View assembly opens, long time, half fare tickets will be sold to anybody.

—Under the new order of things in railroad matters, many large concert and dramatic companies have been obliged to disband. The McGibeney Family, now in the West, will divide at the close of this season. Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGibeney will organize a concert company at the opening of the fall season. Miss Florence Smith, eldest daughter of the senior editor of this paper, has accepted a proposition to travel with them through the West, under the tutorship of her cousin, Mrs. McG. and her husband, in piano, cornet and vocal work. The first tour will be through California, Oregon and British Columbia, and will begin about Sept. 1st.

—Sheriff Jerome was in town yesterday.

—S. M. Moore of Chicago is expected to-day.

—Mrs. Gill White, of Boyne City, died last week.

—H. O. Rose of Petoskey, was in town yesterday.

—A hose tower will be erected at the engine house.

—Wm. Boyle, of Beaver Island, was in town Monday.

—Charlie See enters the employ of Will See & Co. as clerk.

—H. Lee Iddings leaves for a visit among Albion relatives, to-day.

—O. W. Smith's band pagoda is completed, and is a thing of beauty.

—The iron cresting on Amos Fox's new residence is a great improvement.

—W. L. French and C. W. Sutton, of East Jordan, were in town yesterday.

Dr. Carlstein brought in a fine mess of trout from McGeagh's creek on Monday.

Dr. and Mrs. Sweetland have arrived back from Chicago and opened the Sanitarium.

—Frank W. Craine left yesterday for Cadillac, where he intends to permanently reside.

—A. T. Washburn & Co., in their new advertisement, call attention to their spring goods.

—Miss May Todd, of Cheboygan, is here on a two weeks' visit to her sister, Miss Emma.

—Nelson N. White has been appointed Lodge Deputy of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 927, I. O. G. T.

—Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar, of Petoskey, expect to go to Sault Ste. Marie again this summer.

—Thos. F. Nelson, late of the Enterprise, was in town Saturday, on his way to Kenosha, his future home.

Jos. H. Keane's Mrs. Partington Dramatic Co. appear at Opera Hall on May 5th, 6th and 7th. The combination is well spoken of.

—The new Marshal seems to be "getting there with both feet." We know from personal experience that Billy is a bad man to fool with.

—The Shipman engine for the steam launch of Gus and Gard Brown is expected to-day, and the "Beulah B." will soon be flitting about the harbor.

—W. P. Brown and wife returned from their three months visit in New York state and Southern Michigan Friday. Mr. Brown's health is much improved.

—The Telegram-Herald congratulates the village of East Jordan on its wisdom in selecting Will N. Moore as Village Attorney. Charlevoix has no Village Attorney, and don't need any.

—In preparation for the work in which he is so successfully engaged, Harold F. Sayles spent one year in foreign travel, much of that time in the Holy Land. Is it strange that he speaks as by inspiration?

—Boyne Falls Gazette: J. Pilbean and J. H. Graves, of Nashville, passed through here Friday on their way to Thumb Lake, where they will camp for a week or two. Their object is to procure specimens of birds, animals, etc., for a museum.

—The SENTINEL celebrates its eighteenth birthday to-day, beginning with this issue Vol. XIX. During the past eighteen long years, what the SENTINEL has done for this region is a matter of history. What it is doing to-day our readers well know. We are making extra efforts to increase our circulation to 1,500 before fall. If you take the SENTINEL, and like it, won't you get your neighbor to subscribe.

—Boyne Citizen: The editor of the Petoskey Record says the editor of this paper hangs his feet over the dock and fishes for trout. Not much. The editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel is game warden, and professional esprit de corps prevents us. With the Sentinel's permission we'll invite the Record to participate in such a frolic next week, at which time, the "season" rolls around. Our trout are the finest kind of brain food. See Carpenter's Physiology.

—Mrs. Isabella, wife of Capt. John H. Wilson, of this place, died on Wednesday of last week, after a brief illness, and was buried from the Congregational church on Friday morning, Rev. C. F. VanAuken preaching the sermon. The W. C. T. U., of which the deceased was an honored and active member, paid their last tribute by attending in a body, and the large attendance of our people attested the esteem in which the departed was held in the community. She died triumphant in the Christian faith. Besides the deeply bereaved husband, she leaves a young son.

—Harold F. Sayles, the Evangelist, closed his two weeks' series of special meetings on Monday night. It is but a small part of the whole truth to say that the meetings have been a grand success. Opera Hall at every meeting has been filled to hear Mr. Sayles preach and sing the Word, and the Bible readings at the churches have been feasts for Christian people. During the meetings 200 have signed the covenant card, which constitutes an expressed determination to serve God, while many who were formerly Christians have renewed their allegiance. Mr. Sayles will long be remembered here.

Marine Jottings.

The steamer Gordon made her first trip on the Boyne City route Monday.

The tug Higgie is off the ways and ready for business.

The propeller City of Grand Rapids arrived here on her first trip Monday.

The sale of the steamer Gazelle to St. Ignace parties, reported last week, has fallen through, and the Gazelle will remain with us if some one else don't get her.

Information comes that there is a probability of the tug Hall not being with us this season. She has six million feet of logs to tow, besides four barges and several vessels to take care of at Frankfort.

Capt. Jepson, of the steamer Clara Belle writes that he will return here next Monday and run on Pine Lake this summer between Boyne City and Charlevoix, making two trips a day, laying up at Boyne. A new boiler has been put in, and the steamer is in first-class shape for the summer's run.

The steamer City of Traverse will leave Chicago next [last] Saturday for Traverse City, arriving here on Sunday night. This boat has been thoroughly rebuilt from stem to stern—$40,000 having been expended upon her during the past winter. The wooden arches have been taken out and steel ones put in their places. The boat is, in fact, in the best condition she ever was.—Eagle.

The steamer Queen of the Lakes is being built up from her sheer line, with entire new deck frames. She will be raised 18 inches which will give her greater carrying capacity. The engine will be raised 18 inches, which will allow her less dip for the wheels, on account of which her speed will be increased. The Queen will be a better boat than ever, with more speed, greater carrying capacity and more seaworthy. The work is being done under the supervision of Hon. A. K. Dougherty.

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix, for ports outside the Michigan District for the week ending yesterday evening:

April 23—Schr. Lottie Mason, 50 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.

25—Schr. Mocking Bird, 2,100 ties, and 7,000 posts Downer to Chicago.

25—Schr. H. B. Moore, 5,000 ties Downer to Chicago.

25—Schr. Florence M. Smith, 2,400 posts, Master to Milwaukee.

27—Schr. John Schuette 350 tons pig iron, 4,000 posts, Pine Lake Iron Co. to Chicago.

28—Schr. Sea Gem, 2,300 ties Pine Lake Lumber Co to Milwaukee.

29—Schr. A. H. C. F. M., 125,000 ft hardwood lumber, John Nicholls to Milwaukee.

29—Schr. John L. Green, 75½ cords wood, Geo Burnham & Sons to Milwaukee.

29 Schr. Cascade, 160,000 feet hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

A prayer meeting for converts and seekers on Tuesday evening at 7:30. Let us get together promptly and each have a part in the meeting.

General prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 7:30, please be on time and prepared to work for God.

Sabbath morning service at usual hour. There will be a five minutes sermon for the children. Children come and learn the way of life.

Sabbath evening Bro. J. S. Smithson will preach at the usual hour. All are cordially invited to be present. W. H. M.

Baptist Church.

There will be a young converts meeting every Tuesday evening.

A children's meeting this Wednesday afternoon at 4:15.

Regular church prayer meeting on Thursday evening.

Sunday a five minutes talk to the children at the beginning of the regular 10:30 service.

Subject for morning sermon: "First works." Evening subject, "Water drawn from a deep well."

There will be preaching at Hilton's school house at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Elsewhere.

Preaching next Sabbath morning at 11 o'clock at Johnson's school house, followed by the Sunday school at 12 o'clock.

Preaching at 3 o'clock at Black's school house.

Episcopal Church.

Divine service and Bible study at Green's Hall Sunday next, at 3 p. m. Subject: Coming to Christ. Question: How can an earnest soul come to Christ? Come all. Bring your bibles and children.

W. P. BROWN, Warden.

—Keane's Dramatic Co. at Opera house, May 5th, 6th and 7th.

—A gay and festive East Jordanite was locked up one day last week for being too drunk.

—J. F. Smith, the shoe-maker, is erecting a shop on the north side of Cross & Son's store.

—Col. Dent, who has lived more or less at Boyne Falls the past few years, has been nominated Mayor of Decatur, Ind.

—Common Council meetings occur now on the first and third Thursdays of each month. Next meeting to-morrow night.

—The store building occupied by J. L. Hurd & Co. will be raised four feet, and a new floor and front put in. Work will be commenced this week.

—The rooms in the Lewis building leased for the Reynard saloon are being put in shape, and the appurtenances are beginning to arrive, including the bug-juice. Their bonds have not yet been presented.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN

THE SHIP OF DREAMS.

When silent lies the sleeping town
 In its profound rest,
There is a ship comes sailing down
 Upon the river's breast.

Wide-winged as that enchanted swan,
 She sails through the night,
And purple grows the gloom upon
 The magic of her flight.

The bark she bears no mortal name,
 No crew of mortal mold,
Ulysses' ship of song and flame,
 Of cedar-wood and gold!

She is the ship that Turner knew
 On the enchanted sea,
She floats fair isles of music through,
 And isles of memories.

And she is mystically fraught
 With dreams remembered long,
That drift on all the tides of thought
 And on all the seas of song.

She has Ulysses by her helm
 As in the olden time;
This is a ship of diviner realm,
 And of a fairer clime.

—Longman's Magazine.

HER FIRST LOVE.

BY SARA H. ROSE.

Outravalla, the well-known country-seat of Jesse McLane, was enjoying a miniature carnival upon its own spacious grounds.

It had its elaborately-built and prepared toboggan slide upon the steep hill-side back of the great stone mansion, whose hall was well-stored with Sioux and Chippewa snowshoes, and all the implements necessary for a successful carrying out of the plans which Minnie McLane wrote out in full to her city cousin Ina.

The pleasant, girlish letter closed with a pleasing invitation to come to Outravalla immediately, for a number of the nicest of the guests had already arrived, a gentleman by the name of Leigh Ellis among them.

"He is the most fascinating young man of the dozen or more that are expected, and he turns the heads of all the girls of his acquaintance," wrote Minnie.

[illegible]

He ran along lightly and almost noiselessly and lifted the curtain which hung over the alcove.

Leigh Ellis and Ina McLane were standing within it, and Ina's soft voice was saying, "Leigh, dear Leigh."

A heavy wreath which Mr. Ellis was holding shielded Ben from their observation, and he was certain he heard the sound of a kiss through the evergreen circlet.

He dropped the curtain as noiselessly as he had lifted it, and with silent footsteps he walked out into the darkness of the winter's night.

It was hours before he returned, chilled and half frozen, for he had gone out hatless and uncoated, but the chill of the winter's night seemed as nothing to the dreadful cold which seemed to benumb his feelings with its frozen chains.

The house was silent, for it was long past midnight, and with a bitter smile Ben hung the star to its place and retired to his room, where he walked the floor until the unmistakable sound of the breakfast bell recalled him to himself.

He made some changes in his toilet and went down to the dining-room, where he found Minnie McLane alone, and greatly elated with a secret which had been confided to her.

She put her arm inside Ben's as he neared her side and exclaimed, gleefully:

"Oh, Ben, you never can guess the news. Ina and Leigh Ellis are engaged. Will they not be a handsome couple? Ina is the most beautiful girl here, and Leigh admires beauty more than anything else. He told me he fell in love with Ina's face the first time he saw it."

Ben, who had been expecting this, bowed silently in reply, and Minnie continued.

"Ina does not wish to have anything said about her engagement just yet. I only told you, Ben, because you are one of the family."

At this moment others of the guests came trooping into the room, among them Ina McLane and Leigh Ellis.

There was nothing in the bearing of either to indicate the new relations between them, but during the day it was whispered around among the guests that there was something between Miss McLane and Mr. Ellis, and before the ball, which took place that evening, was over, there was a full-fledged report that the something was an engagement of marriage, and that there would be a wedding the coming spring.

Those who suspected Ben's secret watched him secretly and narrowly, but [illegible]

[illegible]

THE PIE OF COMMERCE.

Bill Nye Settles a Gastronomic Point Raised by Four Drummers.

MR. WILLIAM NYE.—Knowing that you are a friend of the traveling man, we do not hesitate to ask your opinion or advice as to what course we should pursue in a matter of vital importance to us. The proprietor of the [illegible] House, Red Cloud, Neb., the leading hostlery there, metes upon cutting one pie in sixteen pieces, which only gives one-sixteenth of a pie to the commercial man. We have remonstrated with him about this, but without avail. What shall we do about it? Please advise us. Yours admiratively,

WILL REED,
BARRY HICKS,
GEORGE THOMPSON,
E. C. LINDSAY.

REPLY.

Messrs. Reed, Hicks, Thompson, and Lindsay, at large:

GENTLEMEN: Your favor is now in front of me as I write. I hate to come in between the commercial man and the hotels in case of this kind, especially in order to monkey with relations that are already strained; and yet something ought to be said at this time or we may easily foresee that the overworked American pie will at length be compelled, by reason of brain fag, to abandon the proud position it now holds relative to our inter-state commerce.

I would like to treat this matter in a way to insure harmony between the traveling man and the hotel, if possible; [illegible]

[illegible]

it to ask for mules to haul it, as his own were lost in the storm. Well, he left the twenty-five barrels of whisky cached in the mountain, and as we came back by another route I suppose they are there still.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mrs. Mackay's Romance.

Years ago, comfortably situated in a modest home at Northport, L. I., lived a cosy little family of three—father, mother, and little daughter. For a time all went happily along, until the husband and father was taken ill; then came dark days in the cottage, and a sharp struggle for life was each day and hour enacted. There came a lull, kind friends walked gently about with sad faces and a solemn hush, and that indefinable something which always accompanies death seemed to say that all was over, all suffering had passed away, and the mortal remains of the father lay calm and quiet. Mother and daughter were soon to begin a long, bitter struggle for bread in a great world alone. Across the country whirled the flying train. On, on it rushed, panting, puffing, snorting for days till the journey ended and California was reached.

Among those who left the train was a black-robed woman and a fair little girl. Alone in a strange land. Then followed weary days passed in fruitless searching for work. Life is not so easy [illegible]

[illegible]

LABOR GAINS AND DEMOCRATIC LOSSES.

The Wonderful Growth of the Former at the Expense of the Latter Since 1884.

The labor vote in the three great cities, New York, Chicago, and Cincinnati, in 1884, was 1 per cent. of the total vote cast. Last fall in New York, and this spring in Chicago and Cincinnati this vote was one-third of the whole. The Democratic vote in those three cities in 1884 was large enough to make New York Democratic, to render Ohio doubtful, and to reduce the Republican majority in Illinois to the lowest figures in a Presidential year in the history of the party. The vote cast for Mayor Hewitt in New York City was too small over to carry the State for the Democrats in a Presidential year, and this was equally true of the vote polled by Judge Peckham, the Democratic candidate for Court of Appeals. In Chicago this spring the Democratic vote disappeared entirely, and in Cincinnati it dropped to half its average total. The Republican vote in those cities at these elections fell not far below the average of an off year.

We need draw no inferences for the future from these facts. We need simply state them. We are very far from confusing and confounding the socialist poll in Chicago with the honest labor protest against bad government in Cincinnati, or either with the vote for Henry George, compounded of many and diverse elements, part socialist, part Labor, and part the political flotsam of a great city. The Republican vote in Chicago, like the Democratic vote in New York for Mayor Hewitt, [illegible]

[illegible]

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

THE Senate occupied nearly the entire day on the 15th inst. discussing the Sharp bill relating to interest on State swamp land, and endeavoring to remedy certain abuses by which it is claimed the money received is diverted from its proper course. In 1850 Congress granted these lands to the State, the proceeds of the sale of which were to be applied to internal improvements. The Legislature subsequently set apart 50 per cent. of the proceeds for the benefit of the primary school fund. Mr. Sharp's bill aims to apply the entire amount in the same direction. The amount of such lands undisposed of is considerable and the benefit to the fund would be very large. No conclusion was reached. The House bill to organize the township of Lake in Roscommon County, and the House bill to incorporate the village of Hancock, Houghton County, passed the Senate. In the House bills were passed to amend the act establishing free schools in the city of Grand Rapids, to organize the township of Lake from a portion of the township of Gerrish, Roscommon County; to amend the charter of the village of Zeeland in Ottawa County, to make appropriation from the State swamp land to drain marsh and overflowed lands in Albee, Saginaw County; to establish a board of assessment and review for the city of East Saginaw, to authorize the city of Kalamazoo to erect a building for and maintain a city hospital; to amend the charter of the city of Holland, Ottawa County. Adverse reports were made upon bills providing for fire extinguishers in sleeping coaches and to prohibit the use of stoves in passenger coaches, and to regulate the height of drawheads from the rails upon the railroads in the State. Both branches adjourned until the 18th.

THE Cole insurance bill, providing that insurance pools or boards of underwriters shall not be lawful, passed the House April 13. The special appropriation asked for the Soldiers' Home at Grand Rapids has been cut down to [illegible]

[illegible]

A FOUNDLING'S FATE

—OR,—

The Maid of the Tyrolese Valley.

BY H. BIRD, ESQ.

CHAPTER III.

Autumn came early that year. The trees had lost their fruit, and their leaves, dry and yellow, were dropping to the earth, and being scattered all about, while on the mountains might be seen the white wolf being chased by the huntsman.

* * * * *

"Well, Albert, if you must go away from us go, in heaven's name. To-morrow I will drive you to Rosenheim. But are you really better? Are you strong enough to leave your home?"

These words were addressed by old Unterwald to his son, who were sitting in an arm-chair, looking very pale, and much wasted in body.

"Yes, father," answered Albert, rising from his seat, and standing upright. "I am as well as ever I was in my whole life, and I am longing to be employed."

"I hope you'll have no more sudden attacks of brain fever," observed the old man, shaking his head. "Yet your illness was not to be wondered at, after all. Study and anxiety had shaken your nerves; then came the festival, and all the excitement attending it. No, I was not much astonished to see you fall sick on the following day, knowing how hard you had worked prior to it. But, my son you still look very pale."

"I think change of air will quite recover me," Albert made answer. "I wish I had something to do. I want work—work—work!"

"But do not go far away from us, my son."

"I must—I must, father! The further I go from Volothol the better for me in every respect. Believe me, father," he went on to say, in passionate accents "believe me, I am only doing my duty in going hence. Every added moment I remain here will only render my going away a harder task for me to perform."

[illegible]

She then beckoned toward her the maiden who held the cushion.

"What! is it you, Franzi?" she exclaimed, in pretended surprise. "How can you push yourself thus forward? Just reflect upon your dirty appearance!" she added, speaking in angry accents. "Go away this minute!"

And with those words she snatched the cushion out of the hands of the ill-used and crushed girl, who instantly disappeared.

Isidora then turned, smilingly, to the new-comer, and, with a curtsy, commenced:

"Reverend sir, I am deputed by several ladies belonging to the religious society of which I myself am a member, to express the heart-felt pleasure with which they welcome you into our holy church. This purse is a trifle which we wish you to accept as a proof of our good-will toward you." And she held forth the cushion.

"Miss Isidora," returned the young priest, "be assured that I will do my uttermost to fulfill the trust committed to me. My path in life is quiet and humble, and quietly and humbly let me walk in it. I would rather not take your present; and pardon me when I say, I am no friend to conventicles. Give your alms to the worthy poor and to the wretched sick!"

As he ceased speaking, the vicar appeared upon the scene, greeted his new chaplain, and conducted him into the house.

For a few moments, Isidora stood as if rooted to the spot, with the cushion on her stiff hands, and her eyes fixed on vacancy.

Presently she recovered her presence of mind, threw the cushion on the ground, thrust the money back into her pocket, rushed up the steps, and disappeared.

Soon afterward the vicar and his young assistant left the house; the former went to visit a sick farmer, the latter, for the first time, to call upon the village schoolmaster.

At the back of the vicarage sat Franzi, occupied in sewing. She looked very miserable, and her eyelids were red and swollen from the recent tears she had shed. She was, evidently, not paying much attention to her work, for every now and then she suffered the needle to drop out of her fingers upon her lap.

Presently she sprang up and uttered a startled cry. Katrina, who had stolen upon her unperceived, had just laid her hand upon her friend's shoulder.

"How you frightened me, Katrina!" Franzi said, turning to the new-comer.

The woman, who had her milking-pail balanced upon her head, stood for some few minutes, steadily regarding the other, [illegible] had embroidered. "This flower is misplaced—it ought to have commenced there."

[illegible]

The lady laughed outright. "Oh, indeed! should it? You understand nothing at all about it, and don't know what you are saying."

"Oh, what does that signify?" retorted he, pointedly. "People often give opinions on subjects of which they know nothing!"

Miss Isidora drew in her lips, and her eyes flashed angrily. Then she sprang up in haste, overturned her chair, and rushed out of the apartment, banging the door after her with such violence that the whole house seemed to shake again.

"My young friend, what are you about?" inquired the vicar. "I shall be ill if you disturb the quiet of my house."

"I was wrong," returned Albert. "I dare say she was only joking."

"Joking! Oh, dear, no! you must not suppose that. My niece is accustomed to have her own way. Oh, you will get used to it; one gets used to many things in this world."

Albert did not reply, and the vicar politely changed the subject, and began to talk of other matters.

On the following morning, Albert tried to make his peace with Miss Isidora, who listened to him with cold politeness. He felt that he had unwittingly made her his enemy, and he was very sorry for it, and ever afterward avoided entering into any sort of a discussion with her.

* * * * * *

It was winter now. Albert worked assiduously, and early and late; and from one end of Volothol to the other, people's mouths were filled with praise of him. [illegible]

[illegible]

A LIE WHICH BECAME FAMOUS.

Origin of the Saying "And It Wasn't a Good Day for Ducks, Either."

In 1860, the year before the war, a party of Northern Illinois hunters hied themselves to the lakes of Minnesota for an annual duck hunt of a few weeks, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, making the journey to St. Paul, which was at that time but little more than a frontier village, by a steamer from Dubuque, Iowa. Among the party was a chap named Truax, a proverbial liar, but a jolly, good-natured fellow withal, whose predominant weakness was readily excused, if not entirely overlooked, by those who knew him well. Abe, that being his first name, seemed to struggle more recklessly and naturally with the truth when talking about his prowess as a hunter of game than on any other subject.

One afternoon, as the steamer was plowing its way through Lake Pepin, a number of the male passengers were seated forward on the boiler deck in little knots, passing the time away in conversation. Abe was a prominent figure in one of the groups, and had already astonished himself fairly by the whoppers he had successfully got of, when the subject of duck hunting, the mission which himself and friends were out on, was advertised. "I've shot a few ducks in my time," broke in Abe, during a momentary [illegible]

[illegible]

The Queen.

If Moxie Nerve Food can take the place of drugging and stimulating, it has come to stay, and many of the doctors say it actually does. After thirteen or fourteen months in the market its sale is said to be the largest ever known. The large cities are taking Moxie forever, and every nervous woman or overworked person thinks it is the last half of everything that has just been found. That little Moxie weed, it never dreamed it was one that it was soon to be queen of the medical world.

It Broke Up the Game.

In 1862 six railroad conductors sat down to enjoy a game of draw in a room in the second story of a building located about where the National Hotel now stands. Having no poker chips they utilized watermelon seeds. The man who acted as banker placed the melon seeds in a glass goblet, after counting them, as the floor was well covered with seeds which could be used by any player who might run short. After proceeding a few minutes the goblet cracked, making a sharp report which did not attract much attention, however. The seeds were placed in another goblet which shortly afterward cracked with quite a sharp ring. At this one of the players shook his head and said: "Boys, that's enough for me, I'm through." The others laughed at him and insisted on his continuing the game, but no go; superstition had close hold on him. The third goblet was then filled with the seeds and termin- [illegible]

[illegible]

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

Must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action, reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years demonstrates that only one remedy has met these requirements, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symptoms quickly yield to it, and a multitude of persons who have for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict, testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by it. Ely's Cream Balm is perfectly soothing, excites no dread, dissolves the hardened accumulations, lessens the extreme sensitivity of the nerve centers to cold and all external irritants, and is followed by no reaction whatever.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is not a liquid, snuff or powder. Applied into the nostrils is quickly absorbed. It cleanses the head. Allays inflammation. Heals the sores. Restores the senses of taste and smell.

60 cents at Druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cents.

ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

35 MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER. THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, [illegible]

HARTER'S THE ONLY TRUE IRON TONIC

HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA. 100 Doses One Dollar

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION

WIZARD OIL CONCERTS. Hamlin's Wizard Oil. RHEUMATISM. All Aches and Pains.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

RUPTURE

CATARRH

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER. The Best Waterproof Coat.

WRITING PAPER, ENVELOPES, PLAYING CARDS.

PATENTS

PENSIONS

CONSUMPTION

Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

ADVERTISERS — LORD & THOMAS.

$300 REWARD

$10

DECORATE

BEWARE OF IMITATORS.

[illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 4, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Carter Harrison, ex Mayor of Chicago, is getting himself in readiness for a trip around the world, Chicago having voted him leave of absence with a cheerfulness that makes him feel perfectly free to take all the time he wants.

There is the promise for another great wheat crop in North Dakota The recent heavy rains have thoroughly soaked the ground, thus insuring a rapid growth of the plant, and the acreage sown will be from 10 to 25 per cent. larger than last year.

When Alexander Mitchell came to this country he was a poor Scotch immigrant. The Chicago Journal very well remarks that if the first thing he had done after getting ashore had been to strike for eight hours as a day's work, he would have died as poor as he was when he landed.

The amount of money in the East that is seeking safe investment was indicated recently in Wall street, when subscriptions were opened for the stock of a new Equitable Gas Company at Utica. Less than $300,000 was required, and about three times the whole amount was subscribed in less than one hour after the opening of the books.

A movement has been started among the heavy stock and grain shippers and jobbers in Iowa to induce the Governor to call a special session of the Legislature to legislate on the question of transportation. There is widespread dissatisfaction over the alleged perversion of the Northern Michigan News.

The sand to be used for plastering the new hotel at Mackinac Island is being shipped from Harbor Springs.

It is unlawful to spear any fish other than suckers and sturgeon during the months of March, April and May.

H. B. Chapman has purchased the Randall property on Petoskey street, and is having it thoroughly repaired. —Democrat.

Boyne Falls Gazette: The ice disappeared from Deer Lake on Friday and a flock of fourteen geese was seen on the water.

Messrs Hannah, Lay & Co., have sold one-half of their lumber here, about three and a half million feet, to the Sly Lumber Co., of Chicago.—Eagle.

The preliminary survey of the Alpena & Petoskey railroad has progressed as far as the south line of Cheboygan county, from Alpena, and thus far the grading will be remarkably easy.

A deer came out upon the ice at the mouth of the Escanaba Wednesday and made its way toward town until within a short distance of the merchants' dock when it took alarm and started across the bay.

After Charles Strong, of St. Ignace had married his fifth wife his neighbors began to look around and see what had happened, and they are digging up the last three to see if he didn't hasten their deaths by arsenic.

The slate roof on the insane asylum at Traverse City does not stand the weather first rate. The melting snow left water under the slate, and the first frost expanded it so as to crack the tiles, and make the roof next to worthless.

Harbor Springs Independent: C.

EDUCATIONAL.

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will occur as follows: Boyne City, Friday, March 25th, 1887; East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887. Examinations will commence at 8:30 a. m., and end at 5:30 p. m. Candidates for first or second grades can write only at the examination at Boyne City, and may write until 5 o'clock, p. m.

WM. HARRIS, Sec., Norwood.

Notice of Dissolution of Co-Partnership.

Notice is hereby given that the Co-partnership heretofore existing under the firm name and style of "F. W. Craine & Co." for the purpose of carrying on the Dry Goods business in the village of Charlevoix, Michigan, is mutually dissolved on this 31st day of March, A. D. 1887; and F. W. Craine is authorized to collect all debts now due said firm, and W. M. Gow assumes all liabilities contracted to this date.

Dated at Charlevoix, Mich, March 31, 1887.
W. M. GOW.
FRANK W. CRAINE.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

CORRESPONDENTS:
National Park Bank - New York.
Commercial Nat. Bank - Chicago.
Nat. City Bank - Grand Rapids.
Detroit Nat. Bank - Detroit.

Bank of
Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Its Officers
Security in Banking
This Bank Invites
This Bank Will
Parties Seeking
Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfation Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
By Water and Rail
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.
My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc. is complete.
If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES
OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES
Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?
if not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.
These goods cannot be equalled in the county
Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.

Ladies Look Out
For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for
D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED. W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

DAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st, Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Postoffice.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 261, meets second and Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 178, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—H. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.

Superstitious Business Men.

An observing Broadway street-car conductor tells of the odd way in which one passenger, a business man whom he brings down-town every morning, deports himself. As soon as he gets his seat he grabs two pins from his coat lapel and sticks one into the cushion on both sides of him. He goes through the same programme every morning. If he gets into a car and has to stand he holds a pin in each hand. He does it for luck, so he himself explained to the conductor. This man is an influential officer in one of the biggest corporations in New York, and everywhere he is regarded as a conservative, intelligent man.

"I have tried to break myself of this superstition for years," he said to the conductor one day when he seemed to be in the mood for conversation and he and the conductor had the car to themselves for a long distance. "It is a silly practice, of course. I realize that; yet somehow if I ever fail to have my two pins with me and don't come down-town hedged in on each side, everything goes wrong. I keep it up because I'm nervous if I don't."

There are some men who will not ride up or down town except with the same conductor daily. Not that they love any special conductor particularly, but for the blind reason they believe luck attaches to regularity.

One Broadway dry-goods merchant always leaves a street-car in which by any chance he may find a red-haired woman or child, and he uniformly looks sharply for this sort of a hoodoo before he takes a seat.—New York Times.

Three Tales From the South.

A good story is told of a young recruit who recently enlisted at Camp Hancock, near Atlanta. The young fellow joined the army while the country was threatening war with Mexico, and he intended making a good soldier. One day he was on guard duty, and was slowly stepping along when an officer approached. After the usual salute the officer said: "Let me see your gun." The raw recruit handed over his Springfield rifle and a pleased expression stole over his face. As the officer received the gun he said in a tone of deepest disgust: "You're a fine soldier! You've given up your gun, and now what are you going to do?" The young Atlantian turned pale, and reaching for his hip pocket drew a big six-shooter and preparing for business, said in a

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

THE AMERICAN
MAGAZINE
BEAUTIFULLY ILLUSTRATED.
This Magazine portrays American thought and life from ocean to ocean, is filled with pure high-class literature, and can be safely welcomed in any family circle.
PRICE 25c. OR $3 A YEAR BY MAIL.
R. T. BUSH & SON, Publishers,
130 & 132 Pearl St., N. Y.

GRENADES.
Over Sixty Millions Sold.
"STAR" CHEMICAL.
Price, $200.00 EACH.
THE HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO.
81 & 83 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

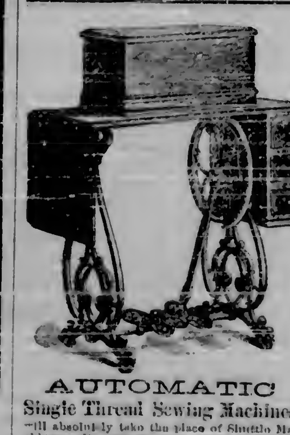
SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, WIS.

Good PAINT
An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the SHERWIN-WILLIAMS COLORED LEADS.
Also
St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.



AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
74 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in Throat, Whooping Cough, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd Fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security.
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

...fire, in which two of his daughters, aged 19 and 21 years, were burned to death and three other persons so badly injured that they cannot survive. The fire was caused by defective flues.... About fifty New York city dealers in oleomargarine pleaded guilty of violating the law, and were fined from $50 to $100 each.

A DISPATCH from Waco, Texas, says: "The glorious rains of Western Texas that have filled the heretofore almost dry channel of the Brazos River have brought with the current a mass of polluted cattle carcasses that offset the advantages of the rain and give promise of disease. The carcasses are evidently from the alkali country, as they are entirely devoid of hair. The stench from the floating carcasses is dreadful. The people are no less delighted at the volume of water than disgusted with the pollution."... Maj. John E. Blaine, brother of the Hon. James G. Blaine, died at Hot Springs, Ark.

POLITICAL.

SENATOR COKE, of Texas, has written an open letter protesting against the Democratic party, as such, taking sides on the prohibition question in that State.... Prominent Democrats attribute their victory in Rhode Island to the tariff question, and to the fact that the demand for free wool brought the party the support of that interest.

A HIGH-LICENSE bill, intended to cover the objections raised by Gov. Hill to the Crosby bill, has been introduced in the New York Legislature. It divides all saloons into two classes, the first comprising places where all kinds of liquors are sold, and the second where malt liquors, wines, and cider only are sold. The rates established are as follows: New York and Brooklyn, first class $500, second class $100; Buffalo, first class $300, second class $60; all other portions of the State, first class $100, second class $30.

THE West Virginia Legislature met in extra session last week. May 3 is the day set apart to begin balloting for United States Senator.... The President has made the following appointments: Samuel F. Bigelow, of New Jersey, to be United States Attorney for the District of New Jersey; Henry F. Merritt, of Illinois, to be United States Consul at Chemnitz.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

STOVE-MOLDERS in Pittsburgh and surrounding towns refused to work on the boycotted patterns sent from St. Louis, and went out on a strike. In Pittsburgh fifteen foundries and over seven hundred men are idle. Nine hundred stove-molders at Cincinnati struck against the boycotted patterns. At Cleveland 500 went out, and at Louisville 500 quit work. The Bridge & Beach Manufacturing Company, of St. Louis, whose patterns have caused all the trouble, started up their foundry again last week.

PROCTOR & GAMBLE, the well-known Cincinnati soap manufacturers, propose to share their profits with their employes. The plan is to appoint three trustees from the employes who shall, twice a year, after allowing 6 per cent. interest on the capital employed and reasonable salaries to the members of the firm, divide the remainder of the profits for the previous six months between the firm and the employes in proportion to the capital and the wages earned. The employes have accepted the proposition with thanks, and resolved to allow no outside influence to disturb the relations between them and their employers.

WASHINGTON.

A DECISION was rendered in the Supreme Court of the United States in what is known as the Maxwell land-grant case, thus settling finally a matter that has been in dispute before the Interior Department and the courts for nearly twenty years...

...interstate commerce commission... formed that since the new rate went into effect the steamships had raised their rates materially, keeping just enough below those of railroads to take the traffic. A. T. Britton, attorney of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, read a petition setting forth that the road and its connections were engaged in transcontinental traffic. In an honest endeavor to comply with the law it had put in operation new schedules, which, while they increased the through rates, largely reduced the rates to intermediate points. The average reductions were from 5 to 30 per cent., according to the class of freight carried. While this had not resulted in increasing the way traffic, it had entirely destroyed the through traffic. Charles H. Tweed, of New York, addressed the commission in behalf of the prayer of the Southern Pacific Railroad for a suspension of the fourth section of the law in its behalf. A telegram was received from the manager of the New Almaden quicksilver mine at San Jose, Cal., the largest in the United States, saying that the present transcontinental rates shut his industry out of the New York market.

GENERAL.

THE Western Union Telegraph Company has increased its capital stock $1,200,000, making the total capital $81,200,000.... Lieutenant John Danenhower, of Arctic fame, was discovered dead in his quarters at the naval academy at Annapolis, with a bullet hole in his right temple. He was found lying in front of his fire-place with a tag tied to his button-hole saying: "Send to my brother at Washington." Although he has had mental troubles since his return from the Arctic regions, what immediately led to the suicide is thought to be the recent grounding of the Constellation on its way to Norfolk, which he had charge of, and for which it is supposed he had a fear of being court-martialed.

A LETTER from Rudolph Schnaubelt, the much-looked-for anarchist and alleged thrower of the Haymarket bomb, has been received in Chicago. Schnaubelt, about whom hundreds of most contradictory stories made the round through the daily press; whose corpse was upon one occasion located in Lake Erie and shortly afterward found in a Connecticut village; who was seen in New York, New Orleans, Mexico and California, but never was captured, is heard from at last. He turned up in Christiania, Norway, and it is from there that his letter is dated. Schnaubelt denies throwing the Haymarket bomb, but says he is sorry he didn't do it, and only left because he knew it wasn't safe for him in Chicago.

FOREIGN.

AS THE result of a recent trial at Posen, Germany, nine socialists were sentenced to short terms of imprisonment.... An elegantly dressed Frenchman called on Marshal Bazaine, in Madrid, and after conversing with him a few moments suddenly drew a poinard and cut the Marshal about the head. Shouting "J'ai venge ma patrie" he fled, but was afterward arrested. The prisoner's name is Nillair, and he claims to be a correspondent of the newspaper Courrier de Rochelle. He says he went with the intention of killing Bazaine, and that his dagger was poisoned. Medical men believe that he is insane.

THE following cablegram from Rome has been received at New York: "The Pope has decided the question of the Knights of Labor in favor of that organization. This decision will stand so long as the present method pursued in furthering their aims prevails. The document of Cardinal Gibbons has been indorsed. The Pope further decides that in Canada, where a mandament had been issued against the knights, the members of the order shall receive absolution on promise of obedience to future decisions of the Holy See. If the knights identify themselves with the theories now being disseminated by cer-...

...say that ex-Secretary Manning is greatly improved in health.... Buccaneer, the famous stallion owned by the Austrian Government, for which $100,000 was refused in 1868, has been shot on account of his old age.

SEVERAL Gladstone Liberals, says a cable dispatch, desire to have Parliament issue a summons to the editor of the London Times calling him before the bar of the House of Commons to answer for breach of privilege in accusing Mr. Parnell and other members of the House of complicity in crime, or that Mr. Gladstone propose the appointment of a committee to examine the Times' charges. The Parnellites have been consulted, and their leaders opposed the proposition. Mr. Biggar will sue the Times for libel, and make that paper's articles on "Parnellism and Crime," of the series of which the Parnell letter was the culminating part, the basis of the action.

FRENCH manufacturers ask their Government to postpone the International Exhibition to a more favorable date than that of 1889.... The Vatican, in answer to inquiries as to whether the Pope was in favor of having a reconciliation effected with Italy on the basis of a renunciation of the Papal claims to the temporal power of the Pope, states that the Pope desires peace with Italy, but has never thought of abandoning the rights of the Church or the Papacy.

ADDITIONAL NEWS.

NEARLY three pages of the last issue of Bradstreet's was devoted to a review of the remarkable boom in real estate in the South and West during the past six months. The article says: "The activity in real estate within six months has been very conspicuous, the first four months of 1887 witnessing an extraordinary increase in the speculative interest. The greatest activity has ruled in the more recently settled regions of the West, and in those portions of the South which have shown marked progress in manufacturing."

THE Mexican House of Deputies has passed, by an overwhelming majority, a constitutional amendment which would give to President Diaz a second consecutive term of office.... A sensational newspaper of New York prints a letter from Havana stating that a band of Cuban outlaws laid their plans to capture Senator John Sherman on his recent visit, and only failed by being five minutes late.

MISS MARY GARRETT, of Baltimore, offers to endow Johns Hopkins University with $35,000 per annum, on condition that the institution be removed to Clifton and that it sustain a scientific school.

THE French have occupied the Wallis Islands, in the South Pacific, for a coaling station.... A chorister in the Military Academy Church in St. Petersburg committed suicide. It was then found that his house was a Nihilist rendezvous.

How They Wed in Albania.

The dress of the Albanian women, says an exchange, is ungallantly described by travelers as hideous. It is said to be of thick material and shapeless; a leather band encircles the waist, and usually a little black cloak is thrown over the shoulders. But the wearers are the most beautiful women of Eastern Europe, and their manners always gracious.

Flirtation is unknown, and even the most decorous love-making forbidden. The proper thing is for the lover never to see his intended till their marriage day. She has been carefully secluded in the recesses of her home till her parents think she is old enough to be married. Having arrived at this conclusion, they announce the fact; if the mere announcement is of no avail, they adopt strong measures. The lady's brother will politely come up to a friend in the street and pleasantly remark: "You are just the fellow I wanted to see. My sister is 14 years old; you must marry her." No Albanian who respects himself rejects the proposal of his friend; in fact, he regards it as an honor, and knows that a refusal means a duel to the death. Like other more Western mortals, he may have a morbid curiosity regarding his friend's sister's personal appearance, and then he has recourse to the inevitable old woman, the entremetteuse in the true sense of the word, whose profession is to intervene in such cases. She calls on the bride, inspects her, and then returns to the expectant swain with a detailed account of the young lady's qualities, of course colored in direct proportion to the fee she has received. Then the wedding day is fixed, and at last the happy pair are face to face.

The etiquette of Albania requires the bridegroom to be coy and reluctant; it is considered degrading to his dignity to affect any tenderness for the fair sex, and therefore he is bound to offer strong resistance to her approach. In marked contradistinction to the usual marriage ceremonies, which point to a capture of the bride, the Albanian customs indicate a capture of the bridegroom, and yet the whole race displays a degree of contempt for women which is not to be found in the most barbarous nations. It is worthy of remark, also, that in every family the males usually go to the mosque, the females to church.

THE MARKETS.

NEW YORK.
CATTLE	$5.00	@ 5.75
HOGS	5.75	@ 6.00
WHEAT—No. 1 White	.95	@ .95½
No. 2 Red	.92	@ .93
CORN—No. 2	.48	@ .50
OATS—White	.38	@ .42
PORK—New Mess	16.00	@16.50
CHICAGO.
CATTLE—Choice to Prime Steers	5.00	@ 5.30
Good Shipping	4.25	@ 5.00
Common	3.75	@ 4.00
HOGS—Shipping Grades	5.25	@ 5.75
FLOUR—Winter Wheat	4.25	@ 4.50
WHEAT—No. 2 Spring	.81	@ .84
CORN—No. 2	.37½	@ .38
OATS—No. 2	.27	@ .28
BUTTER—Choice Creamery	.20	@ .21
Fine Dairy	.18	@ .20
CHEESE—Full Cream, Cheddar	.13½	@ .14½
Full Cream, new	.13	@ .14½
EGGS—Fresh	.12	@ .13
POTATOES—Choice, per bu.	.70	@ .75
PORK—Mess	22.50	@21.00
MILWAUKEE.
WHEAT—Cash	.78	@ .78½
CORN—No. 3	.38	@ .39
OATS—No. 2 White	.32	@ .33
RYE—No. 1	.62	@ .63
PORK—Mess	15.25	@15.75
TOLEDO.
WHEAT—No. 2	.83	@ .83½
CORN—No. 2	.40	@ .40½
OATS	.30	@ .30½
DETROIT.
BEEF CATTLE	4.00	@ 5.00
HOGS	4.00	@ 5.00
SHEEP	4.25	@ 5.50
WHEAT—Michigan Red	.81	@ .84
CORN—No. 2	.40	@ .41
OATS—White	.34	@ .34½
ST. LOUIS.
WHEAT—No. 2	.80	@ .81
CORN—Mixed	.35	@ .35½
OATS—Mixed	.28	@ .28½
PORK—New Mess	16.75	@17.25
CINCINNATI.
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.83	@ .83½
CORN—No. 2	.41	@ .42
OATS—No. 2	.30	@ .31
PORK—Mess	16.00	@16.50
LIVE HOGS	5.00	@ 5.75
BUFFALO.
WHEAT—No. 1 Hard	.89	@ .90
CORN—No. 2 Yellow	.46	@ .47½
CATTLE	4.50	@ 5.25
INDIANAPOLIS.
BEEF CATTLE	3.75	@ 5.25
HOGS	5.25	@ 5.75
SHEEP	3.50	@ 4.75
WHEAT—No. 2 Red	.81	@ .82
CORN—No. 2	.37	@ .37½
OATS—Mixed	.29	@ .30
EAST LIBERTY.
CATTLE—Best	5.00	@ 5.25

ELEVEN TO ONE.

Disagreement of the Jury in the Trial of John Arensdorf at Sioux City, Iowa.

The One Juror Who Thought Him Guilty Firmly Fixed in His Opinion.

The jury in the case of John Arensdorf, the wealthy brewer who has been on trial at Sioux City for several weeks past for the murder of Rev. George C. Haddock, has been discharged, having been unable to reach an agreement. The jury stood eleven for acquittal to one for conviction. The latter was proof against the appeals and arguments of his eleven obstinate associates, and as they were equally fixed in their opinions, the contest ends in a drawn battle. It has been a protracted and wearisome trial, involving the examination of over one hundred and twenty witnesses, with an immense volume of testimony. That a vast amount of perjury has been committed is apparent to all, as shown by the conflicting testimony. It is not determined when another trial will be had. It is probable it will be in the May term.

[Sioux City telegram.]

Judge Pendleton made the closing argument to the jury for the defense, and Hon. M. D. O'Connell closed for the State. Saturday afternoon the case was given to the jury. The instructions of Judge Lewis to the jury were full and clear, covering every point of law involved in the case. Referring to the question of conspiracy, the Judge said the jury may and should take into consideration all the facts in relation to the prosecution of liquor cases in the courts to close the saloons on or before August 3, the part that Mr. Haddock had taken in those prosecutions, the relations which Arensdorf and his alleged co-conspirators sustained to the prosecution, the appearance of Arensdorf and his alleged co-conspirators on the streets on the night of the murder, and also the meetings of the saloonkeepers at the various halls prior to that time. Under the indictment, the Judge held, it was competent to admit evidence to prove the fact of conspiracy, and if the jury is satisfied that a conspiracy was formed with which he was connected, evidence of the acts or sayings of conspirators is admissible whether defendant was present or not. In relation to testimony of accomplices, the Judge instructed that it should be corroborated, and the law says the corroboration must be such as connects or tends to connect the defendant with the commission of the crime. It may be circumstantial or by witnesses, but it is not essential that it should cover all the matters involved. In proving an alibi, the Judge held, the burden of proof rests upon the defendant. It must be established by preponderence of evidence, and evidence of that nature is to be critically examined and weighed, because of the facilities offered for introduction of manufactured testimony. In closing the Judge administered a severe reproof to one of the jurors, whose actions in court and talk on the streets have been subjects of comment. The Judge spoke as follows:

Gentlemen, at the conclusion of this lengthy case, and as you are about to retire, I ought to thank you for your promptness in attendance and good attention. I think that no case has ever been tried in the courts where attorneys and jurors have made a trial more pleasant. While I may say this with regard to the case and its conduct generally, I feel I would not discharge my duty fully should I fail to call attention to the fact that there is one juror who from the time he was sworn has shown a stubborn disposition and apparently no desire to reach the facts in the case. I think that I have never before seen such an exhibition of impatience and unrest as I have seen on the part of one of the jurors in this case. From day to day I have regretted it. I trust now that when that juror is called upon to act in making up a verdict in so important a case as this he will see the propriety and justice of giving that attention and deliberation which every fair and honest mind knows that both the State and defendant are entitled to. Lest this remark may be misapplied, in view of the fact that there has been some newspaper comment as to the juror Adair, I may say that the remark is not intended to in any way apply to him. I have been pleased to note that he, with ten other jurors, has given good and respectful attention.

This speech created a sensation in court. The jury went into retirement at 4 o'clock p. m. Saturday, and remained in seclusion until noon Sunday, when Judge Lewis called them into court and asked them if they had decided upon a verdict. Foreman Webster, who was the juror so severely criticised by the Judge in his instructions, answered that they had not. The Judge then said he supposed each of them had decided in his own mind as to what the verdict should be, and they replied that they had. The Judge said that he did not wish to keep the jury out to punish them, but to give them time to deliberate. Foreman Webster said that he did not believe they wanted the case taken from them yet. There was one stubborn man on the jury, but he thought before night they could arrive at a verdict. Juror Dennis O'Connell arose and, addressing the Court, said that he had made up his mind in the case in the fear of God and without any regard to the favor of man. He had considered the case carefully and wished to do justice as between man and man and to his country and his God, and if he was kept there three or four weeks he should not change his opinion. The Judge said that this being the condition of affairs, it would probably do no good to keep the jury out longer, and he accordingly discharged them. This leaves the case in the same condition as it was before the trial began, so far as the court is concerned. There is considerable comment on the street upon the action of the Judge, and the friends of Arensdorf are loud in their denunciation, while others say that in view of the statement of Juror O'Connell he was justified. On the first ballot the jury stood ten for acquittal and two for conviction. C. G. Ross was the other juror who voted for conviction, but after three ballots he went over to the majority, leaving O'Connell alone.

Juror O'Connell was interviewed by a newspaper reporter. He was asked:

"Mr. Webster told Judge Lewis that you must have been bought by the prosecution. What have you to say to that?"

"I have been very careful to avoid even speaking to the Judge or the State's attorneys during the progress of the trial. I always passed them without so much as saluting them."

"Wouldn't there be more likelihood of bribery on the other side?"

"I don't want to implicate any one," said Mr. O'Connell, significantly.

"Were you offered a bribe?"

"I was asked to name my price."

"Are you willing to say for publication that you were asked to name your price?"

"I am."

"Was that offer made in behalf of the prosecution or the defense?"

"It was in behalf of the defense."

"Who made the offer?"

"I decline to say at present, as I do not wish to get him into trouble."

BIRTH OF A CYCLONE.

An Ohio Farmer Beholds a Strange Spectacle.

[Wheeling (W. Va.) telegram.]

The origin of the whirlwind which devastated a large section of Belmont County, Ohio, a few days ago, has been definitely fixed. A farmer living just north of Lloydsville, a village sixteen miles west of this city, saw the column of dust and leaves rise where two depressions in the rolling ground formed and allowed two currents of wind to cross at right angles. A little eddy started, sucking up leaves and dirt, and momentarily increasing in size until it formed a column... erly direction, the large and upper end keeping a course more nearly straight and the lower end, referred to by eye-witnesses as the tail, lashing about, striking a house now and demolishing it, and then not touching the earth for perhaps hundreds of yards.

THE LIE DIRECT.

Wild Scenes in the British House of Commons During the Coercion Debate.

Healy and Sexton Denounce Major Saunderson as a Liar—Healy Suspended.

[London cablegram.]

One of the most exciting incidents in the present Parliament occurred soon after midnight. The debate on the second reading of the crimes bill proceeded decorously enough until Major Saunderson formulated a charge against the Parnellites as being associated with crime and criminals. He named among the latter Patrick Ford, P. J. Sheridan, and Mr. Egan.

Mr. Healy rose to a point of order.

The Speaker replied that Major Saunderson made the gravest charges, but these could be met in debate. He himself was unable to interfere.

Healy responded that he would say what he thought of Saunderson regardless of consequences. If Major Saunderson referred to him, he had no hesitation in saying that Saunderson was a liar. This remark was greeted with rousing Parnellite cheers. The Speaker called upon Healy to withdraw his expression. Healy replied: "I am not entitled to rise until you sit down." The Speaker resumed his chair. Healy again took the floor and said: "I am only able to meet the charge in one way. If you rule Major Saunderson in order, my expression is equally in order. If you rule him out of order I shall withdraw my expression."

The Speaker—"That's not so. Saunderson made a charge of the gravest nature. The responsibility rests entirely with himself. It is his duty to prove it if he can. I can not allow the expression you used."

Healy repeated that Saunderson was a liar. A great uproar arose. The Speaker again called upon Healy to withdraw. Healy refused. The Speaker thereupon named him, and W. H. Smith moved that Healy be suspended.

Mr. Redmond jumped up and shouted: "I say he is a liar, too."

The House divided on the motion to suspend Healy, which was carried—118 to 52.

When the vote was announced Healy walked out of the House, applauded by all of the Parnellites, who stood up, waving their hats, and raising cheer after cheer.

Mr. Sexton demanded that the gentleman should withdraw his statement that he had been the associate of murderers. The Major demurred. Sexton then, in excited tones, looking toward Saunderson, said: "You are a willful, cowardly liar, and if I find you outside the doors of this House I would cram your words down your throat."

The Speaker promptly directed that Mr. Sexton withdraw his offensive expression, intimating that otherwise he would be compelled, with great pain, to take the same course as he had done in the case of Mr. Healy. Mr. Sexton replied that if Major Saunderson would withdraw the charge he would withdraw his language. The Speaker having appealed to the Major the latter made an explanation which satisfied Mr. Sexton.

Maj. Saunderson resumed his speech. He said that Sexton was present at a meeting at which Egan was made Secretary of the Clan-na-Gael, which was a murder society of America.

Sexton rose to a point of order.

The Speaker advised Saunderson to withdraw the offensive expression. Another scene of confusion ensued, Saunderson repeating his words, whereupon Sexton shouted: "The honorable gentleman is again a liar."

The Speaker again called upon both members to withdraw their offensive remarks, which they did.

FIVE PEOPLE KILLED.

A Water-Tank on the Northwestern Railroad Bursts with Fatal Results.

A Dozen Persons Overwhelmed by the Weight of Several Tons of Water.

[Chicago special.]

A terrible and peculiar accident occurred Sunday afternoon at Palatine, a station twenty-six miles northeast of Chicago, on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. By the bursting of a large railroad watertank five men were killed outright and four were seriously injured. At an early hour in the morning two freight trains collided at Palatine. The engines were wrecked and a number of cars demolished and hurled from the track. The collision occurred directly beside a large watertank which stands near the depot. The ground was torn up, and some of the supports must have been lowered. The water-tank had a capacity of 109,000 gallons, and contained at the time about 80,000 gallons. A wrecking train was sent out from Chicago, and a large force of men set to work to clear up the wreck. As it was Sunday, and the people of the village and neighborhood were idle, a large crowd of men and boys gathered around the scene of the wreck, watching the work of the wrecking hands. As the greatest amount of work was being done right beside the water-tank, the largest crowd of spectators collected there. Men and boys stood around and under the water-tank, and leaned against the large posts supporting it. Suddenly there was a report, in volume as loud as the discharge of ten ordinary pieces of musketry, and the structure collapsed. The great sides of the tank were forced outward, the hoops parted like threads, and, under the weight of 80,000 gallons of water, the heavy, water-soaked timbers and wrought iron descended on the heads of the unfortunates underneath. It would be impossible to picture the sight. Hemmed under the parted tank, and for a moment totally submerged in the deluge that followed, were the people caught in the crush. When the water had flowed off—the work of but a second—five men, instantly killed, could be seen through the crevices of the piled up staves.

The following are those who were killed and injured: Edward Wenke, of Palatine, killed; William Garms, of Palatine, killed; George Myer, boy, of Arlington Heights, killed; William Myer, brother of the preceding, of Arlington Heights, killed; Frederick Hoeger, of Arlington Heights, killed; John Asmunst, of Palatine, crushed about the head, probably fatal; Charles Storms, a boy, of Palatine, probably fatally injured; Augustus Fisher, of Palatine, severely bruised; unknown man, of Palatine, badly bruised. Half a dozen others received minor injuries, but were able to get to their homes.

HERE is the way they make sparrows useful in Germany: Long troughs, placed at the eaves of houses, are occupied by the sparrows in building their nests. When the young are hatched and the mother goes out to procure food, wire screens are placed over them, with interstices large enough to permit the passage of food in to the younglings, but too small to allow them to escape. As soon as they are large and plump they are killed, and make a very desirable article of food.

OF the 48,000 votes cast in the last election in Washington Territory, 15,000 were cast by women.

SUDDENLY CALLED AWAY.

Death of Alexander Mitchell, the Millionaire Railroad Magnate.

He Expires Suddenly in a New York Hotel of Bronchial Pneumonia.

[New York special.]

Alexander Mitchell, President of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, died at his rooms in the Hoffman House, in this city, on Tuesday afternoon. He had been been gradually losing strength for two months, but the illness which resulted in his death began only a week ago.

Mr. Mitchell some months ago determined to withdraw from active business pursuits, and Dec. 1 last, accompanied by Rev. Dr. Keen, his old pastor, he started from Milwaukee in his private car for a trip to his winter home, in Florida, whither Mrs. Mitchell had gone some time before. At his magnificent place, "Villa Alexandria," just at the head of the St. Johns River, he devoted himself to the pleasures of a winter resort, spending much time out of doors and getting far more exercise than he had ever had before. Yet, although he seemed to be in the best of spirits, he steadily lost flesh. He had always been one of the most methodical of men, and the change told on him.

Three weeks ago Mr. Mitchell and Dr. Keen left Florida, reaching this city April 2, and going immediately to the Hoffman House. Two days later Mr. Mitchell complained of feeling unwell and developed feverish symptoms, but he soon recovered and was able to go down town, although the feverish condition returned at intervals. His son, John L. Mitchell, had joined him in the meantime, and with his son and a party of friends Mr. Mitchell heard Patti sing at the Metropolitan Opera House last Wednesday night. Sitting in the front of the box he was probably exposed to a draft, for before the last act he complained of illness and left the opera house. So weak was he when his carriage reached the hotel that he had to be assisted to his room. After that he never left his bed. Dr. Edward Bradley, his physician, found that he was suffering from a malarial trouble and bronchial pneumonia, from which he failed to rally. He sunk into a state of coma Monday evening and never recovered consciousness. Death resulted from asphyxia, caused by bronchial pneumonia.

Alexander Mitchell was born Oct. 18, 1817, in the parish of Ellon, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. His father was a farmer, and the early days of the future financier were passed in the same avocation. For two years he studied law at Aberdeen, and then went into a bank at Peterhead and remained there until he came to Milwaukee in May, 1839, when, in company with George Smith, of Chicago, he organized the Wisconsin Marine and Fire Insurance Company, an institution that was in reality a bank, although not called one on account of the law then in force. The bills of this company were the only reliable paper currency the Territory had for many years, yet despite the times every dollar was redeemed when presented.

It is as a manager and promoter of railroads that the deceased was best known to the world, he having been for years at the head of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Company, a corporation that controls more miles of road than any other in the world.

Politically Mr. Mitchell was originally a Whig, then he joined the Republicans in electing Lincoln and prosecuting the war, afterward joining with the Democrats in support of President Johnson. Since then his party sent him to Congress in 1870 and 1872, and would have continued him there had he not declined further office. He was one of the delegates that nominated Mr. Tilden, and was one of his most ardent supporters. In 1879 the Democrats wanted him to be a candidate for Governor, but he declined. Throughout his political career he was always moderate and conservative in his views, and seemed to favor measures that would insure general prosperity rather than party success.

Mr. Mitchell is survived by a wife, a son, John L., an adopted daughter, Mrs. Dr. Mackie of this city, and a sister and brother living in Aberdeenshire, Scotland. Mr. Mitchell's estate is variously estimated at from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000.

A LIFE SENTENCE.

Schwartz and Watt Convicted of the Murder of Messenger Kellogg Nichols.

The Jury Return a Verdict After Being Out a Little Over Five Hours.

[Morris (Ill.) special.]

After a trial lasting thirty days, Schwartz and Watt have been declared by a jury of twelve good men and true guilty of the murder of Kellogg Nichols, and their punishment fixed at imprisonment for life in the penitentiary. When the jury retired, on Tuesday afternoon, it was the general opinion that there would be a disagreement. After a seclusion of a little more than five hours word was sent to Judge Dibell that they had reached a conclusion. A few minutes afterward they filed into court. When Judge Dibell said: "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?" E. H. Robinson, the oldest juror on the panel, arose and handed the verdict to the Sheriff, who passed it up to the court. Judge Dibell scanned it, and then read it: "We, the jury, find Newton Watt guilty of the murder of Kellogg Nichols in the manner and form as charged in the indictment, and fix his penalty at imprisonment in the penitentiary for the term of his natural life." The verdict as to Schwartz was then read. It finds him also guilty in the manner and form charged, and fixes his penalty at imprisonment in the penitentiary for his natural life. Each juror then in turn ratified the verdict.

There was a death-like silence in the court-room. Watt was sitting near his brother, with his arms resting on the table, still gazing steadily at the jury. Schwartz sat near his father with his hands clasped across his breast, gazing away from the jury, seemingly insensible to their presence and verdict. Neither of the men manifested the slightest emotion. Watt talked with his brother and smiled when spoken to by his attorney. Schwartz was more serious when his counsel approached him, but a slight, reluctant smile gathered on his countenance. The Court thanked the jury for the attention during the trial and dismissed them.

The murder of Kellogg Nichols, for which Schwartz and Watt were convicted, occurred the night of March 19, 1886. Nichols was express messenger on the Rock Island train running out of Chicago. He was killed in his car, near Morris, and the safe opened and rifled of a package of money containing about $22,000.

Clever Colored Women.

The richest colored woman in America is Mrs. Amanda Eubanks, of Rome, Ga., who pays taxes on $400,000 worth of property, said to have been inherited by will from her white father. All over the country colored women are advancing themselves in all financial, intellectual, and moral ways. In Philadelphia a colored woman writes for the newspapers, and is considered clever, and also conducts a special department in the leading organ of the colored race in this country. Miss Charlotte Forten, now Mrs. Frank Grienke, has written for the Atlantic Monthly. A colored woman is a lawyer in New York City, and in other cities of the North are to be found many colored women physicians. It is a little bit curious to know that the first Sunday-school in ... started by two col-... —New Orleans Picayune.

BASE-BALL.

Lively Times Predicted for the Season of 1887 on the Green Diamond.

Hard Hitting and Active Base-Running Among the Products of the New Rules.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The American Association teams played the first championship games of the base-ball season of 1887 on the 15th of April, and on the 28th of April the first championship games of the present season will take place between the teams of the National League. Thus within a few days both the great base-ball organizations of the country will have launched upon their season's contest for the capture of their respective pennants, with every indication that the games will be attended by even a more remarkable degree of interest than has marked the progress of the contests through any seasons past. As in past years at the commencement of the season, speculation is rife among admirers of the game everywhere as to the relative strength, the probable position of the teams at the end of the season and the character of the fight they will make, with a strong favoring, of course, of the team belonging to the city from which such admirers may hail.

There is a good deal of speculation among players, as well as patrons of the game, regarding the probable effect of the new rules. As a rule the players, particularly pitchers, condemn the new pitching rules. They render the pitcher's work harder, make more work for the fielders, and prolong the length of the game. Outsiders, however, seem pleased with the new arrangement. Spectators who pay to witness base-ball games like to see plenty of action. They like to see plenty of hard hitting and lively base-running. From every indication they are likely to get a surfeit of both this season. Heavy batting and daring base-running will be the feature of the games, and large scores will be the result. The lovers of the game will seldom see any scores like 2 to 1, or any "Chicagos." The new rules were made so that the whole nine might play ball and not the pitcher. Last season the fielders had very little to do, and seldom won any applause, which made them feel that they were no more than automatons. Now they will have a chance to show how nimble they are. The games will take more time to play than they did under the old rules, because the pitchers can very seldom retire the three men in one, two, three style. The twirlers will have to work very hard to earn a record, as they must either allow a man to hit the ball or give him a base, but which will count just the same as if a man had knocked the cover off the ball. What most of the players grumble at is the four strike system, which they say will help to make poor batters' records as large as those who handle the bat freely. The heavy hitters of the League say that if a man can't hit a ball in three trials he ought never step to the plate. Three strikes and out is a regular household word, and it will be a long time before the people will get acquainted with four strikes. The patrons of the game will find that these rules were adopted to show the energy of each and every man on the team, and if they are given a fair trial they will suit everybody.

President Nick Young, of the National League, was asked not long ago if he anticipated any trouble with the new rules, and he promptly replied: "I do not. These rules were not formulated until they were thoroughly discussed in all their bearings by the managers and the most prominent players in the profession. Of course they will be experimental to a certain extent, but they are in many respects superior to the old rules, and will conduce very materially to make the contests more exciting and attractive. If, however, after a satisfactory trial, they should prove a failure—which I do not expect—they can be easily changed by a special meeting of the League committee, which has full power to make whatever changes may be deemed expedient."

In Spalding's Guide, which has just been issued in this city, President Young is allowed two pages to give his "Points on Scoring." The points are in the nature of the advice which the teacher of a kindergarten school usually gives his pupils, and to infant scorers may prove valuable.

HOME PLATE.

PITCHER'S BOX.

3

2

1

About a dozen ideas are abroad regarding the proper position of a pitcher under the new rules. The correct style is illustrated. The general impression is that the pitcher must keep both of his feet firm on the ground from the moment he takes his position until the ball has been delivered. This is not so, as will be seen by the accompanying diagram.

No. 1 is the pitcher's position for right foot.

No. 2 is the pitcher's position for left foot.

No. 3 is the place he makes his step with the left foot when delivering the ball.

A right-handed pitcher stands with his left foot a little to the left of his right, which must rest on the rear line of the pitcher's box. The ball has to be held in plain view of the umpire, then the preliminary arm motion is brought into play, and, as the ball is delivered, the step from No. 2 to No. 3 is taken.

Notes of the Game.

THE interstate commerce law makes it cost the League clubs about $2,500 more for traveling expenses.

A MAN with a calculating head has figured out that it will cost just $3,310,806 to run the several professional ball clubs this season.

THE grand stand of the Athletic Club of Philadelphia is fitted up with opera chairs, and the stand looks very much like a theater.

MANAGER BRYAN, of the Des Moines club, offers to run a 100-yard race against Sunday, of the Chicagos. Bryan is a ten-second man.

THE profits of the Chicago Club last season were a little more than $15,000. Add to this $14,000 realized from sale of players and the treasury has about $30,000 from which to declare a dividend of 20 per cent. and leave enough to run the club for a while.

MORRILL, of the Bostons, is a church member; White, of the Detroits, is a deacon in an Ohio church; Radford, of the Metropolitans; O'Rourke, of the New Yorks; and Sunday, of the Chicagos, are all church members, and will never enter a ball-field or club-room on Sunday.

IN the contest for "the championship of the world" between the Chicago Base-Ball Club and the St. Louis Browns, the former have thus far beaten the latter four times out of six. Three more games remain to be played next October. Should the Chicagos win one of these three they will secure the championship honor. The Browns will have to win the three games to secure the championship.

SPALDING'S Official Base-Ball Guide for 1887 surpasses all of its predecessors in the great amount of valuable information it contains. It is embellished with cuts of President Spalding, M. J. Kelly, Roger Connor, James O'Rourke, Dan Brouthers, and A. C. Anson. The Guide enters upon its second decade as a standard hand-book of the national game. It may be said to open up a new era in the history of the game, as it presents for the first time a new code of playing rules which govern every professional club in the country. A feature of the Guide for 1887 is the explanatory appendix to each class of rules of the new code. Another specialty is the monthly records of the championship contests of the two leading organizations of the country.

SECRET SOCIETIES

The Subject of Dr. Talmage's Sermon at the Tabernacle.

"What Is the Moral Effect of Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, Knights of Labor, Greek Alphabet, and Other Societies?"

BROOKLYN, April 17. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., announced to his congregation to-day that, as the Brooklyn Tabernacle has been uncomfortably crowded for many years, the trustees have purchased the adjoining ground, on which a great church, prayer, and Sunday-school room will be built, which on Sabbath can be opened into the main auditorium, thus giving room for at least 1,000 more hearers at services. Six thousand people are crowded into the present building, 4,650 of these in pews and about 1,500 seated in aisles and standing. The improvement will add greatly to this capacity.

The subject of Dr. Talmage's sermon to-day was, "What is the moral effect of Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship, Knights of Labor, Greek Alphabet, and other societies?" The text was from Proverbs xxv. 9: "Discover not a secret to another." Dr. Talmage said:

It appears that in Solomon's time as in all subsequent periods of the world, there were people too much disposed to tell all they knew. It was blab, blab, blab; physicians revealing the cases of their patients, lawyers exposing the private affairs of their clients, neighbors advertising the faults of the next-door resident; pretended friends betraying confidences. One-half of the trouble of every community comes from the fact that so many people have not capacity to keep their mouths shut. When I hear something disparaging of you my first duty is not to tell you. But if I tell you what somebody has said against you, and then go out and tell everybody else what I told you, and they go out and tell others what I told them that I told you, and we all go out, some to hunt up the originator of the story and others to hunt it down, we shall get the whole community talking about what you did do and what you did not do, and there will be as many scalps taken as though a band of Modocs had swept upon a helpless village. We have two ears but only one tongue, a physiological suggestion that we ought to hear a good deal more than we tell. Let us join a conspiracy that we will tell each other all the good and nothing of the ill, and then there will be no such awful need of sermons on Solomon's words: "Discover not a secret to another."

Solomon had a very large domestic circle. In his earlier days he had very confused notions about monogamy and polygamy, and his multitudinous associates in the matrimonial state kept him too well informed as to what was going on in Jerusalem. They gathered up all the privacies of the city and poured them into his ear, and his family became a Sorosis or female debating society of 700, discussing day after day all the difficulties between husbands and wives, between employers and employes, between rulers and subjects, until Solomon, in my text, deplores volubility about affairs that do not belong to us and extols the virtue of secretiveness.

By the power of a secret divulged, families, churches, neighborhoods, nations fly apart. By the power of a secret kept, great charities, socialities, reformatory movements, and Christian enterprises may be advanced. Men are gregarious—cattle in herds, fish in schools, birds in flocks, men in social circles. You may by the discharge of a gun scatter a flock of quails or by the plunge of the anchor send apart the denizens of the sea, but they will gather themselves together again. If you by some new power could break the associations in which men now stand, they would again adhere. God meant it so. He has gathered all the flowers and shrubs into associations.

You may plant one forget-me-not or heart's-ease, alone, away off upon the hillside, but it will soon hunt up some other forget-me-not or heart's-ease. Plants love company. You will find them talking to each other in the dew. A galaxy of stars is only a mutual life insurance company. You sometimes see a man with no out-branchings of sympathy. His nature is cold and hard, like a ship's mast ice glazed, which the most agile sailor could never climb. Others have a thousand roots and a thousand branches. Innumerable tendrils climb their hearts and blossom all the way up, and the fowls of Heaven sing in the branches. In consequence of this tendency we find men coming together in tribes, in communities, in churches, in societies. Some gather to cultivate the arts, some to plan for the welfare of the State, some to discuss religious themes, some to kindle their mirth, some to advance their craft. So every active community is divided in associations of artists, of merchants, of bookbinders, of carpenters, of masons, of plasters, of shipwrights, of plumbers. Do you cry against it? Then you cry out against a tendency divinely implanted. Your tirades would accomplish no more than if you should preach to a busy ant hill or beehive a long sermon against secret societies.

Here we find the oft-discussed question, whether associations that do their work with closed doors, admit their members by passwords, and greet each other with a secret grip are right or wrong. I answer that it depends entirely on the nature of the object for which they meet. Is it to pass the hours in revelry, wassail, blasphemy and obscene talk, or to plot trouble to the State, or to debauch the innocent, then I say, with an emphasis that no man can mistake, No! But is the object the defense of the rights of any class against oppression, the improvement of the mind, the enlargement of the heart, the advancement of art, the defence of the Government, the extirpation of crime, or the kindling of a pure-hearted sociality, then I say, with just as much emphasis, Yes.

There is no need that we who plan for the conquest of right over wrong should publish to all the world our intentions. The general of an army never sends to the opposing troops information of the coming attack. Shall we who have enlisted in the cause of God and humanity, expose our plan to the enemy? No! we will in secret plot the ruin of all the enterprises of Satan and his cohorts. When they expect us by day we will call upon them by night. While they are strengthening their left wing we will double up their right. By a plan of battle formed in a secret conclave we will come suddenly upon them, crying: "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." Secrecy of plot and execution are wrong only when the objects and ends are nefarious. Every family is a secret society, every business firm and every banking and insurance institution. Those men who have no capacity to keep a secret are unfit for positions of trust anywhere. There are thousands of men whose vital need is culturing a capacity to keep a secret. Men talk too much and women, too. There is a time to keep silence, as well as a time to speak.

Although not belonging to any of the great secret societies about which there has been so much violent discussion, I have only words of praise for those associations which have for their object the maintenance of right against wrong, or the reclamation of inebriates, or, like the score of mutual benefit societies called by different names, that provide temporary relief for widows and orphans, and for men incapacitated by sickness or accident from earning a livelihood. Had it not been for the large number of secret labor organizations in this country monopoly would long ago have, under its ponderous wheels, ground the laboring classes into an intolerable servitude. The men who want the whole earth to themselves would have got it before this, had it not been for the banding together of great secret organizations. And, while we deplore many things that have been done by them, their existence is a necessity, and their legitimate sphere distinctly pointed out by the providence of God. Such organizations are trying to dismiss from their association all members in favor of anarchy and social chaos. They will gradually cease anything like tyranny over their members and will forbid violent interference with any man's work, whether he belongs to their union or is outside of it, and will declare their disgust with any such rule as that passed in England by the Manchester Bricklayer's association, which says any man found running or working beyond a regular speed shall be fined two shillings and a sixpence for the first offense, five shillings for the second, ten shillings for the third, and if still persisting, shall be dealt with as the committee think proper. There are secret societies in our colleges that have letters of the Greek alphabet for their nomenclature, and their members are at the very front in scholarship and irreproachable in morals, while there are others the scene of carousal, and they gamble, and they drink, and they graduate knowing a hundred times more about sin than they do of geometry and Sophocles. In other words, secret societies, like individuals, are good or bad, are the means of moral health or of temporal and eternal damnation. All good people recognize the vice of slandering an individual, but many do not see the sin of slandering an organization.

There are old secret societies in this and other countries, some of them centuries old, which have been widely denounced as immoral and damaging in their influence, yet I have hundreds of personal friends who belong to them, friends who are consecrated to God, pillars in the church, faithful in all relations of life, examples of virtue and piety. They are the kind of friends whom I would have for my executors if I am so happy as to leave anything for my household at the time of decease, and they are the men whom I would have to carry me out to the last sleep when I am dead. You cannot make me believe that they would belong to bad institutions. They are the men who would stamp on anything iniquitous, and I would certainly rather take their testimony in regard to such societies than the testimony of those who, having been sworn in as members, by their assault upon the society confess themselves perjurers. One of these secret societies gave for the relief of the sick in 1878, in this country, $1,490,274. Some of these societies have poured a very heaven of sunshine and benediction into the home of suffering. Several of them are founded on fidelity to good citizenship and the Bible. I have never taken one of their degrees. They might give me the grip 1,000 times and I would not recognize it. I am ignorant of their passwords, and I must judge entirely from the outside. But Christ has given us a rule by which we may judge not only all individuals, but all societies, secret and open. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Bad societies make bad men. Good societies make good men. A bad man will not stay in a good society. A good man will not stay in a bad society. Then try all secret societies by two or three rules.

Test the first: Their influence on home, if you have a home. That wife soon loses her influence over her husband who nervously and foolishly looks upon all evening absence as an assault on domesticity. How are the great enterprises of reform, and art, and literature, and beneficence, and public weal to be carried on if every man is to have his world bounded on one side by his front door-step, and on the other side by his back window, knowing nothing higher than his own attic or lower than his own cellar? That wife who becomes jealous of her husband's attention to art or literature or religion or charity is breaking her own scepter of conjugal power. I know an instance where a wife thought that her husband was giving too many nights to Christian service, to charitable service, to prayer meetings, and to religious convocation. She systematically decoyed him away until now he attends no church, waits upon no charitable institution, and is on a rapid way to destruction, his morals gone, his money gone, and I fear his soul gone. Let any Christian wife rejoice when her husband consecrates evenings to the service of humanity, and of God, or charity, or art, or anything elevating.

But let no man sacrifice home life to secret society life, as many do. I can point out to you a great many names of men who are guilty of this sacrilege. They are as genial as angels at the society room, and as ugly as sin at home. They are generous on all subjects of wine suppers, yachts and fast horses, but they are stingy about the wives' dresses and the children's shoes. That man has made that which might be a healthful influence a usurper of his affections, and he has married it, and he is guilty of moral bigamy. Under this process the wife, whatever her features, becomes uninteresting and homely. He becomes critical of her, does not like the dress, does not like the way she arranges her hair, is amazed that he ever was so unromantic as to offer her hand and heart. There are secret societies where membership always involves domestic shipwreck. Tell me that a man has joined a certain kind, and tell me nothing more about him for ten years, and I will write his history if he be still alive. The man is a wine guzzler, his wife broken-hearted or prematurely old, his fortune gone or reduced, and his home a mere name in the directory. Here are six secular nights in the week. "What shall I do with them?" says the father and the husband. "I will give four of these nights to the improvement and entertainment of my family, either at home or in a good neighborhood. I will devote one to charitable institutions. I will devote one to my lodge."

I congratulate you. Here is a man who says: "Out of the six secular nights of the week I will devote five to lodges and clubs and associations and one to the home, which night I will spend in scowling like a March squall, wishing I was out spending it as I have spent the other five." That man's obituary is written. Not one out of 10,000 that ever gets so far on the wrong road ever stops. Gradually his health will fail through late hours, and through too much stimulants he will be first rate prey for erysipelas and rheumatism of the heart. The doctor coming in will at a glance see it is not only present disease he must fight but years of fast living. The clergyman, for the sake of the feelings of the family, on the funeral day will only talk in religious generalities. The men who got his yacht in the eternal rapids will not be at the obsequies. They have pressing engagements that day. They will send flowers to the coffin, will send their wives to utter words of sympathy, but they will have engagements elsewhere. They never come. Bring me mallet and chisel, and I will cut on the tombstone that man's epitaph: Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." "No," you say, "that would not be appropriate." "Let me die the death of the righteous and let my last end be like His." "No," you say, "that would not be appropriate." Then give me the mallet and chisel, and I will cut an honest epitaph: "Here lies the victim of dissipating associations!"

Another test by which you can find whether your secret society is right or wrong is the effect it has on your secular occupation. I can understand how, through an institution, a man can reach commercial success. I know some men have formed their best business relations through such a channel. If the secret society has advantaged you in an honorable calling, it is a good one. But has your credit failed? Are bargain makers more anxious how they trust you with a bale of goods? Have the men whose names were down in the commercial agency A 1, before they entered the society been going down since in commercial standing? Then look out. You and I every day know of commercial establishments going to ruin through the social excesses of one or two members, their fortune beaten to death with ball-players, cut or cut amidships with the front prow of the regatta, or going down under the swift hoofs of the fast horses, or drowned in the large potations of cognac or Monongahela. That secret society was the Loch Earn. Their business was the Ville du Havre. They struck, and the Ville du Havre went under!

The third test by which you may know whether the society to which you belong is good or bad is this: What is its effect on your sense of moral and religious obligation? Now, if I should take the names of all the people in this audience this morning and put them on a roll, and then I should lay that roll back of this organ, and 100 years from now some one should take that roll and call it from A to Z, there would not one of you answer. I say that any society that makes me forget that fact is a bad society. When I go to Chicago I am sometimes perplexed at Buffalo, as I suppose many travelers are, as to whether it is better to take the Lake Shore route or the Michigan Central, equally expeditious and equally safe, getting to their destination at the same time. But suppose that I hear that on one route the track is torn up, the bridges are down and the switches are unlocked, it will not take me a great while to decide which road to take.

Now, here are two roads in the future—the Christian and the unchristian, the safe and the unsafe. Any institution or any association that confuses my ideas in regard to that fact is a bad institution and a bad association. I had prayers before I joined that society, did I have them afterward? I attended the house of God before I connected myself with that union, do I absent myself from religious influences? Which would you rather have in your hand when you come to die—a pack of cards or a Bible? Which would you rather have pressed to your lips in the closing moment—the cup of Belshazzarean wassail or the chalice of Christian communion? Who would you rather have for your pallbearers the elders of a Christian church or the companions whose conversation was full of slang and innuendo? Who would you rather have for your eternal companions—those men who spent their evenings betting, gambling, swearing, carousing, and telling vile stories, or your little child, that bright girl whom the Lord took? Oh, you would not have been away so much nights, would you, if you had known she was going away so soon? Dear me, your house has never been the same place since. Your wife has never brightened up, she has never got over it. She never will get over it. How long the evenings are with no one to put to bed, and no one to whom to tell the beautiful Bible stories.

What a pity it is that you cannot spend more evenings at home in trying to help her bear that sorrow. You can never drown that grief in the wine cup. You can never break away from the little arms that used to be flung around your neck when she used to say: "Papa, do stay with me to-night. Do stay with me to-night." You will never be able to wipe away from your lips the dying kiss of your little girl. The fascination of a bad secret society is so great that sometimes a man has turned his back on his home when his child was dying of scarlet fever. He went away. Before he got back at midnight the eyes had been closed, the undertaker had done his work, and the wife, worn out with three weeks' watching, lay unconscious in the next room. Then the returned father comes upstairs, and he sees the cradle gone and the windows up, and says: "What is the matter?" On the judgment day he will find out what was the matter?

Oh, man astray, God help you! I am going to make a very stout rope. You know that sometimes a rope-maker will take very small threads and wind them together until after a while they become ship cable. And I am going to take some very small, delicate threads and wind them together until they make a very stout rope. I will take all the memories of the marriage day—a thread of laughter, a thread of light, a thread of music, a thread of banqueting, a thread of congratulation, and I twist them together and I have one strand.

Then I take a thread of the hour of the first advent in your house, a thread of the darkness that preceded, and a thread of the light that followed; and a thread of the beautiful scarf that little child used to wear when she bounded out at eventide to greet you; and then a thread of the beautiful dress in which you laid her away for the resurrection; and then I twist all the threads together, and I have another strand. Then I take a thread of the scarlet robe of a suffering Christ, and a thread of white raiment of your loved ones before the throne, and a string of the harp cherubic, and a string of the heart seraphic, and I will twist them all together, and I have a third strand. "Oh," you say, "either strand is enough to hold fast a world!" No; I will take these strands and I will twist them together, and one end of that rope I will fasten, not to the communion table, for it shall be removed; not to a pillar of the organ, for that will crumble in the ages; but I wind it round and round the cross of a sympathizing Christ, and, having fastened one end of the rope to the cross, I throw the other end to you. Lay hold of it! Pull for your life! Pull for Heaven!

Dancing Before Appreciative Cannibals.

Two gentlemen, Col. Codell and Mr. Portur, have long been making heroic but ineffectual efforts to establish friendly relations with the wild inhabitants of Little Andaman islands.

The inhabitants have always been in the habit of promptly "going for" any stranger who was rash enough to land on their shores. At the beginning of last year these gentlemen had reason to think that the savages were showing a less hostile feeling. Consequently they visited the island and the natives came to the beach without their bows and arrows.

The Colonel landed, and after an exchange of presents he proceeded to instruct the Jarawas in the sublime mysteries of Sir Roger de Coverley and the highland fling. They were so enchanted and bewitched by these delightful novelties that they at once entered into an alliance with their instructor, and became so amiable that he was able to travel several miles inland without the slightest molestation.

If such results can be achieved with the two dances named what might not be accomplished in the way of civilization with the waltz? Missionaries may refuse to learn and imperil their own souls for the sake of saving those of their savage brethren. But in that case a splendid opening presents itself for the young man who finds all professions crowded. London is greatly over-"mashered," but mashers could find a new career in those gentle climes, with no expense for an outfit. They need carry no luggage, as no evening dress would be required beyond a collar and a pair of pumps. The mental picture of a masher conducting a Jarawa dowager to the refreshment tent, between dances, to recruit on pickled missionary and mangoes, is touching in the extreme.—Calcutta Pioneer.

The Seven Whistlers' Call.

Once in the life of every man he hears the seven whistlers' call. They are strange birds on whom mortal eyes have never rested, the whistle of whose wings sometimes falls upon the startled ears. And there is always a portent of something momentous for good or evil, even though they may not "dree their weird" for weeks after the seven whistlers' call. Like all portents, their coming is mostly in the gloaming. For then, after all, is the "witching hour." There is in the quiet of a secluded country side in the twilight hush which comes down from the mountain and the twilight shadows which fall from the heavens, a mystical significance of another world, and of the flimsy structure of the veil intervening, which is to be found at no other hour of the twenty-four. It is then, by some lonely wood pond, or in some valley circled by the woods that this hush is broken by a faint, far beat, distinct note in the air, not on earth or in the sky overhead, taken up and repeated six times, and ever growing clearer and more distinct, and finally pealing away with a rush of wings and a sound of passing like that which in all the Mediterranean isles signaled the death of "the Great Pan" when Christ was born.—Boston Globe.

WAR ANNALS.

Old Soldiers of Both Armies Fighting Their Battles Over Again.

Anecdotes of the Battle-field, the Weary March, and the Cheerful Camp-fire.

The Comrades.

BY J. E. P.

With slackened rein, and with sword-arm free,
I ride in the ranks of the Best Platoon,
And left of me, right of me, knee to knee,
Ride Bob and Harry, we comrades three,
While our scabbards clank to a jolly tune!

We ride together; we're always one,
On picket, on charge, or bivouac,
Through the hard campaign, from sun to sun,
Together we share its ills and its fun,
Enjoy as one, as one we lack.

Do the bugles blow? Is it "Charge, my men!"
That the Colonel shouts as he waves his blade?
Well, here we go at the gallop; then,
Here's Bob and Harry and me again,
Charging together—and who's afraid?

Let the war go on, my comrades true,
Let Generals rise, and flourish, and fall;
We are the lads in yellow and blue,
True to the cause, to each other true,
That answer together the bugle call.

How Are You, Major Day.

In the month of December, 1864, while on a cavalry raid under command of General Stoneman, extending from Kentucky through East Tennessee, and thence into Virginia, occurred the following incident, which will be well remembered by all the boys connected with it.

It seems necessary to a proper understanding of the episode that we go back a space to the autumn of 1863, when Vaughan's brigade of Confederate cavalry defeated a small force of Union cavalry, under General Gillem, at Bull's Gap, in Tennessee, and drove them precipitately back to Knoxville. Prominent among the men of Vaughan's brigade pursuing Gillem that unfortunate night was one known as Major Day; and as pursued and pursuers pressed on toward Knoxville some Stentor in the Confederate command would call out, at impressive intervals, in tones which chilled the blood of Gillem's men: "Give it to 'em, Major Day!" "Give it to 'em, Major Day!" Now to return to the raid in question:

While the command halted at Bean's Station the Twelfth Ohio Cavalry were sent eastward, some thirty miles, in the direction of Rogersville, to look after Basil Duke's command. About half way to Rogersville, at a small town called Mooresburgh, we came upon part of his command and put them to flight in the direction of Rogersville. Our Lieutenant Colonel, who was in command, hastily ordered Company B to halt here and hold the town till his return. Then, with the balance of the regiment, he dashed out on the main road in hot pursuit of the flying foe. Captain Rolli at once sent twenty of us to take our position on a road leading south toward the mountains, with orders to hold it at all hazards.

The darkness was intense, and the silence so marked that, but for the faint glimmer of an occasional light in some of the houses, we could easily have believed ourselves miles from any settlement.

In the matter of taking our position there was no choice, and in a few moments the twenty horses were standing in line across the road, their weary riders lying upon the ground in front of them awaiting developments. Two videttes were stationed about two hundred paces in advance of the picket, with strict orders to let no one pass. There were no roads save this and the main one leading into the town. And as the balance of our regiment were pursuing the enemy toward Rogersville, we could look for an approaching foe only from this direction, and should we be approached from the south we could rest assured it was an enemy.

The extreme darkness of the night compelled us to depend upon sound rather than sight, and in consequence a silence almost profound seemed to reign around us. Strange as it may appear to those not familiar with the fact, our horses seemed to catch the spirit pervading the troopers, and, at times, appeared listening intently as if to catch the faintest sound. The time arrived for relieving the videttes upon the outpost. I accordingly selected two men for the relief, and we cautiously advanced to the post.

On nearing it, we could hear, far in the distance, a sound like to the quick tramping of horses, and as it came nearer we could also discern the confused murmur of voices in conversation and laughter.

No mystery remained now for us to solve, and the five of us ranged ourselves in line across the road, with carbines loaded to their utmost, resolved to maintain our position against any charge, no matter what its character, or die in the attempt. Nearer and yet more near came the cavalcade, and as we waited, listening now with bated breath, the mind was busy arranging the possibilities and probabilities of the coming rencounter in such a glow of light and shade upon the mental canvas that the lapse of twenty years has not been able to efface its memory.

It was apparent from the reckless, noisy mirth of the troopers that they had not the remotest idea of meeting resistance in that locality. When almost within challenging distance, and their conversation had become perfectly audible to us, the following from the officer in command of the advancing squad fell upon our ears: "Oh, we'll make it all right with the pickets; yes, we can make it all right with them."

Almost on the same instant rang out clear and sharp from our post the picket's stern challenge:

"Halt! Who comes there?"

"Friends."

"Dismount one and advance."

The clatter of hoofs ceased now, but the jolly laugh and bantering talk continued. Impatient at their seeming delay, our order for one to advance was sternly repeated, and instantly responded to thus:

"Oh, yes. Don't get excited now; just keep cool; we're all right. You know Major Day, Basil Duke's command? Don't be uneasy; I'm Major Day; just keep cool now, boys; we're all right. Why, you know Major Day!" exclaimed the verbose Major.

At within two paces of the muzzles of our carbines, to his utter astonishment, he was again ordered to halt. In a low tone I instantly demanded his surrender. Taking a prolonged breath, he uttered in a surprised tone, "Wha-what! Yanks!"

His hands had at the same time sought his belt, and, unbuckling it, he handed over to me his side arms, accompanying the movement with the expression, "What a confounded fool I am! only out of a Yankee prison three weeks, and now caught in such a trap as this."

And thus he would no doubt have continued to abuse his own stupidity and indiscretion with the same volubility as that displayed in his endeavors to convince us, previous to his capture, that he was "all right;" but I promptly checked him with: "How many men have you out there, Major?"

"Twenty."

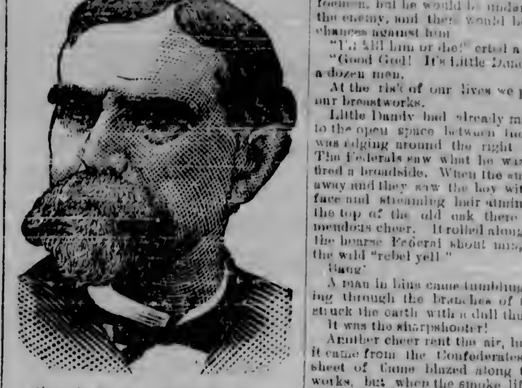
I commanded them to advance. Instead of obeying they instantly wheeled about and retreated rapidly in the direction whence they had come. Our "Halt! halt! halt!" was unheeded by the flying foe, and instantly followed by the simultaneous discharge of five carbines, the scintillations from their horses' heels guiding our fire.

Securing the Major's horse, which he had left tied to a stake at the foot of the hill, we conducted him back to headquarters. On the way back he informed us that this was his third capture.

A few days later Gillem's brigade, with our regiment attached, had the satisfaction of chasing Vaughan's cavalry from Marion to Wytheville, with Major Day a prisoner in our rear. And ever and anon, like an avenging echo from the autumn of '63, ... tantalizing cries, "Close up, Major Day!" "Are we all right, Major Day?" and "How are you, Major Day?"—Joseph Ba... Chicago Ledger.

General Wallace.

Lewis Wallace was born in Brookville, Ind., April 10, 1827, his father be-...



...one time Governor of the State. His education was almost wholly self-obtained; he would not go to school, and at college he only remained a short time. ... studying law at Indianapolis, at the age of nineteen, the Mexican war broke out. Wallace enlisted, being made First Lieutenant; his regiment was never in action. After the end of the war he practiced law at Crawfordsville, and at this time wrote "The Fair God."

On the outbreak of the civil war Wallace was given command of the Eleventh Indiana Infantry, and was made Brigadier General on the day of the capture of ... Henry; he commanded a division at the battle of Fort Donelson, and his conduct at Shiloh has been much commented upon. Afterward he headed the military commission upon General Buell, and commanded the Middle Department, embracing Delaware and part of Maryland. While in this position he fought Early at the Monocacy, July 9, 1864, checking the advance of the chieftain until troops could reach Washington, though defeated in the battle. After the war he held many official positions, the last being that of Minister to Turkey. His latest book, "Ben Hur," has enjoyed an almost unexampled popularity, and to him would seem to be given the power to do everything he undertakes ...

Stampeding the Boys for Fun.

No doubt many of the old soldiers remember how easy it was to stampede a company, a regiment, or even an army, when vigorously assailed while asleep. An incident of this character occurred during one of the campaigns in the Kanawha Valley. After a hard day's march the Confederate army encamped, one cold night, where they could get a pretty good supply of fuel for fires. After building good fires and partaking of a scanty supper, they lay down for a night's rest, which was badly needed, not anticipating any danger from the enemy during the night.

Between midnight and day Captain H...ins, of the Forty-fifth Virginia, froze out, his fire having in a manner gone out. He got up with the intention of renewing it, when his attention was drawn to a large fire a short distance off, which had been built by a portion of his company. He concluded to go out to that fire to get warm. On the way an idea struck him that he could have some fun. So, catching up his arms full of green laurel brush covered with leaves, which makes a terrible popping and snapping when thrown into a hot fire, he walked up to where fifteen or twenty of his comrades were lying sound asleep. The Captain, who was an athletic giant, six feet high, weighing over two hundred pounds, and could perhaps outrun or outjump any man in the Confederate army, threw his laurel brush into the fire and yelled at the top of his voice: "Charge um! charge um!" Scarcely ever such consternation and confusion occurred around a camp fire. Aroused out of a deep sleep, and firmly believing that a hundred thousand Yankees were upon them with fixed bayonets, the men stood not upon the order of their going but went at once. Some got half straightened up as they started, but the majority of them went off on their hands and feet, without coats, shoes, or hats. All the time the Captain was jumping backward and forward over the fire, uttering imprecations of the direst vengeance. One poor fellow who had been harder to awake, or was more badly frightened at the start to move, had got onto his knees when the Captain came bounding over the fire alighting in close proximity to him. The poor fellow threw up his hands in a supplicating manner, and in a quavering voice cried out: "Don't shoot; I surrender!"

The Captain could hold in no longer, and, bursting into a loud laugh, ended the stampede. The men came back looking pretty sheepish, and enjoyed the fun as well as they could under the circumstances.

J. O. B.

HAMPTON CROSS ROADS, Va.

Little Dandy.

"Little Dandy" the boys called him. He joined our company in Vicksburg, just before the siege, and none of us felt enough interest in him to make any inquiries, says the Atlanta Constitution. His extreme youth—he was about sixteen—would have excited our sympathy under other circumstances, but the war-worn veterans in the trenches had no use for the curled darling of the parlor, and Little Dandy's appearance was against him.

The lad wore the gray uniform of a private, but it was of the very finest material, finer than anything worn by our generals. His buttons had an unsoldierly glitter. He sported white handkerchiefs, carried a pocket-mirror, and every morning he combed and curled his golden locks until they looked like a girl's tresses.

"Hello, Little Dandy!" yelled the soldiers whenever the young fellow passed them.

To this rough salutation he always responded with a bow and a smile, but his soft ways did not win favor. When we met him in town we passed him by without notice, and in camp we let him alone. Little Dandy was proud after a fashion, too proud to notice the many slights heaped upon him. He went through his routine duties without complaint, but nothing could induce him to abandon his pocket mirror and his fancy toilets.

The siege was well under way, and we were no better acquainted with Little Dandy than at first. He shared our meals of moldy corn bread and mule meat without a murmur, and it must be admitted that this somewhat raised him in our estimation. But we still had to learn that a true heart beat behind those glittering buttons.

An angle of the enemy's works was dangerously close to our intrenchments, and we had to keep our heads well sheltered. When we raised a hat on the muzzle of a musket it was almost invariably riddled with bullets. One morning we found our men being picked off by an unseen sharpshooter at the rate of five or six an hour. This astonished us, because we were all keeping under cover, and the men who were killed all occupied well-protected positions.

Where was the sharpshooter? This was the uppermost question in every mind. We were not long in satisfying ourselves on this point. Just outside the angle of the Federal works stood a giant oak, whose leafy top afforded an admirable covert for a rifleman. A vigilant scrutiny convinced us that the man who was doing such deadly work in our ranks was concealed in this tree. To reach it he must have made his way there during the night and he would have to remain there all day. But we could not stand it even one day. His aim was ...

...bit the dust. We tried a rattling fire of musketry, but a moment's report of the rifle rang out and another comrade fell.

... from our position it ... to hit the Federal ... we succeeded in bringing him ... by some lucky random ... only a man outside the works ... to draw a bead on our wary ... he would be under the guns of ... there would be a thousand ... him.

... or die!" cried a shrill voice. ... It's Little Dandy!" shouted ...

... of our lives we peeped over ...

... had already made his way ... space between the works, and ... round the right of the tree. ... saw what he was up to and ... When the smoke cleared ... saw the boy with a flushed ... ramming hair aiming his gun at ... old oak there was a tremor. It rolled along both lines; ... Federal shout mingled in with ... yell."

... came tumbling and crashing ... the branches of the tree and ... with a dull thud.

... sharpshooter!

... rent the air, but this time ... the Confederates alone. A ... blazed along the Federal ... when the smoke lifted we saw ... coming full tilt in our direction ... on his face.

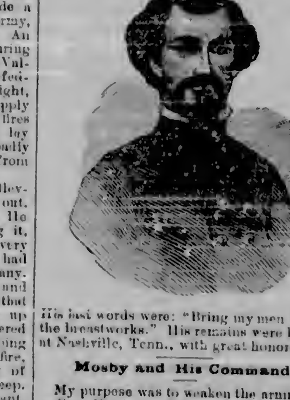
... "for Little Dandy!" leaped ... of throats, as the boy ... breastworks and we rushed ... him in our frenzy of ... joy. But Little Dandy sank ... of loose dirt, and then we ... stains on his breast.

... promise," he panted. And ... I took his hand, the ... into his face and said: ... "I've made a poor soldier, ... bothered you, I know. ... wanted to help you. Please ... I'm not very strong, and— ... best I could."

... over. Poor Little Dandy ...

General Zollicoffer.

Felix K. Zollicoffer was born in Maury County, Tennessee, May 19, 1812; received a common education; entered a printing office; afterward edited the Columbia ... the Nashville Banner; served ... from 1853 to 1859. On the ... war he was made a Brigadier ... and commanded ... Tennessee; invaded Kentucky ... at Camp Wild Cat and ... entrenched at Mill Spring, ... advanced and fought the battle ..., in which he was killed.



... were: "Bring my men inside ..." His remains were buried ... Tenn., with great honors.

Mosby and His Command.

... was to weaken the armies in... by harassing their rear, ... the partisan leader. As a ... strong as its weakest point, ...

CLEVELAND SAYS NO.

Sensational Statement Published by a Leading Western Democratic Journal.

The President Will Not Under Any Circumstances Accept a Second Term.

A special dispatch from Washington to the St. Louis Republican gives this rather startling information:

President Cleveland neither wishes nor will accept a renomination. This will be startling information to the country, setting at rest the important question of a second term, now the subject of interested consideration in political circles everywhere. The correspondent of the Republican has the highest possible authority for the statement, however, and it can be depended upon as strictly and entirely true. It comes from the President himself, who made a declaration to this effect Wednesday, to a prominent Democratic Senator from one of the Western States, who is on terms of especial intimacy at the White House. The President spoke with so much deliberate earnestness and such studied emphasis that the Senator with whom he was talking is certain there is no reason to question his perfect and entire sincerity. His manner, no less than his words, indicated that the declaration was simply the decision of a firm resolution which had resulted from careful consideration of all phases of the matter. The President said he had not given any intimation of his feelings to the representatives of the press for the simple reason that he felt nothing he might say about not wishing or being willing to take a second term would be believed. "I hardly expect anybody to believe it," he said, "except my wife, but it is so none the less."

Continuing, he added: "Everything I do, every appointment I make, they think it is to secure votes for me. On the contrary, I am counting the days that remain until my release from office, just as if I were a prisoner in confinement." No man, he said, could endure the severe strain of such labor, at once physical and mental, for a longer period than four years without risk of permanent injury to his health. For these reasons he could not think of a continuance of his term beyond the four years he was now half completed. Nothing, he said to his Senatorial visitor, would persuade him to alter this resolution, which he had deliberately formed. He did not want a second term, and he did not believe there were any obligations of public duty which could require him to forego his personal wishes.

The Senator, who has repeated this significant conversation to his friends, says that while the President was not talking for the purpose of setting his views about re-election before the public, there was no intimation that he desired his words to be regarded as confidential. The Senator has spoken freely of the interview to personal friends without any injunction of secrecy, and it is not unlikely this private discussion of the matter will eventually provoke some formal and public utterance by the President. The Senator is quite sure there was none of the coy strategy of the artful politician who thinks by this device to appear as being sought by rather than seeking the office in this disavowal of second term ambition by President Cleveland. He is convinced that every word is meant for just what it implies, and that it will be wholly useless to plan the next campaign on the basis of a renomination of Cleveland.

The President was specific and decided in saying he could not be induced by any possible considerations to change his mind, that there was nothing in the way of argument which could be brought to bear to alter a resolution determined alike by every consideration of personal comfort and happiness and by the most conscientious regard for what could fairly be asked of him as a patriotic servant of the people.

SWEPT BY STORMS.

Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, and Kentucky Devastated by Terrific Winds.

Scores of Men, Women, and Children Instantly Killed by Flying Debris.

In Missouri.

[Nevada (Mo.) special.]

A terrific cyclone swept over this (Vernon) county Thursday night, dealing death and destruction wherever it struck. Fences, houses, barns, and everything in the line of the storm, which was about half a mile wide, were picked up, rent into splinters, and cast down hundreds of yards away. These were torn up by the roots. Over ...

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 4, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Hazings from Hayes.

Geo. McRoberts is building a house near Agate point.

The social last Friday evening netted between five and six dollars.

School commenced at Burgess on Monday with Cora Chew as teacher.

Miss Maude A. Scott is attending the Charlevoix school.

Charlie Arnold has secured a position on the steamer VanRaalte.

Ezra Ferguson has rented his farm and will move into Joseph Moore's house.

Miss Katie Light of Carpenter, will teach the school in District No. 1.

A few more warm days will soon melt the ice that lingers in Little Traverse Bay.

Sugar making has ceased. The woods will soon be in leaf. Farmers are busy with their fencing and seeding.

The political party that elected Representative Dakin, of Saginaw, is inclined to disown him. Nevertheless, he remains a Fusionist with Democratic proclivities.

Anarchists have discovered that "liberty in the United States is a lie." But they should bear it constantly in mind that they can leave it at any time, unless they happen to have an engagement with some turnkey or sheriff.

"Speaking about the artist who painted fruit so naturally that the birds came and pecked at it," said the fat reporter, "I drew a hen that was so true to life that after the sage threw it into the waste basket it laid there."

There is the promise for another great wheat crop in North Dakota. The recent heavy rains have thoroughly soaked the ground, thus insuring a rapid growth of the plant, and the acreage sown will be from 10 to 25 per cent. larger than last year.

George William Curtis says the only chance of salvation for the Democratic party is to nominate Mr. Cleveland, and Mr. Cleveland declares emphatically that he will not be nominated again. According to Dr. Curtis' diagnosis, the Democratic party is in a bad way.

The supporters of the present dominion government succeeded in carrying Nova Scotia at the recent election, but they made little headway in allaying the demand for separation from the federation. The resolutions favoring withdrawal had a large majority in the provincial legislature.

Chicago Inter Ocean: If Cuban bandits had captured the Sherman party the stars and stripes would have floated over the banana island inside of three months, and Havana cigars would have "come in" without duty. There is a lot of boys who "marched to the sea" who would have enjoyed engaging in such a picnic.

Cleveland Leader: Civil Service reform has been thrown overboard by the administration. It is dead. It has no longer any power to check, control, or prevent dismissal from office, and the claim the Democrats are entitled to and must have the offices is now the rule of action. In this condition of affairs, with divided opinions and their cause already lost, where shall the mugwumps find rest and safety?

The Inter-State Commerce bill has made some difference to Grand Rapids furniture manufacturers in their shipping. They will now ship to Chicago by a different route than formerly. They will use flat boats from Grand Rapids to Grand Haven, where the cargo is to be re-loaded onto large vessels. The advance in rates from seven and fifteen cents to twenty six cents for everything is more than they can stand. The plan will be put into operation as soon as details can be arranged.

The official count of the late State elections gives Long, Republican candidate for long term Judge, 31,710 over Campbell, the Democratic nominee. Campbell's plurality is 30,940. The independent greenbackers polled 32,596 votes, and the prohibitionists 18,568. The prohibitory amendment was lost by 5,835 and the salaries amendment by 52,170. The total vote cast on the prohibitory amendment exceeded that cast for Supreme Judge by 1,304, there being 361,471 votes for the latter, to 362,775 for the amendment.

The Dakin Investigation at Lansing, to ascertain whether that representative from the Saginaw Valley really reported his fellow members to be purchasable and whether he had any good foundation for such a statement, is a serious and expensive interruption of the public business, especially if contrasted with the fact that it all sprang from one man's idle words. Dakin's loose aspersion on the character of his fellow members and of the body to which he belongs has been pretty well proven. The only refuge honorable to him, for an explanation of his utterances is an assumption that he is of unsound mind, or that the whole affair is a conspiracy against him. The former explanation apparently has some foundation. Dakin has not been known as a bad man, and his apparent indifference is inconsistent with a sane mind and live conscience. If not insane he is, under the most favorable construction, a weak man. If that is all, he made an appalling mistake in supposing that he could turn the aspirations of his fellow citizens at home to his pecuniary account. The indignation of members of the house at the allegations against their body is honorable to themselves and the state. The time has not come, and, let us hope never will come, when money can be employed to influence the course of business in the state legislature.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Remarks of Robert Miller on the Occasion of the G. A. R. Tree Planting.

Comrades:

This has been designated as a day on which it is expected that as many as can throughout the State will plant a tree. The object of such planting is to repair as far as possible the disastrous waste of our forests, and in a measure to correct the evil effect of such waste on our climate. The object is a laudable one.

While we are here to comply with the request of our Governor, we have thought best to make this a sort of memorial occasion, and plant our trees, not on account of their utility alone, but that they may beautify this plat of ground, and each perpetuate the name of some comrade that has had some part in perpetuating the unity of this nation.

That there is an immortality to which many attain is attested by the cloud of illustrious names that have come down to us from remote ages. Such names will continue to float on the page of history down the current of time to the vast ocean of the unknown future; each age, each generation adding to the number who attain to this immortality. Some attain to it through prominence in the church, others through great literary attainments, others through great discoveries or inventions, while another class attain it through the smoke and clash of battle, some for glory and others for home and native land.

Comrades: Few of us will ever attain to this immortality, but while history continues to be written or poetry sung, the soldiers whose bravery preserved this nation will continue to live. It should not be considered egotism or self-laudation in us who have each had some humble part in the late struggle, to prepare a suitable place where we may sleep our final sleep, and so beautify it as to make it a fitting monument, not alone to our memory, but to the cause we once represented.

This monumental place, long after we as individuals have been forgotten, may attract the attention of some of the passers-by in the distant future, and point a lesson to its young men as to their duty to home and native land. To do my part in this work I have planted this tree with water, without which neither animal life can long exist. I have moistened its roots in the hope that they may strike deep into the soil from whence the substance must be drawn to nourish and invigorate this tree till its leafy arms extend so that the wayfarer of coming generations may find rest and refreshment under their shadow.

He in whose name this tree is set has been ever ready to stretch out his arms in aid of any one who may have been in need of assistance. Therefore, in the name of our martyred Lincoln; in the name of him who once led our armies to victory, but who now sleeps on the banks of the Hudson; in the name of our comrades who suffered more than death in vile prison pens; in the name of those who fell with their face to the foe, and found honorable graves on southern soil; and, finally, in the the name and behalf of Baxter Post, G. A. R., Department of Michigan, we plant this tree, with the hope that it may be kissed by the sunshine and rain of long years to come, and perpetuate the name and memory of Edward H. Green, 107th Penn. V. I., and now the honored Commander of Baxter Post.

Last Saturday Governor Luce appointed Col. Daniel B. Ainger, editor of the Charlotte Journal, Adjutant General of the State troops, vice John Robertson, deceased.

Sidney Dillon, the railroad magnate, is reported as saying to a Toledo newspaper man, who asked if it were true that the New York business men were afraid of Blaine: "It is not. Mr. Blaine has more brains in a minute than Cleveland has in a year, and why should we be afraid of him? He would make a President who would command the respect of foreign nations. Such stuff is only talked in the opposition papers."

"I am surprised at the avidity with which the newspapers of the country swallow the statement that the President has expressed himself as satisfied with one term, and that he will not allow his name to be used again," said a Buffalo gentleman recently. "If there is any one thing certain in politics," he continued, "it is that Mr. Cleveland is not only ready but anxious for a second term. I do not believe that the idea of asking for a second nomination ever occurred to him when he wrote his celebrated letter to Mr. Curtis. At that time he was in a condition to be content with a single term. But events have ripened in the last two years, and besides he is married now, and the possession of a wife often changes a man's intentions entirely. I know absolutely from recent conversations that he has a very well defined desire to test his policy on the country. He has that feeling, so common in men in public office, to test the sense of the people on the manner in which he has fulfilled the trust imposed upon him. This feeling is a most natural one. Besides this Mrs. Cleveland has made no secret among her friends of her desire to continue as the mistress of the white house for another four years after her husband's first term as president expires. You may set it down as a certainty that the president will be guided largely by the wishes of his wife in this matter."

—Leroy Hamlin goes as engineer of the propeller VanRaalte.

—Engineer Beardslee said to our reporter this morning that Ironton or East Jordan could not be touched by the main line of the D. C. & E. From Newman's Creek the line will turn south and pass near Ellsworth. The question of touching at East Jordan he pronounces entirely impracticable. Ironton will be reached by a branch.

WANTED—A young woman, plain cook, to make herself generally useful in a private family. Apply to MRS. J. S. SMITHSON.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Northern Michigan.

Kalkaska saloon bonds are $3,000.

Frankfort's salt well goes down slowly.

Ice has badly damaged the Cross Village dock.

The Petoskey brick yard will be run by steam.

Torch Lake is furnishing a fine quality of salmon.

Wilcox Bros. will set 20 acres of strawberries near Manton.

J. Keller, of East Jordan has received $1,066 back pension.

Mancelona has five blacksmith shops, and keeps them all busy.

Fred Bechstein killed a large badger near Bellaire one day recently.

The Franciscans are preparing to build a large church at Harbor Springs.

The Mancelona Oval Dish Co. are now running 15 machines, their full number, in operation.

Cadillac is going to have electric lights, about sixty citizens having subscribed for the same.

The Westerhouse Co. have offered to give Cadillac six electric lights to run all night, at 50 cents per light per night.

White & Perkins have new tramways all around in their mill-yard, and have already the most lumber on hand they have ever had at one time.

Steel rails are being laid on the T. C. R. R. as rapidly as the work can be done, and the entire distance to Walton will soon be in prime condition.

The Spry Lumber Co., of Chicago have bought 3,500,000 of Hannah, Lay & Co.'s lumber stock at Traverse City, and Street, Chatfield & Keep, the balance of the stock, about as much more.

East Jordan hotels were closed to custom last week by their proprietors in consequence of the liquor question agitation at that place. The proprietors, we understand, claim that the hotel business there without the associated liquor traffic is non-paying.

Cadillac News: H. N. Green's maltese cat is an old stager and knows when to get in out of the cold. Coming round the corner of the house night before last, he waltzed up to the front door, rang the bell, and when the door was opened walked in as if it was an every day sort of an affair.

East Jordan has had enough of this thing. One day last week the the council refused to grant licenses. Later advices state that the council reconsidered this action, and have placed bonds at $4,000, and require all bool, billiard and gaming tables to be removed entirely from the building in which the business is conducted. Good for them.

Yuba correspondent Herald: On the 22d of April we found some golden russet apples in our orchard that were perfectly sound and had a good flavor which had lain under the snow all winter. What is the use of putting such fruit in the cellar here in Grand Traverse county, when they will keep good lying on the ground, unless it might be to have a few for present use.

A year ago the business men of Traverse City, thinking to advance their interests by a united effort, asked the G. R. & I. railroad to give them its best figure from Chicago, and promising for a reasonable reduction, to receive all their goods by rail. The railroad company made a reduction, the bargain was consummated for a year, and it made a most disastrous season's business for the City of Traverse, the steamer which made weekly trips between Chicago and Traverse City. This season the boat will be run on another route, which forces the wiley merchants to patronize the railroad, and the inter-state commerce bill, whether they want it or not.—Detroit News.

To Church Members.

Cut this out and paste it in the bible you use every day. Eleven reasons why you should always attend church:

1. It is your duty to do so. God commands it. Forsake not the assembling of yourselves as the manner of some is.

2. It is to your interest to do so. It promotes your growth in grace and knowledge. It also improves your style and language.

3. It is a means of salvation. It pleases God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

4. You need the services of the sanctuary as you do your daily food that you may grow. You need line upon line, precept upon precept.

5. Because if you stay away one day you may miss the very truth you need most.

6. It honors God and proves your loyalty. Neglect dishonors Him.

7. If it is one man's duty to preach the Gospel it is your duty to hear it.

8. To neglect this duty may ruin others; especially your own family.

9. The example will do good to others.

10. A continual dropping wears away a stone, and a continual wetting bleaches linen, so a constant keeping before the mind the Gospel of Christ purifies the heart.

"All we, beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory."

11. You can not spend your time to better advantage.

Study, reflect and act upon these suggestions.

W. H. MCCARTNEY.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

Ironton.

The "cast" of the furnace on Saturday was 53 tons.

A number of young people attended services at Charlevoix on Sunday.

Farmers are commencing spring work.

Miss Mary Harris visited friends last week.

Chris Huggard was chosen captain of the base ball club on Saturday.

The boys played four innings in 15 minutes at their base ball practice on Saturday.

R. A. Miller was the lowest bidder with approved bonds and so he runs the Ferry for this season.

A logging bee at Henry Hammond's last week resulted in adding 5 acres more to Henry's farm.

The father of Leon Ohshquaheno's wife, an ancient indian being about a century in years died at Leon's house last week and was buried on Saturday.

Rev. John B. Robinson, the Indian preacher, has appointment at the M. E. church next Sunday.

The French-German war-cloud still hovers threateningly over Europe.

Jesse Grant, the youngest son of General Grant, is the father of a bouncing boy, which is the especial favorite of his grandmother.

Father McGlynn, in a recent speech said: "Religion will never be right until we shall see a democratic pope walking down Broadway with a stove-pipe hat on his head and carrying an umbrella under his arm.

Sam Jones and Sam Small, the revivalists, are daily and nightly addressing great audiences in the exposition building at Minneapolis, the capacious hall being inadequate to accommodate the multitude.

Detroit Tribune: If President Cleveland did say he would retire from public life at the close of his present term, he probably meant that he would go with his party. Is there no applause for such a noble declaration as that?

A Cleveland man has invented a telegraph instrument with which he can communicate with the other world. The trouble with it is that the messages from Paradise and from Hades come over the same wire. That settles its genuineness.

The memory of Garfield will be appropriately honored by the unveiling of a bronze statue in Washington on May 12. It is a tribute from that gallant band of veterans, the Army of the Cumberland, Garfield's companions in arms. Judging from the brief description of the statue furnished in the Washington dispatches, it is worthy of the man whose life, services and death it stands for, as well as of the devotion of the brave and appreciative men who erect it. It is of heroic size, ten feet high, and will stand upon a granite pedestal eighteen feet high, for which Congress made an appropriation of $20,000.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

A. T. WASHBURNE AND CO.

WE ARE PUSHING THINGS!

DRY GOODS, CARPETS,
DRY GOODS, CARPETS,
DRY GOODS. CARPETS.

ASTONISHING RESULT OF NEW GOODS AND LOW PRICES.

Bound to sell and not be undersold. Our goods are well bought and are just what the people want. NEW, NEW, NEW! Don't buy old goods when you can get new ones cheaper.

Come in and see for yourselves. We have got just what you need.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.
Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

ONLY A FEW DAYS MORE

The work of repairing our store building will begin next week, and our

Closing Out Sale,

will continue only until that time

Great Bargains in Everything,

J. L. HURD & CO.

We have a large quantity of seasonable dress goods, worsteds, table linens, napkins, damasks, piques, towels, curtain nets, shades, gloves, hosiery, tickings, denims, jeans, cottonades, sheetings, shirtings, etc. Space will not admit of quoted prices but it is sufficient to say they are low enough. Now is the time to lay in a stock of Groceries.

Clover and Timothy seed at lowest prices.

J. L. HURD & CO.

WE MEAN TO SELL OUT!

WE MUST SELL OUT!

Rosenthal & Sons

Mammoth Stock of Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods will have to be disposed of by August First.

Purchasers can doubtless see that to this end we will make great reductions on all goods and we have decided for our customers' benefit, to sell,

REGARDLESS OF COST!

As this large stock cannot be easily transported.

Therefore it will be also for our benefit to make sacrifices.

Now is your Time to Buy!

AND DON'T FORGET IT!

COME AND SEE FOR YOURSELF, THAT WE MEAN WHAT WE SAY, BUSINESS!

ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Jas C Miller may 11 8

VOL. XIX. NO.--2 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1887. WHOLE NO. 911

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,
F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT

TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes

THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS / THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

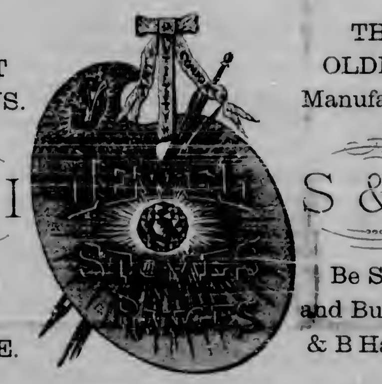
THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works / Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS. THE OLDEST Manufactur's



S & I S & I

THE MOST DURABLE. Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

---

Wait A Minute!

WHY NOT TRADE AT

WILL SEE & CO'S

Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.

A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.

TELEPHONE Orders promptly delivered.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—About time for the sprinkler.

—The railroad is a foregone conclusion.

—Bert Jarvis arrived in town last Thursday.

—And now begin to get ready for the festive resorter.

—R. A. Campbell, of Petoskey, was in town Monday.

—Hon. Richard Knight, of Banks, was in town Saturday.

—F. P. Myers, of Boyne Falls, was in town Thursday and Friday.

—Billy Dennis is back in his old place in Jay Prices barber shop.

—Dean Burns returned from his Canadian visit on Saturday.

—County Clerk Thatcher and Co. Treasurer Blair were in town Monday.

—Charlevoix is the liveliest town in the county if not in Northern Michigan.

—Will See & Co. have a telephone in their store for the benefit of their customers.

The Clara Belle returned from Manistee Friday and has resumed her old trip on Pine lake.

—Capt. "Bob" Tullock has bought 12,000 cedar ties of Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

—Byron See expects to put a stock of dry goods in his store soon after Rosenthal vacates it.

—This northern country is full of men buying potatoes. The price paid is from forty to fifty cents.

—Sheriff Jerrue tells us that he will positively be a resident of Charlevoix by June 1st or soon after.

—The Charlevoix railroad boom has begun, and is already affecting real estate matters in this vicinity.

—Dr. Crouter's drug store is undergoing artistic interior decoration at the hands of Charles Swallow.

—Not so many drunken Indians on the streets last Saturday as usual. Billy has taught them a lesson.

—The dredge is expected here about May 15, and work on the revetment begins about that time.

—Geo. W. Miller and wife returned from Chicago Friday. George bought a large line of clothing while there.

—Mrs. R. M. McKeel, sister of Mary A. Harkness has arrived from Minneapolis, Minn., to reside in Charlevoix.

—What broke W. G. Mitchell, the Detroit banker, was a loss of $65,000 in the Beaver Island Fishing company.

—The fire department were out Thursday evening with the steamer, and demonstrated their ability to do good work.

—J. S. Smithson occupied the M. E. pulpit Sunday evening, and preached a strong sermon on the Prodigal Son.

—The Tom Smith farm, in Marion, was sold last week to a southern Michigan man, on the strength of the railroad boom.

—A. T. Washburn & Co. have received the contract for furnishing the new Belvedere house with carpets, curtains, bedding etc.

—A prominent and wealthy Charlevoix gentleman is trying to buy the Chaloupka property in this village upon which to erect a big hotel.

—Prof. J. B. Allen is one of the railroad survey party, and manipulates the leveling instrument. Jos. R. Dixon runs the transit lines.

—Amos Fox and wife returned from Chicago on the Champlain Friday, bringing with them a large quantity of furniture for their new house.

—Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Moulton of East Jordan, removed to Charlevoix Saturday. Mr. Moulton contemplates putting in a stock of jewelry and silverware in Charlevoix.

—The 12th of May, Rev. Father Luke O. S. F. holding and filling the place of Rev. Father Ignatius, O. S. F. will arrive at Charlevoix. The 13th there will be services at 9 a. m.

—The State Pharmaceutical Association, embracing over 1000 druggists, holds its annual meeting at Petoskey, July 12, 13, and 14. On the 13th the Association will visit Charlevoix and a big day may be looked for.

—Dunham & Sutton of East Jordan propose to push the sewing machine business in Charlevoix county. If you or your neighbors wish a machine you will do well to consult their advertisement on our 8th page.

—The firm of Rosenthal & Son was dissolved, Friday. We are glad to announce that Alle Rosenthal will continue in business at Charlevoix. He has leased the south store of the Lewis block, which will be repaired and put in first class shape for occupancy by May 18th.

—Charlevoix is the cleanest town in Northern Michigan.

Charlie See is clerking in Will See & Co's grocery store.

—Perry Weed moved into his house on Clinton street, Saturday.

—R. A. Campbell of the Occidental, Petoskey, was in town, yesterday.

—Mrs. Ed Bedford bought a very fine Story & Clark organ last week of Dr. N. J. Perry, agent.

—Alick Rosenthal proposes to make rock-bottom prices on all goods in his stock, preparatory to removal May 18th.

—Jos. Beauvais has doubled the capacity of his boat landing by an extension in the rear of Major Green's property.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. wish to close out their present stock in order to move into their new quarters with new goods. See ad.

—Bellinger, the jeweler has just received the finest line of jewelry and silverware ever opened in Charlevoix. Call and see his fine assortment.

—The birds-eye view of Detroit given with Saturday's Evening Journal, is one of the most enterprising strokes of that most enterprising journal.

—Jordan river is full of logs, and is, consequently, an extremely hard road to travel, but it will be very much harder after the logs are out for violators of the fish laws.

—S. M. See arrived back from Milwaukee Friday by schooner Florence Smith, bringing a fine line of parlor and common furniture. See his advertisement elsewhere.

—Hon. A. Buttars is back in his old place in the Rifenburg flouring mill, and left Sunday for Manistique and the north country in the interest of that institution.

—Grand Traverse Herald: The Sentinel, Charlevoix, now comes cut and pasted. That paper is continually up to just such tricks always doing something to please its readers.

—At the Congregational church meeting held Monday evening, the resignation of Rev. C. F. VanAuken as pastor was accepted and the Board of Trustees were appointed as a committee of supply.

—Shipping promises to be lively this season. Last year 250,000 ties and posts were shipped from the county. Already this season W. H. Downer has purchased 300,000 pieces or 50,000 more than the entire product of last year.

—Josiah Gibson, a well known and respected citizen of Hayes, died Sunday night. His funeral occurred at the Methodist church yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of Baxter Post, G. A. R., Rev. W. H. McCartney preaching the sermon.

—The Commercial House at East Jordan, was sold Friday to Prof. A. B. Nicholas, the Principal of the school at that place. The price paid was $5,000, which included furniture and barn. The Enterprise speaks very highly of the new proprietor.

—The Rifenburg Milling Company propose to push things this season. The mill will be fully stocked with grain and run to its fullest capacity night and day. Their grades of flour are rapidly coming into popular favor, and their is no question about a market for them.

—Mr. Connable's fish tug, the Ethel J. put out on Monday morning for the first trip of the season, carrying many miles of gill nets for setting. By noon to-day nearly forty miles of nets will be spread by Connable & Son, and "lifting" will begin to-morrow and next day.—Record, 4th.

—Attorney General Taggart has handed down an opinion upon the question often raised in this part of the country as to the eligibility of a Sheriff to hold office as Marshal. Under date of April 30 he writes that in his opinion article 10 of the constitution, section 5, is not applicable to village offices or those of any corporation, and that a sheriff is eligible to the office of village marshal.

—During the Soo boom a few weeks ago the SENTINEL spoke of the preacher who having collected $2,000 to build a new church, made $10,000 on it in real estate speculations. Now a story is going the rounds to the effect that a few Sundays ago the same clergyman, still having his real estate deal on the brain announced his text as follows: "Brethren, you will find my text this morning in lot 1, block 3 Chapman's addition."

—On Monday Amos Fox put a force of men at work in making extensive repairs on his store building, occupied by J. L. Hurd & Co. The building will be raised five feet from the foundation, a new front put in, and the interior thoroughly overhauled. Mr. Hurd will remove a part of his stock to one side of the Fox & Miller boot and shoe store while the workmen are engaged on the interior.

The Grand Rapids World closes a lengthy article on the summer resorts of Northern Michigan as follows: "Northern Michigan may not possess the rich gold mines of the Pacific slope, nor the fertile prairies of the western states, nor even the inexhaustible coal beds of Pennsylvania, yet in her rough and beautifully diversified surface, in her grandly broken and varied coast-line, and in her cool and refreshing breezes, she has treasures which by little labor, will develop into sources of continual gain to her citizens."

THE D. C. & E. R. R.

Its Construction as Positively Certain as Anything Can Be in This Uncertain World.

Several meetings of the Board of Directors of the D. C. & E. R. R. Co. have been held here lately, the proceedings of which have not been made public.

It is now no secret, however, that the Board have formulated plans embodying an aggressive campaign, which was inaugurated last week by starting out an engineer corps from this place. The survey is in the hands of one of the best known and most competent railroad engineers in the State, and a fact which is very encouraging to the stockholders is that Mr. Beardslee is enthusiastic in his work, and expresses himself very freely as to the feasibility of the project.

He regards the route a practicable one, and cheaply graded. That the road will pay from the beginning he has no doubt, passing as it does through richly timbered lands, most of which is superior for agricultural purposes. The intermediate valley, through which the road will pass, with its extensive interior coast line, is one of the most promising portions of the State, and will yield large and increasing traffic to the road.

President Cherrie is equally hopeful concerning the road. He thinks that grading will be begun within ninety days. No serious trouble is anticipated in securing the right of way. A profile made, and the right of way secured, if the M. C. R. R. Co. do not come to the front, lease the line and build the road, funds will be secured on bonds, and the work begun and pushed. The latter project has been looked up, and authority given for the statement that it can be accomplished.

President Cherrie is wide awake on the subject, and means business in its broadest sense. Iron is booming, and is likely to continue so; therefore the Iron Co. must have an all-the-year outlet for the product of their furnace. Mr. Cherrie has been heard to say that if $10,000 from them would insure the road this year, they would draw their check for that amount at once.

Not only is this end of the line in dead earnest on the subject, but Bellaire and Kalkaska have their eyes wide open, and are determined that the D. C. & E. R. R. shall be a reality.

The SENTINEL has never believed in building up false hopes, but we are firm in the opinion that this road will be in process of construction before snow flies, and in operation within one year from the date of the first breaking of ground.

Charlevoix is to have a railroad outlet, and, indeed, two of them; for we must not lose sight of the fact that the C. & W. M. folks make no secret of their intention to push their road up this shore at once.

Money invested in this region about now, will be well invested. There is no "Soo" boom about it. There is a certainty that we are upon the eve of a new era of growth and business prosperity.

Everything points to it.

Norwood Notes.

The past week has been very fine and the greater part of the seeding is done.

Fred Meech and wife were in town over Sunday.

George H. VanPelt is home again and will stay with us until the first of June.

Ernest Harris has sold his house and lot to Frank Pearl. Consideration 325 dollars.

Frank Richardson who started for Kansas about 10 days ago, changed his mind and went to Lowell, Mass., to see his parents who reside there.

T. F. Nelson has been stopping in town the past week with his little daughter who has been sick. He goes from here to Kenosha.

There will be a meeting at the town hall on Saturday evening of this week to talk up the matter of making improvements on the cemetery grounds.

Out of 13 births reported in the town of Norwood for 1886—9 were boys and only 4 girls.

Wedding bells and orange blossoms are again in order. This time on account of Mary Moore and William Cowen, who were married on Wednesday evening of last week.

—The Joseph H. Keane Dramatic Co., which showed at Opera Hall three nights of last week, is a very creditable combination, Mr. Keene especially, being a comedian of exceptional ability. They lost money here, however.

—Considerable apprehension has been felt lest the commerce law might interfere with the resort business of Northern Michigan, by preventing the usual reduced rates. The INDEPENDENT is able to assure all persons interested that such will not be the case. The regular reduced rates to members of the different associations and the usual reductions to the public will be made this year the same as before. At least this is true of the G. R. & I. railroad, which has built up the entire resort business by a broad and liberal policy, and which proposes to maintain the course which has proved so successful. We have also the best of reasons to predict that officers and directors of resort associations who have hitherto had passes will use them as usual this year, and if any have surrendered their passes we advise them not to invest much money in mileage tickets just at present.—Harbor Springs Independent.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX - - MICHIGAN.

IN THE LANE.

BY JOHN VANCE CHENEY.

And art thou then, my heart, too old,
Ever to leap with love again,
To feel the strong blood-torrent rolled
Through heaving breast and teeming brain?
Is it no more, my heart, for thee
Life's one unquestioned ecstasy?

Are faded quite those dim, far days
When music mothered every sound,
When up and down youth's happy ways
Fared glories on enchanted ground?
Has chill of years killed every joy
That blossomed for the wandering boy?

There are the trees once known so well
We felt to them all but beknown;
Their very shadow we could tell
From others by the forest thrown.
The same glad songs from bush and bough—
As once we heard, we hear them now.

And there sweet flowers beneath my feet,
Their young eyes greet us as of yore.
The hope, there! Still they think to meet
Her glance that shall not answer more;
To us alone it cannot be
They're looking up so tenderly.

This is the same gray path we took
Behind the slowly going day;
As they do now, the light leaves shook
When evening breezes blew this way;
And there's the glow upon the dome,
And here the cows are coming home.

Ah, no, good heart, thou still canst stir,
Still lives the love first bid thee leap;
Still are we at the side of her
They laid away 'neath yonder steep.
Though clods be on her and a stone,
In the dear old lane we're not alone.

—Century.

A RACE FOR A PRIZE.

BY FRANK J. MARTIN.

On a bright autumnal afternoon in 1870, a stranger appeared in Raton. He came from the North and registered at the "Riverside" as Alex. Beaver. His rough [illegible]

He made up his mind to propose at once and meet his fate. With this end in view, he called one evening, and was confronted in the parlor by Mr. Pitts, his rival. The conversation was forced from one subject to another without the slightest bit of satisfaction to either Pitts or Alex. At last it drifted around to Pinto, a neighboring town some thirteen miles distant.

Rosie, who had been doing all the talking expressed a determination to visit Pinto the following day, and concluded by saying in a half doubtful, entreating way, that she wished some one would call over for her in the afternoon so that she would have an escort home.

Before Pitts could move a muscle, Alex. offered his services.

"But, Mr. Beaver does not ride," enjoined Pitts.

"Beg pardon," replied Alex. "he does, although not often."

"But I am going over on business," persisted Pitts, "and can relieve you of the journey."

"Thanks, I am delighted at your kindness, but I am forced to decline your offer, for a ride is just what I want," replied Alex., rather sarcastically.

Rosie was delighted at the turn affairs had taken, while Pitts was baffled. Pitts resolved to go, so he continued his plea, saying: "I will be going over about four, and if you don't mind I will take a little run with you."

This was looked upon in the light of a challenge by Alex., and he readily assented to it. By way of an inducement it was also agreed that the one to arrive first at a given point in Pinto was the one to return home with Rosie. The arrangements made, Mr. Pitts departed, full of bright expectations, while Alex. hurried off to his lodgings, there to devise a means of arriving in Pinto ahead of his rival. The only way to get there was on horseback, and Alex. had not mounted a horse for sixteen years, and then only an old lame one at that.

About half-past three on the following afternoon Alex. entered a "fashionable" stable and held a long consultation with the proprietor. Soon a white horse was led out for his inspection. After having been assured more than a dozen times that "the horse was gentle and would stay wherever he was tied," Alex. mounted and went to meet his fate.

He let the horse walk gently all the way out of town and then to the meeting place. Arrived there, he had not long to wait, for soon Pitts dashed up on a powerful roan. After a few inquiries they were ready. Pitts put the spur and whips to his horse and made a bold dash for the trail. Alex. attempted to follow suit. His horse would not move a foot.

In vain did Alex. dig into his ribs, pet, coax, and scare. The horse simply stood still. Alex. looked up and saw Pitts clearing a hill about two miles distant. No time was to be lost. He dismounted, grasped a heavy stick, and remounted. Getting a firm hold, he dealt the horse a heavy blow on the side of the head. The horse hesitated no longer. With one great lunge he started, but instead of following the trail he made across the plains.

A new difficulty now presented itself. Alex. could not guide or even check the horse. All he could do was to keep a firm hold and trust to luck, which he did with good taste.

The horse was an old ranch "hack," and the way he would clear a stream amazed Alex. Over huge rocks, across sickly streams, up hill and down, the beast would fly, every moment increasing his speed and energy.

Ten miles had been covered and the horse was going at a terrific gait. Two miles more and for the tenth time they gained a table-land. This time a large town came in view, and to Alex's. delight, he found it to be Pinto.

But where is Pitts? and how can I stop this horse? were two important questions for Alex. to decide. He had not long to wait, for Pitts dashed up from the trail and was soon alongside of him.

The race became exciting. The white horse realized that he had a rival and went [illegible]

... afterwards.

[illegible]

the honey like dogs upon a lame coon. When the excited officers reached the scene they were informed that a countryman had fired the tree. By that time, however, the countryman was fifty miles away.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE LION.

The lion is called the king of beasts in order to advertise Barnum and Forepaugh's circuses. He inhabits a great share of the earth, but his favorite stamping ground is Africa. He feeds altogether on flesh, and there must be many times in life when he wonders why nature didn't put an extra compartment in and allow him to eat hay. His roar is one of the grand sounds of the forest, and is calculated to lift a man up a tree at the rate of a foot a second. It is said that if a lion leaps over you in his spring he will drop his tail and flee. Everybody should remember this and be prepared to duck. He is supposed to live 100 years in his wild state, but they can't be carted around in a cage over fifteen before the ginger-bread and pink-lemonade stiffens their limbs in death.—Detroit Free Press.

ORDERING FOR TWO.

Hotel waiter (to little girl)—Will you order your breakfast, please?

Little girl's mamma—Some oatmeal, I think, waiter.

Little Girl—Mamma, the waiter spoke to me. A French chop, please, with tomato sauce, English bacon, Lyonaise potatoes, buckwheat cakes and coffee, and let the coffee be strong and hot.

Little girl's mamma (with a sigh)—You may bring me the same.—New York Sun.

Is IT to be assumed that parsimony is unknown among the members of a liberal party?

PIGEON-ROOST MASSACRE.

The Story of a Tragedy Enacted in Southern Indiana in the Early Days.

[A. W. Tobias, in Madison Courier.]

Pigeon Roost was the name of a small settlement formed in 1809, and was so called from the innumerable number of pigeons that roosted in that vicinity. It was situated five miles from Scottsburg, the present county-seat of Scott, and near a beautiful stream that bears the memorable name until this day. At the time of the massacre most of the men were away from home. In the afternoon of September 3, 1812, Elias Payne and a Mr. Collings, while out bee-hunting one and one-half miles from the present site of Vienna, were surprised and killed by a party of Shawnee warriors. Scalping their victims, they hastened toward the settlement, which they reached about sundown. In one short hour one man, five women, and sixteen children were struck dead by the ruthless tomahawk of the fiendish savages. Among the killed were Henry Collings and wife, Mrs. Payne and her eight children, Mrs. Collings and her seven children, Mrs. John Norris, her own child and aged mother-in-law—for the aged were spared no more than the infant. Mrs. Biggs concealed herself and children in a sink-hole, until the Indians became busily engaged in burning and plundering, when she fled, and succeeded in reaching the residence of her brother. John Collings, son of William E. Collings, had just caught a horse to go after the cows, when he saw an Indian approaching in a threatening attitude. He dropped the rein and fled, pursued by the savage, who was gaining on him, when he heard the report of his father's rifle, and saw the savage fall with the blood streaming from his breast. He succeeded in reaching the house in safety. There were in the house: William E. Collings (whom the Indians well knew, and from his unerring aim named Long Knife), his two children, John and Lydia, and Captain Norris. They kept the Indians back until about dark. They knew that as soon as it was dark enough for the Indians to approach the house without being seen, they would set fire to it, and burn them alive. They therefore decided to risk the peril of escape. Lydia went first, then her brother John, followed by Norris, and, lastily, "Long Knife." As the latter was passing the corn-crib an Indian fired at him. He immediately raised his gun to return the fire when he found that the ball fired by the savage had broken the lock of his gun. He hallooed to Norris to bring him the other gun, but Norris was like the Irishman. "He had a brave heart, but cowardly pair of legs," and they carried him away, leaving Collings to fight the Indians alone with a broken gun. When they crowded him too close he would raise his gun and pretend that he was going to fire, and thus frighten them back; for they well knew, from the many shooting-matches in which he came out second to none, that it was folly to stand before his aim. In this way he reached the corn-field, under cover of which he escaped. After plundering the houses the Indians set fire to them and most of the dead bodies were consumed. However, some of the children were pierced by sharp sticks and left sitting against trees. Their horrible deed accomplished the Indians started northward. A large force of Clark County militia were soon gathered from the vicinity of Charlestown, which reached the scene of carnage, while the smoking remains of the cabins and charred bodies presented the most horrible spectacle they had ever witnessed. They immediately pursued the savages to the Muscatatuck, which they found so much swollen that they could not effect a crossing, and were compelled to give up the pursuit. They then returned and buried the remains of the victims in two graves, about one hundred yards east of the J., M. & I. Railroad, and near what is since known as the Pigeon-roost or Sodom Cemetery. At present there is nothing to show where the graves are except three or four rough stones and a large sassafras tree, which is said to have witnessed the event, but is now thought to be entirely dead.

SHARP TRICKS OF LONDON THIEVES.

London thieves, says the Youths' Companion, have the reputation of being very clever in their profession. Their coolness while engaged in stealing and the tact with which they get out of a surprise are illustrated by many anecdotes. The landlord of a hotel in Belgrave square met, as he started to go up his own stairs, a man coming down backward with a feather-bed on his shoulders. "What have you got there, my man?" asked the landlord.

"A bed for you, sir," answered the man.

"Nonsense! It is not for me. I have not ordered any bed."

"No. 22 Belgrave square, sir."

"Ah, I thought so. It's next door."

The man turned, and bore the bed off before the landlord's eyes, who did not discover his loss until too late.

A Mr. Wagstaff, who kept the Waterloo hotel, was robbed one day in the most barefaced way. A respectable-looking man rang at the front door. The servant opened the door and was addressed as follows:

"Mr. Wagstaff has fallen off one of the barges into the river and wants a change of clothes, but don't tell Mrs. Wagstaff, as it may frighten her."

The lady, however, was listening, and coming forward asked the man if he was sure her husband was not hurt.

"Not a bit, ma'am."

The story was plausible, for her husband, being a coal merchant, had business on the barges. She went upstairs, brought down dry clothes, and gave them to the man.

"Don't you think, ma'am," said he, looking her straight in the face, "they would look better if you tied them up in a silk handkerchief?"

She did so, and fetched him a nice one. When her husband came home Mrs. Wagstaff discovered that she had been duped by a smart London thief.

The Lord Mayor, a few years ago, was trying a case at the Mansion House. Not satisfied with the testimony of a witness, he cautioned him to be careful, saying: "You must be very careful in your statements, for I could have sworn that when I arose this morning I had put my watch into my pocket, and I have only just missed it, and now recollect that I left it on my dressing-table." On his return home the lady mayoress asked what had caused him to send so many messengers in such quick succession for his watch and chain, as but one could take it to him. His lordship then saw his indiscretion. Several professional thieves had started immediately for that watch and the first one had obtained it.

REAL GIANTS.

The existence of whole nations of gigantic persons may well be questioned; but there can be no reasonable doubt of the reality of certain individuals, whose height has greatly exceeded that of men in general. The giant as a curiosity has been seen by nearly every American boy in the museum and in the circus. The stories of great giants of the past ages are more than interesting. The exact height of Og, the King of Bashan, has been frequently given; some supposing him to have been more than twelve feet in height, while others think his stature did not exceed eleven feet. In like manner the giant Goliath, of the Bible, is generally computed to have been nine feet nine inches high; but commentators suppose that he might have been fully eleven feet.

The Emperor Maximinus was nine feet in height, and several other Romans of equal stature are said to have lived during the reign of Augustus. Accounts are contained in the philosophical transactions of royal society, of the human skeletons dug up in England, measuring eight and nine feet in length. Those are probably the remains of Romans. Many fabulous and contradictory stories have been told at one time of the Patagonians, who, according to travelers, have been a race of giants. An English official once declared that he had measured the bones of men, in sepulchres in South America, between eleven and twelve feet high. Turner, the naturalist, declares that he once saw upon the coast of Brazil, a race of gigantic savages, one of whom was twelve feet in height. The declaration of Turner is all the more credible, by the statement of M. Thevet, of France, who in his description of America, published in Paris in 1575, asserts that he saw and measured the skeleton of a South American which was eleven feet five inches in length. To these remarkable instances may be added a well-proportioned living man, whom Diemerbroek saw at Utrecht, measuring eight feet six inches. Dr. Becanus, an ancient scholar, reports having seen a youth of nine feet, a man of ten feet, and a woman nine feet in height.

Walter Parsons, who acted as porter to King James I., of England, was seven feet six inches in stature. But the Chinese claim to have had men among them in the last century who were fifteen feet high. However, this report may have no more foundation than the chronological fables of the sons of China.

PULSE BEATS.

It is strange how few people know what their normal pulse is, said a physician. They know that their average pulse is about seventy, and imagine that they are well or otherwise as their pulse approaches or departs from this standard. It is true that an average of all pulses would give a result of about seventy beats, but in no other physical peculiarity is there such wide individual variation. I had two students in my office at the same time, both very strong and remarkably healthy young men. The normal pulse of one was 47 and the other 93. This difference is unusual, few pulses falling below 60 or rising above 80 in a healthy subject, but an unusually slow or rapid pulse is no indication whatever of disease, as is popularly supposed to be the case. Most people overestimate their pulse, as they often count its beats when talking about the matter, and it is a fact well-known to physicians that the excitement of conversation will quicken the pulse from five to twenty beats. The best time to arrive at the true normal is shortly after walking in the morning, when the nerves are excited. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PRETTY KITCHENS.

There is no objection to a pretty kitchen, or to a girl filling one up with bric-a-brac, if she keeps it free from dust. A kitchen to those who do the work in it is the living room, and why should it not be made convenient and pretty? If the kitchen is a comfortable, cherry room, most girls will take a pride in keeping it so. Give them pink-colored tissue paper for the shelves, if they wish it, and a fancy lamp-shade to rest by after the kitchen is tidied up for the night. See, too, that they have convenient utensils to cook with, a good clothes-wringer, and plenty of clothes-pins, and a good stove. It will pay you well to look after these things in the good wholesome dishes that will come on the table well cooked. Many girls have to do with makeshifts that you would not think possible for yourself to use—a broken wringer, a tub without handles, or a washboiler or a teakettle with a rag run through a hole to prevent leaking. No girl likes to ask for repairs, and oftentimes the mistress is too careless to look well after the little things of her kitchen.—Detroit Tribune.

A GERMAN medical journal asserts that boiled milk is more easily and rapidly digested than unboiled milk and that the curds are softer.

OUR FELINE FRIENDS.

Odd Freaks, Capers, and Devotion of the Household Pet.

[Pittsburgh Dispatch.]

On the battle-field of Sebastopol a week subsequent to the conflict, cats were found clinging to the knapsacks of their masters, whom they refused to leave after their death.

A curious story is related by a correspondent of the London Field of a tabby cat which produced and successfully reared a family of five kittens in a disused magpie's nest at the top of an elm tree.

A cat carried a live snake into a dwelling-house of W. H. Stephenson, at Hartwell, Ga., recently, and when it was discovered was playing with it as if it were a rat. The snake was killed and the cat's fun destroyed.

Some felines may be destitute of gratitude; all are not. A cat, whose leg had been mangled by a trap, was tenderly nursed by its mistress until the wound was healed. Thenceforward for many months each mouse that became its prey was taken to its mistress, the cat refusing to eat it until she had accepted the gift and then restored it to its donor.

Upon a cape extending from the Isle of Cyprus there formerly stood a monastery whose monks were solemnly bound to keep cats to destroy the snakes infesting the island. When a certain bell rang the cats came to their meals, and then set forth again in pursuit of the reptiles. The monastery and cats were destroyed by the Turks, who conquered the island toward the close of the sixteenth century, but for many years after the cape was called "Cat Cape."

A noted singer of Paris once had a cat possessed of such an ability to detect a musical imperfection that she never sang a piece in public until she had sung it to puss, confident that she would please an audience if her rendition was satisfactory to the cat.

Among the Copts (says a writer in the Cosmopolitan), the descendants of the inhabitants of ancient Egypt, the notion is entertained to this day that twins (until 10 or 12 years of age), if they go to bed hungry, roam about in the guise of cats, their bodies lying at home apparently dead.

According to Peter Huc, the Chinese used the cat as a clock. "They pointed out to us," says the missionary, "that the pupil of its eye contracted gradually as noon drew near; that at noon it was like a hair, or an extremely fine line, traced perpendicularly on the eye. After midday the pupil again began to dilate. When he had attentively examined the cats in the place, he concluded it was past noon. The eyes of all presented an exactly similar appearance."

A cat got upon the rim of a high fly-wheel which runs in a pit at an electric-light station in Brooklyn. The wheel was soon making twenty revolutions a minute. It was impossible to rescue the cat from its perilous position without stopping the engine and putting out all lights dependent upon the dynamos in the station, so that the unfortunate animal had to ride until the engine was stopped at the usual hour for putting out the lights. The cat then dropped exhausted from the wheel, but soon revived, and was none the worse for its strange experience. It is estimated that in the seven hours which the animal spent on the wheel near the rim it traveled more than three hundred miles.

THE LEGEND OF THE TWO SACKS.

There is an ancient legend that tells of an old man who was in the habit of traveling from place to place, with a sack hanging behind his back and another in front of him.

What do you think these sacks were for? Well, I will tell you.

In the one behind him he tossed all the kind deeds of his friend, where they were quite hid from view; and he soon forgot all about them.

In the one hanging round his neck, under his chin, he popped all the sins which the people he knew committed; and these he was in the habit of turning over and looking at as he walked along, day by day.

One day, to his surprise, he met a man wearing, just like himself, a sack in front and one behind. He went up to him and began feeling his sack.

"What have you got here, my friend?" he asked, giving the sack in front a good poke.

"Stop, don't do that!" cried the other, "you'll spoil my good things."

"What things?" asked number one.

"Why, my good deeds," answered number two. "I keep them all in front of me, where I can always see them, and take them out and air them. See, here is the half-crown I put in the plate last Sunday; and the shawl I gave to the beggar girl; and the mittens I gave to the cripple boy; and the penny I gave to the organ grinder; and here is even the benevolent smile I bestowed on the crossing sweeper at my door; and—"

"And what's in the sack behind you?" asked the first traveler, who thought his companion's good deeds would never come to an end.

"Tut, tut," said number two, "there is nothing I care to look at in there! That sack holds what I call my little mistakes."

"It seems to me that your sack of mistakes is fuller than the other," said number one.

Number two frowned. He had never thought that, although he had put what he called his "mistakes" out of his sight, every one else could see them still. An angry reply was on his lips, when happily a third traveler, also carrying two sacks, as they were, overtook them.

The first two men at once pounced on the stranger.

"What cargo do you carry in your sack?" cried one.

"Let's see your goods," said the other.

"With all my heart," quoth the stranger; "for I have a good assortment, and I like to show them. This sack," said he, pointing to the one hanging in front of him, "is full of the good deeds of others."

"Your sack looks nearly touching the ground. It must be a pretty heavy weight to carry," observed number one.

"There you are mistaken," replied the stranger; "the weight is only such as sails are to a ship, or wings are to an eagle. It helps me onward."

"Well, your sack behind can be of little good to you," said number two, "for it appears to be empty; and I see it has a great hole in the bottom of it."

"I did it on purpose," said the stranger; "for all the evil I hear of people I put in there, and it falls through and is lost. So you see I have no weight to drag me down backwards."

—Exchange.

DEFENSIVE ARMOR AT THE TIME OF THE NORMAN CONQUEST.

The principal garment worn in battle at this time by both Normans and Englishmen who were rich or powerful (for the ordinary people fought in their every-day clothes) was so shaped as to cover the arms to the elbow and the legs to the knee. It was made of leather or strong cloth, on which were sewed small plates or rings of metal. It was probably also wadded, as an additional protection. Sometimes, instead of the plates or rings, a trellis-work of leather was made and strengthened with studs. The garment had a square opening in the breast, to enable the wearer to struggle into it, first his legs, then one arm, then the other. When he was in, a flap was buckled or buttoned across the opening. A hood, of the same material as this body garment, covered the head and shoulders. On top of the hood was placed a helmet of iron and bronze, conical, or nearly so in shape, and fitting round the head like a hat. A piece of iron came down from the rim in front, protecting the nose, and partially masking the face. There was sometimes a similar piece to cover the back of the head and the nape of the neck. These helmets must have been both heavy and uncomfortable, as the whole weight rested on the head, and a perfect fit must have been difficult to obtain. William and one or two of his greatest nobles wore hose protected by plates or rings, like their coats; but most men, noble and simple, relied in battle on an elaborate arrangement of straps reaching from the knee to the ankle, and recalling that worn to-day by the peasants of the Roman Campagna. On their left arms the warriors carried almond-shaped shields, three or four feet long. For these the English sometimes substituted round or oval shields. The shield was probably made of wood, covered with leather, and having a border of metal and a projection, or boss, of metal in the widest part. The studs which held the straps by which the shield was carried also appeared on the outside. The surface, slightly curved and generally of one plain color with a border, was sometimes decorated with color lines, a cross, or the figure of a dragon. Armorial bearings did not appear on shields until a later date.—Edward J. Lowell, in Scribner's Magazine.

THE "NORTHER" AND THE "CHINOOK."

Down in the Texas country some warm afternoon you ride out on the prairie in your shirt-sleeves to hunt up the ranch horses. You swear as you fan the mosquitoes out of your face with your hand. By and by you see a blue line along the northwestern horizon, and feel a little breath of fresh air—just enough to make you feel good. Then, if you are not a tenderfoot, you quit hunting horses and hunt your ranch. In about seventeen seconds more you are riding a dead heat for headquarters, holding your hat on, while a wind thirty-seven and a half degrees colder than zero is blowing the nails out of your horse's shoes. A norther is upon you.

In Montana some morning you find the temperature about fifty degrees below zero. You have a couple of miles to travel. You put on a fur cap, fur mittens, a buffalo overcoat and get into a sleigh, wrap yourself up in six buffalo robes and start out. By and by you see a blue streak along the horizon in the northwest. You feel a breath of air, and in fifteen seconds you have pulled off your overcoat, are swinging on with all your might to your useless buffalo robes, which the wind is blowing to tatters, and as you drive at a 1:08¾ gait to reach home with your sleigh before the snow is all gone, you look around to see if the wild roses are in bloom. A chinook is upon you. We get all our chinooks from the northwest, just as you do your northers. Our bad weather we get from the east and southeast—from our neighbors over in Dakota. I feel like remarking, too, that our sister territory always has in stock a heavy supply of badly-damaged weather, and never fails to ship us an invoice when the air currents are from the right direction.—Montana Cor. Texas Livestock Journal.

COULD PROVE A LULLABY.

"But, your Honor," said the prisoner, "I am not guilty of this crime. I have three witnesses who will swear at the hour when this man was robbed I was at home, in my own chamber, taking care of my baby.

"Yes, your Honor," glibly added the prisoner's counsel, "that is strictly true. We can prove a lullaby, your Honor."—Youth's Companion.

THE OTHER ONE.

"So you have got a step-mother?" she said to a girl of seven.

"Yes."

"Well, I feel sorry for you.

"Oh, you needn't do that," replied the little one. "Please feel sorry for pa."—Detroit Free Press.

"WHEN I was your age," said old Mr. Trot, "I rose with the lark." "I beat you clear out of sight, then," said Tom, wearily and triumphantly; "I've been up all night."

FUN.

CHESTNUT heir—the son of a negro minstrel.—Merchant Traveler.

You will never hear a man who edits a paper say no news is good news.

IT is bad form as far as fashion goes for a lady to drop her bustle when she is out shopping.

AN unsteady man, like an unsteady light, is apt to go out nights.—Burlington Free Press.

ONE in five of the Yale freshmen use tobacco. Probably a good many of the others smoke cigarettes.—Somerville Journal.

MOTHERS with mischievous, sweet-toothed sons of an early age, find it almost impossible to put up jam and preserves in heir tight jars.

WE admire a man who is full of grit, but when it comes to a clam chowder full of grit we are less enthusiastic in our admiration.—Boston Courier.

A LADY took her little boy to church for the first time. Upon hearing the organ he was on his feet instanter. "Sit down," said the mother. "I won't," he shouted. "I want to see the monkey."

A CHAPLAIN was once lecturing to a class of collegians about the formation of habits. "Gentlemen," said he, "close your ears against bad discourses." The scholars immediately clasped their hands to their ears.

SAYS a philosopher: "The nerve that never relaxes, the cheek that never blanches, the eye that never wanders, these are the matters of victory." And so they are to the lightning rod man and the book agent.

BROWN—Why don't you spread your umbrella? Coles—Well, to tell the truth, I'm afraid some one in the crowd will recognize it. Brown—Then why do you carry it? Coles—Afraid some one will call for it while I'm out.—Chicago Ledger.

TALMAGE said in his lecture the other night that "the man who can sing and won't sing should be sent to Sing Sing." That would be too severe. It is the man who can't sing and will sing who should be sent to Sing Sing. P. S.—For ninety nine years.—Norristown Herald.

LONG centuries ago the old Greeks, when anything went wrong, blamed the gods for it. Since then the gods have grown a-weary of the business and closed the shop. So nowadays, when things go wrong, men blame their wives. Always? O no, not always. Just invariably.—Burdette.

AN Austin man, meeting a journalistic friend, asked: "Are you still on the Party Bugle?" "No. I quit the paper two months ago," replied the journalist. "Why did you quit?" "Because there was no stove in the office. I can't write red-hot editorials all day with my cold feet." The gentleman was surprised to learn that Texas journalists wrote with their feet.—Texas Siftings.

ON A FAITHLESS FRIEND.

He was a faithless friend and when he died
At Heaven's gate for entrance he applied.
St. Peter shook his head and said, "Oh! no,
You cannot enter here; apply below."
To Tophet's gate the faithless friend then went,
A glittering eye the Devil on him bent,
And scanning him o'er, with aspect most austere,
He grimly said, "You cannot enter here.
You went back on a friend on earth, you see,
How do you know you won't go back on me?"
—Boston Courier.

HOW MARRIAGE CHANGED HIM.

Ye poet wrote unto ye maide
And told his love far sweeter
Than any suitor'd e'er essayed
Before—in verseful meter.
Ye damsel did reciprocate
The throbs of his heart-beater;
Soon at the altar he [illegible]
In wedlock went to meet her
* * * * * *
Ye husband writes no more "soft" rhyme!
For, by a household cheater
He's harden been; and spends his time
Now, cussing ye gas-meter!
—Cedar Rapids Gossip.

A SURPRISE FOR THE TEACHER.

After all, popularity may have its drawbacks. It is embarrassing to be liked too much, because few individuals can live up to the reputation of universal favorite. I heard a young teacher in one of the public schools, the other day, who suffers all the pleasure and inconvenience of being idolized by her boys, and it seemed as though it must be much more pleasant to be a little less adored after being told of some of her experiences. The children demonstrate their affections in various ways peculiar to shy young innocents who must walk, breathe, and speak according to public school discipline. One of their greatest pleasures is "giving teacher something." It may be an apple, or a very warm and greasy doughnut, brought to school in the coat pocket; it may be some toy of home construction, and in the summer it is flowers—perhaps only a nosegay of dandelions, a bunch of buttercups, or the more efflorescent lilac branch. In short, winter or summer, this very popular teacher's desk is covered with childish, boyish tokens that show an inherent spirit of gallantry which is quite touching—in the abstract. The other morning a little chap sidled up to the desk with a box in his little red paw, and, pressing it into his teacher's hand, said in a whisper:

"There, I've brought 'em for you."

"What is it, dear?" said the teacher.

"Oh, you look!" with a grin of satisfaction.

Untying the string she opened the box, and behold, there was a set of false teeth!

"They are mamma's," explained the child in a delighted tone. "They're much prettier than yours, and I brought 'em to you." -Boston Herald.

OF THE EARTH EARTHY.

Bob—I wish I was one of those cherubims with wings.

Mamma—So that you could fly around heaven?

Bob—Not much! So that I could fly up to that top shelf and hook the cake.

THE youth who permits his sweetheart to rule him is a miss-guided young man.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Readers of this paper are invited to pay particular attention to our advertising columns, and to read the announcements therein. Also to mention this paper when making purchases.

THE DRAMA.

Gossip and Gleanings About Plays, Players, and Play-Houses.

WITH A LITTLE HUMOR ADDED.

Stories and Anecdotes of Heavy Tragedians, Light Comedians, and Bright Soubrettes.

George Colman.

George Colman, the younger, being asked if he knew Theodore Hook, replied: "Certainly: Hook and I are old associates."

During Colman's management of the Haymarket an actor from a provincial theater was engaged who turned out a stick. In the course of the play he came to the line (which he delivered in a nasal voice), "Ah, where is my honor now?" On which Colman, behind the scenes, was heard to mutter, "I wish your Honor were back at Newcastle, with all my heart."

During the last illness of Colman the doctor, being late in an appointment, apologized to his patient, saying that he had been called in to see a man who had fallen down a well. "Did he kick the bucket, doctor?" groaned out poor George.

A Debut.

One evening "The Stranger" was put in the bills, and the manager's little daughter was dressed in her Sunday frock to run on the stage and soften the heart of Kotzebue's gloomy nobleman. Like many an older debutante she was far more concerned about the adornments of her person than about the artistic merits of her performance; and, catching sight of her nurse in the front row of the pit (in those days stalls were unknown, at least in Marylebone) she astonished the actors and enraptured the audience by calling out: "Oh, nursey, look at my new shoes!" Mrs. Kendal may thus be said to have begun life characteristically by introducing an irresistible touch of nature among the overstrung and conventional emotions of the quasi-legitimate drama.—Longman's Magazine.

Then and Now.

The news that Mme. Patti is to receive from Mr. Abbey £1,000 sterling—practically $5,000—for each performance of Italian opera in which she is to take part, suggests a comparison between the prima donna's early compensation and her latter-day honorarium.

When Mme. Patti made her debut at Convent Garden, some twenty-two years ago, the agreement made with Mr. Frederick Gye (now dead) was that she should sing thrice without receiving anything for her services, and, if successful, bind herself for five successive London seasons, for which she was to be paid at the rate of $750 a month for the first, $1,000 for the second, $1,200 for the third, $1,400 for the fourth, and $2,000 for the fifth. This contract was carried out, and in all the years Mme. Patti sang under Mr. Gye's management, up to the period of her marriage with the Marquis de Caux, she never received more than $600 a performance.

Charles Mathews.

Mathews once went to perform at Wakefield, in Yorkshire, where, owing to the depressed state of trade, the drama received no support. He was afterwards asked how much money he had made in Wakefield and replied:

"Not a shilling."

"Not a shilling?" repeated his questioner. "Why, I thought you went there to star?"

"So I did," replied Mathews, "but they spell it with a ve in Wakefield."

Mathews, seated on a coach-box on a frosty day waiting for the driver, said to him when at length he appeared, "If you stand here much longer, Mr. Coachman, your horses will be like Capt. Perry's ships."

"How's that, sir?"

"Why, frozen at the pole."

Mathews being asked what he was going to do with his son (the young man's profession was to be that of an architect), "Why," answered the comedian, "he's going to draw houses like his father."

A friend attending on Mathews in his last illness found that he had given him some ink from a phial in mistake for his medicine. On discovering the error he exclaimed, "Good heavens, Mathews, I have given you ink!"

"Never mind, my dear boy, nev-er mind!" said Mathews, faintly, "I'll swallow a little piece of blotting paper."

As a Giddy Young Thing.

It is a curious and pleasant study to see Bernhardt play the young, giddy girl. Even in the heyday of her youth she could not have been in any sense beautiful. A large nose, lantern-jawed, colorless face, and a figure that justifies all the extravagant jokes about its leanness—these must have been as strange to look at as they are now, but years have added to them the marks of age that the actress takes no apparent pains to conceal. In "Frou-Frou" she has to play the part of a light-headed, good-hearted, exceptionally fascinating girl. When she first bursts upon the scene she has on the conventional riding habit. She dashes to a table, seizes a newspaper, crushes it in her hands, tears it, and throws herself upon a sofa panting and laughing. She remains but a few seconds, and during all that time is in almost constant action. She never allows her face to be passive. Her features are always expressive of some emotion, if nothing more than a smile of gayety. When she has gone one has not recovered sufficiently from the vivacious impression of her entrance to realize how she gained her effect. The secret seems to lie in her ceaseless activity.—New York Sun.

Bernhardt's Last Kick.

When Mme. Sarah Bernhardt returns to New York from Boston she will, it is alleged, have the opportunity of appearing in a court-room to answer the suit of damages of Charles Stohl, a waiter at the Hoffman House. According to Stohl's story he was designated especially to look out for the gastronomic interests of the divine Sarah. Nothing seemed to suit her, and she used some not very choice language to him. On Saturday she ordered that a lunch should be served promptly at 1 p. m. Stohl was four minutes late, and was met at the door, so the story goes, by Fedora in the wrath scene. Her eyes were ablaze with anger. She said French words to the waiter not found in the Sunday-school books and called him all sorts of mean things, and so says Mr. Stohl, she flew at him and with one high kick sent dishes and viands flying all over the hall. The matter has been hushed up by the hotel people, but the waiter purposes to see if Mme Bernhardt can insult a disguised Count with impunity. —New York Special.

Mrs. "Oster Joe" Potter's Debut.

Mrs. James Brown Potter recently made her debut at the Haymarket Theater, London, and was very favorably received by a brilliant audience. The Prince of Wales expressed himself as very much pleased with her performance and predicted for her a successful theatrical career. The play was Wilkie Collins' "Man and Wife," in which Mrs. Potter took the part of Anne Sylvester. The audience included the Prince of Wales, Lord Dunraven, Lord Elcho, Chas. Phelps and Mr. White, of the American Legation; Lady Colin Campbell and Oscar Wilde. Some critics complain of her general amateurishness and say that her voice is sharp and metallic and her action jerky. Mrs. Potter says she has taken to the stage permanently. She will receive $60,000 for the series of her performances. She likes England and was charmed with her first English audience. The London Standard criticized the debutante rather sharply, as the following extract from its review of her initial performance shows:

"Through all the overacting, over and above the excessive gesticulation, the painfully artificial manner, the starting eyeballs, the tottering gait, the studied tricks of action, the utterly unnatural rendering of a perfectly natural character, one could easily detect a very marked intelligence and the smoldering ashes of an emotional power, which is the one thing that our stage so sorely needs. She was crude, she was overviolent, she was aggravatingly tragic in scenes that required absolute quiet, but in her acting, rough and unpolished as it was, there was power; in her earnestness there was the best of nature's gifts, the germ of a true emotion. There was the stuff in her of which the best actresses are made. But at present it was like a wild thoroughbred colt kicking its heels and gamboling over the pastures—a promising creature, utterly untrained and unmanageable. Suddenly, and without warning, to the surprise of the audience, in the last act a change came over the actress. Possibly some kind friend had warned her of her excess. Possibly her nervousness was under mastery. But, be that as it may, she played the last act in a wholly different manner. After the storm came the calm. The attitude, gesticulations, all the fine frenzy, all the ultra tragic airs, were toned down, and a sudden revulsion of feeling set in among the audience. There were moments of dignity, moments of delightful calm. The declaration of Anne's innocence was noble, womanlike, and touching. There was a true ring of emotion in the voice when Anne yields up her miserable life on the altar of friendship; and the final determination to cling to the dying man was full of truth and beauty. After this last act no one could reasonably doubt that the capacity for a tragic or, if that cannot be, an emotional actress was here. Though much will have to be studied, learned, and practiced, a strong intelligence overrode the gravest faults of execution."

Stage Notes.

IT cost $4,000 a night to give Verdi's "Otello" in Milan.

RUBINSTEIN is going to inflict another oratorio on the public.

WILLIAM M. PEAK, of Peak's Bell Ringers, is living in Brooklyn, and is 88 years old.

AN old theater-goer says he has observed that the more homely the occupants of a private box are the more conspicuous they make themselves.

ONE biographer of Sarah Bernhardt says that she was born October 32. Sarah is certainly thin enough to have been born in between two months.

JOHN STETSON, the millionaire theatrical manager and job printer, began life as a lamp-cleaner in the Boston Herald office on the munificent wages of $1.50 per week.

THE comedian, Mr. J. B. Polk, is an own cousin of the deceased President, James K. Polk, and numbers among his relationship some of the most distinguished families in the South.

SARAH BERNHARDT'S son, Maurice, is a tall, gentlemanly young fellow. He is fond of the luxury of the Hoffman House saloon bar, and his favorite tipple is vermouth cocktail. He likes New York, but cares nothing for Washington City. He is striving very hard to master the English language, and can say "ver-ee nice" almost without an accent.

FAITH-HEALING.

"Families have been broken up by the doctrine taught in some of the leading faith-homes that friends who do not believe this truth are to be separated from because of the weakening effect of their disbelief upon faith, and a most heart-rending letter has reached me from a gentleman whose mother and sister are now residing in a faith institution not far from this city, refusing all intercourse with their friends, and neglecting the most obvious duties of life.

"Certain advocates of faith-healing and faith-homes have influenced women to leave their husbands and parents and reside in the homes, and have persuaded them to give thousands of dollars for their purposes, on the ground that 'the Lord had need of the money.'

"This system is connected with every other superstition. The Bible is used as a book of magic. Many open it at random, expecting to be guided by the first passage they see, as Peter was told to open the mouth of the first fish that came up and he would find in it a piece of money. A missionary of high standing, with whom I am acquainted, was cured of this form of superstition by consulting the Bible on an important matter of Christian duty, and the passage that met his gaze was, 'Hell from beneath is moved to meet thee at thy coming.' Paganism can produce nothing more superstitious than this, though many other Christians instead of 'searching the Scriptures,' still try to use the Bible as a divining rod.

"It feeds upon impressions, makes great use of dreams and signs and statements foreign to truth and pernicious in their influence. A young lady long ill was visited by a minister who prayed with her, and in great joy arose from his knees and said, 'Jennie, you are sure to recover. Dismiss all fear. The Lord has revealed it to me.' Soon after, physicians in consultation decided that she had cancer of the stomach, of which she subsequently died. The person who had received the impression that she would recover, when met by the pastor of the family, said, 'Jennie will certainly get well. The Lord will raise her up. He has revealed it to me.' 'Well,' said the minister, 'she has not the nervous disease she had some years ago. The physicians have decided that she has cancer of the stomach.' 'Oh, well,' was the reply, 'if that is the case, she is sure to die.'

"A family living in the city of St. Louis had a daughter who was very ill. The members of this family were well acquainted with one of the leading advocates of faith-healing in the East, who made her case a subject of prayer, and wrote her a letter declaring that she would certainly be cured, and the Lord had revealed it to him. The letter arrived in St. Louis one day after her death.

"These are cases taken not from the operations of recognized fanatics, but from those of leading lights in this ignis fatuus movement.

"It is a means of obtaining money under false pretenses. Some who promulgate these views are honest, but underneath their proceedings runs a subtle sophistry. They establish institutions which they call faith homes, declaring that they are supported entirely by faith, and that they use no means to make their work known or to persuade persons to contribute. Meanwhile they advertise their work and institutions in every possible way, publishing reports in which, though in many instances wanting in business accuracy, they exhibit the most cunning wisdom of the children of this world." --Rev. Dr. Buckley.

LINCOLN AND THE WORD "SUITE."

"So, Mr. President," I added, turning to Mr. Lincoln, "if you will permit me to be one of your suite I shall be grateful for the privilege."

"One of my what?" asked Mr. Lincoln, suddenly.

"One of your suite, or, if your Excellency likes the word better, one of your circle."

"Oh, I see now," he replied; "but excuse me for not understanding Latin. I never had much schooling, and I am too old now to learn anything but the mother tongue; and I rather flatter myself that I can make myself understood in it, and can say what I mean as plainly as any man living. But you English beat us hollow in languages. We Americans are content to talk the language of the Bible, and of old John Bunyan, and of Benjamin Franklin, one of the plainest speakers of all. But time's up. We must be moving. Come along! I must not keep the public waiting."

"Punctuality is the politeness of princes and presidents," said I, with an alliteration which was wholly unpremeditated. — Dr. Charles Mackay, Through the Long Day.

CLEVERLY CAUGHT.

Eagle-eyed Stranger--That's a curious-looking watch you have.

Omaha Youth (on a train from New York)—That isn't a watch, though it is made to represent one. It is a photograph camera."

"Eh? What use is it?"

"Why, at a fashionable party in New York, last week, I took the pictures of half the ladies present and none of them knew it."

"Young man, you are my prisoner."

"Wha—wha—who are you?"

"I am Anthony Comstock."—Omaha World.

SANITARY ITEM.

Lady--Have you had much experience as a cook?

Applicant—O, indeed I have. I was the cook of Mr. and Mrs. Peterby for three years.

"Why did you leave them?"

"I didn't leave them. They left me. They both died."

"What of?"

"Dyspepsia."—Texas Siftings.

ONE who delights in carrying a perfumed handkerchief is seldom without a scent in his pocket.

HE SOLD HIM.

"YES, there are a few merchants that won't buy from a drummer," said a hardware man yesterday. "I know a party in Southeast Alabama," continued the M. T., as he quietly returned his expense account to his side pocket, "that is the hardest man to sell I ever tackled. He had sworn by all that was good and bad that he wouldn't trade with traveling men, besides, he was very insulting, and most of the boys had quit going to see him. I struck his town one day when trade was very dull, and I made up my mind to try him. Well, sir, as soon as I commenced drumming him he insulted me and I knocked him down on the spot and jumped on him, and you bet I got a good order out of him before we got up."

"Took his order while you had him down?"

"That's what I did, but I didn't send the order in."

"Why not?"

"Well, as I told you, I took his order while I had him down, and you bet I sold him regular all the way through; didn't cut a single thing; sold him the prettiest bill of cutlery you ever saw; but just as I was finishing, and as I slackened my hold on him to put my order-book in my pocket, the old fellow made a kind of a hen-wallow movement, and before I knew what had happened he had me under the bottom, and as he choked my tongue out he said, 'Since I come to think about it, trade is very dull, and if it's all the same with you, I guess you had better not ship those goods.' After awhile he allowed me to put my tongue back in my mouth, and I told him that while I would like to send the goods, at the same time, if trade was dull, of course I would cancel the order. No, I have never been back to see him."—Nashville American.

HIS FATHER DID IT.

"The boy is all right," said the doctor, "but you want to talk to him and arouse his ambition. Promise him that you will take him somewhere when he recovers sufficiently to go out; talk to him about playing tag with the boys; there are lots of ways in which you can interest him."

Then the doctor addressed the boy, who was just recovering from a fever, saying:

"Come, Mickey, cheer up, my boy; wouldn't you like to go out and play tag with your playmates?"

A faint smile stole over the boy's face, but that was all.

"Stop, sir," said the father, "I'll rouse him. See here, Mickey," he asked, addressing the boy, "wouldn't yez like to go out and t'row a rock through a Chineyman's winder?"

The boy immediately sat up in bed and asked for his pants.

"I thought that 'ud fetch 'im," said the father, with a proud smile; "he's all right, doctor, dear."—Boston Courier.

Man Wants a Tonic

When there is a lack of elastic energy in the system, shown by a sensation of languor and unrest in the morning, frequent yawning during the day, and disturbed sleep at night, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters infuses unwonted energy into the enfeebled and nervous, endowing them with muscular energy, an ability to repose healthfully and digest without inconvenience. Nervousness, headache, biliousness, impaired appetite, and a feeble, troublesome stomach, are all and speedily set right by this matchless regulator and invigorant. The mineral poisons, among them strychnia and nux vomica, are never safe tonics, even in infinitesimal doses. The Bitters answers the purpose more effectually, and can be relied upon as perfectly safe by the most prudent. Fever and ague, kidney troubles and rheumatism yield to it.

A FABLE.

Certain Geese, having established themselves in a luxuriant valley where Nature bestowed freely for their sustenance, there came to them a Fox who, with promises of protection from outward evils and roseate pictures of mutual advantages, persuaded them to allow him to move his family in among them, having first entered into a solemn compact with them to the effect that the colony should be governed by statutes giving Equal Rights to all. Now it so happened when their Offspring began to grow up about them that the Children of the Fox fell upon the Children of the Geese and devoured them greedily. At this the Geese set up a great cry against the Foxes, accusing them of betrayal and declaring the compact broken. This the Fox denied, saying that his Children and Subjects were doing nothing more than enjoying the fruits of Liberty which gave to the Goslings an equal right to in turn eat up as many of the young Foxes as came in their way.

MORAL: Keep with your kind.

BODILY pains are instantly relieved by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. Dr. R. Butler, Master of Arts, Cambridge University, England, says, "It acts like magic."

THE NEWSPAPER WRITER.

Boston Globe: Ninety-nine out of every hundred newspaper writers do not live to write, but write to live. The consciences of the papers are in their owners; they are the responsible men, and a paper is sincere and conscientious just so long as it reflects their views, not those of the writers whose services they retain. Has, then, the professional writer no conscience? Most certainly he has. The trained journalist is usually a man of wide reading, extensive acquaintance with public men, and earnest personal convictions on the questions of his time. But, if he is worth office room in a great newspaper, he sinks his own views and serves his paper with the same loyalty that a good soldier serves his commander, a good doctor his patient, or a good lawyer his client.

* * * * Organic weakness or loss of power in either sex, however induced, speedily and permanently cured. Inclose 10 cents in stamps for book of particulars. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Queen.

If Moxie Nerve Food can take the place of drugging and stimulating, it has come to stay, and many of the doctors say it actually does. After thirteen or fourteen months on the market its sale is said to be the largest ever known. The large cities are talking Moxie terror, and every nervous woman or overworked person thinks it is the last half of everything that has just been found. Poor little Moxie weed, it never dreamed before that it was soon to be queen of the medical world.

AMERICAN-ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

An English author, who is printing a book in America for the first time, enters a protest in the Critic against the liberties the printer has taken with his manuscript. "I was quite prepared," he says, "to have all my u's struck out of my honour (although to this day no university don at either Oxford or Cambridge would think of eliminating the euphonious little vowel); but the printer or his devil has struck an l out of my travellers, and has taken the same liberty with my marvellous, whilst he has turned all my cannots into can nots, and has substituted an s for the c in all my defences." He objects to this, even if Noah Webster be cited as an authority against him, holding that as no one nation can claim a monopoly of the English language, it is the duty of the scholars of all countries to preserve its purity and excellence by conservative methods. In reply another correspondent makes some assertions that are possibly familiar to many of our readers, viz.: that the Americans have "preserved the English language in its purity and strength," and that "the tongue spoken in the future will be American-English, which represents the language as it was in its force and beauty in Queen Elizabeth's days."

BOARDS of Health indorse Red Star Cough Cure as a speedy and sure remedy for coughs and colds. Scientists pronounce it entirely vegetable and free from opiates. Price, twenty-five cents a bottle.

CARL PRETZEL'S PHILOSOPHY.

It vas der mans vat makes der money and der voomans makes der money go.

Please of you dond gif atfices. A feller vas yoost going to get hung und he said: "Mine friends, dook some varning by me, don't trink yourself der bottle out," und so gwick he shpeak his head out some langwages like dot dhey hang him ub awful gwick.

A good deal ob der unhabbiness of dis vorldt comes out of der fact, vhen a man vas got sick of himself.—National Weekly.

Especially to Women.

"Sweet is revenge, especially to women," said the gifted but naughty Lord Byron. Surely he was in bad humor when he wrote such words. But there are complaints that only women suffer, that are carrying numbers of them down to early graves. There is hope for those who suffer, no matter how sorely or severely, in Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription." Safe in its action, it is a blessing, especially to women, and to men, too, for when women suffer the household is askew.

THE enormously large hats worn by some very little girls make it difficult to decide which there is the more of—hat or child.

An Offensive Breath

Is most distressing, not only to the person afflicted, if he have any pride, but to those with whom he comes in contact. It is a delicate matter to speak of, but it has parted not only friends but lovers. Bad breath and catarrh are inseparable. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases, as thousands can testify.

PERSONS who take measures to enlarge their business—tailors.

He Loved Her.

"George, I am going to ask a favor of you, and if you love me as you have so often told me, you will grant it."

"Mabel, you know I adore you, and will do anything you ask. I would peril my life for you, my dear."

"My request is not a perilous undertaking, George, but is something I very much desire. I want you to subscribe for the Chicago Ledger for me. Indeed, I cannot get along without it. The Ledger is one of the best and cheapest story papers in the country. Will you do it, George?"

"Certainly, my dear; you shall have the Ledger. I will send for it for you this very day. It will afford me great pleasure to please you. I want you to read the story that will commence in the number for May 11. I hear it is to be a very interesting one."

Remember, sample copies of the Chicago Ledger sent you on application. Address, Chicago Ledger, 271 Franklin street, Chicago, Ill.

Posterity vs. Ancestry.

It is no longer questioned, it is admitted, that the blood of man is improving. The children of to-day are better formed, have better muscle and richer minds than our ancestors. The cause of this fact is due more to the general use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic than any other source.

FOR dyspepsia, indigestion, depression of spirits, and general debility in their various forms; also as a preventive against fever and ague and other intermittent fevers, the "Ferro-Phosphorated Elixir of Calisaya," made by Hazard, Hazard & Co., New York, and sold by all druggists, is the best tonic, and for patients recovering from fever and other sickness it has no equal.

RELIEF is immediate, and a cure sure. Piso's Remedy for Catarrh. 50 cents.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

This standard preparation has by its peculiar merit and its wonderful cures won the confidence of the people, and is to-day the most popular blood purifier and spring medicine. If you have made N. B. up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself.

Hood's Sarsaparilla sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

A NEW TREATMENT for Eye and Ear. Nothing [illegible] If you would hear how to give sight to the blind, or see without spectacles, send postal for "COMMON SENSE JOURNAL," Glens Falls, New York. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PENSIONS, Officer's pay, bounty procured; deserters relieved. 21 years' practice. Success or no fee. Write for circulars and new laws. A. W. McCormick & Son, Washington, D. C., & Cincinnati, O.

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

Must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will, by its own action reach all the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh during the past few years demonstrates that only one remedy has met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. The more distressing symptoms quickly yield to it, and a multitude of persons who have for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict, testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by it. Ely's Cream Balm is perfectly soothing, excites no dread, dissolves the hardened accumulations, lessens the extreme sensibility of the nerve centers to cold and all external irritants, and is followed by no reaction whatever.

ELY'S CREAM BALM

is not a liquid, snuff or powder. Applied into the nostrils is quickly absorbed. It cleanses the head. Allays inflammation. Heals the sores. Restores the senses of taste and smell. 60 cents at Druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cents.

ELY BROTHERS, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

35 MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER

Cures Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, Colds in the Chest and all Aches and Strains. Beware of imitations under similar sounding names. Ask for Benson's and take no other.

THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to P. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Address Brewster's Safety Rein Holder, Holly, Mich.

TELEPHONES for private lines. Sold outright. [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

$10 Buys New Silver-plated Singer Sewing Machine, warranted 5 years. For particulars, address [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys Washington, D. C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

LOTS NEW TOWN of BENJAMIN, Wis. Pen. R. R. Plats apply MILWAUKEE MINING EXCHANGE, Milwaukee, Wis. Cogebic Stocks bought and sold. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

DECORATE your home. We will send Hand Painted Panel Oil Painting for 90c. $100 forfeited if not as represented. Fraser & Sweetland, Box 3, Milwaukee, Wis.

EST'D 1862. TANSILL'S PUNCH 5¢ CIGAR. "I bought five boxes of 'Tansill's Punch' 5¢ cigars came in yesterday. I was out of them for half a day and had to call on the Governor for a company of militia to prevent a riot. Have already retailed over 80,000." R. C. MANLEY, Lincoln, Neb. Address R. W. TANSILL & CO., Chicago.

$300 REWARD WILL BE GIVEN to any person that can furnish an Automatic Swinging Straw Stacker that can do better work than the IMPERIAL STACKER that we are building. Send for circular and price list which will be mailed free. All are warranted to do good work or no sale. NEWARK MACHINE CO., Columbus, O.

WRITING PAPER, ENVELOPES, PLAYING CARDS.

Buyers will consult their interests by sending to us for samples and prices before ordering elsewhere, as we are manufacturers' agents, and can offer inducements in quality and price.

$1.00 Six Sample Packs Playing Cards, Assorted $1.00

PRICE & LONGLEY, Chicago, Ill. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

FOR HORSES.

UVILLA, W. Va., Nov. 17, 1886.

Recently I bought a young horse. He was taken very ill with Pneumonia. I tried to think of something to relieve him. Concluded what was good for man would be good for the horse. So I got a bottle of Piso's Cure and gave him half of it through the nostrils. This helped him, and I continued giving same doses night and morning until I had used two bottles. The horse has become perfectly sound. I can recommend Piso's Cure for the horse as well as for man.

N. S. J. STRIDER.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 CTS

WIZARD OIL CONCERTS

Have been enjoyed by citizens of every town and city in the U. S. Marvelous Cures have been witnessed by thousands of people, who can testify to THE WONDERFUL HEALING POWER OF Hamlin's Wizard Oil.

Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Earache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Contracted Cords, RHEUMATISM, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Fever Sores, Wounds, Old Sores, Chilblains, Frost Bites, Sore Nipples, Caked Breasts, and All Aches and Pains, are quickly relieved by this magical remedy. Try it once and you will never be without it. For sale by Druggists. Price, 50c. Our SONG BOOK free to all. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY, CHICAGO.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER Is The Best Waterproof Coat Ever Made. Don't waste your money on a gum or rubber coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is absolutely water and wind proof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. Ask for the "FISH BRAND" slicker and take no other. If your storekeeper does not have the "fish brand," send for descriptive catalogue to A. J. TOWER, 20 Simmons St., Boston, Mass.

WHAT AILS YOU?

Do you feel dull, languid, low-spirited, lifeless, and indescribably miserable, both physically and mentally; experience a sense of fullness or bloating after eating, or of "goneness," or emptiness of stomach in the morning, tongue coated, bitter or bad taste in mouth, irregular appetite, dizziness, frequent headaches, blurred eyesight, "floating specks" before the eyes, nervous prostration or exhaustion, irritability of temper, hot flushes, alternating with chilly sensations, sharp, biting, transient pains here and there, cold feet, drowsiness after meals, wakefulness, or disturbed and unrefreshing sleep, constant, indescribable feeling of dread, or of impending calamity?

If you have all, or any considerable number of these symptoms, you are suffering from that most common of American maladies—Bilious Dyspepsia, or Torpid Liver, associated with Dyspepsia, or Indigestion. The more complicated your disease has become, the greater the number and diversity of symptoms. No matter what stage it has reached, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will subdue it, if taken according to directions for a reasonable length of time. If not cured, complications multiply and Consumption of the Lungs, Skin Diseases, Heart Disease, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, or other grave maladies are quite liable to set in and, sooner or later, induce a fatal termination.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery acts powerfully upon the Liver, and through that great blood-purifying organ, cleanses the system of all blood-taints and impurities, from whatever cause arising. It is equally efficacious in acting upon the Kidneys, and other excretory organs, cleansing, strengthening, and healing their diseases. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it promotes digestion and nutrition, thereby building up both flesh and strength. In malarial districts, this wonderful medicine has gained great celebrity in curing Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Dumb Ague, and kindred diseases.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

CURES ALL HUMORS,

from a common Blotch, or Eruption, to the worst Scrofula. Salt-rheum, "Fever-sores," Scaly or Rough Skin, in short, all diseases caused by bad blood are conquered by this powerful, purifying, and invigorating medicine. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence. Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Hip-joint Disease, "White Swellings," Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands. Send ten cents in stamps for a large Treatise, with colored plates, on Skin Diseases, or the same amount for a Treatise on Scrofulous Affections.

"FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE."

Thoroughly cleanse it by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength and bodily health will be established.

CONSUMPTION,

which is Scrofula of the Lungs, is arrested and cured by this remedy, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease. From its marvelous power over this terribly fatal disease, when first offering this now world-famed remedy to the public, Dr. Pierce thought seriously of calling it his "CONSUMPTION CURE," but abandoned that name as too restrictive for a medicine which, from its wonderful combination of tonic, or strengthening, alterative, or blood-cleansing, anti-bilious, pectoral, and nutritive properties, is unequaled, not only as a remedy for Consumption, but for all Chronic Diseases of the Liver, Blood, and Lungs.

For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Chronic Nasal Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an efficient remedy.

Sold by Druggists, at $1.00, or Six Bottles for $5.00.

Send ten cents in stamps for Dr. Pierce's book on Consumption. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., BUFFALO, N. Y.

ADVERTISERS or others, who wish to examine this paper or obtain estimates on advertising space when in Chicago, will find it on file at 45 to 49 Randolph St., the Advertising Agency of LORD & THOMAS.

WARREN'S FEATHERBONE Dress Stay!

The only Dress Stay in the world. Absolutely unbreakable. Price 15 cents per yard. For sale everywhere. Also, just prepared for the market, new, elegant Satin Covered Featherbone, ready for attaching to the finest dresses. Price 20 cents per yard. Colors, Black, White, Cardinal, Blue, and Pink. If your dealer has not yet secured it, any amount desired will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price. Address WARREN FEATHERBONE COMPANY, Three Oaks, Michigan.

HARTER'S THE ONLY TRUE IRON TONIC

Will purify the BLOOD, regulate the LIVER and KIDNEYS and RESTORE the HEALTH and VIGOR of YOUTH. Dyspepsia, Want of Appetite, Indigestion, Lack of Strength and Tired Feeling absolutely cured: Bones, muscles and nerves receive new force. Enlivens the mind and supplies Brain Power.

LADIES Suffering from complaints peculiar to their sex will find in DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC a safe, speedy cure. Gives a clear, healthy complexion. All attempts at counterfeiting only adds to its popularity. Do not experiment—get ORIGINAL AND BEST.

Dr. HARTER'S LIVER PILLS Cure Constipation, Liver Complaint and Sick Headache. Sample Dose and Dream Book mailed on receipt of two cents in postage.

THE DR. HARTER MEDICINE CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

BEWARE OF IMITATORS, who—not having ability to create—follow and pattern after the leaders; thereby gaining profit by pirating upon reputations or business fairly won by brains and enterprise.

ROUGH ON RATS IS A DRY POWDER. Don't be deceived, see that you get the genuine "Rough on Rats." Take no substitutes.

The 15c and 25c sizes are in wooden boxes only; $1 size in cardboard box. No agents, no partners; never peddled from door to door. ROUGH ON RATS is sold all around the world in every clime, is the most extensively advertised, and has the largest sale of any article of its kind on the face of the globe. It does the work and gives universal satisfaction.

LAND SHARKS, FRAUDS are trying to benefit by imitations or simulations of the world-famed "Rough on Rats." Worthless trash is put up in every form, calculated to deceive the public. These deceivers use every device, approach as closely as possible to my style of package, or use my wording of advertisements and labels. The English language has been ransacked to find a name equal to "Rough on Rats." So far all have failed to produce its equal in merit, or fitness in name.

THIEVES have actually stolen the name and boldly sold worthless trash under the name "Rough on Rats."

WATCH WITH SUSPICION interested motives in any dealer who tries to induce you to take any other than "Rough on Rats." E. S. WELLS, Jersey City, N. J., Originator, Sole Manufacturer and Proprietor of "ROUGH ON RATS."

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS

The Original and Only Genuine.

Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Ladies, ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., 2818 Madison Square, Philad'a, Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co., Charlestown, Mass.

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

Piso's Remedy for Catarrh is the Best, Easiest to Use, and Cheapest. CATARRH Also good for Cold in the Head, Headache, Hay Fever, &c. 50 cents.

C. N. U. No. 18-87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 11, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Mr. Blaine has reached his home in Maine, with restored health. But the Mugwumps are still complaining.

The time has come when the Michigan legislature should handle the question of local option without gloves.

Ex-Hon. Milo H. Dakin, is the way you should put it now that the Legislature has conferred upon him the grand bumper degree.

Queen Kapiolani of the Sandwich Islands, has gone to Washington. She is a little late. Washington is a different city from what it was a few months ago.

In Ohio, in 1879, there were five thousand unmarked soldiers' graves. Very many of these are still unmarked, and are gradually becoming lost. There is a movement to have the State take charge of them, see that they are appropriately marked and have them decorated fittingly every Memorial Day.

There was a fire in Sing Sing prison the other day and while most of the convicts ran away from it, one of them exposed himself to every danger and never flinched even when the flames seemed likely to overwhelm him. It was found out afterward that he had been convicted of bigamy. Fire had no terrors for him.

Mr. Watterson, of the Louisville Courier Journal, hoped for the return of Jacksonian Democracy with Cleveland's inauguration. Jackson's ghost has appeared at three spiritualistic seances since Cleveland wrote his puff of John C. Calhoun, but his language was such that it can only be represented in print by dashes.

Jesse G. Baldwin, who died recently at Middleton, Ct., was one of the heroes of the anti-slavery contest. He steadfastly refused to wear cotton fabrics or to eat sugar which were the products of slave labor, and when traveling always carried with him a supply of imported sugar. Beginning life as a peddler, he became a prominent banker and philanthropist, and was once a candidate for Governor.

"America is the asylum for the oppressed." That's all right if the oppressed are all right. But it never was the intention of our forefathers to make this country a picnic ground for the banished criminals and anarchists of the old countries. And it is high time to put up the bars so high against these vicious elements that they can't climb over. A little regard for the oppression in our own country should come in here somewhere.—Detroit Tribune.

One year ago on the 4th of May in Chicago several policemen were killed and scores of others wounded, some of them mangled horribly, by a bomb thrown among them. Several Anarchists were arrested and convicted, for participation in that terrible crime; but those Anarchists are still alive and indulging in the hope of getting out of the clutches of the law to further ply their vocation. Americans are a long-suffering, soft hearted people.

Hon. Chas. S. May, the well known democratic leader of Kalamazoo, addressed the American temperance union at New York last week, and during his remarks he quoted President Lincoln's comment on slavery that a house divided against itself could not stand. He asserted all must become drunk or all must become sober, and the banners of the two parties must read: "License and Compromise," "Prohibition and Extinction." Mr. May was loudly applauded.

It is stated that Governor Luce took $1,050 with him to Lansing, and on figuring up at the first of last month what it cost to be Governor, found that he had just $10 left, from the expenditures of his first three months in office. This was in addition to $250 of his yearly salary—one quarter—which he had also expended. Are not those who voted "no" on the Salaries Amendment rather proud of defeating it, two to one? Why should not a Governor be paid sufficient wages to allow any poor man to aspire to such an office?

A new law in Illinois, to become operative on the 1st of July next, forbids the killing in that state for three years of quail, pheasants or prairie chickens. If it can be enforced, this enactment will result in the re-populating of the hunting grounds from which this game has so nearly disappeared the weather permitting. The Peoria Journal asserts that as a matter of fact, the late extremely cold winters, and not the gun of the sportsman, have brought these feathered tribes so near extinction. If that be the case, the new law will be of very little use.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications of an educational nature should be addressed to Prof. H. H. [illegible], Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

County Association.

The first meeting of the Charlevoix Teachers' Association for 1887, has been appointed to be held at Ironton, opening at 7:30 p. m. of Friday, May 20th and holding over on Saturday, May 21st. It is desirable to make this first meeting of the year a success in point of attendance and interest. Several subjects of importance will be discussed; among these, "Training to Attention," by Miss Nelson of Charlevoix schools: "Technical Grammar," by Prof. A. B. Nicholas of East Jordan; "Kindergarten work," by Mrs. Pope of Ironton, will have prominent places. All present will be at liberty to join the discussion of these topics after the opening.

A Query box will be opened, and thus an opportunity afforded for an exchange of views on any question of interest. Experience has proved this to be one of the most profitable features of a teachers' meeting, and one which brings out the freest expression of opinion, and proves to be of the greatest practical advantage to participants. Every teacher should propound a question. If anyone who cannot attend in person, has a question of interest it may be sent in and as soon as possible the discussion will be noticed in this column. The Association will consider the subject of our next County Teachers' Institute. We hope the teachers of the county will evince their interest in educational progress by their presence at this meeting.

The season is rapidly advancing and the probability that our legislature will make any wholesome change in our school laws, at this session, is as rapidly diminishing. If anything is done, it is more than likely that in the hurry of the last days of the session, it will be hasty and ill-considered, and therefore of little or no benefit.

Some excellent measures are on the calendar but will doubtless be sacrificed to others in which personal interests are enlisted. The district system, and the County "No supervision" are likely to live, at least two years more.

East Saginaw has made a trial of the free school book system, and contrary to predictions it has proved to be an economical measure, and has had a salutary effect upon the habits of the children, so far as caring for the books is concerned. Instead of making children careless in using books, it has had the opposite effect. The fact that teachers are expected to look after the public property under their care, no doubt has much to do in producing such a result.

Monthly report of Ironton schools for month ending May 6: Whole number enrolled, 81; Grammar department, 33; Primary department, 48; Average number belonging, 70; Grammar department, 30; Primary department, 40. Whole number of days, 1322; Grammar department, 545; Primary department, 777; Average daily attendance, 66; Grammar department, 28; Primary, 38.

Regular monthly examinations omitted on account of review work this month. The A grade Primary have been advanced permanently to C grade Grammar.

They Come High.

Germany supports twenty-two royal, princely and ducal families, and the direct cost of their maintenance is £3,300,000.

Turkey comes next to Germany in its loyal expenditures, the total amount absorbed by the sultan and his family being about £3,200,000.

The Imperial family of Russia costs that country £2,450,000, which amount probably does not include the czar's life insurance policy.

The Austrian Imperial family is tolerably well off, having a revenue of £920,000.

The British royal family comes next, with a cost to the country of £900,000.

Italy pays her royal family £660,000 which is a very large sum in proportion to the means of the country.

Spain disburses on the same account £400,000.

Belgium pays £133,500 a year to her King, and he is cheap at that; while Portugal pays £127,000.

Monarchy costs Sweden and Norway £117,500 annually; Denmark, £62,000; Holland, £63,000; Greece, £42,000; and Roumania, £40,000.

Republican France gives her president £36,000, two-thirds of which is in the form of salary and one third for household expenses.

The Swiss republic pays its president £600 a year, which is probably the smallest sum that the head of any civilized nation receives. All the expenditures of Switzerland are on a correspondingly low scale. The expenditures of the confederation do not reach £2,000,000 annually.

Northern Michigan News.

The people of South Manitou island want telegraphic communication to the main-land.

A very common looking house will rent for $50 a month at Sault Ste. Marie, it is alleged.

Mrs. Catherine Kemp, mother of Charley Kemp, of Mancelona, died last week, age 73 years.

Low water is making trouble for loggers all over the upper peninsula. Some drives have been abandoned.

The report is now in circulation that the G. R. & I. company will not erect a new depot at Petoskey this summer.

Notice is received from the Adams Express Co. to the effect that they had reduced their rates on the G. R. & I. 25 per cent.

F. M. Abraham, postmaster at Boyne City, who has been south some time for his health returned last week but without any noted improvement.

The semi-annual meeting of the Ministerial Association of the M. E. church, Grand Traverse district, will be held at Traverse City, June 14 and 15.

Grand Traverse bay was frozen over 89 days this season. The ice went out of the bay April 22d, being the same date that the ice made its disappearance last year.

The Republican says that the family of Capt. Vanderhoef arrived in Harbor Springs on the 22d, and that Mrs. Vanderhoef is not yet enjoying robust health. It will be remembered that she was very ill in the winter.

The annual camp meeting at Bay View will commence July 19th, and close on Monday following that date. The Bay View Chautauqua Assembly will convene on July 27th and continue in session until August 12th.

Postmaster Gallagher received four barrels of peppermint plants last week to plant as an experiment on his farm east the village. If it should prove successful he will go into the business on a large scale.—Cheboygan Tribune.

J. L. Manning of Kalkaska, has received the appointment as purchasing agent at the Soldiers Home Grand Rapids. He will try the position for 30 days and if at the end of that period everything is satisfactory he will be retained. Tally one more for Northern Michigan.

A shocking case of terrible destitution was recently discovered at Negaunee. A Frenchman named O. Beneia and wife were found in a basement almost starved to death. The man broke a leg last fall, and from want of good medical attention the limb was improperly set, the bones protruding. The wife's limbs were swollen to twice the normal size, the result of fever and no medical treatment. When discovered both were terribly emaciated. They are a worthy couple.

About the largest body of hard ore ever discovered in the Negaunee district is being uncovered on what is known as the Old Carr mine property, a mile east of the Pittsburg & Lake Superior Iron company's location on Cascade range. The ore is red, specular, yielding 65 per cent. metalic iron. The vein proper is 50 feet wide, with promising ground to the width of 300 feet adjoining. Machinery is on the ground, and arrangements are being made to begin shipping at an early day. Surrounding property is having a boom in consequence. Mr. M. H. Richards, of Milwaukee, is owner of the property.

Petoskey Record: Most of our citizens have known that changes were being made in the electric light plant, but have scarcely been aware of the radical nature of said changes. In the first place the company more than doubled their power by putting in another, and the best turbine water wheel on the river. This new wheel will be amply sufficient to drive the machinery for the present circuit, and the two wheels together will be sufficient for any probable extensions made for years to come. The old dynamos, wires and incandescent lamps are being supplanted by an entirely different system—the Edison, which is far superior to any other for incandescent lighting. The new Edison dynamos are already in position, and under the superintendence of the electrician of the Edison company the lamps and connections are being put in the business houses. But besides a change of system the existing co-partnership is being merged into a joint stock company, of which the paid up capital will be $12,000. The bulk of the stock has already been taken, and not a few of our business men are subscribing for the same at the bank this week. Mr. H. O. Rose, who was the leading partner in the old concern, retains a heavy interest in the new stock company, and the Edison company, of Detroit, take $1,000 of stock, and will take more if permitted. When the stock is all placed, the company will not owe a dollar, and will have the most perfect and satisfactory electric lighting apparatus in the world. It is altogether probable that the stock will pay a handsome dividend from the start.

It is reported that Frankfort will have three saloons this summer.

The population of Elk Rapids improved amazingly during 1886—52 babies were born.

Mr. A. E. Banks of Frankfort has sold the tug Gregory to Mr. Bates of Cleveland for $9000.

During the season of navigation last year, fifty-four schooners and eleven steamers loaded or unloaded at Boyne City.

At the special election in Wilson township last Monday, Marion Hudkins was elected supervisor over Geo. W. Bailey by a majority of five.

The Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette road is henceforth to be known as the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, or the "Soo-Mackinac short line," this includes the Marquette, Houghton & Ontonagon line. They will not call in their passes, so you may observe their card in another column.

Grand Traverse Herald: Cuyler Germaine's funeral, on Friday, was one of the largest gatherings on a similar occasion, ever known here. More than one hundred carriages were in line to the cemetery. The services were conducted by Revs. J. S. Large and W. G. Puddefoot. Most of the stores and places of business throughout the town were closed during the hours of service, and our people generally united in this last expression of regard for the deceased.

Petoskey Record: Supervisor Helrigel of Evangeline Township, was in town on Monday to see if he could arrange with road commissioner Randall to have some much needed work done on the road leading south from the Charlevoix State road between sections 16 and 17, town 34, range 6 west. There is about one mile and a half that is in bad condition, and as the produce and trade from a considerable tract of country west of Bear Lake comes to Petoskey over that road it is not of a little importance to our business men to have it put in fair condition. We hope Mr. Randall will do something for it, and if necessary our business men would make a good investment by donating a little toward its improvement.

Boyne Citizen: At noon to-day, when under-sheriff Hurd took dinner to A. D. Joles, who is remaining in jail for trial for rape he discovered his prisoner lying on his bunk in his cell and speechless. A glance showed that a large portion of the cell floor was covered with blood and that Joles was nearly dead from loss of blood. A surgeon was called immediately and on examination, it was found that the loss of blood was from a deep incision on the upper part of the forearm and that the wound was made by a sharp pocket knife which he had secured in some way and which was found covered with blood sticking in the cell wall. The wound was bandaged and bleeding stopped. Joles gave no explanation for his action and is now very morose.

The inter-state commerce law has got in its work on Wequetonsing resort. In the bright and halcyon days of yore, the railroad company has given passes to many connected with the association, given special rates to others, and granted a special rate on all freight shipped to the resort. But things are changed since Hannah died, or words to that effect. Under the workings of the inter-state commerce law all favors are withdrawn, and president and porter, man and maid, are all on a level so far as special rates are concerned. It was intended to put in a permanent dock, and numerous other improvements were on foot, but last week manager LaForce received orders to cease all work, and things are at present in a state of "inocuous desuetude" at the lovely resort. It is claimed that if the rigid rules thought so binding on the railroad company are lived up to, that the result will be to kill the resort. This is a startling end to the bright dreams indulged in by the Wequetonsingers, and it is to be sincerely hoped that the mandate of the railroad company is not going to close out the resort business of this northern country.—Harbor Springs Independent.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 13th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and Phebe E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Otis Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in liber "4" of mortgages on page 404 on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1882, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and upon which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of two thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars and thirty-two cents ($2,960.32) for principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the amount now due, or any part thereof, now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided there will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the village of Boyne City, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan (that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for said County of Charlevoix), on Thursday the [illegible] day of June, A. D. 1887, at [illegible] o'clock in the afternoon of said day the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due upon said mortgage together with the costs and charges of sale and interest to wit: The south west quarter (¼) and the north west quarter (¼) and the north east quarter (¼) of the south east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-three (23) in township No. thirty-three (33) north of range No. seven (7) west, containing three hundred and sixty acres according to the United States survey. Also the north half (½) of the north east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-seven (27) in township No. thirty-three (33) north range No. seven (7) west containing eighty acres according to the United States survey in the County of Charlevoix in the State of Michigan.

Dated March 7, 1887. OTIS ROSS, Mortgagee.
JAMES H. JOHNSON, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Charlevoix County Board of School Examiners.

Spring examinations will be held as follows: Boyne City, Friday March 25th, East Jordan, Friday, April 29th, 1887. Examinations will commence at 8:30 a. m. and end at [illegible] [illegible] at Boyne City, and [illegible]

W. M. [illegible]

Notice.

The partnership existing between the undersigned, under the firm name and style of Gellick & Ingalls and doing business at Charlevoix, Michigan, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the said James A. Gellick continuing the business at the old stand, paying all debts of the firm and collect all partnership accounts.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., April 18th, 1887.
JAS. A. GELLICK.
BENJ. F. INGALLS.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the estate of Richard Coryon. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, guardian of the estate of said William Coryon, ... [illegible]

Dated, Feb. 26, 1887.
WILLIAM COYYON, as Guardian of Richard Coryon, Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 1883 executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife), to the Wayne County Savings Bank, of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 1883, in liber 7 of mortgages on page 382, upon which the whole amount ... [illegible]

Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
D. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date Nov. 15th, A. D. 1881, made by and between Albert Jubenville, ... [illegible]

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D., 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MORGAN CURTIS, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date December the first, 1883, made by and between David Norton and Hanah Norton, his wife, of Charlevoix, Michigan, party of the first part, to Mary E. Manley, of Wayne county, New York, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the second day of Feb. A. D. 1884, in liber 9 of Mortgages on page 220, ... [illegible]

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MARY E. MANLEY, Mortgagee.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; [illegible] Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Bultars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
[illegible] Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liabilities of stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 317 [illegible] of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safe banking.

Drafts drawn on the leading commercial cities of the world, in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK, New York.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK, Chicago.
NAT. CITY BANK, Grand Rapids.
DETROIT NAT. BANK, Detroit.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with other people's money, is folly; that to do so with the money of depositors, is criminal.

Security in Banking

Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and we believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites

People generally to entrust their money to its keeping. Just liberal rates will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will

Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking

Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,

Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors a much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken.
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Silver Ware of the latest varieties and can sell them at lowest figures.

My Stock of
Watches, Clocks, Chains, Pins, Gold & Silver headed Canes etc.
is complete.

If you want to select nice Presents, just call and see what I can give you for a small sum.

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 30c a month.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the

LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS

with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES

Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?

If not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.

These goods cannot be equalled in the county

Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.

Ladies Look Out

For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for

D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Butters' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

[illegible] (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

J. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, [illegible] Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. FARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows hall.

MASONIC—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. L.—True Blues No. 137, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 105, R. A. M. meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Hervey Sec. [illegible]
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang
Financial Secretary—R. [illegible]
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and F. F. [illegible]
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. [illegible]
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. Sec, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Butlan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile driver. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address, JOHN MUNROE, Jr., Gen'l Manager, South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix County.]

DENTIST

N. J. TERRY, Dentist. Office in Wood's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.
"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

[illegible]

S. W. ALLEN, Gen. Pass. Agt., Marquette.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

In effect September 27, 1886.

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

[illegible]

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

CRAZES IN CANDIES.

Sugared Rose Leaves and Violets—Fruits Dipped in Cream—Other Novelties.

"Tastes vary from season to season in candies as in flowers and hats," said a State street candy manufacturer. "There'll be a tremendous run one year on something that won't be called for half a dozen times the next. Just now the marshmallow and French cream caramels take the lead. Next to these maple, vanilla, walnut, and chocolate are the favorites. There's a steady call, too, for butter-creams and nut-drops. Maple creams, walnut candies, and nugat are standard goods also.

"Chocolate nugat is made of chocolate, honey, sugar, almonds, and pistache nuts. The white nugat is prepared in the same way, with the chocolate left out.

"A very popular confection now is 'plantation drop.' It is nothing in reality, but old-fashioned southern molasses candy made with great care and pressed into small lumps, just the right size for the mouth. Old-fashioned gum-drops are looking up a little lately. They went quite out for a while. I don't know why they are finding favor again, unless it's because there's considerable 'chew' to them.

"People eat candy everywhere now, and on all occasions. Why, we have so much call for something that ladies could eat in church, at the theater, and opera without attracting notice and without soiling their gloves that we invented a little gum-arabic candy for that purpose that we named 'church drops.' It is so small that it can be slipped in the mouth unobserved, and has great staying qualities. A good many ladies carry handsome charity boxes filled with them suspended from their waists.

"Speaking of table confections, did you know that fine creams, creamed fruits, and candied flowers are taking the place of glace fruits for desserts? Glace fruits are not purchased to a third of the extent they were a couple of years ago. Fresh fruits dipped in cream are very popular. Those who buy glaces in variety ask for cherries first, and, after them, for plums and pineapples. Not one person in five hundred knows what angelique is. They usually inquire the price of 'that pie-plant.' Now, angelique is a plant somewhat similar to sugar cane.

"The most recent expensive accompaniment for creamed fruits and the correct wind-up for an ultra-fashionable lunch is candied flowers. No entertainment of this sort is really a swell affair without them. To be frank, I can't perceive their alleged delicious qualities myself, but they are an expensive novelty, and have been sanctioned as a luxury by aristocratic society."

"What is their retail price?"

"Three dollars and $3.50 a pound. Rose leaves and violets are the only kind of flowers utilized for the table yet, but I expect to see apple-blossoms, peach-blossoms, geranium leaves, and any number of others dipped in boiling sugar and prepared for the table.

"Just taste of these violets," he continued, holding out a glass plate filled with lavender-hued, sugared flowers.

"Well, what do they taste like?" he demanded, as the visitor nibbled a blossom or two.

"Like the end of a lead pencil," was the reply.

"That's just it. The flavor of candied violets is like cedar, and one can get just as much satisfaction from chewing a common lead pencil as out of a $3.50-pound of these blossoms. The rose leaves, you will see," he added, taking up another plate heaped with shriveled pink rose petals, glistening with sugar, "convey the inevitable suggestion of a hair dressing. But they're novelties, as I said before, and that's what people want."—Chicago News.

Emotions of Very Small Children.

A lady thus writes to Babyhood: "That children have feelings will, of course, not be gainsaid, but to what extent the little ones suffer when punishment is inflicted upon them or some one dear to them I am inclined to think very few understand. A case in point occurred in my own household. My little daughter, aged 7 years, had been troubled with a fester upon her finger, which was very painful in its necessary dressing and attention. Her little brother of three and a half years has always shown great sympathy for her; he would entreat me not to hurt Lulu. This was all considered as nothing more than childish sympathy, as after each occurrence he would resume his play; but it would appear that I unwittingly taxed his feelings past endurance. At the last dressing of the finger he begged me, as usual, not to 'hurt Lulu,' standing by the basin in which I was washing the hand, when suddenly he fell fainting to the door, and it was two or three minutes before he could be revived. In future he will, of course, be taken out of the room whenever I again am called upon to play the nurse, but think how much he must have suffered. I am convinced that it was mental anguish that caused him to faint, for both previous to and after the faint he played around the room with the other children, and, while he had been suffering from a slight cold, he was in no other way unwell. We have never had to call a doctor to him since his birth, neither has he been similarly affected before."

Famous English Clocks.

Those who have heard Peter of York announce that midnight has come are not likely to forget the deep and thrilling resonance that fills the air and booms over the silent city. This bell weighs twelve tons and a half and cost £2,000. It was second to none in this kingdom till Big Ben was set up at Westminster to stand sentinel-like over the mighty Thames. Great Tom o'Lincoln is another bell of great reputation. It was recast in 1835, and on its return from the White-chapel foundry it was welcomed home by a procession of clergy, gentry, and citizens, with banners flying and bands playing at the south entrance to the city. It is six feet high and nearly seven feet in diameter and weighs five tons and eight hundred-weight. Its tone is also of an extraordinary fullness, richness, and sweetness, especially when heard in the dead of the night. And in the north transept of Wells cathedral there is a clock in which there is sufficient eccentric mechanism to enable a small figure of a man to step forward periodically and proclaim the time.—The Quiver.

A Kentucky planter was so pleased with the acting of a little girl in a play at Louisville that the next day he sent her a fine large doll to "amuse her when out of the theater." This is the reply he received: "Kind friend, I have just received your note and package containing the doll; thanks very much. The doll is very handsome. I showed it to my husband, and we think it will be great amusement for me."

A Vision.

The frost king and hunger my lips harshly kissed,
And chilled in me all that was mortal;
My eyes, so earth-weary, they filled with fine mist,
Yet saw I past death's gloomy portal,
And down through its corridors, darksome and cold,
High walls with mother-of-pearl lining;
A city celestial paved over with gold,
And blazing with gems past defining.

Words fail, in earth's language, to give justice due
To a feast with its rich-laden table;
Or the warmth that diffused such comfort all through,—
'Twould read like incredulous fable;
And 'midst the rare splendor I saw standing there
A form, grand majestically regal;
His countenance shone with the sun to compare,
His eyes like the mountain's wild eagle.

Down near to the entrance, by angels bright,
Was the noise of a terrible battle;
And awaiting to enter were the rulers of earth,
King Wheat, King Coal, and King Cattle;
The monarch approaching, they, crouching with fear,
Knelt low at His feet supplicating;
They pointed despairingly down at their gear,
Their suffering and need [illegible].

They begged of the food just a morsel to eat,
For a breath of the fire's warm glowing;
For a draught of the life-giving water sweet,
From the silvery stream there flowing;
But the monarch's grand visage is darkening o'er,
Sublime to behold in its anger;
He speaks in a voice like the water's loud roar:
"Depart from hence! Why do ye linger?
Woe, woe is the portion of those who on earth
The face of My poor ones are grinding?
With grievous chains smarting with poverty's dearth
Their limbs are so ruthlessly binding;
Their food have ye taken; they perish with cold;
Ye've slain them with greed and neglect-ing;
Hast piled up in millions the silver and gold,
While ne'er on their misery reflecting!
Ye've had your good fortune; in lux'ry didst sit
All the days of your life's fairest dawning;
Now, down shall ye go to the bottomless pit—
For such as ye 'tis ever yawning!"

And when He had finished His fearful decree
The heaven and the earth alike trembled;
But prostrate before the great king on their knee
Were the angels, once poor, there assembled;
They begged and entreated divine majesty
In justice so stern, unrelenting,
To pity, forgive, and revoke the decree,
They heartily, gladly consenting.

'Twas a sight which, beholding, made all angels weep
When the down-trodden poor, so brow-beaten,
Did plead with an earnestness touching and deep
For those who their substance had eaten.
To the heart of the poor distress is so near Compassion doth quickly find lodgment.
God pity them, fated to suffering here—
God pity the rich in the judgment!
—Hannah More Kohaus.

Proverbs Revised.

"Contentment is better than riches;" but the two together make a much more desirable combination.

"Look out for the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves," is a proverb which can only be accepted with several large grains of allowance. It is easy enough to look out for the pennies, but if the pounds are left to take care of themselves they are very apt to disappear.

"A bad beginning makes a good ending" is a proverb which was probably established for the encouragement of the inexperienced and incapable. But the only good ending for a bad beginning is generally one which comes immediately after the beginning.

"Well begun is half done" is a proverb too encouraging by half. The number of well-begun but half-done matters and things in the world make up the catalogue of the world's failures.

"A nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse." This proverb is most true; and, as far as it tends to show that the graceless habit of winking may be exchanged for the more friendly nod without impairing the effectiveness of the means of communication, it is commendable. The scope of the proverb might be extended much further than to a blind horse without impairing the efficiency of the application.—Boston Record.

Princess Metternich of Vienna is described by a Paris correspondent as "of ordinary beauty but supremely charming, elegant, witty, original, and steadfast in her love and her hate." Previous to the downfall of the Empire she lived in Paris for some years, in the Rue de Varenne, but could never be induced to return there since 1870. She was expected the other day at the marriage of the Comtesse de Pourtales and Baron de Berckheim. She is the most popular lady in Vienna, and recently raised 100,000 florins for the poor of the city.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.

These lands are timbered with beach and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 250,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.

Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich

TITLE PERFECT.

These Are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation, Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

A Captain's Fortunate Discovery.

Capt. Coleman, schr. Weymouth, plying between Atlantic City and N. Y., had been troubled with a cough so that he was unable to sleep, and was induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. It not only gave him instant relief, but allayed the extreme soreness in his breast. His children were similarly affected and a single dose had the same happy effect. Dr. King's New Discovery is now the standard remedy in the Coleman household and on board the schooner. Free Trial Bottles of this Standard Remedy at Dr. G. W. Crouter's Drug Store.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter.

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES. The greatest and simplest known remedy for all Female Trouble to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable lady Agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For medicine and particulars, Address
PAN ZAMA MED. CO., Frankfort, Ind.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP.
Will also do
Contracting & Building.
In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building

MERCHANT TAILORING.

I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.

Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.

Call and see me, Satisfation Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,

C. H. Maddaugh.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufactureres of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS.
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. In cloth-bound form these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.

1. The Widow Bedott Papers. This is the book over which your grandmothers laughed till they cried, and it is just as funny to-day as it ever was.
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals, and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils."
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott, none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 57 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread and Cheese and Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke."
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe, describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila.; illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00, or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of

"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.

The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but—by means of a steel frog—is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, making a steady running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy.
If your Agent has none write us for price.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

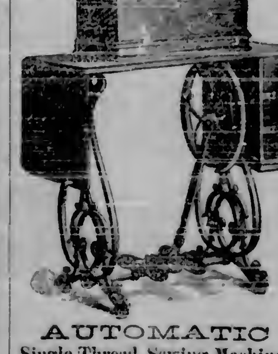
Good PAINT

An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the SHERWIN-WILLIAMS COLORED LEADS. Also St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.

FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.



AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
72 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

YOUNG'S COUGH SYRUP

Dansville, Mich., Aug. 15, 1871. I was attacked with a severe cold and threatened with lung fever while on a visit to Holcomb, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment to preach on account of severe coughing, but managed to get home and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup I had in the house and in one hour's time my cough left me as soon as I commenced (taking) it, and I find permanent relief when I am attacked by cough or lung complaint. Rev. Hosr. Corr.

Howell, Mich., Oct. 28, 1871. I have tried Dr. E. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year, as I had occasion to use a remedy for Colds and Coughs, and found it a reliable medicine. I have used more Liver Syrup in my family with the best of success, curing my mother (whose age was over seventy years) of one of the hardest attacks of fever and Ague, after the regular physician had failed. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who need them. Rev. S. R. [illegible]

Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.
W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security.
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN,
Boyne City

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a still place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
I will sell my entire stock of goods except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only.
Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $3.00 will receive a present of her choice of any unfinished felt hat in the store.
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest
Job Work,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS.

Intelligence by Wire from All the World

FOREIGN.

—William O'Brien says he intends to visit Canada to denounce Lord Lansdowne's treatment of his Irish tenants, despite contrary advice.

—It is possible that Mr. Parnell will sue the London Times for its publication of the forged letter.

—Evictions still go on on the Lansdowne estates.

—A Berlin dispatch says the commission at Metz investigating the case of the French commissary, Schnaebeles, reports that the arrest was undoubtedly made upon German soil. There are numerous charges of high treason against Schnaebeles, and the evidence against him is overwhelming.

—A nephew of a high military official of Russia has been arrested on suspicion that he was in communication with the Nihilists.

—The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce, by a vote of 88 to 53, adopted a resolution declaring that the systems of trade bounties and protection adopted by other countries had so injured English trade that there was justification for asking that Great Britain revise her fiscal relations. The Manchester Chamber of Commerce, by a vote of 64 to 32, adopted a resolution affirming unabated confidence in free trade as the best national commercial ...

... Underwood & Co., of that city, the reason being that the firm refused to discharge three non-union workmen.

—The glass workers at Pittsburgh, having been refused an advance of wages, are threatening to strike.

—The insolvency is announced of George A. Wrisley, a soap manufacturer of Chicago, with liabilities of about $30,000.

—G. M. Thompson, a grain dealer at three points in California, has failed, with debts of $100,000.

—The Manhattan Hardware Company at Reading, Pa., has been declared insolvent, the liabilities being estimated at $75,000.

—Natural gas has been developed on a lot in lower Sixth street, Cincinnati, at a depth of 310 feet. The parties interested at once formed a company with $100,000 capital to bore another well in the vicinity.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

—On account of the interstate commerce law, a box factory at Swanzey, N. H., has suspended operations.

—W. T. Garrett, President of the California Manufacturers' Association, and a committee of San Francisco merchants and manufacturers sent a telegram to the Interstate Commerce Commission asking them to defer action on section 4 until they receive memorials against such suspension. Also resolutions adopted by the association opposing a suspension of section 4, and reciting that the law affords a long needed relief from unjust discriminations. W. L. Merry, President of the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, telegraphs a series of resolutions adopted by that body favoring "the exception of such industries and special cases as absolutely require rapid transit" from the operation of section 4. Charles H. Tweed, of New York, representing the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe; Gen. William Belknap, representing the St. Louis ...

BITS OF BRIGHTNESS.

Hints for the Fairy That Makes Home Beautiful.

WORK FOR NEEDLE AND BRUSH

Decorations That Are Pretty and Appropriate—New Materials for Draperies.

The craze for decoration, which has of late years taken complete possession of all woman kind, is fruitful of novelties in that line. Some of these conceits are artistic and decorative enough to deserve perpetuation.

PRETTY EFFECTS IN LAMP-SHADES.

There is a fancy just now for spiders, grass-hoppers, and the like, which are scattered in all sorts of out-of-the-way places—on lamp-shades, draperies, and even on menu cards, says a writer in the Philadelphia Record. They are of Japanese manufacture, and are wonderfully true to nature; but the fashion is ...

... yond her depth at first she may gradually work up to very effective results in wood painting.

Painting upon pottery with red sealing-wax, previously dissolved in spirits of wine, is a novelty. It gives a raised appearance to the work, and is very effectively used on bronzed or gilded pottery.

Square panels have largely superseded plaques as a basis for the amateur's efforts, although plaques are still somewhat used. The flat surface is, however, easier to paint upon than the concave, and adjusts itself more readily to the space it is intended to adorn.

OTHER SUGGESTIONS FOR DECORATIONS.

Japanese art metal-work, which is so wonderful in its finished state, does not seem to be so very difficult of accomplishment, judging from the description of its method. Thin leaves of copper, precious metals and various alloys are soldered together at the edges as the leaves of a book are joined by their binding, and through these leaves are drilled holes to various depths, or trenches are cut in it to form a design. The mass is then hammered until the holes or trenches ...

HOW CHAMELEONS CHANGE COLOR.

There is a tiny crustacean, the chameleon shrimp, which can alter its hue to that of any material on which it happens to rest. On a sandy bottom it appears gray or sand-colored; when lurking among seaweed it becomes green, or red, or brown, according to the nature of its momentary background. Probably the effect is quite unconscious, or at least involuntary, like blushing with ourselves—and nobody ever blushes on purpose, though they do say a distinguished poet once complained that an eminent actor did not follow his stage directions because he omitted to obey the rubrical remark, "Here Harold purples with anger." The change is produced by certain automatic muscles which force up particular pigment cells above the others, green coming to the top on a green surface, red on a ruddy one, and brown or gray where the circumstances demand them. Many kinds of fish similarly alter color, to suit their background by forcing forward or backward certain special pigment-cells known as chromatophores, whose various combinations produce at will almost any required tone or shade. Almost all reptiles and ...

AT THE CAPITAL.

LANSING, April 25, 1887.

Last week was a busy and an exciting one with Michigan's law-makers.

INSURANCE COMPANIES INVESTIGATED.

The investigation of the co-operative mutual life insurance companies doing business in this State, ordered by the Legislature a month ago, has been constantly conducted since by the special committee composed of Representatives Cross, Douglass, and Goodrich, and Senators Westgate and Gorman, aided by Stenographer Haines, of Bay City, and other necessary clerical help, with Sergeant-at-Arms Stoner of the Senate. The committee has quietly dropped down upon the several companies to be investigated, unannounced and when they least expected them. In addition to the work done and testimony taken in different portions of the State, much testimony has been taken at the headquarters of the committee at the capital, so that the committee has taken altogether eight hundred and twenty-five pages of closely written type-writer testimony. The report was made to the two houses on the 22d, and sums up the testimony with the conclusions and recommendations of the committee in an able and exhaustive manner, the report covering 243 pages of the same style of closely written type-writer matter. The testimony shows that there is not only "something rotten in Denmark," but that the whole system of co-operative mutual benefit insurance as carried on in this State to-day and for the ...

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

FASHION FANCIES.

A Heterogeneous Mixture Consisting of Muffs and Parasols.

MARVELOUS SPRING BONNETS.

A Few of the Many Varieties of Sun-Shades That Will Be Carried This Spring—Fashion Notes.

Parasols.

In parasols, luxury has literally run riot. All the accumulated shapes and styles of years are shown among the fashionable designs, and all materials from gossamer to plush are employed in their manufacture. The color combinations are frequently more striking than beautiful, especially in the designs pronounced wonderfully rich and expensive. The most costly laces are used in making covers, and one of the advantages not to be overlooked is that these covers are usually made separate, so that they will serve over two or more foundations of plain silk. Striped parasols seem not to have lost favor in the least bit, and are shown in even ...

... Times. Indeed, it would be regarded as a kindly thing by those whom inconsistencies offend if some authority would draw a distinct line between these two diverse articles and indicate with exactness the season when each is properly used. It is absolutely harrowing to one gifted with a sense of the fitness of things to meet two women walking side by side, one shielding herself from the sun's rays with a dainty lace-covered parasol and the other protecting her finger tips in the depths of a tiny fur muff. It is literally summer and winter meeting on common ground and turning the order of things upside down. The wisdom of being off with the old love before being on with the new seems to have been forgotten in the desire to be the first to appear adorned with the season's novelties. Among these novelties are noticed spring muffs consisting of ruffles of lace and bunches of flowers and ribbon bows over foundations of silk with very little lining in the shape of wadding. These purely ornamental trifles are made to correspond with certain gowns and wraps, and Easter Sunday will bring forth hundreds of them. In proportion to the length of time they can be carried they are quite expensive, and unless one has almost unlimited means or can manufacture a muff out of odds and ends it is little short of a waste of money to indulge in one.

Hats.

None of the hats are very small. Crowns are square on top and are not very narrow. Most of the brims are ...

ABOUT WOMEN.

Matters and Things in Which Our Fair Readers Are Interested.

NUMEROUS SWEET MORSELS.

A Little Humor, a Bit of Poetry, and Some Breezy Gossip About Modest Matrons and Giddy Girls.

Better Let Her Move It.

Mothers shouldn't be too exacting toward their unmarried daughters. When a girl is 29 years old and wants to move the piano into another corner of the room it is very exasperating to answer her: "When you have a house of your own you can do as you please." It makes her too willing to take up with any kind of a match.

She Didn't.

"I hope you don't contemplate suicide, madam?" observed the patrolman at the ferry dock to a woman who had been hanging around there for some time.

...

... wrote the permit that was to make two hearts happy. And the 27th day of June, 1827, Frank and Fanny Stout were married by the Rev. Mr. Brown, and all went as happy as a marriage bell. What subsequently became of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stout I cannot say. The Rev. William Brown is dead. Mordecai Mobley, the Clerk, is still living and resides in Dubuque, Iowa.—Pekin (Ill.) Times.

Woman and the Home.

Nothing so helps a woman through the long weary days of work, as the knowledge that what she does is appreciated by those she loves and for whom she toils. Think of this, husbands and fathers, and remember that a kind word is always in season. If, on some morning, the coffee is a shade too brown to suit your taste, do not scold about it; and, on every other morning when it is delicious, say so. Try this way and you will find your coffee, and everything else, to your taste much oftener; and besides, you will give the ones you ought to love best the sweet consciousness that they are doing their work well, and giving satisfaction to the one, of all others, they most desire to please—thus inspiring them with renewed energy to strive for the merited reward ...

SABBATH READING.

Momentous Spiritual Truths for the Consideration of the Thoughtful.

FRUIT OF A MOTHER'S FIRST LESSONS.

Every-day Religion—The Key of David—Sam Small on Bob Ingersoll and His Pernicious Teachings.

Everyday Religion.

Everyday religion is the foundation of thoroughness, which is another word for truthfulness and honesty. Workmen that slight their work, whether they make shirts for a living or sermons, build houses or ships, raising flocks or raising families, will be some day or other found out. We want clothes that will not rip, vessels that will not leak, and bridges that will not break down. So we want characters that will stand temptation, and not snap assunder under the sudden pressures of life.

...

... hood from the innocent days of my youth, were angels of warning that kept me true to the faith she taught me. Thus I was saved from the fate of a howling infidel. But Bob Ingersoll is not doing any harm now. I remember when his lectures and writings were sold on every train and were conspicuous on every bookstand. You do not see any of his works offered for sale on the trains now, and on the book stands they are piled away in some unnoticeable corner where they do not attract any attention. Agnosticism is not gaining ground in this country."—New York Mail.

THE ACTION OF OIL IN METALS.

J. J. Redwood, of London, having made a number of lengthened experiments, principally with a view to determine the oils best adapted for mixing with mineral oils for lubricating purposes, has published the results obtained, a resume of which will be useful to horologists, with whom the action of different oils on metals is a subject of paramount importance. The metals were first thoroughly cleaned, washed with either and dried, and, after being weighed, placed in cork tubes together with 15 c. c. of the oil, the tubes being kept for twelve months at an average temperature of about 80 degrees F. in ...

WEAKNESSES OF GREAT MEN.

Their Foibles Overlooked When Their Excellences Are Considered.

[Halifax Critic.]

How is it that we are all interested in the weaknesses of great men? Is it because human nature cannot endure the sight of a faultless fellow-being? Certain it is that the unco guid have very few friends in the world. Or do men, out of vanity, love to hear of the foibles of great men, conscious that they themselves possess these at least in common with the great? Let the many who ape the eccentricities of genius answer for themselves. Or do not small faults and odd habits throw a stronger light upon the inner character of a great genius than his greater qualities and world-renowned exploits? Carlyle, walking in his garden, his hands behind him, and a clay pipe in his mouth, is certainly more real, knowable, and human than Carlyle as the author and moralist. The heart of the reader warms toward the clever, impecunious Goldsmith, sitting in a barrel in "Green Arbor Court" playing his flute while some ragged neighbor's children dance, or teaching his dog to sit on end, while the lines—

By sports like these were all their cares beguiled,
The sports of children satisfy the child,

...

"NEW HOME" Sewing Machines.

Our Agent will soon begin the canvass of Charlevoix and Vicinity, for the sale of the "NEW HOME" Machine, fully warranted and sold on easy terms. The Machine may be seen at the Millinery Store of Litney & Carr, of Charlevoix.

"SMITH AMERICAN" and "CHASE & EARHUFF" ORGANS FOR SALE at LOWEST PRICES.

DUNHAM & SUTTON, EAST JORDAN.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.
CHARLEVOIX, MAY 11, 1887.
WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

Big Deal.

Thursday, W. H. Downer agent for C. A. Barker, Chicago, bought the entire out-put of the Smithson Lumber Co., consisting of 60,000 cedar ties, 5,000 hemlock ties, and 35,000 posts. Mr. Downer will also handle all the wood, bark, shingle and lumber products of the coming summer. The dock at the Smithson yards will be completed next week, when shipments will begin.

Jury List.

The following is a list of the petit jurors drawn for the next term of court:

Bear Lake—Almond Barnard, John D. Davall.
Boyne Valley—Sidney M. Jones, Lewis Meeker.
Chandler—Benj. F. Rice, Chas. Gallup.
Charlevoix—James M. Thompson, John M. Ackert.
Eveline—Henry Sheldon, Robert Newson.
Evangeline—Jacob Kahler, Robert Crawford.
Hudson—Wm. Gillett, Wm. Counsillor.
Hayes—Samuel W. Saulter, Wm. Lawson.
Marion—Wm. S. Gregory, Lorenzo Porter.
Melrose—John Huss.
Norwood—Jacob Vandusen.
Resort—Christ. Engle.
South Arm—Wm. H. Lanway.
Springvale—Geo. W. Mitchell.
Wilson—John A. Newville.

Michigan has a longer coast line than the whole Atlantic coast from New Brunswick to Key West, and the lake traffic is greatly in excess of the whole Atlantic coasting trade. More vessels pass Detroit during every twenty-four hours of the navigation season than any other point in the United States, except the entrance to New York harbor. These are most important facts and well calculated to make a Michigander glow with pride at the unrivaled natural advantages which his native state presents.

Coming to Charlevoix.

The sick treated free of charge.—Fourteen doctors.

Doctors of the great English Staff of Physicians and Surgeons will visit Charlevoix, Fountain City House, May 21, 22, 23 and 24, Saturday, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Four days only.

OFFICE HOURS, 8 A. M. TO 8 P. M. SUNDAYS, 10 TO 4.

The doctors return every three months.

They treat all variety of disease and deformity. As this is their advertising trip, they will give advice and perform all surgical operations free of charge, viz: removal of cancers, tumors, cataracts, curvatures of the spine, clubfeet and all other surgical operations. If constitutional treatment is required, all it will cost the patient will be their medicine.

They will not take any case to treat without there is a moral certainty of giving entire satisfaction.

If your disease is incurable, they will frankly and honestly tell you, and will give such advice as may be required to prolong life; also caution you against spending more money for medicine and appliances which traveling impostors usually suggest.

The number of patients were treated and rejected in the following places, viz: Ottawa, 1,325, 640 rejected; London, Ont., 1,270, 560 rejected; Hamilton, 1,460, 655 rejected; Toronto, 2,768, 1,165 rejected.

This staff is composed of men who have reached the highest round in the ladder of medical and surgical science.

Remember the date and go early, as they can only wait upon about 150 patients a day.

All diseases of the eye, ear, throat lungs, heart, liver, stomach, kidneys, and all the various forms of female complaints successfully treated and satisfaction guaranteed. Catarrh a specialty.

Notice: Electric batteries and appliances, trusses for rupture furnished to patients until cured free of charge.

Marine Jottings.

The following are the clearances from the port of Charlevoix, for ports outside the Michigan District for the week ending yesterday evening:

May 4—Schr Eagle-wing, 210,000 ft hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
5—Schr Kate Hinchman, 9,000 posts Downer to Chicago.
6—Schr Petral, 37,000 ft hardwood lumber, Master to Milwaukee.
6—Schr Ostrich, 6,500 ties, Downer to Chicago.
6—Schr Bert Barnes, 100 c wood, Burnham & Son to Milwaukee.
7—Schr Charlie Crawford, 300,000 ft hardwood lumber, C. J. Lloyd to Detroit.
9—Schr John Schuitz, 525 tons pig iron, Pine Lake Iron Co. to Cleveland.

The propeller VanRaalte cleared from this port on Saturday, for Harbor Springs and Manistique.

The steamer Gracie Barker commenced running Monday.

The steamer Clara Belle arrived back from Manistee Friday, and is on her old Boyne City route, laying up nights at the other end.

The shippers and vessel loaders of East Jordan and South Arm have an understanding that all dock work shall be paid for at the rate of 30 cents per hour.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Remember our Tuesday and Thursday evening meetings. Come to work, to worship for God.

Sabbath services at the usual hours.

Five minutes sermon for the children. Sunday school led by Superintendent.

The M. E. church of East Jordan is to be completed June 10th. The dedication exercises will take place the second Sunday in June.

Ironton.

The schr Narragansett came in on Thursday and is unloading the ore she took in last fall and tried to get here with.

A new ore train will be built on the south side of the furnace.

Quarterly meeting services in the M. E. church net Sunday.

The base ball ground is on Bedwin's point this year.

Geo. Ricks formerly a resident of this town was here last week. His home is now in Wisconsin.

Read the Educational column for report of schools for April.

Misses Mahalah Smith and Ella Spidell were candidates at the examinations at East Jordan and both carried off certificates. Miss Addie Lewis teacher in their District, No. 5, this township, is to blame for the affair. She is now finishing her 3d in that district.

Banks.

The question of cattle running at large has for several years been the occasion of much sectional feeling between eastern and western Banks. At each succeeding spring election the strife was renewed; existing bitterness deepened, and wrongs, fancied or real, greatly exaggerated.

At the last election Eastern Banks, by a large majority, carried a negative vote to restrain cattle from running at large. Incensed at such action, and to defeat the expressed wishes of the majority, a number of the opposing party, from self-interest, or instigated by friends, entered into a plot, which, for diabolical wickedness and heartless cruelty, is without parallel in the history of this region.

The consternation was utterly appalling on learning that the parties who had thus pledged themselves to deeds of direst cruelty bad hitherto borne most excellent names.

For the sake of parents and friends who have the love and sympathy of the entire community in their great affliction, we might suppress names. Among those against whom the evidence seems conclusive, are G. Laclair, Ed Yettan, Wm. Supernaw, B. Rogers, R. C. Marshall, Wm. Byers, J. Rogers, E. C. Coulter, H. C. Kanagy, E. Jolliffe, S. Jolliffe and S. Brown.

There seems to be some evidence tending to implicate some of our older citizens in this nefarious business. It is whispered that Hon. B. Knight, Wm. Flanagin, D. Flanagin, Owen Wood, and others, have been aiding and abetting, and furnishing material aid to the boys. It is to be hoped that these suspicions are not well founded.

Several days ago the cattle running at large in the vicinity of Atwood were seized with a peculiar malady. Moving about uneasily; eyes glaring like balls of fire; tongue protruding; foaming at the mouth; great tremor; reeling and staggering in utter confusion for a time, then, with deafening bellowing rushing in mad fury in the direction of Intermediate Lake. Immense loss!

Whole No. affected,	000
" died,	000
" crippled,	000
Aggregate loss,	0000

The boys were very officious, and to elude the officials in their investigations of the malady, suggested mad itch, hydrophobia, blind staggers, fits, etc, but said nothing about poison or infernal machines.

More anon, after the jury renders a verdict.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Byers, after extended visits in Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas, are home again. Mr. B. is a good farmer and close observer, and gives his Michigan home a little the preference over anything seen in the West. Mrs. B. is much improved in health.

The pastor, Rev. P. F. McClelland, and Rev. C. F. VanAuken, of Charlevoix, are conducting a series of Gospel meetings here.

The band, under Prof. Brown, are making good progress.

Hazings from Hayes.

Rev. W. G. Clark of Charlevoix will preach at Burgess next Friday evening.

The Petoskey Lime Co. at Triple Rock, commenced burning lime last Monday.

John Murray has taken the contract to log and burn 35 acres for O. T. Booth on his farm on the Grandview road.

Clarence Hewitt, Henry Dodge and O. T. Booth are believers in the usefulness of plaster and are sowing it on their new meadows.

The M. E. quarterly meeting for Petoskey circuit will be held at Burgess June 4 and 5.

Henry Hare and G. O. Scott are building board fences on their farm fronts on the Grandview road.

The board of supervisors of Wexford county have fixed the salary of the two deputy game wardens of the county at $75 each, with an allowance of fees the same as drawn by the sheriff in criminal cases.

Kindergarten chairs at See & Son's.

United States consuls in Canada report that our new Interstate Commerce law is operating disastrously to the export and import trade in that country, and that our trade interests in that quarter are threatened with serious consequences.

New York Sun: We have not yet received any evidence to show that there is a single county in the State of New York which would choose delegates in favor of a second term for Mr. Cleveland, if the question had now to be decided.

The public debt was reduced $13,000,000 in April—that is, it would have been, if the increase of the surplus in the Treasury had been applied to the reduction of the debt. Let's see, wasn't there a great outcry by the Democrats in 1884 about the surplus in the Treasury?

Owner to stranger: "That property is worth $37,000; I wouldn't take a cent less." Stranger—"Well, I don't want to buy; I am only an assessor, making out the roll for taxes." Owner—"Oh, I beg pardon. I should consider myself fortunate if could get $17,000 for that property."

The editors of Michigan have decided to establish a secret organization to protect and promote their interests. This is all right. Railroad and other corporations have imposed upon the publishers of this State until it has become unbearable, and naturally enough self-protection follows. W. H. Brearly, of the Detroit Evening News, and H. B. Ainger, of the Charlotte Republican, have been appointed to draft a ritual.

Local option meets with vigorous protest all around, and will probably fail. The active prohibitionists oppose it because it is not prohibition enough for them: the liquor dealers' association opposes it because it is prohibition where the voters of the townships or of counties see fit to make it such; and its friends seem to propose it as a concession to people who say no when it is proposed. It appears hardly probable, at this distance, that the legislature will do anything except to raise the tax, and perhaps add something to the stringency of the existing law.

General Sherman's tribute to General Grant, in his reply, in the current number of the North American Review, to the foolish article of General Lord Woolseley, of England, is a noble one. Against the personal friendship and the professional admiration of these two great Generals for each other all of these petty envies, jealousies and rancors of a generation—all of the malice of correspondents and politicians—were wasted. Each soldier was for the other, living; and the survivor ennobles himself by bearing such generous and glorious tribute to the great dead.

An important test of the operations of the Interstate Commerce act will be applied as navigation is fully opened on the great lakes and rivers. The advance in railroad freight which has been caused by the abolition of the cheap long-haul system, will cause a resort to water transportation wherever it can be used in the business of the country. It looks now as if the attention of the Interstate Commission would be engrossed for some time to come in deciding the intricate questions arising between the rival and competing lines on the the water and land routes of traffic.

I have taken a great deal of pains this spring to get the latest styles of everything in my line. I spent a week in Chicago to find out what the styles were and can show you as fine a line of Hats and Caps and Straw goods as any house in Chicago. My line of neck wear I think is a little ahead of anything I saw there and for Clothing and Furnishing goods I can surprise you. I have the only spring goods in my line brought to this town. If you want goods that are in style come and see me.

GEO. W. MILLER.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

WANTED—A young woman, plain cook, to make herself generally useful in a private family. Apply to MRS. J. S. SMITHSON.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Notice of Dissolution.

The Co-partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned in the name of Rosenthal & Son is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The business will be hence conducted by Alick Rosenthal to whom all indebtedness of said firm will be paid.

SAMUEL ROSENTHAL.
ALICK ROSENTHAL.

Dated Charlevoix, May 9th 1887.

The laying of the corner stone of the new catholic church will occur on Sunday May 15th, at Traverse City.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.

STR. GAZELLE.....................CAPT. JOHN MASON.
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a m and 1:30 p m and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 am and 4 p m, touching at intermediate points both ways.

East Jordan and Charlevoix.

STR. NORTH STAR..............CAPT. MAL THOMPSON.
Leave East Jordan at 6:30 a m. and 2 p. m., and Charlevoix at 9:30 a.m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports.

Boyne City and Charlevoix.

STR. CLARA BELLE..............CAPT. GEO. JYRSON.
Leave Boyne City at 6:30 a. m. and 1:00 p. m., and Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m., and 3 p m connecting with the Friant and Cummings to and from Petoskey. Touching at way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.

STR. THOS. FRIANT.........CAPT. B. VANDERHOEF.
MORNING. Leave Harbor Springs, 7:20; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30; arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30, Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Spring, 6:00.

East Jordan, Charlevoix & Harbor Spgs.

STR. A. CUMMINGS..........CAPT. W. A. SNYDER.
MORNING: Leave East Jordan 7 a. m.; Charlevoix, 9; Petoskey, 11; arrive at Harbor Springs 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave Harbor Springs, 1 p. m.; Petoskey, 1:30; Charlevoix, 3; arrive at East Jordan, 5:30 p. m.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.

PROP. CHAMPLAIN.................Capt. EDW. CASEY.
Going North, Chicago Tuesdays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Thursdays 11 p m, Cheboygan, Fridays 2:30 p m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Fridays 5 p m; Charlevoix, Saturdays 2:30 p m; Milwaukee, Mondays 3 p m; Chicago, Mondays 11 p m.

PROP. LAWRENCE....................Capt. GEO. THORP.
Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 1 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.

Upright & Emrey, agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS.........Capt. O. E. WILLER.
Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Leave Traverse City 7 a m, Northport 9:30, Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St Ignace 8:20.
Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave St. Ignace 6:00 a m; Mackinac Island; Cross Village 10:15, Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15, Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p m arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p m.

T. S. FAXTON.........................Capt. A. G. ALDRICH.
Going North, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Torch Lake 9:45; Norwood 10:30; Charlevoix 12 noon, Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45; arriving at St. Ignace 8:20.
Going South, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave St. Ignace 6 a m; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Norwood 4:10; Torch Lake 5; arriving at Traverse City 7:45 p m.

The City of Traverse leaves Chicago dock above 12th street every Saturday evening at 7, arriving at Traverse City Monday morning. Leaves Traverse City Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock.

J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

I am Not Selling Out!

JUST YET, BUT I AM BOUND TO SELL my goods. If you will give me a chance I will soon convince you that I will sell you better goods for less money than you can buy in this town or any other.

These "Selling Out" and "1-4 Off Sales" are getting old. I am going to continue to sell for cash only till my stock is reduced down to make room for Spring Goods.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

A. T. WASHBURNE AND CO.

WE ARE PUSHING THINGS!

DRY GOODS, CARPETS,
DRY GOODS, CARPETS,
DRY GOODS. CARPETS.

ASTONISHING RESULT OF NEW GOODS AND LOW PRICES.

Bound to sell and not be undersold. Our goods are well bought and are just what the people want. NEW, NEW, NEW! Don't buy old goods when you can get new ones cheaper.

Come in and see for yourselves. We have got just what you need.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.
Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

LAST WEEK IN THE OLD STORE!

WE ARE SELLING ALL GOODS VERY CHEAP AND OFFERING MANY SPECIALLY GREAT BARGAINS.

Best Timothy Seed	$2.25 pr bu
Best Medium Clover Seed	$5.50 "
Best Millet Seed	$1.25 "
Best Hungarian Grass Seed	$1.25 "
Best Manistee or Saginaw Salt	$1.00 a bbl.
Best Factory Filled Dairy Salt	75c pr bu

H. O. ROSE'S PETOSKEY LIME
Imported and Domestic Cements, Calcined Plaster, Plastering Hair, etc., at Lowest Prices.

During the rebuilding of our store our Headquarters will be in the store of Fox & Miller,

Where we shall be pleased to see our friends and serve them,

J. L. HURD & CO.

HAVE DECIDED

TO REMAIN!

Being advised by many patrons and friends, I have decided to stay, and have purchased the interest of Mr. S. Rosenthal. I wish to express my hearty thanks for your past patronage, and hope to serve you in the future.

I HAVE LEASED THE STORE IN THE LEWIS BLOCK, SECOND DOOR SOUTH OF THE BRIDGE AND WILL REMOVE THERE

Wednesday, May 18th.

Before moving I will sell all goods at GREATLY REDUCED PRICES, so as to reduce stock

WHEN WE GET SETTLED IN OUR NEW QUARTERS WE WILL SHOW YOU THE FINEST STOCK OF NEW GOODS,

---In The Line of----

Dry Goods, Carpets, Clothing, and Gents' Furnishing Goods, Ever brought to Charlevoix.

Soliciting a share of your patronage, I am Respectfully Yours,

ALICK ROSENTHAL,
Successor to
ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—3 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887. WHOLE NO. 912

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,
F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

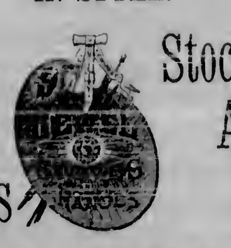
THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS — THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works — Stockman And Iddings



ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS. — THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I — S & I

THE MOST DURABLE. — Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Wait A Minute!

WHY NOT TRADE AT

WILLSEE & CO'S

Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.

A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.

TELEPHONE Orders promptly delivered.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.
Address all business correspondence to the firm
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—The dredge is expected here this week or next.

—Gurley Boak is running the roller skating rink.

—John Munro Jr. was the lowest bidder on the bridge-protection-pier work.

—S. E. Watson, Superintendent of Telephones, spent Monday and Tuesday in town.

—Frank Noyes left last week for Alpena to accept a position as engineer of the fishing tug Grayling.

—Alick Rosenthal took possession of his fine new quarters in the Lewis building yesterday, and begun to transfer his stock last night.

The wedding of Mr. Dar F. Meech and Miss Minnie Lewis occurs at eight o'clock this evening at the residence of Hon. John Nicholls.

—Prof. Enos has declined the invitation of the Superintendent of Public Instruction to hold an Institute at Boyne City the latter part of June.

—Rev. W. H. McCartney's subject on the occasion of the G. A. R. service at the M. E. Church on Sunday, the 29th, will be "Dangers and Guards of the Republic."

—The Fox store building has been raised to its proper height, and workmen, under the direction of J. T. Kirkpatrick, are engaged in reconstructing the interior.

—The State Superintendent of public Instruction has appointed Ralph Enos, of Leland, and son of Prof. Enos, of this place, as one of the Board of State Institute Instructors.

—The State Teachers' Institute for Charlevoix county will be held at Boyne City, commencing at 10 o'clock a. m., Monday, June 6, and closing at 4 p. m. Friday, 10. R. L. Corbett, Boyne City, local committee.

—Rev. W. H. Moore, assistant pastor of the Sarnia M. E. Circuit, is here visiting his sisters, Mrs. Blodgett and Mrs. John Cook. He occupied the M. E. pulpit Sunday evening and preached to a large congregation.

—The Renard saloon has not yet secured the second surety for its bond, and it looks as if we shall have to be satisfied with two saloons. The place is open, however, and it is given out that it will be run as a temperance billiard hall.

—A letter from the State Game and Fish Warden, recently received, states that within the past two weeks nearly a hundred arrests have been made in the State for violations of the fish and game laws. He adds: "And the work shall continue until these laws are respected."

—O. W. Smith's new band pagoda was opened by the Boys' Band Thursday evening. It is an attractive affair. The band will occupy it two evenings in the week, and a box is provided in which contributions will be received for the band uniform fund. Mr. Smith runs a very neat fruit and confectionery stand in connection.

—Some of these one-horse burgs about here that have been existing on wind to these many years, and spending their spare time in belittling Charlevoix, are getting their eyes wide open to the fact that Charlevoix is not "a sleepy old town," a "good place for a quiet resort," etc. Charlevoix will be in her predestined glory when some of these towns will have moss upon their wharves and grass growing in their streets.

—Wm. Holland, of Eveline, who has figured considerably in Justice McLeod's court recently, was again arraigned Wednesday afternoon on a charge of cruelly assaulting his wife. The jury were very prompt in bringing in a verdict of guilty, and Mac gave him the alternative of paying $85, including costs, or going that number of days to the Detroit House of Correction. As a matter of necessity he chose the latter, and Deputy Sheriff Scroggie took him down on Thursday.

—Kalkaska Leader: At a conference held here last week between E. S. and H. H. Noble, of Elk Rapids, and C. E. Gill, of the G. R. & I. R. R., together with members of the Smith Lumber Co, and other citizens, the question of a branch of the G. R. & I. via Williamsburg, to Elk Rapids, was discussed. The visiting gentlemen were disposed to look with favor upon such a scheme, and Mr. Gill will recommend to his company that the line be built, and at once. The proposed railroad will follow the line of the Smith Lumber Co.'s logging road, already five miles out, and the only possible obstacle now apparent is the right of way from Island Lake, in Wilson township, to Williamsburg, in Traverse county, and that can doubtless be secured without difficulty. On either side of the points mentioned, it is practically pledged in advance. How will the above do for a batch of railroad news? When our readers get the above thoroughly digested we'll try and have some more fun for them.

—L. E. Allen is at Frankfort superintending harbor work.

—Dodge & Scott, steamboat Inspectors, were in town last week.

—Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. are re-painting their store buildings.

—Cadillac has finally bonded itself for $35,000 in aid of the Toledo & Ann Arbor railroad.

—Mr. Cherrie tells us that he is about to bore for salt at Ironton, and has no doubt of success.

—Mr. J. S. Smithson and family will leave Charlevoix for England, the latter part of August.

—Nicholls & Morgan, of Boyne City, have 200,000 brick on hand of last season's manufacture.

—The Bank of Charlevoix has been newly papered and decorated, and is greatly improved in appearance.

—Rev. J. J. Kanagy has been home on a visit, and left to-day to attend the State Association at Lansing.

—Mrs. Guyles of Manitowoc, has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Genevra Guyles during the past week.

—Dr. G. W. Crouter on Monday sold 80 acres of land near East Jordan to Detroit parties for $35 per acre.

—The handsome new dwelling of H. Lee Iddings is enclosed. It occupies one of the pleasantest sites in Charlevoix.

—The Fountain City House office has been under the hands of the paper hanger and decorator, and is a finer room than ever.

—The handsome show windows of Geo. W. Miller is a good index of the attractive line of clothing and furnishing goods to be found within.

—John E. Darrah of Clarion, has a contract of putting into Cecil bay, in the straits, 2,000,000 feet of long pine timber for Charleton, the coming winter.

—The School Moderator says Prof. O. B. Weed will not teach after the close of his present term at Manistique, but will engage in the practice of medicine.

—President McLeod brought in a fine basket of trout Monday, from McGeagh's, and Dr. Carlstein came in the same day from Monroe's with some fine ones.

—Ivanhoe Commandery, K. T., of Petoskey, will observe Ascension Day to-morrow. Rev. Mr. Babcock. Episcopal, is expected to preach the sermon of the occasion.

—Kalamazoo Telegraph: Brother Ed F. Parmelee, of the Charlevoix Sentinel, has been appointed weather observer at that port. If any man can find a new variety of weather, it's Ed.

—Township officers should order their printing at the SENTINEL steam printing office. Orders on the treasurer, highway commissioner's orders and all kinds of printing promptly and reasonably executed.

—A well known Charlevoix fisherman went out to Mill creek yesterday morning to catch trout, but became caught by his own fly. It was removed from his thumb after a surgeon had wrestled with it for an hour or so.

—Jas. Beauvais is engaged for the most of the season as guide for two fishing tours among the trout streams of Lake Superior. W. H. Holden, of Chicago, and E. D. Moore, of Toledo, are the gentlemen who were fortunate enough to secure his services.

—The bill prohibiting the use of script or store orders in the payment of wages to laborers in mines, mills, shops or factories, passed the house with only one vote against it. The bill provides for the payment of wages in the lawful money of the United States.

The Belvedere, the new summer resort hotel, will be completed by June 10th, the time agreed upon by the contractors. The interior is nearly finished and work upon the verandas being rapidly pushed. The new building already presents a much finer appearance than was even expected and it improves every day.

—On "Arbor Day" Baxter Post G. A. R., of Charlevoix, planted a tree and dedicated it to the name and memory of Edward H. Green, 107th Penn. volunteers and commander of Baxter Post. The speech of Comrade Robert Miller, a synopsis of which is given by the SENTINEL, seems to have been very appropriate to the occasion.—Record.

—Rev. A. T. Waterman, pastor of the Charlevoix Congregational church, received a call Friday from the church at Onekama, 12 miles north of Manistee, on Portage Lake and Lake Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Waterman in leaving Charlevoix carry with them, not only the unqualified regard of the Congregational church, but also the highest esteem of our citizens at large, with whom they were so deservedly popular.

—Speaking of the Detroit, Charlevoix & Escanaba railroad, the Kalkaska Leader says: The outlook now is that the survey will be immediately followed by choppers and graders, and that the road will be through to Kalkaska before snow flies. The above is no idle guess-work on our part, but cold, hard facts obtained direct from headquarters. And if there are still any doubting Thomases among us, in regard to the D. C. & E. R. R., they might as well begin to look for a hole to crawl into, or move to Mancelona.

—H. W. Page is very sick at his Kalamazoo home.

—Perry Weed's soda fountain is running full blast.

—Elk Rapids is considering the question of a bank.

—Sells Bros.' circus will be at Traverse City May 30th.

—John Woods, of this place, is at Elk Rapids doing a caulking job.

—Dr. N. J. Perry leaves to morrow for Southern Michigan on a visit.

—C. F. DeGolyer and family, of Chicago, are at C. Y. Cook's for the summer.

—J. S. Smithson will occupy the Congregational church next Sunday morning.

—Mrs. M. Litney, of this place, has taken a stock of millinery goods to Northport.

—Hugh Donnelly, of Northport, will buy fish this summer as well as catch them.

—A. T. Washburne & Co. will have a new and attractive advertisement in our next issue.

—The boys' band made good music Tuesday evening at the pagoda, with Billy Dennis on the lead.

—Fred M. Green leaves next Monday for his uncle Austin's farm near Ann Arbor, to remain for six weeks.

—Notice the change in C. R. Bellinger's advertisement. He certainly has a fine line of jewelry and silverware.

—The W. C. T. U. ladies adopted resolutions regretting the removal of Rev. A. T. Waterman and wife. We regret that a press of other matter necessitates their omission.

—The Presbyterian church of Norfolk, Va., sends J. S. Smithson of Charlevoix, a flattering testimonial letter expressing their thanks to him for his efforts in that city last winter in behalf of the freedmen and others. Norfolk Presbyterians appreciate whole-souledness.

Marine Jottings.

The steam yacht Ida is running between Elk Rapids and Eastport.

It is rumored that the steamers Faxton and City of Traverse are for sale.

The steamer Daisy was here Wednesday on her way from Grand Haven to Ashland and Duluth, where she is going to run.

The Brown boys' new steam yacht, the "Beulah B," was launched Monday, and yesterday made a successful trip to Boyne City.

According to the Detroit Evening Journal the steamer Milton D. Ward is coming on the Cheboygan and Sault Ste. Marie route.

The steamer Faxton arrived on her first trip Monday afternoon, and proceeded to Manistique. She returns here, and will go into Campbell's ship yard to receive a new wheel.

The steamer Gazelle was finally sold last week to St. Ignace parties, and left for that place Thursday. When about ten miles out, she blew out a stay-bolt in her fire-box. Engineer Ackert went ashore and came here for a tug. She was brought back for repairs.

The steamer Onekama, Capt. J. U. Emory, will run this season between Traverse City and Northport, touching at Bowers Harbor, Sutton's Bay and Omena. She leaves Northport every morning and Traverse at two o'clock every afternoon, thus making the round trip every day.

It is said that the propellers Champlain and Ossifrage had a test of speed coming from St. Ignace to Cheboygan recently, and that the run was made by both boats in one hour and twenty minutes. The Champlain entered the harbor first but was closely followed by the Ossifrage.

The propeller Sanford, plying between Manistee and Frankfort, caught fire while on her way to the latter port on Thursday last, destroying her cabin and a quantity of freight. During the excitement, the fireman, W. McGregor, fell overboard and was drowned. He was a son of the Captain, and a resident of Frankfort.

Clearances for the week:

10—Schr Florence M. Smith, 2,200 posts, Master to Milwaukee.
11—Schr Arctic, 150 c wood, Stripp to Milwaukee.
12—Schr L. B. Shepard, 170,000 ft hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
12—Barge H. A. Root, 300,000 ft hardwood lumber Stebbins to Michigan City.
13—Schr E. R. Blake, 6000 ties, Downer to Chicago.
13—Schr Sea Gem, 75 c wood, Newton to Milwaukee.
14—Schr Ostrich, 6,000 ties, Downer to Chicago.
15—Schr. W. A. Smith, 20 c bark, 15 wood, owner to Milwaukee.
Schr Lottie Mason, 50,000 hardwood lumber, Dexter & Noble, to Kenosha.
Schr. J. L. Green, 70 c slabs, master to Sheboygan.

Capt. Bouchard had 58 holes bored in the Van Raalte's planking while she was in dry dock, in order to test the soundness of her timbers. The holes were bored in different parts of the hull, and the planking was found to be as sound as the day it was spiked on the ribs. Around the stern post there were a few defective planks where the water had entered between joints, but the main body of the planking was as sound as a new dollar. A new stern post and new lining were put in, and the Van is in good condition to stand as much weather as ever—and she has seen lots of it. A knot hole was found in an otherwise sound plank, which caused the troublesome leak last fall. Capt. Bouchard has the chips drawn out of the plank by the augur, and offers them to the inspection of the doubters. Better look at 'em before condemning the Van as "unsafe."—Independent.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN.

MY FIRST KISS.

BY SAMUEL MINTURN PECK.

The tender smile of parting day
Was waning in the west;
Soft shadows climbed the eastern way
Where morning's feet had prest.
We lingered on, my Love and I,
Amid the fragrant dew,
And though our hearts were beating high
Our words were low and few.

The little stars laughed down in scorn—
Where had my courage fled?
At last, with strength of passion born,
The fateful words were said.
She could not speak—she could not see—
So thick the teardrops shone,
But drooping eyelids told to me
What lips were shy to own.

I've toiled and won an honored name,
And now I'm growing old;
I've touched the shining hem of Fame,
And found its touch was cold;
But still from out the shadowy past
One memory brings me bliss,
For I shall keep while life shall last—
Our first, betrothed kiss.

—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE GREEN-EYED MONSTER.

BY W. D. S. ATKINSON.

I.

Outside a large and comfortable residence on the outskirts of a great city, a wild storm raged. Inside, a woman sat lost in thought.

It would be hard, even for me with so much imaginative license as a story-writer, to say what thoughts held this woman almost spell-bound before the cheerful log-fire, but the opportunity may be taken to gather something of her history.

May Worthington is no child; no one would ever think of her as aught but a good, thoughtful and experienced woman. She is only 25 years old, but her life has not been all sunshine. Indeed, her pathway has mostly led her along that side of the road where the shadows fall thickly.

May Worthington was left with a brother only two years older than herself, before she was 15 years old, to fight her way unaided through the world.

May was clever, and by close application soon fitted herself for teaching some special branches of study. She and her brother were well liked by all with whom they came in contact and never lacked friends.

When May was 20 she lost her brother. No, he did not die. Sometimes she almost wished that he had, for then, at least, she could have spoken of him to sympathetic friends. As it was, she knew not whether he was alive or dead, and—if that were the only uncertainty! Not that what folks said influenced May in her loyalty to her brother. He was still her brother, whatever the world might say. But then, she could not close her ears to what it did say, and it hurt her, oh, so much.

After he was gone May found a home in the household of Mr. Paul Lawrence, as companion and governess to that gentleman's young step-sister.

Mr. Lawrence and his young sister had also lost both father and mother. But the Lawrences were rich and knew very little about the losing side in the battle of life. Yet they cherished kindly and sympathetic feelings toward lonely May Worthington, and both Maude Lawrence and her brother tried in many ways to make their home a pleasant one for May. May knew this and appreciated their kindness.

For three years she had been with the Lawrences, during all of which time she had been Maude's constant companion and warm friend. But Paul, kind as he was to her in many ways, had never attempted to closely cultivate her acquaintance.

Paul Lawrence was a very proud man—very cold and reserved; a man who did not invite confidence and who would not force his acquaintance or friendship upon any. But one felt sure that his friendship once secured, would be worth retaining. He was one of those men with a calm exterior whose passions are none the less intense because hidden far out of sight.

May Worthington had plenty to think about on this wintry night. Yet, somehow, they were stay-at-home thoughts, and after starting upon a short trip they always came back and stopped at Paul Lawrence.

Ah, well! May Worthington was only a woman, no more and no less, and shall we say that she was foolish or unwomanly in that she (almost unconsciously, perhaps), loved unasked? She was not the first women who has apparently wasted her love

[illegible]

Opening it in a listless way, this is what he read:

"MAY:—I wonder if you still care for me? It seems a lifetime since I saw you. I am so miserable, and I do so long to see you just once. Give me one of the old time kisses to-night, dear. I dare not show myself, so meet me at 8 o'clock (or as soon after as possible) by your carriage-house. Prov[illegible] any one see you, neither give them, in any way, [illegible] DICK."

If some one had struck Paul Lawrence a terrible blow he could not have felt more stunned.

At first he was amazed, then grieved, and then angry; not with a flaming, furious anger which would rage for a short time and then spend itself, but a quietly intense, dangerous anger, which would smoulder and burn until it reached a white heat.

A few moments before he had held in his arms the woman whom he had made his wife, whom he had loved and honored—his first and only love. Now he began to hate her only began, because his hatred was of that sort which would grow in intensity.

The first effects of the blow having passed away, Paul Lawrence did not lose his head. He did not propose to act like an excited boy and spoil everything. He would wait and see the end—wait and know how unfaithful a trusted wife could be. And then—

* * * * *

Two hours afterward Paul Lawrence had secreted himself behind some shrubbery within sight of his own carriage-house. From his hiding-place he soon saw enough to persuade him that, although he had a wife, her love was not his. For he beheld that slender form enclosed in two strong arms; while, without any appearance of shyness or fear, his—Paul Lawrence's—wife kissed, more than once, the man with whom she had made this assignment.

A few minutes passed away, and May entered the house by a door not often used in winter time. Her husband met her, his anger very nearly at a white heat.

"Where have you been?" asked he.

"To the carriage-house, Paul."

"And why there?"

May was confused. She had not counted upon meeting her husband so soon, and she told a lie.

"I have mislaid my pocket-book, and I thought I might possibly have left it in the carriage this morning."

Paul, of course, knew that his wife lied, and she saw that Paul suspected the falsehood, but she did not anticipate her husband's next words:

"Liar! I know where you have been and what you have been doing. See, here is the note he wrote you; take it, I do not want it. Let me think—you are my wife. I remember, we were married, and you are known as Mrs. Lawrence. Well, Mrs. Lawrence, you are a credit to your too simple husband."

"Oh, Paul," began May, whose tears were fast flowing.

"Don't address me as 'Paul,'" shouted the angry man. "I know I am your husband, but don't speak to me or I may forget myself and strike a woman. Listen. We cannot share the same roof another hour. You may stay here and I will go away—or you can leave me here. Please yourself. You will have all the money you need, but never let me see your cursed, false face again. Do you understand? Which way is it to be?"

"Paul, you must li[illegible]," sobbed May. "He said I should say nothing to you, but—"

"Curse you! Dare you tell me what he said? Great Heaven, if I had not been a fool or a coward I should have killed you both, as I saw you together behind the carriage-house! Mention him again and, by the living God, I will shoot you right here! Say, quickly, who leaves this house, you or I?"

May shivered and tremblingly said:

"Paul, you are unjust; but I will go away. It is your house, stay here. I thought I was too happy. Good-bye, Paul."

She waited, unconsciously almost, for him to say a word. But anger, jealousy, and hatred had changed Paul Lawrence into a demon. Silent and unmoved he watched his wife step out alone into the darkness, alone, to face the cold wintry night and the cold world.

Yet, about midnight, Paul Lawrence remembered that happy night one year before, and once a sigh escaped him.

III.

A miserable night. Rain and sleet falling through the darkness; gusts of wind rattling through the leafless branches of the trees.

Outside, a woman—a lady well and warmly dressed, but, oh, so cold at heart, and so unhappy. Inside a darkened room and upon a bed a sick man—so sick that, humanly speaking, he cannot live to see the light of the coming day.

[illegible]

soothed the poor woman listening outside in the cold, wet night, and she, too, prayed:

"Lord, let me 'come in' to Paul. And, if that is not to be, then take me home to thyself, Lord; for I am so weary and so tired of wandering alone in this unkind world."

May had not noticed footsteps approaching, but as the last word left her lips a well-known voice broke the silence of the night.

"May! Why, what in the world are you doing here? You are cold and drenched through—and you are sick! What does it mean, May?"

"Oh, Dick, hush! Let us go away—take me to the city; this is not my home any more."

But, still standing in the rain, May told as much of her story as she cared to—as much as seemed to her necessary. And, under the nearest gas-lamp, the man took from his pocket that evening's newspaper and handed it to May, who read—

THE GRAYDON FORGERY CASE.

Last evening Charles A. Malden, cashier of the Second National Bank, committed suicide by blowing out his brains with a pistol. The dead man's affairs are found to be in bad shape, though just how bad cannot be determined at present. In his desk was found a letter addressed to Col. Graydon, one of the bank directors and a heavy stockholder. In this letter Malden confessed to having forged Col. Graydon's name to a check for a large amount, five years ago. At the time that forgery created a widespread interest, and suspicion fell so heavily upon Richard Worthington, Col. Graydon's secretary, that a warrant was issued for his arrest, though he was never captured. It is needless to add that all suspicion is now removed from Mr. Worthington.

"Oh, Dick! Thank God! I can tell him all now. He must know this very night, and you shall go with me when I tell him."

May took her companion's hand and led him quickly to the door of Paul Lawrence's house. She did not wait to ring the bell, but walked right in to where Hannah still knelt. Hannah did not appear greatly surprised.

"Ah, missus," she said as tears of joy ran down her dark but pleasant face, "I 'spected you'd come. I axed de good Lord to bring you back to Mars' Paul, an' He's broughten you."

It was not long before May was at Paul's bedside, forgetting her own weariness in her gladness at being once more near her husband. And when, as the gray dawn of the morning broke, the doctor told them that Paul Lawrence would live, May was happy, and only then consented to take some much-needed rest.

During the day Paul recovered consciousness, and in the afternoon May led her brother to his bedside.

"I have come back, Paul, and this is Dick, my brother."

The sick man feebly held out his wan hand and drew his wife to him, for he was glad at heart to have her back. And May bent over and kissed the husband who had so sadly wronged her.

Then Dick Worthington withdrew, and we will do likewise, for where better can we leave husband and wife than locked in each other's arms? And, as we leave them so, I remember that somewhere in the Good Old Book I have read that "Jealousy is cruel as the grave;" but close by I have also read that "Love is strong as death."

A Master of Style.

Gautier is also one of the writers who prove how largely the form of expression gives literature its charm and ideas their interest. When the French say that the style is all-important, they come much nearer the truth than a class of English writers who regard it as unimportant. Gautier was a critic of much delicacy and justness of feeling, but he had no new ideas to bring into the realm of art or thought. No man had less claim to be regarded as a philosopher or sage. His views of life were often intended to be amusing, and when so intended they usually furnish amusement from their naivete and their simplicity. They please us, as the sayings of children please us, by the ignorance of life which they display. Gautier looked at life with the glance of a child, who finds in it much that is pretty, and is wholly unconcerned as to whether there is aught to existence but picking flowers and chasing butterflies.

But the style made every page that he wrote full of charm. He said of himself that his was a style of adjectives. He thought that the complications of modern life demanded a supple and complex mode of expression that should seek words in all dictionaries, colors from all palettes, harmonies from all lyres; his should be like the light of the setting sun, that reflects through

[illegible]

FITH AND POINT.

FREE lunch for callers—Sponge cake.

A MAN of deeds—The country recorder.

A STUFFED-UP-GEYSER is an ex-spurt in its way.

"WHAT would the world do without alcohol?" asks an exchange. Do without, probably.—New York Graphic.

THE life of the book-agent is full of wormwood and gall. The wormwood is barely perceptible. —Merchant Traveler.

IT is a question whether a man can ever be an angel. But if men couldn't there is a general belief that women wouldn't want to be. —Somerville Journal.

"IF misfortune overtakes you, smile," advises a poet. That's all well enough, but suppose misfortune overtakes you in a strictly prohibition town?—Burlington Free Press.

A MAINE paper inquires: "Is there more money in heels than in heads?" Yes, in politics, where the heelers get all the money and the head men all the honors. —Washington Star.

A PHILADELPHIA firm has published a book called "How to Become a Public Speaker." In the interest of suffering humanity that book ought to be suppressed at once.—Boston Post.

A "SEASONABLE-HINT" column says that warm soapsuds is one of the best insect washes. It is well to know this. Insects lose half their unpleasantness when kept nice and clean. Save your suds. —Life.

A SHEET of paper seventeen inches wide and more than seven miles long was recently made at Watertown, N. Y. The leading plumber of the place had a bill to make out.—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

MRS. IKENSTEIN—Ron mit der doctor ker vick, Solomon! Ter papy is svallowt a silver tollar! Mr. I.—Vos it dot ven I left on ter dable? Mrs. I.—Yes, dot vos id; hurry mit der doctor. Mr. I.—Don't ged oxcited, Rajel, it vos goulder-veid.

A WILD mountain blizzard broke loose in Dakota and started off whooping like a Comanche Indian until it met a Chicago real-estate agent, when it tucked its tail between its legs and sat down and whined like an applicant for a postmastership. —Newman Independent.

MR. JEFFERSON was at one time a member of the Legislature and did much good work while there. He was instrumental in abolishing the laws relative to entail and primogeniture. He also greatly improved the existing game laws, making it a felony to turn a jack from the bottom of the pack. —Bill Nye.

THE course of true love may be traced in the eight letters produced at the hearing of a breach-of-promise case. The first letter commenced, "Dear Mr. Smith," then followed "My dear John," then "My darling John," "My own darling Jack," "My darling John," "Dear John," "Dear Sir," and all was over. Volumes could not say more.

ALL who remember the late Rev. William Adams, D.D., will be able to appreciate the grace with which, at the Pan-Presbyterian Council in Edinburgh, he rebuked his British Presbyterian brethren for their almost numberless divisions and subdivisions. "Brethren," said he, "you are R. P's., and I. P's., and U. P's. Why don't you call yourself split peas and be done with it?"

THERE is a story of a Chicago man who lost his brother by death, and called on an undertaker. He asked the undertaker how much it would cost to keep the body on ice till after the funeral, and on being told the price, said, "I suppose you will give a discount. My brother had his feet frozen before he died. He was caught out in a blizzard." The undertaker gave the bereaved mourner 20 per cent. off, on account of the feet.—Peck's Sun.

THE APPLE-BLOSSOM.

A little apple blossom fluttered down
And lightly came between the lips of two ●
Who just that moment would have 'changed a kiss,
But for the warning that the light breeze blew.
She started back, and with a nervous laugh
Refused his kiss, and in her rosy hand
Gayly held up the dainty cup of pink
Loosed and set floating by some fairy wand.
And so she kept it for a little while,
And in a few short, fleeting months from then
She sent it to him on his wedding-day,
Writing, "An emblem of the hearts of men."
—Gertrude H. Ring.

ERSKINE once was prosecuting a stage-coach proprietor in behalf of a gentleman who had suffered from an upset. "Gentlemen of the jury," said Erskine, in opening the case, "the plaintiff is Mr. Beverley, a respectable merchant of Liverpool, and the defendant is Mr. Urison, proprietor of the Swan with Two Necks in Lad lane—a sign emblematic, I suppose, of the number of necks people ought to possess who travel by his vehicles."—The Argonaut.

Largest Farm in the World.

In the extreme southwest corner of Louisiana lies the largest producing farm in the world. It runs 100 miles north and south and twenty-five miles east and west, and is owned and operated by a syndicate of northern capitalists. Their general manager, J. B. Watkins, gives an interesting account of this gigantic plantation, which throws the great Dalrymple farm in Dakota into the shade completely. "The million and a half acres of our tract," Mr. Watkins said, "was purchased in 1883 from the State of Louisiana and from the United States Government. At that time it was a vast grazing land for the cattle of the few dealers of the neighborhood. When I took possession I found over thirty thousand head of half-wild horses and cattle. My work was to divide the immense tract into convenient pastures, establishing stations or ranches every six miles. The fencing alone cost in the neighborhood of $50,000. The land I found to be the best adapted to rice, sugar, corn, and cotton. All our cultivating, ditching, etc., is done by steam-power. We take a tract, half a mile wide, for instance, and place an engine on each side. These engines are portable, and operate a cable attached to four plows, and under this arrangement we are able to plow thirty acres a day with only the labor of three men. Our harrowing, planting, and other cultivation is done in a like manner. In fact, there is not a single draught-horse on the entire place. We have, of course, horses for the herders of cattle, of which we now have 16,000 head. The Southern Pacific Railroad runs for thirty-six miles through our farm. We have three steamboats, operating on the waters of our own estate, upon which there are 300 miles of navigable waters. We have an ice-house, a bank, a ship-yard, and a rice-mill."

A NEWSPAPER correspondent speaks of having lately seen Gladstone when "he was immersed in thought and bathed in perspiration."

Another New South Episode.

It was Mr. Grady of Atlanta who enjoyed a temporary boom of personal popularity by airing his eloquence at the recent New England dinner, picturing the magnanimity of the New South toward the colored race, extolling its fervid devotion to the laws of the country, and appealing to the North to recognize the patriotism of that section and emulate it. Mr. Grady was particularly enthusiastic in his description of the New South, and pictured the roseate existence of the negro under the new order of things in vivid colors.

Mr. Grady thereby built a very large boom for himself, and achieved such a sudden popularity that his name was even mentioned in connection with the national ticket of his party. There were many people in the North who took a great deal of stock in his New South, but somehow or other the market has turned against them and steadily declined until New South is no longer quoted. Scarcely a day passes that something does not turn up showing that it is the same Old South after all. One of these incidents happened the other day. A middle-aged colored man, respectable in dress and behavior, purchased a first-class ticket from Chattanooga to Atlanta, and took his seat in the car. What resulted is told in the dispatch as follows:

"Conductor Ferguson at once approached him and ordered him to go into the colored car. 'I will not do it,' replied the negro; 'I have a first-class ticket to Atlanta, and will not submit to discrimination.' The conversation was listened to by the other passengers, and as soon as the conductor stepped out three young men approached the negro, saying: 'Here, coon, get out of this car.' One of the men grabbed the negro's cane and dealt him a heavy blow on the head. In an instant the negro, who had wonderful strength, was rolling over the three young men on the floor of the coach. The conductor endeavored to save the objectionable passenger from the indignity to which he was being subjected, but the train slowing up at Dalton the negro was shoved out in the dark and left standing in a ditch."

This little affair occurred in the most intelligent portion of Mr. Grady's New South, not in the Old South of Mississippi or Alabama, where a similar defense of his rights would have resulted in something worse than being pounded by three ruffians and thrown into a ditch. It was in that section where, according to Mr. Grady, there are the kindest feelings toward colored men; where no color line is drawn; where the two races get along together harmoniously and even affectionately; and where the laws of the country are respected. Prejudiced Northern men, however, will fail to see any radical difference between the New South and the Old South, or discriminate between their methods of treating the negro. It may be that the New South is boiling over with affection for him, but it has a strange way of showing it. If this were a single instance it might be regarded as exceptional, but unfortunately episodes of this kind are common—so common, indeed, that Mr. Grady's New South boom is in danger of utter collapse.

It is some compensation that the colored man has his remedy. Civil-rights legislation cannot help him, because civil rights are not recognized in the New South; but he will sue the road for damages under the interstate commerce law, which expressly provides that there shall be no discrimination against any person. The New South may deny that this colored man is a first-class passenger—though he is first class by a large majority in comparison with some of the whites who travel in that section—but it can hardly deny that he is a person and maintain it before a court, even in the New South. Mr. Grady says there is a great deal of justice there, and, of course, the negro will get the damages from the road which he deserves, but this does not affect the humbug about the New South which Grady so eloquently spouted amid the fizzing of champagne and the applause of his auditors.—Chicago Tribune.

Effect of the Labor Movement in 1888.

In the city of New York it is probable that three-fourths of the men who voted for Mr. George for Mayor last fall voted for Mr. Cleveland for President. If half of these votes can be drawn away by a labor candidate for President in 1888, the Republicans can carry it by a good plurality. It has been asserted that this element which Mr. George led in New York City cannot be held together for a Presidential vote in 1888, and that it will vote for the Democratic candidate for President. It may be that Mr. George's vote last November could not be polled again for him at the present time, but the indications are rather on the other side. The results in Cincinnati, and even in Chicago, where the organization was in bad hands, show that the labor organization has a powerful hold as an independent factor in politics, and that it draws its strength from the Democratic party more largely than from the Republican. These results show that the labor organization as an independent political body is extending, and that the chances are that it will grow for some time, and will present a ticket at the next Presidential campaign unless the Democrats present a candidate satisfactory to the men who voted for Mr. George in New York, for Stevenson in Cincinnati, and Nelson in Chicago. Who can that man be? Will Mr. Cleveland be satisfactory to the voters who rallied against Mayor Hewitt?—Boston Journal.

Quite a Difference in Latitude.

It seems to make a good deal of difference with Mr. Cleveland in accepting invitations to public exercises whether they come from the North or the South. He has been invited to attend the dedication of a soldiers' monument at New Haven, Conn., June 17. He replies that he can't tell for some weeks yet whether he will be able to accept the invitation or not, which is his way of declining it altogether. He is invited to attend a Southern fair at Atlanta next October and he accepts at once and says he will be there. He seems to have no difficulty in determining what his engagements will be six months hence, but he can't tell for weeks whether he will be able to spend a day at New Haven two months hence.

There is probably no one who will regret very much this disposition he makes of his time. His invitation to the dedication of the soldiers' monument was undoubtedly more formal and complimentary to the office of President than to the man who fills it. We don't wonder that he is not disposed to attend the New Haven celebration, for what would Grover Cleveland do at the dedication of a monument to the Union soldiers whose memory he has so brutally assailed? He will feel much more at home in Atlanta, and the Solid South will welcome its friend with unfeigned delight.—Iowa State Register.

For Cleveland in 1888.

Ex-Governor D. H. Chamberlain, one of the chief mugwumps of 1884, is frank enough to say that he will support Cleveland again in 1888—or rather that he will still be for a free-trade candidate—which was what the mugwumps left the Republican party for. In a late interview he says:

"I have no hesitation in saying that I am still a strong Cleveland man. I'll go even further, and say that I am stronger for Cleveland than I was when I voted for him, and I think that that is the general feeling among the Republicans who supported him in 1884. If there is any discontent I think it is chiefly among certain Bourbon Democrats. The mugwumps seem to me to be better satisfied with Mr. Cleveland's administration than his own party."

So with all the others, they left the Republican party for free-trade reasons. They will stay out of it for the same reasons. On this point they are more Democratic than the average modern Democrat.—Des Moines Register.

FIRST DIRECTOR—"I am afraid we shall have to pass a dividend again." Second Director—"We can't do it." "Can't do it?" "No. The interstate commerce law doesn't allow us to pass anything."

AT THE CAPITAL.

Representative Milo H. Dakin Pounced—Brief Sketch of the Trial—State Public School and Its Probable Investigation—Important Liquor Legislation for This Week.

LANSING, May 2, 1887.

Never before in the fifty years of its existence has the State of Michigan had occasion to expel a member of either house, or even to make the attempt. Last week, however, witnessed such a scene at the Capitol as we hope may never again disgrace the fair name and fame of our boasted Michigan. Beginning promptly at 10.15 on the morning of the 26th (according to previous appointment), the House of Representatives, through the committee previously chosen for the purpose, called the case of Mr. Dakin and proceeded to examine witnesses, as in open court, to prove the four charges that had been made against one of their own number, which were in substance:

1. That the accused, Milo H. Dakin, a Representative from the First District of Saginaw County, did, on the 19th day of April, and at other times, receive money from John H. Shackelton, Mayor of Saginaw, to be corruptly used among the members of the House in influencing votes for a bill to amend the charter of the city of Saginaw;

2. That the said Dakin did, on the 19th day of April, and at other times, solicit and endeavor to procure money from certain persons (who were named), ostensibly to be used in corrupting members, but actually to be used for his own use and benefit;

3. That said Dakin did, on the day named, place opposite the names of fifteen members of said House of Representatives sums varying from $5 to $25, which he said would be necessary to be used in order to secure the votes of the members so named for the bill in question, "thereby bringing the good name and character of said members into ill-repute;"

4. That said Dakin did, on the day named and on other occasions, solicit money from at least two persons, to be used among the members of the House of Representatives in influencing their votes in favor of the bill named.

The committee for the prosecution consisted of Representatives A. B. Chapman, J. V. B. Goodrich, H. W. Thompson, A. B. Pierce, and B. A. Snow, and they were ably assisted by Representatives Diekema and Herrington, who were called to aid in the conduct of the case by a vote of the House; while Dakin was defended by F. L. Dodge of Lansing, Judge P. T. Van Zile of Charlotte, and Judge L. C. Holden of Saginaw. Three stenographers were employed, and everything that was done and said during the entire trial was correctly reported and promptly printed in the Legislative Journal of each day, being on the files of every member and reporter before the opening of the session the next morning.

Frederic L. Eaton, the gentleman who made the charges against Dakin, was the first witness called by the prosecution, and his examination and cross-examination occupied nearly the whole day, and he was recalled for quite a time on the third day; yet he told a plain, straightforward story that the attorneys for Dakin were not able to break or disprove, although they made desperate attempts to do so, and fought the case for all there was in it until the close of the third day, when both sides rested their case, after having taken testimony enough to make a book of probably 500 or 600 pages, while the speeches of counsel in summing up the case will also cover a large number of pages more. Dakin occupied the witness stand for an hour or two on the last day, but his testimony and apparent indifference to the gravity of the situation had the effect to weaken rather than strengthen his case.

The House decided to hold an evening session on the third and last day, and then the summing up began, Representative Snow opening for the prosecution. Mr. Dodge followed for the accused, and then came Holden for the same side, Representative Goodrich for the prosecution, Judge Van Zile for the defense, and then Representative Diekema, the best and ablest orator in the House, closed the case for the prosecution.

The committee announced that articles one and four would be waived as not proven, and then a vote was ordered on the second count (soliciting money, and intending to use it for his own use), and the vote stood yeas 83, nays 11. The third charge (making out the list with dollars after the names of members), was then sustained, every one of the 94 members present voting yea.

Representative Crocker then offered a resolution of expulsion, which Representative Rigg sought to amend so as to provide for a severe censure. The amendment was voted down, yeas 2, nays 92; and then, amid breathless silence, the resolution to expel the member who had made such a foolish exhibition of himself and done so much to bring the good name of his fellow-members was carried by a unanimous vote of 94 yeas. The Speaker then, in a voice choking with suppressed sorrow, said: "Two-thirds of the members elect having voted therefor, the resolution is adopted, and the said Milo H. Dakin, member of the House of Representatives from the First Representative District of Saginaw County, is, from and after this date, expelled from the floor of this House, and debarred from any and all the rights, privileges, and advantages of a member of said House during the remainder of his official term."

STATE PUBLIC SCHOOL SCANDAL.

The investigation into the alleged misconduct of the recent Superintendent and one or two of the teachers of the State Public School at Coldwater, that came so near being ordered a couple of weeks ago by the Legislature, is likely to be ordered now, as the subject was revived on the 29th by a report made to the two houses by the committees on that institution, in which they gave the result of a visit recently made to the school by a sub-committee appointed by the two committees, who went at the request of the Board of Managers of the institution. The report was favorable to the school and its managers, and assumed that no investigation was needed, and that if one were ordered it would hurt rather than help the school, and would cripple the managers in their efforts to purge the institution of all who would injure it in its future work. Senators Hubbell and J. W. Babcock made vigorous speeches against the report as being in the nature of a "bald attempt at whitewashing," as the former put it, and against the visit of the sub-committee, as being unauthorized by the Legislature and in bad taste, as it was in response to an invitation from the very persons who would naturally be less anxious for an investigation than any others. The report and visit were both vigorously defended by Senator Westgate (who was of the sub-committee), and then the feeling on the matter seemed so bitter that the committee thought best to withdraw the report in the Senate; but after a heated discussion the House adopted a concurrent resolution for a rigid and full investigation. The resolution was not received by the Senate before adjournment Friday evening, but it now looks as though the Senate will concur in ordering the special investigation.

PENDING LIQUOR LEGISLATION.

Secret caucuses have been held on several different evenings by the Republicans of the two houses, who have been at work to perfect the best and strongest legislation possible to get, in view of the failure of the prohibitory amendment. Their work has been now reported in the shape of a bill, originally introduced by Representative Bates, of Allegan, which has been somewhat amended by the joint caucuses, and ordered printed. Its consideration was put off last week, as was nearly all other legislation, by the Dakin trial, but it has now been made a special order by the House for to-morrow.

OBSERVER.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

THE Senate held its regular session on the 27th ult., but spent the entire time in committee of the whole, forwarding a large number of bills to third reading. The House of Representatives continued the inquiry into the charge that Representative Dakin, of Saginaw, solicited money to influence the passage of the Saginaw charter bill. The witnesses examined were Jay Smith, City Controller Crowley, and Alderman Tillotson, all of Saginaw, and all of whom corroborated ex-City Attorney Eaton's testimony. Judge Holden opened for the defense. He claimed that Dakin had been more sinned against than sinning; that while he had done a very stupid act he had not designedly done anything wrong; that Eaton had practically forced Dakin to check off names on roll-call; that Eaton's rejection by the Saginaw City Council when renominated for City Attorney, a piece of work in which Dakin and his friend Fellows, then an Alderman, participated, was the cause of Eaton's interest in the matter; and that Eaton had been in Lansing not to aid in passing the charter bill, but to draw Dakin into a trap and ruin him politically. Ex-Alderman Fellows was placed on the stand and stated it was understood that money was to be used in entertaining members in a social way, and that none of it was to be used corruptly. He had been present at interviews held with Dakin, and at no time had anything been said in reference to improperly influencing members. The defense made strong use of the point that in the Committee on Municipal Corporations was a placard reading: "We smoke. If you don't, up goes your bill." Chairman Bates, of Allegan, explained that this was intended as a joke upon tardy members of the committee, but had been extended so as to take in some outsiders. Certain Detroit people had planked down silver dollars to obtain a hearing. The money was used to buy cigars, of which they themselves had smoked their share.

THE Senate had a brief and profitless session on the 28th ult. Three thousand copies of the testimony in the graveyard insurance investigation were ordered printed. The House of Representatives occupied itself exclusively with the Dakin bribery investigation. The accused took the stand and testified in his own defense. As to the Eaton charges Dakin swore: "I got Eaton in the corridor of the Capitol. He said to Fellows, 'What is the outlook for the charter?' Fellows said 'First-rate.' Then I said Mayor Shackleford has gone back to Saginaw to get some money. I met Eaton again about 10 o'clock near the Windsor restaurant. Crowley and Fellows were present. At the invitation of Eaton we went inside and took a stall. Crowley called for the drinks. Eaton says, 'Well, Fellows, Shackleton didn't bring your money?' Fellows said 'No.' Eaton took a card from his pocket and says to me, 'Now, Dakin, these friends you like to have a good time with, just check them off.' I did so. Then he says, 'How much will it cost?' but I said I had no idea. Then he said: 'Set down the amounts.' I set them down as near as I could to tally with my judgment. The amounts were meant for a good time in a social way. If he had not urged it I would not have checked the list. I am not a drinking man, but occasionally take some wine. That morning I drank whisky and quinine, as I was feeling bad, and then some wine twice." The evident purpose of the testimony was to show that Dakin was half drunk at the time the list was made; but Dakin continued, substantially confirming the testimony of Eaton and Crowley, but insisting that the money was to be used only for social purposes. "Did you expect to corrupt the members of this House?" asked Judge Holden, very gravely. "No, sir!" responded Dakin, with emphasis on his words. Judge Holden waited, so that the emphasis might have full effect; but Dakin added, with a laugh, "I think they are higher priced than that." Late at night the arguments were concluded and the case submitted to the House. By a vote of 83 to 11 it was decided that he had endeavored to procure money from F. L. Eaton and John R. Shackleton, ostensibly to corrupt members, but really with a view to appropriating to his own use. Of the specific charges that he had placed an estimated price after the names of fifteen members he was unanimously found guilty. A resolution was then offered that Dakin be expelled from the House, and it was adopted by a unanimous vote. The hall was crowded, and was absolutely quiet as the Speaker announced that in view of the vote he must declare Milo H. Dakin expelled from the floor of the House and from its privileges.

THE bill making it a misdemeanor to retain personal property under attachment without giving bond in cases where a bond is required, passed the Senate on the 29th ult. The following bills also went through the Senate: To amend the highway and bridge laws; to amend the law relative to liens for labor; to amend the law relative to width of wagon-tires upon heavy lumber wagons; to prevent hydrophobia and glanders. The Cross insurance bill was favorably reported. It is aimed at graveyard insurance concerns. Both branches had a lively time over the report of the regular joint committee upon the trouble in the Coldwater public school. Representative Manly gave it a very severe handling in the House, and after a lively discussion a resolution was unanimously passed for an investigation. In the Senate, Senators Hubbell and J. W. Babcock jumped upon it with both feet and denounced the committee as exceeding their authority. Mr. Hubbell demanded that the report be thrown out and refused a place upon the journal. Half of the Senators were upon their feet, and bedlam was supreme. The report was withdrawn just in time to escape rejection. In the House, bills were passed to provide for a tax collector in each of the wards of Grand Rapids City; to amend laws relative to appeals from the decisions and reports of commissioners on claims against deceased persons. Representative Grennell's resolution for an appropriation of $200 for the payment of counsel fees of the defendant in the Dakin impeachment trial was taken from the table. A lively debate was had upon it, and it was finally tabled. The House Committee on Liquor Traffic reported a bill known as the Bates bill. It imposes a tax of $500 on the manufacture, sale, or the keeping for sale of spirituous and malt liquors, and requires a bond of from $3,000 to $6,000. No official or person engaged as principal, agent, or servant in the sale of liquor shall be accepted as surety. The husband, wife, parent, child, guardian, or employer may forbid the sale of liquor to members of the family, ward, or employe, and may recover actual and exemplary damages for injuries inflicted upon persons to whom sales had been forbidden. In prosecutions the burden of proof is laid on the defendant. The bond covers the damages. Ten dollars shall be paid to the person making the complaint, on conviction of the accused. Half the tax goes to the county and half to the city or township. Any Assessor, County Treasurer, or Prosecuting Attorney, or other officer who refuses to make complaints, shall be fined $100. No billiard, card, or pool tables shall be kept in the same room with a bar, or in an adjoining room, and no bar is allowed in any place of amusement. Saloons must be closed at 9 p. m. It is provided that a violation of the law shall work a forfeiture of the tax and a revocation of the license for the remainder of the year. Bars shall be on the first floor of a building, in a front room, and no screens shall be permitted.

THE House resolution calling for a committee to investigate the Coldwater public school came up in the Senate on the 2d inst., and after some discussion it was tabled. A large part of the Senate's session was occupied in discussing Senator Sharp's bill for regulating appointments, defining the duties and fixing the salaries of court stenographers. After a long discussion, and pending a motion to strike out, it was tabled and placed upon the general order. The House of Representatives passed an important labor measure. It prohibits the use of store orders, scrip, notes, or certificates in payment of labor. It also makes imperative on all employers of labor to pay at least monthly. Any violations of these provisions is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of from $5 to $50. The vote on the bill was 82 for to 0 against it. The House also passed a bill making it conclusive evidence of railroad neglect when a corpse in an accident is disfigured by fire. In such case exemplary damages up to $15,000 may be recovered. This is intended to force a discontinuance of car stoves. It also passed a bill increasing the salaries of the Judges of the Supreme Court from $4,000 to $5,000 per year. Other bills passed by the House were as follows: To authorize E. A. Bullard to build a bridge across Cass River, Tuscola County; to create a fund for payment of damage to sheep by dogs in Jackson City and the townships of Blackman and Summit in Jackson County; to authorize the Board of Control of State Swamp Lands to construct a ditch through the townships of Hebron and Mackinaw in Cheboygan County; to provide for the appointment of an agent for the Reform School, whose duties shall be to have the care of and provide for boys after being discharged from school; a bill for the formation of companies for constructing and maintaining water courses; to increase the annual salaries of the Justices of the Supreme Court to $5,000; to authorize the incorporation of companies for the purpose of dealing in blood animals; to authorize purchase of text books for use in public schools by the School Board. The committee on the liquor traffic reported favorably a bill to regulate the sale of liquors to minors and habitual drunkards. It is very stringent in its provisions.

Wealthy Men of Color.

John F. Cook, the Tax-Collector of the District of Columbia, is said to be worth $200,000. He has held his present office for fifteen years.

Ex-Senator Bruce, of Mississippi, owns large estates, and his little boy, Roscoe Conkling Bruce, will inherit a fortune when his father dies.

Although Representative Smalls, of South Carolina, boards in Washington, he is said to be wealthy, and his daughters are being educated in New England seminaries.

Representative O'Hara, the colored Congressman from North Carolina, owns a three-story brick house in a fashionable quarter of the capital, very near the Pendleton mansion.

CHASED BY MEXICAN ROBBERS.

Finding Refuge from Guerillas in the House of Their Chief.

"I obtained leave of absence to visit some friends in Monterey," said Gen. Doubleday to a New York Mail and Express reporter, telling of adventures in Mexico after the Mexican war. "When the visit ended I started back to Saltillo with a Mr. Miller, of New Orleans. It was dangerous traveling, and we were liable to be attacked by prowling bands of guerillas at any time, but my leave had expired and I could not wait any longer. I was riding a swift horse, was well armed, and so was my companion. Nothing occurred until one morning when we were several miles to the right of a small town, Santa Maria, forty miles from Saltillo. We were pushing forward at a moderate gait and continually on the lookout for robbers. I had a large pair of field glasses, and frequently surveyed the surface of the surrounding country. I saw a body of Mexican lancers a mile or so distant. They were coming toward us, and our only alternatives were to give fight or retreat. We chose the latter, as the lancers were considerable in numbers. I concluded to make a dash for Santa Maria. I happened to know the alcalde, and he had invited me several times to partake of his hospitality. He was a dandified kind of a man, and put on a great deal of style. My hope was to reach his house and claim his protection, and, if he refused to give it, to demand it with a pistol at his head. The lancers soon saw us and dashed forward at full speed. They were not near as far to the right of Santa Maria as Miller and I, so all they had to do was to cut us off, if possible. We made a bee line, riding at full speed. The robbers saw their chance of cutting us off and took advantage of it. Fortunately Miller and I rode swift horses and managed to reach the town just a few hundred yards ahead of our pursuers. We galloped right up to the alcalde's house, followed by the lancers. I rapped at the gateway in the wall where horses and riders pass through, and the gate opened. Miller and I rode in, leaving our would-be slayers some fifty yards from the house. They came no farther. I told the alcalde that I had come to pay him that visit, and would remain until 6 o'clock the next morning. I also took pains to inform him what route I intended to take for Saltillo. Well, I departed that afternoon at 4 o'clock, and by a different route than the one I had given the alcalde. The strange part of the adventure was explained some months afterward. The alcalde, although Governor of the town, was the chief of a band of robbers, and that very band which chased Miller and myself. The robbers were delighted to see us ride into Santa Maria, for they thought they had us then, sure. But when they saw us boldly ride to the house of their chief and be admitted they were struck with astonishment. They did not understand it, and imagined that we were in collusion or connected some way with the alcalde. The alcalde was arrested by United States troops soon afterward and his connection with robbers thoroughly exposed."

London Needlewomen.

The women engaged in the shirt trade are to the full as ill off, as badly paid, and as much to be pitied as were their sisters in the days when Hood sang their sorrows and sufferings. The woman who is solely dependent upon shop shirtmaking starves rather than lives by it. She soon becomes in very deed

The seamstress, lean and weary and wan,
With only the ghosts of garments on,

who,

In poverty, hunger, and dirt,
Sews at once with a double thread
A shroud as well as a shirt.

Happily, many of the shirt hands are not wholly dependent upon the earning of their needles. Numbers of the married women of the poorer classes work at the shirt trade with a view to supplementing the scanty wages of their husbands, and the additional income thus gained, though it may be but three or four shillings a week, sensibly increases the comfort of the household. Considering the wretched prices paid for the work, the surprising thing is that the women should earn even so much at it as some of them do. Take the buttonholing—the leading branch of the work in Tenement street. The holes are rough punched in the factories, the work of the outdoor hands being to stitch them round. This buttonholing is admittedly "niggling" work, and yet the rate at which it is paid for by the sweaters is a penny per dozen collars. As each collar has three holes, the hand who finds her own needle and cotton, has to stitch thirty-six holes for a penny. Even so, some of the experts, by working long hours, by rising early on summer morning and sitting late on winter nights, by living on food that is "ready to be put in the mouth," chiefly bread and butter, and eating as they work; by acting on these lines some of the buttonholers will earn as much as eight or nine shillings per week. The prices paid by the manufacturers who give it out in the first instance are probably such as would enable a skilled and industrious hand to make a living wage, but as matters stand such men are almost compelled to employ middlemen, and the tender mercies of the sweater are cruel.—All the Year Round.

How Animals Practice Medicine.

Animals get rid of their parasites by using dust, mud, clay, etc. Those suffering from fever restrict their diet, keep quiet, seek dark, airy places, drink water and sometimes plunge into it. When a dog has lost its appetite it eats that species of grass known as dog-grass, which acts as an emetic and a purgative. Cats also eats grass. Sheep and cows when ill seek out certain herbs. An animal suffering from chronic rheumatism always keeps as much as possible in the sun. The warrior ants have regularly organized ambulances. Latreille cut the antennæ of the ant, and other ants came and covered the wounded part with a transparent fluid secreted from their mouths. If a chimpanzee is wounded it stops the bleeding by placing its hands on the wound or dressing it with leaves and grass. When an animal has a wounded leg or arm hanging on it completes the amputation by means of its teeth. A dog, on being bitten in the muzzle by a viper, was observed to plunge its head repeatedly for several days into running water. This animal eventually recovered. A sporting dog was run over by a carriage. During three weeks in winter it remained lying in a brook, where its food was taken to it. This animal recovered. A terrier hurt its right eye. It remained under a counter, avoiding light and heat, although it habitually kept close to the fire. It adopted, by way of general treatment, rest and abstinence from food. The local treatment consisted in licking the upper surface of the paw, which it applied to the wounded eye; again licking the paw when it became dry. Animals suffering from traumatic fever treat themselves by the continued application of cold water, which M. Delaunay considers to be more certain than any of the other methods. In view of these interesting facts we are, we think, forced to admit that hygiene and therapeutic as practiced by animals may, in the interest of psychology, be studied with advantage.

From a New Dictionary.

Anger—The reaction of others' faults upon ourselves.

Army—A body of men kept one thousand days to be used on one.

Bachelor—A wild goose that tame geese envy.

Benevolence—A service that the receiver should remember and the bestower forget.

Child—The future in the present.

Coquet—A mirror that receives all images, but preserves none.

Consistency—A church without a mortgage on it.

Conversation—The idle man's business and the business man's recreation.

Crying—A woman's weakness and a child's strength.

Death—The dealer that sweeps in the bone chips.

Debt—The example set by a Government to its people.

Family—Matrimony doing penance.

Fashion—A decree that enhances beauty, but makes homeliness the more conspicuous.

Heart—The abyss of reason.

Heiress—A capital wife.

Hope—The bridge between our longings and fruition, beneath which flow the waters of disappointment.

Inconsistency—A woman's prerogative; for which we never blame her unless we are its victims.

Ink—The black sea, upon which thought rides an anchor.

Jealousy—The homage paid by inferiority to merit.

Justice—Truth in action.

Law—A trap baited with promise of profit or revenge.

Lawyers—The heirs of intestates.

Love—A frozen deep; before you venture, see if it will bear.

Lovers—The miss-guided.

Luxury—The labor of the wealthy.

Mankind—Pieces in a game of chess, played by destiny.

Marriage—The only lottery not put down.

Mirror—A shrine, before which the functions of worshiper, priest, and divinity are all enacted by the same party.

Miser—One who makes bricks that his heirs may build houses.

Money—To the wise a convenience, to the fool a necessity.

Old Maid—A woman who has missed the opportunity of making a man happy.

Pawnbroker—The man who holds your coat while you fight.

Poet—One who may bestow immortality upon others, yet finds it difficult himself even to live.

Poetry—Thought in blossom.

Prison—An oven, into which society puts newly-made crime to harden.

Revenge—The only debt which it is wrong to pay.

River—A moving road, at once the highway and the conveyance.

Space—The statue of divinity.

Spoon—A hand without fingers.

Stars—Jeweled heads in the rosaries of heaven.

Success—A veneering that can hide all baseness.

Taxes—Periodical bleeding as prescribed by Government.

Temptation—The test of soul.

Tenderness—Passion in repose.

Theater—Nature in the House of Correction.

Time—To the aged an atom; to the young a world.

Tongue—the boneless that can break bones.

Ugliness—The privilege in man; the unpardonable in woman.

The Earthquakes of 1811 and 1886.

The shocks of 1811-13 are, by their violence and continuity, to be ranked among the first score of recorded earthquakes. Save perhaps that which in 1819, disturbed the delta of the Indus, in Western Hindostan, the Mississippi earthquake of 1811 directly produced more extensive and permanent local geographical changes than any other of which we have an account; so violent and continuous were the shakings that the alluvial land in the neighborhood of New Madrid was lowered below its previous level, and into the depressed region, the stream of the Mississippi poured in such violence that for a time its lower waters, for a considerable part of their course, turned backward toward their source. Although the colonizing of the district had just begun, the area of country already cleared by settlers which was converted into morassas by the shock was so great that the Government was compelled to furnish some hundreds of thousand acres of new lands on higher ground to those whose dwelling-places had been made uninhabitable. It seems likely that an area of not less than 5,000 square miles was, on the average, though irregularly, lowered to the depth of ten feet below its original level. The energy of these shocks was so great that the low, strongly built cabins of frontiermen were wrecked, the forest trees were beaten against each other, and their branches interlocked as they swung to and fro. The irregular movements of the ground led to the formation of numerous great crevices, from which turbid waters were thrown up to a considerable height. To protect themselves from being engulfed in those fissures, the people felled trees so that they lay on the ground at right angles to the general trend of the fissures, and built places of refuge on the broad foundations which they thus secured. There can be no question that a disturbance of this magnitude would, in the present condition of the region where it occurred, cause greater destruction than did that which recently occurred at Charleston, S. C.

These two series of shocks, that of 1811 and 1886, have a close general relation to each other, so alike are they, indeed, as to suggest that the great series of repeated shocks gradually diminishing in intensity, may be the type of disturbance characteristic of the low-land districts of the southern part of this continent. The new Madrid earthquake of 1811 was, however, by far the more extended phenomenon; the shocks were more frequent and of much greater violence, and the period during which they recurred was far longer that in the Carolinian disturbances.—Prof. N. S. Shaler, in Scribner's Magazine.

"BETTER late than never" will do very well when applied to a legacy left by some sturdy old uncle whom you had expected to outlive you, but "Better never than late" should be your motto in catching a railway train.

AN EXODUS FROM THE FARM.

The Young Men of the South Will Not Till the Soil Any More.

[Savannah News.]

There is a phase of life at the South which not only gives occasion for earnest thought, but for serious alarm. When the war closed, and for a number of years after, the changed condition of affairs led many young men to believe that the cities and towns afforded the best fields for making a living. Farms and farm-houses were in ruins, labor was disorganized, and there seemed to be no profit in tilling the ground. To a very great extent, therefore, young men sought the centers of population, while their fathers rented the farms to negroes. Many found employment as clerks in stores, others entered some one of the learned professions. As a rule the clerks received small salaries, and when the busy season was over their occupation was gone until the return of fall. In the summer months some went back to the farms and engaged in irregular work; but the majority remained upon the scenes of their spasmodic careers as clerks, and kicked their shins in idleness. Those who entered a professional life fared no better than the clerks. A few made fame and fortune, but by far the greater number barely succeeded in keeping up the union between the body and soul.

The example set by these young men was contagious, because the exodus from the farms continues, and every year there is a large increase in the number of poorly-paid clerks and half-starved lawyers and physicians. In recent years the activity in mining, manufacturing, and railroad building has been an additional inducement to young men to seek the centers of population. This was never so apparent as at present. The dazzling stories of rapidly-acquired fortunes in pursuits just mentioned have caused a rush of young men to the cities and towns that is astonishing, and to which there seems no end.

The exodus from the farms has two unfortunate results. One is that the farms suffer, and the other is that the pursuits open to young men in the cities and towns yearly become more crowded, thus lessening the opportunities for acquiring a competency. The exodus ought to stop. It is based upon fallacy. Young men who remain on the farms and cultivate them intelligently and industriously are much more likely to make fortunes than those who seek a livelihood in the cities and towns. Besides, the prosperity of the country depends upon the prosperity of the farming interest, and unless farmers and the sons of farmers do their duty the country cannot prosper.

Jackson's Duel with Dickinson.

In a paper in the Southern Bivouac the following conversation between Gen. Harding and Gen. Andrew Jackson, relative to Jackson's duel with Dickinson, is given:

"In conversation with Gen. Jackson one day I said: 'General, is a brave man ever frightened?'

"'I don't know that I am competent to answer that question,' said he. I replied: 'The world accords you as much bravery as is possessed by any man.'

"'If that be so, sir, said the General, 'I would say I have been badly frightened as a gentleman ought ever to be.'

"Said I, 'I presume that was in some of your Indian fights?'

"'No,' said he, 'it was when I went on the field with Dickinson. I knew him to be a cool, brave, determined man, and the best shot I ever saw, and I never expected to leave the field alive. I owe my life to the fashion of the day—the full-breasted coat. This and the peculiar conformation of my much-sunken chest were all that saved me. Dickinson's bullet struck what appeared to be the center of my body under the right arm, and the ball grazed my breastbone. I had gone upon the field determined not to fire at Dickinson, but to discharge my pistol in the air, having no ground of quarrel with him, and not wishing to hurt a hair of his head. My quarrel was with his father-in-law, Ervin; but when I felt myself shot, under the impression that I had received a mortal wound, and smarting under this belief and the physical pain, I fired the fatal shot, and no act of my life have I ever regretted so much.

"'Under the conditions of the meeting we had a right to reserve the fire, because I knew Dickinson could shoot so much more quickly than I could. It has been asserted in the public prints,' said Old Hickory, 'that I advanced on Dickinson to deliver my shot and that he gave back, both of which statements are false, sir. I stood in my place when I fired and Dickinson remained in his, receiving my shot like a cool, brave man as he was.'"

General Harding said that at this same interview, which was the last he ever had with Gen. Jackson, the latter said to him:

"'The world is greatly mistaken about my having an ungovernable temper. I never gave an exhibition of temper without my judgment approved it. I sometimes found it necessary even to prevent the shedding of blood.'"

Catching a Pickpocket.

One time I was in the Erie sheds waiting for a train, when I heard a terrible noise coming from one of the emigrant cars, which appeared to be full of women. I stood near the detective, and heard him call up his lieutenant with, "Pat, there is a pickpocket in that car, and you can bet he has got away with the purse of some one of those emigrants. You go in the further end of the car, and when you get in lock the door. I'll go in this way, and we'll investigate." The instructions were obeyed. Once in the car Mr. M. at once learned that an old German woman had lost her last stiver, which she had in a well-filled purse. In a fellow disguised as an emigrant, Mr. M. at once recognized the thief. Placing his hand on the fellow's shoulder, he said: "Give the woman her money." Protestations of innocence followed, when, poking around under the seat, Mr. M. found the missing purse just where the thief had thrown it. Picking it up and handing it to the owner, Mr. M. told her who had stolen it and told her that she and her female companions had his permission to go for the offender and do with him anything they wanted to, so they didn't kill him, and they did go for him. They pulled his hair, scratched him and parmed him all over with saliva until he looked as if he had been specially prepared for an anaconda's swallowing. Thus punished he was released from the car, when he darted for the New York side. There were no arrests, no tedious arraignment before a police court.—Cincinnati Times.

A FOOL in high station is like a man in a balloon. Everybody appears little to him and he appears little to everybody.

A Famous Detective.

James Jackson, the famous State detective, resides in Sing Sing, and is generally in attendance at the prison. His duties are to examine carefully the face of every convict as he enters, and to scrutinize every visitor in order to prevent any discharged convict from seeing his pals. Occasionally he has to make long journeys in pursuit of runaway prisoners or to identify criminals convicted in other States. He never makes a mistake; if once he looks a man in the eye he will know him under any disguise, as he tells his man by the look of his eyes. Once an escaped convict had his nose pared down one-third, but Jackson detected him at once, notwithstanding this remarkable change of feature. Mr. Jackson is about 5 feet 8 inches in height, about 55 years old, of a light and sinewy build, with black hair and piercing black eyes, and is altogether remarkably handsome. He knows about 10,000 criminals, and it is simply wonderful that he can distinguish the features of every one. On his long journeys he eats very moderately, and always takes one Brandreth pill at night. When much fatigued by the jolting of the cars on his tiresome trips he uses two Allcock's Porous Plasters on the small of the back, which give him renewed vigor, and quickly relieve him of all weariness. These are the only two remedies he uses, and he attributes his vigor and remarkable health to Allcock's Porous Plasters and Brandreth's Pills.—Sing Sing (N. Y.) Daily Register.

What Charles Kingsley's Daughters Did.

Let me tell you how we were taught to help those who helped us in our dear old home at Eversley Rectory.

Of course in a busy house, where everyone has work to do, the servants cannot be helped much week days, except by thoughtfulness in little things. But there is the seventh day, when the children have no lessons to do. This was what we were taught to look upon as the "helpers'" day of rest, as far as we could make it so.

In the morning breakfast was earlier than usual. While we were breakfasting the maids were emptying our baths, for they were too heavy for us children. As soon as breakfast was over we trotted off to our rooms, made the beds, folded up and put away all our clothes, dusted—and in fact put things straight all around. Then we ran down to the dining room and laid the table for dinner; and capital butlers we all became, I assure you. By these means the maids were all ready, in their nice Sunday dresses, to go to church with us at 11.

Dinner Sunday—no matter who was with us—was at 1 o'clock instead of 7. This was the only hot meal in the day. No cooking was done after 1 o'clock, as our supper was cold. At both dinner and supper the servants were sent away, and we waited at table. I laugh now when I think of the faces of horror of learned men or gallant soldiers who had come down to spend Sunday in the dear old rectory, or ridden over from Sandhurst or Aldershot to the morning service. The agonies they went through at being waited on by the daughters of the house! The struggles they made to be allowed to change their own plates! And their resigned submission when quietly told by their host: "It is the way of the house." That was how we were made to help the faithful and devoted servants who spent their lives in helping us. It was not much; but it gave them an almost free Sunday.—Rose Kingsley, in Wide Awake.

MR. T. J. MURPHY, 61 Debavoice place, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I was afflicted with sciatic rheumatism and found St. Jacobs Oil very efficacious."

The White Man of the New South.

Indeed, it is the white man of the South more than the black that has been freed by the civil war; and the greatest blessing which has thus far resulted to the South from the emancipation of the Southern slaves is its effect upon the white man of that region in transforming him from a dependent idler, or "gentleman of leisure," supported by his slaves, into an independent, self-reliant worker. We speak of the typical, representative Southern white man, not of all classes, for there were working white men in the old South, and there are idle white men in the new. But the white man of the new South is pre-eminently a worker as compared with the white man of the old South, who, if not an idler, was at least a man of multitudinous leisure. But having now been set free from that bondage to leisure and that contempt of labor which is inseparable from slave-holding, the representative of that region has become a new man, and has entered upon a new probation among the industrious races of the earth. If the old South had a contempt for the worker, the new South has a greater contempt for the do-nothing and the idler—for the man who does no honest work, it matters not how white his skin or how full his exchequer. The "gentleman idler" has lost caste in the South; he is an institution of the past. —Century.

A LEADING real-estate agent and private banker, Mr. Ira Brown, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I feel it my duty to say of St. Jacobs Oil that I lay on my back three months with rheumatism. I tried it, was cured, and have never been troubled since."

Smelling the Soul.

A German physician, Prof. Jaeger, has had the temerity to assert that he can smell the soul. German scholars have discovered, however, that the art of smelling souls was already known in antiquity, and is mentioned in the Bible. They quote from the Talmud Sanhedrin the following curious story: "Two and a half years Bar Coziba reigned. Then he said to the rabbis: 'I am the Messiah!' The rabbis objected to this assumption, and said: 'It is written about the Messiah that He judges according to the smell; if thou canst do it we will believe thee.' As he failed in the attempt they killed him." —Jewish Messenger.

USE the great specific for "cold in head," and catarrh—Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

The World's Oldest Tree.

The annals of the Cingalese are said to contain an historical record of events extending back over a period of twenty odd centuries. These, with extensive ruins, such, for instance, as those of the ancient cities of Anuradhapoora and Polonnarawa, which are known to have been inhabited as much as 2,500 years ago, show that the island was originally very thickly settled by a partly civilized and very energetic people. The first-named city was the capital of the island for over 1,200 years after the fifth century B. C. In the fourth century B. C. the annals of Ceylon record that the city was presented with Buddha's begging dish, his collar bone, and a branch of that celebrated Bo tree under which he attained to Buddhahood. Nothing now remains of this ancient city but a mass of ruins, crumbling lonely, and the tree mentioned above. This relic of centuries has been flourishing for nearly 2,200 years, and is consequently the oldest living tree in the world of which we have any genuine record. It is one of the most sacred objects throughout the entire Buddhist world, and it is esteemed a virtuous act on the part of the pious to make a pilgrimage to it. Its fallen leaves are considered a great treasure, and are frequently carried to Siam, Burmah, China, and Japan by pilgrims from those countries.—Ceylon Cor. Baltimore Sun.

Success Wins.

There is no disputing the truth of the fact conveyed by that celebrated proverb of Horace Greeley's: "Nothing succeeds like success."

Mr. Greeley evidently intended to convey the idea of the general inclination of the times to help "boom" any enterprise that was successful, while the undertaking that lagged and really needed aid and encouragement was left to shift for itself.

A story paper, however, must have real merit before it will secure the patronage and support of the public. If it succeeds, it is conceded that it deserves success. It might be said that a story paper that deserves success will succeed, and its success is evidence of merit.

The success of the Chicago Ledger is a flattering compliment to the management, and it is hoped that the support and confidence bestowed by an appreciative public may be continued and sacredly maintained. The Ledger is successfully succeeding and certainly has a bright future before it. Persons desiring sample copies can secure them free by sending their names to the office. Don't fail to read the thrilling story, "Irene, or the Iron-Worker's Daughter," to begin in No. 19.

Address, Chicago Ledger,
271 Franklin street,
Chicago, Ill.

OF the present destroyers of the Indians, according to Dr. Washington Matthews, the chief is consumption. Census returns show that while the death-rate among Europeans is 17.74 per thousand, and that among Africans is 17.28, the rate among the Indians is no less than 23.6; and that while among the whites 160 deaths in the thousand are from consumption, and among the negroes 186, there are 286 among the Indians. The influence of civilization has greatly increased the consumption rate among the Indians, the effect seeming to be partly due to change of diet, and partly to causes not yet understood.

To Dislodge the Enemy.

When it takes the form of disease of the kidneys or bladder, is a task well nigh impossible of accomplishment. Renal and vesical maladies are more obstinate than any others. Counteract, therefore, the earliest indications of inactivity of the many organs with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which possesses, among other excellent qualities, those of an efficient diuretic. The degree of stimulation apparent from its use reaches, but never goes beyond, the bounds of safety. It invigorates always, never irritates. Bright's disease, diabetes, catarrh of the bladder, are diseases successfully combated in their incipiency with this benign medicinal stimulant and tonic. Besides re-enforcing and regulating the kidneys and bladder, the Bitters is a specific for fever and ague, constipation and dyspepsia.

JUDGING from the tightness of the article, it isn't every girl who can laugh in her sleeve nowadays.

A CORRESPONDENT wishes to ask how editors spend their leisure hours? They spend them in working.

"What Is Woman's Worth?"

Asked a fair damsel of a crusty old bachelor. He did not know, so she said: "W. O. man" (double you, O man). But a woman feels worth little if disease has invaded her system and is daily sapping her strength. For all female weaknesses, Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" stands unrivaled. It cures the complaint and builds up the system. Send 10 cents in stamps for pamphlet to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A COCKNEY punster being asked by a friend his opinion of a new piece of hall furniture, replied that he thought it very hat-rack-tive.

Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets."

Positively Popular; Provoke Praise; Prove Priceless; Peculiarly Prompt; Perceptibly Potent; Producing Permanent Profit; Precluding Pimples and Pustules; Promoting Purity and Peace. Purchase. Price, Petty. Pharmacists Patronizing Pierce Procure Plenty.

IT often happens that the coat of a swell bears a buttonaire, while that of a tramp has nary a button.

The Strongest Man in Ohio

Is said to be George C. Arnold, of Cleveland, O., who less than one year ago, owing to chronic liver trouble and Bright's disease of the kidneys, weighed less than ninety-five pounds, but by using Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic has gained in strength and weight until now he is admitted to be the giant of Ohio.

PURE Cod Liver Oil made from selected livers on the sea-shore by Hazard, Hazard & Co., New York. It is absolutely pure and sweet. Patients who have once taken it prefer it to all others. Physicians have decided it superior to any of the other oils in market.

THE best cough medicine is Piso's Cure for Consumption. Sold everywhere. 25c.

You Need It Now

This is the best time to purify your blood, for at no other season is the body so susceptible to benefit from medicine. The peculiar purifying and reviving qualities of Hood's Sarsaparilla are just what are needed to expel disease and fortify the system against the debilitating effects of mild weather. Every year increases the popularity of Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it is just what people need at this season.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"For years my blood was in an unhealthy condition. My legs, arms, and face were covered with scrofulous humor, and all the medicine that I received of the physicians did me no good. I was advised to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking four bottles, the sores were all healed up; and after using six bottles, which cost me only five dollars, I was well and healthy as I ever was." FRED J. M. WERNER, Lincoln, Mass.

Creates an Appetite

"With the first bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla my headache entirely disappeared, and where before I could not muster up an appetite for my meals, I can not now get enough meals to satisfy my appetite. I am at present taking my second bottle, and feel like a different person." WILLIAM LANSING, Post G. G. A. R., Neenah, Wis.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

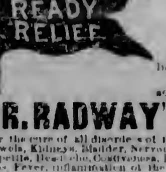
OLD CHRONIC PILES—WORST CASES. Also other local diseases cured by measures mild, safe and certain. Write for references. M. GILL, M. D., 285 N. Clark St., Chicago.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

LOTS NEW TOWN of BENJAMIN, Wis. Cen. R. R. Plats apply MILWAUKEE MINING EXCHANGE, Milwaukee, Wis. Gogebic Stocks bought and sold. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure for blind, bleeding or itching piles. Cure guaranteed. Price 50c and $1. At druggist's or mailed by WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

Eclectic Shorthand The briefest and simplest system. Comprehends every word sound. Average time required, four months. Send for circulars. Ott's Rooms, 89 N Clark St., Chicago. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.



THE CHEAPEST AND BEST MEDICINE FOR FAMILY USE IN THE WORLD! CURES ALL PAINS Internal or External. 50c a Bottle. SOLD BY DRUGGISTS.

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS For the cure of all disorders of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Bladder, Nervous Diseases, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Costiveness, Indigestion, Biliousness, Fever, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, and all derangements of the Internal viscera. Purely Vegetable, containing no mercury, minerals, or deleterious drugs. Price, 25 cents per box. Sold by all druggists.

DYSPEPSIA!

DR. RADWAY'S PILLS are a cure for this complaint. They restore strength to the stomach and enable it to perform its functions. The symptoms of Dyspepsia disappear, and with them the liability of the system to contract diseases.

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, A positive cure for Scrofula and all Blood and Skin Diseases. RADWAY & CO., N. Y.

ELY'S CREAM BALM CATARRH

I was cured before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted. I was troubled with chronic catarrh, gathering in head, difficulty in breathing, and discharges from my ears.—C. J. Corbin, 923 Chestnut Street, Phila.

HAY-FEVER

A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50 cts. at Druggists; by mail, registered, 60 cts. Circulars free. ELY BROS., Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

35 MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER. Cures Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, Colds in the Chest and all Aches and strains. Beware of imitations under similar sounding names. Ask for BENSON'S AND TAKE NO OTHER. THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

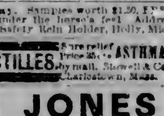
ADVERTISERS or others, who wish to examine this paper, or obtain estimates on advertising space when in Chicago, will find it on file at 45 to 49 Randolph St., the Advertising Agency of LORD & THOMAS.

Milo B. Stevens & Co. PENSIONS. Metropolitan Block, Chicago, Ills.

DETECTIVES

Wanted in every County. Shrewd men to act under our instructions in our Secret Service. Experience not necessary. Send stamp for particulars. GRANNAN DETECTIVE BUREAU, 44 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS The Original and Only Genuine. Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Ladies, ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. Name Paper. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.



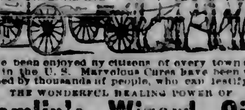
$1000 REWARD For any machine hulling and cleaning as well for market as much Clover Seed in ONE DAY as the VICTOR DOUBLE HULLER. Illustrated circular mailed free. NEWARK MACHINE CO., Columbus, Ohio. THE VICTOR Warranted $100 Offer on ONE DAY.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Address Brewster's Safety Rein Holder, Holly, Mich.

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35cts. by mail. Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.

JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT 5 Ton Wagon Scales. Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60. Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

WIZARD OIL CONCERTS



Have been enjoyed by citizens of every town and city in the U. S. Marvelous Cures have been witnessed by thousands of people, who can testify to THE WONDERFUL HEALING POWER OF Hamlin's Wizard Oil. Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Earache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Contracted Cords, RHEUMATISM, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Fever Sores, Wounds, Old Sores, Chilblains, Frost Bites, Sore Nipples, Caked Breasts, and All Aches and Pains, are quickly relieved by this magical remedy. Try it once and you will never be without it. For sale by Druggists. Price, 50c. Our SONG BOOK free to all. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY, CHICAGO.

OAKLAWN The Great Nursery of PERCHERON HORSES. 200 Imported Brood Mares Of Choicest Families. LARGE NUMBERS, All Ages, both Sexes, IN STOCK.

300 to 400 IMPORTED ANNUALLY from France, all recorded with extended pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Books. The Percheron is the only draft breed of France possessing a stud book that has the support and endorsement of the French Government. Send for 120-page Catalogue, illustrations by Rosa Bonheur. M. W. DUNHAM, Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois.

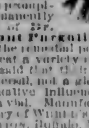
PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.

Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. The Original LITTLE LIVER PILLS. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. ALWAYS ASK FOR DR. PIERCE'S PELLETS, OR LITTLE SUGAR-COATED PILLS.

Being entirely vegetable, they operate without disturbance to the system, diet, or occupation. Put up in glass vials, hermetically sealed. Always fresh and reliable. As a laxative, alterative, or purgative, these little Pellets give the most perfect satisfaction.

SICK HEADACHE,



Bilious Headache, Dizziness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. In explanation of the remedial power of these Pellets over so great a variety of diseases, it may truthfully be said that their action upon the system is universal, not a gland or tissue escaping their sanative influence. Sold by druggists, 25 cents a vial. Manufactured at the Chemical Laboratory of WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

$500 REWARD is offered by the manufacturers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, for a case of Chronic Nasal Catarrh which they cannot cure.

SYMPTOMS OF CATARRH.—Dull, heavy headache, obstruction of the nasal passages, discharges falling from the head into the throat, sometimes profuse, watery, and acrid, at others, thick, tenacious, mucous, purulent, bloody and putrid; the eyes are weak, watery, and inflamed; there is ringing in the ears, deafness, hacking or coughing to clear the throat, expectoration of offensive matter, together with scabs from ulcers; the voice is changed and has a nasal twang; the breath is offensive; smell and taste are impaired; there is a sensation of dizziness, with mental depression, a hacking cough and general debility. Only a few of the above-named symptoms are likely to be present in any one case. Thousands of cases annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, result in consumption, and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive and dangerous, or less understood by physicians.

By its mild, soothing, and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Catarrh, "cold in the head," Coryza, and Catarrhal Headache. Sold by druggists everywhere; 50 cents.

"Untold Agony from Catarrh."

Prof. W. HAUSNER, the famous mesmerist, of Ithaca, N. Y., writes: "Some ten years ago I suffered untold agony from chronic nasal catarrh. My family physician gave me up as incurable, and said I must die. My case was such a bad one, that every day, towards sunset, my voice would become so hoarse I could barely speak above a whisper. In the morning my coughing and clearing of my throat would almost strangle me. By the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, in three months, I was a well man, and the cure has been permanent."

"Constantly Hawking and Spitting."

THOMAS J. RUSHING, Esq., 2902 Pine Street, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I was a great sufferer from catarrh for three years. At times I could hardly breathe, and was constantly hawking and spitting, and for the last eight months could not breathe through the nostrils. I thought nothing could be done for me. Luckily, I was advised to try Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, and I am now a well man. I believe it to be the only sure remedy for catarrh now manufactured, and one has only to give it a fair trial to experience astounding results and a permanent cure."

Three Bottles Cure Catarrh.

ELI ROBBINS, Runyan P. O., Columbia Co., Pa., says: "My daughter had catarrh when she was five years old, very badly. I saw Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy advertised, and procured a bottle for her, and soon saw that it helped her; a third bottle effected a permanent cure. She is now eighteen years old and sound and hearty."

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

The OLDEST MEDICINE in the WORLD is probably Dr. Isaac Thompson's Celebrated Eye Water. This article is a carefully prepared physician's prescription, and has been in constant use for nearly a century, and notwithstanding the many other preparations that have been introduced into the market, the sale of this article is constantly increasing. If the directions are followed it will never fail. We particularly invite the attention of physicians to its merits. John L. Thompson, Sons & Co., TROY, N. Y.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. 25 CTS.

FOR HORSES.

UVILLA, W. Va., Nov. 17, 1886.

Recently I bought a young horse. He was taken very ill with Pneumonia. I tried to think of something to relieve him. Concluded what was good for man would be good for the horse. So I got a bottle of Piso's Cure and gave him half of it through the nostrils. This helped him, and I continued giving same doses night and morning until I had used two bottles. The horse has become perfectly sound. I can recommend Piso's Cure for the horse as well as for man.

N. S. J. STRIDER.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION. CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

HARTER'S THE ONLY TRUE IRON TONIC Will purify the BLOOD, regulate the LIVER and KIDNEYS and RESTORE the HEALTH and VIGOR of YOUTH! Dyspepsia, Want of Appetite, Indigestion, Lack of Strength and Tired Feeling absolutely cured. Bones, muscles and nerves receive new force. Enlivens the mind and supplies Brain Power. LADIES suffering from complaints peculiar to their sex will find in DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC a safe, speedy cure. Gives a clear, healthy complexion. All attempts at counterfeiting only adds to its popularity. Do not experiment—get ORIGINAL AND BEST. DR. HARTER'S LIVER PILLS Cure Constipation, Liver Complaint and Sick Headache. Sample Dose and Dream Book mailed on receipt of two cents in postage. THE DR. HARTER MEDICINE CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

C. N. U. No. 19—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 18, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.
NO F. PARMELEE, Associate Editor.

The custom of unmarried ladies in Holland is to take the right arm of their escort and the wife always takes the left side of her husband.

In boring an artesian well at Eureka, Cal., charred wood was found at 500 feet, and pieces of shell and part of the skeleton of a bird at 580 feet.

Word comes from Florida that there is no longer any profit in shipping strawberries. The producers must have been compelled to turn the box over and put the fruit in the other end.

It is stated at the Pension Office, Washington, that nearly 400 pensions have been granted under the Mexican service act of January. About 15,000 Mexican claims have been received at the Pension Office up to date.

Anarchists have discovered that "liberty in the United States is a lie." But they should bear it constantly in mind that they can leave it at any time, unless they have an engagement with some turnkey or sheriff.

The state of Michigan takes the lead in the line of lumber manufacturing. It has upward of 1,000 lumber and shingle mills which employ 35,000 persons at an expense of $7,000,000 per annum. There are $50,000,000 invested in this industry in the state and the annual product is $10,000,000 in excess of that amount.

The Smithsonian Institution has received from Col. J. H. Wood, of St. Paul, the bodies of five persons—a man, woman, and three children—taken from a cave in the Bad Lands of Dakota by a miner. The bodies are simply dried up, and are not petrified, but are in a remarkable state of preservation. Scientific men who have seen them say they belong to a race which existed two thousand years ago.

Pennsylvania is proud of its 8,000 citizen soldier boys, and they are not kept for mere parade, either. When war with Canada was threatened recently, Governor Beaver telegraphed to Washington that within twenty-four hours the Pennsylvania troops could be concentrated on Lake Erie and be ready for business. Having left a leg on a Southern battlefield, Gov. Beaver is no novice in the arts of war.

A question for some democratic organ to answer: If the saloon vote were to be withheld in 1888 what northern state would go democratic? For fear no democratic paper will make reply we will answer the question. Not one! Therefore, the democratic party depends upon the saloon vote for success in 1888. And it is bidding for it in every doubtful state, and in some states which are not so doubtful.

The crown jewels of France are to be sold tomorrow. The Tribune's representative will hardly be able to reach Paris in time to buy them. We can't say we are really disappointed. A reliable hotel clerk informs us that the jewelry is all old style and he doesn't think we'd be seen on the streets with any of it on if we bought the whole lot. The Tribune will stick to its old jewel—consistency—seeing it's the only morning paper in Detroit that has any.—Tribune, May 11th.

The New Orleans States says Jefferson Davis as ex-president of the southern confederacy was paid in worthless confederate money, and demands that congress shall give him an appropriation of $50,000. Our New Orleans contemporary doesn't demand an extra session of congress for this purpose, but it may do so in a day or two. Perhaps it would be well in addition to voting this appropriation to give him a life pension; and while we are about it why not restore him to citizenship, and run him for president next year? After that, if he begins to feel that he has been neglected, why, we'll invite him to take in the county fairs, or make him the mascot of the champion base ball club.—Tribune.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, the leading republican paper of Missouri, comes out with a strong editorial on "the saloon in politics." It says the time has come when the liquor dealers must be given to understand that they cannot rule this country. It concludes with this paragraph: "The forces which are arrayed against the liquor evil are the forces of law, order and morality, and the ultimate victory of these influences is as certain as is the vitality and stability of the principle which is steadily and irresistibly impelling society to a higher and grander development." The SENTINEL is heartily glad to see the leading republican papers of the country rapidly falling in line to combat "the saloon in politics" and the liquor evil in society.

There is a state law against killing any kind of game on Sunday, and the principal violators of it are reckless young men and boys.

New York will hold a state election next fall, which will be the first great battle previous to '88. Gov. Hill will be urged to run again by his friends, and if he wins his presidential boom will be started.

The reduction of the rate of interest to 2 per cent by the bank of England looks as if the holders of English money bags are pretty well assured that the big guns of war will not boom in Europe this summer.

The Galveston News insists that "every day there is some new evidence given that the bloody shirt orators must retire from business." Can that be intended as a rebuke to Jeff Davis, Lamar and General Rosser.

Calhoun having been honored, Jeff. Davis should hurry up and die so as to secure a monument while they are being offered to the destroyers of the Union. Calhoun has a monument and Grant has a shadowy promise of one.

Since the last report of the G. A. R., Department of Michigan, six new posts have been organized in the State, with an aggregate of about 150 new members. Requisitions for membership badges amounting to over 600 have been filed at the department headquarters. Four posts out of five show a gain in membership.

The capital punishment bill was killed completely in the Senate last week by having all stricken out after the enacting clause. The most interesting part of the debate was the discussion between Senator Deyo, who opposed the bill, and Senator Westgate who was for it. Both of them are ministers. The bill was defeated by seven votes.

General Rosser, of Virginia, has been unveiling not another monument to Calhoun, but his cordial and enduring hatred of Gen. Sheridan. The announcement that "Little Phil" intends to revisit the Valley of the Shenandoah has thrown Rosser into a state of mind. He hotly resents the idea that the great cavalry leader should presume to do such a thing, and loudly calls upon his "gallant comrades" to let Sheridan severely alone while he tarries in the Valley. We are afraid that on second thought Rosser will form himself into a hollow square at the entrance of the Shenandoah Valley and——. But the prospect is too dreadful. We are convinced that a nervous, timid Quaker like Sheridan will conclude to pay his respects to some other valley rather than have a fuss. Later: It is rumored that Rosser is now engaged in putting a barbed wire fence about the valley.—New York Tribune.

The following sweeping changes are made toward more stringent regulation in the liquor traffic by Mr. Bates' bill to revise and amend the liquor laws of the State, which was reported in the House at Lansing by the Liquor Traffic committee: The annual tax is raised to $500, and the former distinction between spirituous and malt liquors is wiped out, and both must pay the same increased tax. Any dealer convicted of violating the liquor act shall forfeit the $500 tax paid by him, and be debarred from again engaging in the liquor business, or becoming surety on a liquor bond during the remainder of the year for which the tax so forfeited was paid. The forfeiture shall be in addition to a fine imposed on conviction. All saloons shall be closed at 9 o'clock p. m, on week days instead of 10 o'clock as heretofore. The word "closed" shall apply to back and side doors. In prosecutions it shall not be necessary to prove that liquor was sold. Half of the money raised from the liquor tax shall go to the township, village or city, and the other half to the county. No person holding any public office shall be surety on a liquor bond. This provision is designed to shut off the evil of officials paying political obligations by going on bonds. No one in any way connected with the liquor business can go on a liquor bond. Selling or giving pop or other liquors to a minor shall be prima facie evidence to violate the law. Druggists furnishing liquor on prescription, shall not themselves write the prescription, and no prescription shall be used more than once. It shall not be lawful to have any saloon except on the first floor of a building, and in the front apartment. No screen or curtain shall be put up to obstruct the view from the street, the purpose being to allow the public to look directly into every saloon. No local option feature appears in the bill. The other features of the old law are retained. Chairman Watson, of the liquor committee, urged that the House immediately consider the bill, as the public is demanding liquor legislation. The Democrats were opposed to this, but finally it was made a special order of business. The stringent features of the measure cause much comment, and the fight over it is likely to be a bitter one.

Northern Michigan News.

The oval dish factory at Mancelona is running 15 machines.

Forest fires are doing great damage in the upper peninsula.

Glenn & Porter's mill at East Jordan, has shut down for repairs.

Dr. Geo. D. Palmer of Eagle, formerly of Boyne City, died recently.

The Kensington hotel at Harbor Springs, has been topped out with a new observatory.

Traverse City is bound not to let Charlevoix lead her too far, and has just opened a Kindergarten.

Milo Bascom, brakeman on the G. R. & I., of Manton, was killed while switching at Mancelona, last week.

An enterprising Missaukee county man started last week for Tennessee, with his family, in a prairie schooner.

Work is rapidly progressing on the new hotel at Mackinac Island, and it will be completed even before the specified time, July 1st.

Prof. Ladd, of Harbor Springs, has gone to Clarksville, Iowa, to take charge of the schools in that place, at a salary of $90 per month.

Circuit court for Antrim county held at Bellaire last week, adjourned until June 21st, when the Henry murder case will be taken up.

The Lake Superior copper mines report the following output for April: Calumet and Hecla, 2,647 tons; Quincy, 250; Atlantic, 198.

During the past year the (Mancelona) Antrim Iron Company has paid out for wages, products, etc., $250,000, and for freight $40,200.

A deadlock in the Petoskey council, which lasted two months, has been cured by the appointment of Samuel Pettingill as Marshal.

The highest price paid for potatoes in Traverse City last week was 75 cents. This has not been the market price; that ranged from 60 to 65 cents.

G. M. Kerry of Boyne City, has sold his building and blacksmith tools, recently purchased from J. S. Stackus to John Webster, who will continue the business.

W. T. Latham of Petoskey, has sold his livery stock to Levi Herrick. Mr. Herrick is proprietor of the largest dray line at that place, and will continue the livery business.

The Gaylord Herald says fully 2,000 gallons of maple syrup was manufactured in Otsego county this season, while the quantity of sugar made was about 15,000 pounds.

Mr. Caskey has already taken fourteen carloads of plastering sand from Harbor Springs to Mackinac Island, to use in plastering the Grand Hotel and sixteen carloads more will be required.

At a special election May 9th Hudson township decided to build a town hall 20 by 30. Only fifteen votes were cast, 10 to 5. Building committee: A. L. Simons, David Hoffman and David Gillet.

Cheboygan dealers used to pay $45 per car for freighting oil from Cleveland to that point. Now, under present arrangements, they have to pay $90. They will be likely to get their oil by water after this.

The law firm of Pailthorp & George of Petoskey, has dissolved partnership by mutual consent, and Mr. George has opened an office in the room formerly occupied by Judge Newberry, in the Plamondon block.

The Chippewa County News says work will be commenced on the water power-canal at the "Soo" about the middle of this month. The citizens of that burg have great expectation based upon that water power.

The funeral of Mrs. Addie Childs of Boyne City, occurred in the Presbyterian church at that place, on the 8th inst. Mrs. Childs has long been well known in that locality, and will be greatly missed by her many friends.

The last county to send its election returns to Lansing was Manitou. The county cast 103 votes for Griffin, 104 for Camp, 3 for Campbell and 12 for Long. Vanderveen and Sprague received 143 votes each, and Hebard and Butterfield 3. The prohibitory amendment received 18 votes to 124 against it.

Cheboygan is still on top. A good old mother cat owned by one our residents gave birth last week to three kittens that were indeed a curiosity and would make a dime museum manager happy. The fore-part of their bodies were fully developed, while the rear parts were all joined together and but two legs to hold up the three animals.—Democrat.

Harbor Springs Independent: We learn that Mr. Thos. B. Seeley, of La Fayette, Ind., an experienced and successful hotel man, will open the Kensington in first class style about the 15th of June.——The Harbor Point Association has engaged Seymour A. Smith, one of the most popular hotel men in the State, at present with the Kirkwood House, Detroit, to conduct the resort hotel this summer. It will be opened about June 20.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

"English as She Is Taught."

Mark Twain's article under the above title, in a recent number of the Century, has been extensively copied and commented upon by newspapers and magazines all over the country. He gives a few real or suppositious answers given by pupils to questions on various topics, which answers show a ludicrous ignorance of some common things, and a misapplication of language that is absurd in the extreme.

All over the country, grumblers at the public schools have caught up this caricature and are using it upon every pretext, as an argument against them. The following from the New York School Journal shows the true light in which such things should be viewed:

"This thing must be stopped. It is bad enough to have other people attack the public schools, but when Mark Twain's article in the Century is taken up by that Magazine, and by every New York paper, and treated as a sober, fair example of what is being done in our schools, it is too much. His name in the first place should be changed to Mark Half(off), that people may understand that he is a humorist, not a historian. You have as much right to take his account of 'The ascent of Mount Blanc' in sober, journalistic earnest, as his article on 'English as she is taught.' The simple fact is, as we think any teacher of long experience will testify, that in the best of schools, there are two classes of pupils who are liable to make just such ludicrous blunders. First, general stupids, for whom the teacher is not responsible, unless they are his own children. Secondly, abnormally developed children, who while bright as anybody in most directions, will never understand some things, just as one may have keen vision and yet be color blind. To prove this, we give an example which occurred in a class in physiology, of which the writer was a member, years ago in one of the best academies in the state of New York: The teacher told a young man to describe the process by which a piece of brown bread, eaten for dinner was carried through the whole process of mastication, digestion, and assimilation until it was changed into bone and tissue. He began with the startling assertion that 'it was imperfectly masticated, passed to the first stomach, rolled into balls and returned to the mouth for more perfect mastication.' Any teacher can see where his trouble lay. We, the class, roared; the teacher groaned; but that stupid example of low Physiology WAS NOT taught in that academy, to become a brigadier general, and now writes M. C. on his envelopes, while not another member of the class has risen to distinction. These are not examples of 'English as she is taught,' but rather of childhood as it is."

Another example illustrating the point made by this writer was recently furnished in our own schools. It has been the practice in the 5th Department, to select common words for the writing exercise in the forenoon, have them carefully copied in sentences in the writing books, either in sentences, or fully explained, and in the afternoon have them pronounced to the pupils and written as a spelling test. Those who miss in the afternoon are afterward required to furnish sentences with the misspelled words correctly written. One morning the word abet was given and its use illustrated in the writing lesson. In the afternoon it was missed by a boy who upon being required to bring in sentences, delivered himself in this wise- "The abet is along the river;" and two or three other equally wild statements. Two reasons explain the blunder of this pupil: First, he has walked upon and talked about the revetment all his life, and heard it pronounced thousands of times, yet was too hopelessly heedless to distinguish it from abet; and second, he was absent from school in the afternoon, when the word was used and explained. Here is a boy, whose home and street life for one hundred and thirty eight hours out of every one hundred and sixty eight in each week, and for a good many school days besides, is a constant example of heedlessness and idleness; yet according to the Twain theory, his blunder might be quoted as an example of how English is taught, and the teacher held responsible, for what inheritance, home (lack of) training, and truancy, have produced.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 13th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and [illegible] E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Otis Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in liber "4" of mortgages on page 49[illegible] on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1882, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and upon which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of two thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars and thirty-two cents ($2,960.32) for principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the amount now due, or any part thereof, now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided there will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the village of Boyne City, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan (that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for said County of Charlevoix), on Thursday the 9th day of June, A. D. 1887, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of said day the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due upon said mortgage together with the costs and charges of sale and interest to wit. The south west quarter (¼) and the north west quarter (¼) and the north east quarter (¼) of the south east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-three (23) in township No. thirty-three (33) north of range No. seven (7) west, containing three hundred and sixty acres according to the United States survey. Also the north half (½) of the north east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-seven (27) in township No. thirty-three (33) north range No. seven (7) west containing eighty acres according to the United States survey in the County of Charlevoix in the State of Michigan.

Dated March 7, 1887.
JAMES H. JOHNSON, Attorney for Mortgagee.
OTIS ROSS, Mortgagee.

Notice of Dissolution.

The Co-partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned in the name of Rosenthal & Son is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The business will be hence conducted by Alick Rosenthal to whom all indebtedness of said firm will be paid.

SAMUEL ROSENTHAL.
ALICK ROSENTHAL.

Dated Charlevoix, May 9th 1887.

Notice.

The partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned, under the firm name and style of Gellick & In[illegible], and doing business at Charlevoix, Michigan, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the said James A. Gellick will continue the business at the old stand, paying all debts of the firm and collect all partnership accounts.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., April 18th, 1887.
JAS. A. GELLICK.
BENJ. F. INGALLS.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Charlevoix, ss. In the matter of the Estate of Richard Covyou. Notice is hereby given that in pursuance of an order granted to the undersigned, William Covyou, Guardian of the estate of said Richard Covyou, by the Hon. Judge of Probate of Charlevoix county, on the 25th day of June, A. D. 1886 there will be sold at public vendue, to the highest bidder, at the premises hereinafter described, in the county of Charlevoix, in said State, on Saturday, the 2[illegible] day of April, A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, (subject to all encumbrances by mortgage or otherwise existing at the time of granting license therefor,) the following described real estate, to-wit: All that certain piece or parcel of land lying and being situate in the Township of Bear Lake, in the County of Charlevoix, and State of Michigan, known and described as follows, to-wit: The south-east quarter (¼) of the south-west quarter (¼) of section nineteen, (19) Township Thirty-four, (34) North, of Range Five (5) West.

Dated, Feb. 26, 1887.
WILLIAM COVYOU, as Guardian of Richard Covyou, Insane.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 1883 executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife), to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 1883, in liber 7 of mortgages on page 392, upon which the whole amount is due and unpaid to wit: The sum of one hundred and twelve and thirteen one hundredths dollars ($112.13) for the recovery of which no suit or proceedings at law have been commenced, will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by a statutory sale of the premises described therein as lot number one in section number fourteen, town number thirty-four north of range eight west (except five acres from the north east corner) containing fifty acres (according to the government survey) of land in Charlevoix County, Michigan to the highest bidder, at the front door of the county building (so called) in the village of Boyne City, in the county of Charlevoix (that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix), at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, June 17th, 1887.

Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
D. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date Nov. 15th A. D. 1881, made by and between Albert Johnsville, bachelor of Charlevoix county, Michigan, party of the first part, to Morgan Curtis of Kalamazoo county, Michigan, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, on the 19th day of Nov. A. D. 1881 in Liber 5 of Mortgages at page 437 and by which default the power of sale in said Mortgage contained, has become operative and no suit or proceedings either in law or equity having been instituted to collect the amount due on said Mortgage, and there being due thereon the sum of One hundred and sixty-five dollars, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described in said Mortgage on the 19th day of July A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day by sale at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the County building, in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, wherein the lands described in said mortgage are situated), of the mortgaged premises described in said Mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said Mortgage. The premises described in said Mortgage are as follows: the south east quarter of the north east quarter of section thirty-two, of town thirty-two north of range five west, Charlevoix county, Michigan.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MORGAN CURTIS, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain Indenture of Mortgage bearing date December the first, 1881, made by and between David Norton and Hanah Norton, his wife of Charlevoix, Michigan, party of the first part, to Mary E. Manley, of Wayne county, New York, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the second day of Feb. A. D. 1881, in Liber 9 of Mortgages at page 220, and upon which there is now due and unpaid the sum of seventy-two dollars and no action having been taken either in law or equity to collect the same; therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by statutory sale of the premises therein described at the front door of the County building in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in which said county, the lands described in said Mortgage are situated), at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the 19th day of July, A. D. 1887. The premises described in said mortgage are as follows: the north-east quarter of the south-west quarter and the north-west quarter of the south-east quarter of section twenty-four of town thirty-three, north of range seven west, Charlevoix county state of Michigan, said premises will be sold subject to the principal sum of Eight hundred dollars yet to become due on said Mortgage together with the accruing interest thereon.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee.
MARY E. MANLEY, Mortgagee.

CHARLEVOIX
Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, John Nicholls, A. R. Upright, O. D. Wood, A. Buttars, A. Fox, F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3174, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - - - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - - - CHICAGO.
NAT. CITY BANK - - - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - - - DETROIT.

Bank of
Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security
Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers
Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with ones own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking
Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites
People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will
Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking
Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's

Investment Notes,
Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than savings bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

CROSS & SONS.,
Buy and Sell all kinds of
Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc.
Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY,
Photographer.
In Bradbeer's Gallery.
Photographs of all sizes taken
Old Pictures copied and enlarged.
CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

New JEWELRY
AND
SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick,
ARCHITECT
AND CONTRACTOR,
—ON—
Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both
Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention.
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller
Offer a
Mammoth Stock
OF
BOOTS, SHOES
and other
FOOT WEAR,
--AT--
LOWER PRICES
Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a
FIRST-CLASS
SHOEMAKER,
And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo
"DAILY TELEGRAPH."
Contains the Associated Press Dispatches
Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG
MILLING CO.
Charlevoix, Mich.
Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers
3 EXTRA GRADES OF
FLOUR
Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL
Litney & Steimel
LIVERY,
And Feed Barn
Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the
BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the
LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS
with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES
Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?
If not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.
These goods cannot be equalled in the county
Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.
Ladies Look Out
For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for
D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD,
Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail
All kinds of
FRESH MEATS,
SALT PORK,
SMOKED & SALTED
HAMS,
Dried and Smoked
BACON, DRIED BEEF,
Bologna, Head Cheese,
Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S
MARKET
Is supplied with
All Kinds Of
MEATS
At Lowest Prices.
CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.
Corner of State & Mason sts.,
JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert,
FOUNDREYMEN,
MACHINISTS,
And Manufacturers of The
Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORP & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st. Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 291, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

I. O. G. T.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows' hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 101, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 136, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.
President—Byron See.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas. J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—B. [illegible]
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddlogs, W. A. Brown and D. V. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, R. Cooper, Geo. W. Crouter, R. W. Miller, S. M. See, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Berdan.
All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE,
RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE,
Lorenzo Cook, Manager
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE.
W. C. Newman, Prop'r.
Charlevoix, - - - Mich.
Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

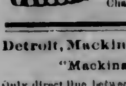
ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and Dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. E. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address,
JOHN MUNROE, Jr., Gen'l Manager, South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. H. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST



N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Weed's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R.

"Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West. (read down)			Going East. (read up)
	5 45 pm	Detroit	11 10 am
7 00 am	6 50 am	St Ignace	8 30 pm	5 55 pm
10 25	8 52	Newberry	6 21	2 05
12 20	9 40	Seney	5 15	12 35
	10 42	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 31	Au Train	3 25	9 05
5 30	12 40	Marquette	2 15	7 00
	12 55 pm	Marquette	2 00 pm
	1 55	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 40
	5 30	Houghton	9 20
	6 35	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M T Co's boats, M C & G R & I R R & M R & O.
E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette.

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

IN EFFECT SEPTEMBER 27, 1886.

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.		No 5	No 8	No 4
Mackinaw City	Lv	7 15 a m	9 30 p m
Petoskey		8 31	10 51
Boyne Falls		9 16	11 30
Mancelona		10 18	12 30
Walton Junc.		11 50	1 50	5 15 p m
Cadillac	Ar	12 40	2 50	6 10
	Lv	12 45	6 05	6 30
Le Roy		1 24	6 40	7 07
Reed City	Ar	1 55	7 20	7 40
	Lv	2 15	7 45	8 00
Big Rapids		2 40	8 11	8 31
Stanwood		3 05	8 30	8 55
Howard City		3 31	9 03	9 20
D G H & M Cross		4 10	10 15	10 35
Grand Rapids	Ar	4 55	10 30	10 50
	Lv	7 15	5 15	11 45
Plainwell		3 33	6 45	1 12
Kalamazoo	Ar	9 15	7 10	1 40
	Lv	9 10	7 30	2 00
Sturgis		10 27	8 59	3 28
Ft Wayne	Ar	12 40	11 20	6 00
	Lv	1 00	11 45
Richmond		4 30	3 35
Cincinnati	Ar	7 30	7 25

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.		No 3	No 5	No 7
Cincinnati, leave		1 55 a m	7 20 p m
Richmond		10 20	10 00
Fort Wayne	Ar	1 50	1 15
	Lv	2 10	3 10
Sturgis		4 24	5 25
Kalamazoo	Ar	6 45	6 55
	Lv	5 50	7 20
Plainwell		6 16	7 48
Grand Rapids	Ar	7 40	6 40
	Lv	12 30	4 55
D., G., H., & M. cross		11 45	5 10
Howard City		12 52	6 18
Stanwood		1 22	6 46
Big Rapids		1 43	7 03
Reed City	Ar	2 15	7 40
	Lv	2 35	8 00
Le Roy		3 08	8 33
Cadillac	Ar	3 45	9 10
	Lv	3 55	9 30
Walton Junc		4 45	10 25
Mancelona		6 16	11 50
Boyne Falls		7 13	12 52
Petoskey		7 55	1 40
Mackinaw City		9 30	2 55

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

A Queer Russian Will.

A wealthy bachelor has just died in St. Petersburg, bequeathing his property in St. Petersburg and Moscow, as well as his stock and investments, to his nephew, though with curious provisos. Before he inherits any of the property the heir must give his word of honor that he will not smoke any longer either cigar, cigarette or pipe; that he will never again play cards, and that within six months of the proving of the will he will marry, so that he may not die an old bachelor like the testator. Three executors have been appointed, and in case the heir refuses to comply with the conditions they have the right to appropriate the property and divide it among their children. The first two engagements have already been entered into by the heir, but the third proviso threatens to be insuperable.—Pall Mall Gazette.

A PREHISTORIC PEOPLE.

The Race Who Worked the Copper Mines of Michigan.

The recent wonderful discoveries of iron, copper, and silver ores in Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota call attention to a fact not generally known that wise old Dr. Franklin, while arranging the treaty between this country and England, after the Revolution, so drew the boundary lines between the later hostile powers as to include in the United States the great mining regions on the southern shore of Lake Superior. In these days, when every week gives information concerning the boundless wealth in iron, copper, and silver of this wonderful world the remark is often heard that the treasures here entombed are scarcely yet unlocked—so it would seem upon a cursory examination of the copper and silver mines which fringe the bleak shores of the great inland fresh-water sea. Such is, however, not the fact. There is indubitable evidence that long before the first red man hunted in the gloomy forests that girdle these wild and lonely shores—long years before the first Jesuit launched his boat upon the waves of the Getchee Gamee, perhaps before "Adam delved and Eve span" a race of men, in numbers as the sands on the shores, toiled and hammered and beat the copper—pure native copper—not only into implements of warfare, but without doubt for transportation to other lands. A civilization must then have existed far superior to any since known among the native tribes north of Mexico. Thousands of years ago a race of people worked the copper mines in the upper peninsula. They worked the native copper and were so far advanced in the mechanical arts as to be able to handle masses of ore weighing many tons. Their implements were fashioned to do skillful work. In working the copper mines of to-day these implements are found at a great depth, showing that ages have elapsed since this prehistoric race existed. The geological formations bear evidence that thousands of years have passed since these people disappeared. Who were they? Whence came they? and where did they go? Their unfinished work has been laid before scientists, their tools and implements of stone and copper are to be seen in museums and collections in Milwaukee and other cities, and yet no one can give any reliable data of the existence or extinction of these people of the long ago.

The southern shores of Superior were first explored in 1641 by two Jesuit priests. Small bands continued to explore the region until 1760. In that year Alexander Henry visited the region. He soon became familiar with the fact that copper existed in the country. He published a book on the subject and described his explorations. That a prehistoric race had worked these mines was not discovered until the middle of the present century. The ancient excavations are found in all parts of the peninsula. There is scarcely a vein of copper in the whole district that does not show evidence of ancient workings. In places they even extend in the rock from three to sixty feet. The method of mining was to heat the rock with fire and then by pouring on water and pounding with their stone hammers to disintegrate and separate the ore. A careful search of all the old records shows that the Indians who were found in the country were ignorant of the mines and the uses of the metal.

In 1847 S. O. Knapp was prospecting on the range near Rockland, a small town in Ontonagon County, Michigan. He opened a test pit, the surface outcropping of copper-bearing rock giving evidence of hidden treasure, and when eighteen feet from the surface he discovered a mass of nearly pure copper weighing more than six tons. This is regarded as the most wonderful mineral discovery ever known, from the fact that the copper was almost pure and showed conclusively that it had been worked and abandoned by a prehistoric race.

This mass had been raised several feet and secured there upon timbers. These had decayed and the mass remained in its place supported by the soil. It had been hammered all over, until its surface was perfectly smooth. In this pit, as in many others, there were found great numbers of stone hammers, bits of burned wood, and a copper chisel. Over this mass, drawing its life from the soil, stood a hemlock tree which showed 325 distinct annual rings of growth; this was standing by the stump of a much larger tree which had grown, died, and decayed since this pit had been dug, and this mass had been raised from its bed and the brands beneath it had been burned and the soil gathered above it in the long lapse of ages.

In the bottoms of all the pits or diggings large numbers of stone hammers and copper chisels are found. The hammers consist of small bowlders of trap rock weighing from three to thirty pounds. A groove around the stone shows where the handle was tied on with a withe. These "diggings" are so abundant in the copper region as to cause no surprise. After the discovery of the mass copper there were many more of a similar nature in different localities, extending over a vast area. The existence of these "ancient diggings" was suggested by depressions in the ground. Later, enormous masses of copper were found at Rockland, and for many years great wealth flowed in upon the owners of the Minnesota and National mines.

Even on the desolate Isle Royale multitudes of hammers, etc., have been found. An old mining captain, speaking of this mystery of the ages, said to the writer that thousands and thousands of men were engaged in mining in that unknown epoch of human existence, ages before the days of the Pharaohs, or even before the birth of "Abraham Haran-Terah-Sot," the world's gray fathers. In speaking further upon the subject, this gentleman, Capt. Parnell, said that something must have occurred to disgust those odd fellows—they threw down their hammers and quit work suddenly. Perhaps the question of labor and capital was even then brewing mischief; if so, it must have been a successful strike, for the toiling thousands quit work for good. Everything points to the fact that work was stopped at a moment's notice.

The six-ton mass of copper found by Mr. Knapp was afterwards, with great difficulty, raised, taken down the Ontonagon River, and sent to the Smithsonian, where it still remains, if I am correctly informed. These facts heighten the interest in that fascinating excitement of exploring and prospecting for new treasures in this still wild and comparatively unknown portion of the Northwest. There can be no doubt that vast and untold wealth in silver, iron, and copper yet await the energy and toil of men, backed by the capital, pluck, and enterprise of other men who have already reaped the fruits of industry in other fields. Some will win and other will fail. It might not be amiss to state that up to 1880 over $150,000,000 of copper ore had been produced by the Michigan mines.

The Philadelphia North American describes George Peabody as a man of extreme penuriousness, but admits that he was a philanthropist. "He liked to give money to the world, and he hated to give it to anyone who had 'claims' upon him. During the long sickness which ended in his death Mr. Peabody was nursed by one of his kinswomen, a poor creature, whose worldly fortune was comprised in her good heart. It was expected that Peabody would provide her with a small income. He left her his photograph carefully done up in paper."

The sponge fishery at Apalachicola, Fla., has yielded less than one-fourth the usual amount this season, owing to high and constant winds.

A live rattlesnake six feet long is kept on exhibition in the showcase of a grocery store at Abbeville, S. C.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. GAZELLE, ... CAPT. JOHN MASON.
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m. and 4 p. m., touching at intermediate points both ways.

East Jordan and Charlevoix.
STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MEL THOMPSON
Leave East Jordan at 6:30 a. m. and 2 p. m., and Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m., 4 p. m., touching all way ports.

Boyne City and Charlevoix.
STR. CLARA BELLE, ... CAPT. GEO. JEPSON.
Leave Boyne City at 6:30 a. m. and 1:00 p. m. and Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m., and 3 p. m. connecting with the Friant and Cummings to and from Petoskey. Touching at way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, ... CAPT. B. VANDERHOEF.
MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:30; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30, arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Spring, 6:00

East Jordan, Charlevoix & Harbor Spgs.
LOU A. CUMMINGS, ... CAPT. W. A. SNYDER.
MORNING: Leave East Jordan 7 a. m.; Charlevoix, 9; Petoskey, 11; arrive at Harbor Springs 11:30.
AFTERNOON: leave Harbor Springs, 1 p. m.; Petoskey, 1:30; Charlevoix, 3; arrive at East Jordan, 5:30 p. m.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. CHAMPLAIN .... Capt. Edw. Casey.
Going North, Chicago Tuesdays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Thursdays 11 p m; Cheboygan, Fridays 2:30 p m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Fridays 5 p m; Charlevoix, Saturdays 2:30 p m; Milwaukee, Mondays 3 p m; Chicago, Mondays 11 p m.

PROP. LAWRENCE .... Capt. Geo. Thorp.
Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.
Upright & Emrey, agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.
CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS, ... Capt. O. E. Wilbur.
Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20
Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave St. Ignace 6:00 a m; Mackinac Island [illegible]; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45, Northport 5:15 p m, arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p m.

T. S. FAXTON, ... Capt. A. G. Albrecht.
Going North, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Torch Lake 9:45; Norwood 10:30; Charlevoix 12 noon; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45; arriving at St. Ignace 8:20;
Going South, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave St. Ignace 6 a m; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Norwood 4:15; Torch Lake 5; arriving at Traverse City 7:45 p m.
The City of Traverse leaves Chicago dock above 12th street every Saturday evening at 7, arriving at Traverse City Monday morning. Leaves Traverse City Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock.
J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

Good Results in Every Case.

D. A. Bradford, wholesale paper dealer of Chattanooga, Tenn., writes that he was seriously afflicted with a severe cold that settled on his lungs; had tried many remedies without benefit. Being induced to try Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, did so and was entirely cured by use of a few bottles. Since which time he has used it in his family for all Coughs and Colds with best results. This is the experience of thousands whose lives have been saved by this Wonderful Discovery. Trial Bottles free at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well." Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by Dr. G. W. Crouter

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES. The grandest and simplest known remedy for all Female Trouble to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable Lady Agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For medicine and particulars, Address
PAN-ZAMA MED CO., Frankfort, Ind.

W. H. FRANCIS
FURNITURE
—AND—
JOBBING SHOP,
Will also do
Contracting & Building,
in Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace,
Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!
All kinds of Blacksmithing,
At the
Shop in the Foundry Building.
Horseshoeing a specialty.
ALL WORK GUARANTEED.
M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY,
FANCY GOODS,
DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS.
Ingleside Building.

MERCHANT
TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

CHARLEVOIX
Manufacturing Co.
Charlevoix, Mich.,
Manufacturers of
Sash and Doors,
Blinds, Mouldings etc.
NEWELL
Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails
kept in stock.
Window & Door Frames made to order.
All Kinds of
Building Material
Kept constantly on hand.
PLANS &
SPECIFICATIONS,
Furnished on application.
Cottages made a specialty
also contracting and building
Correspondence solicited.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S
LIVERY STABLE
CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES
Of Splendid
MICHIGAN LANDS
For Sale By The
G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of 200,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner.
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

MARVELOUS PRICES!
BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. The following books are published in neat pamphlet form, and all are printed from good type upon good paper. They treat of a great variety of subjects, and we think no one can examine the list without finding therein many that he or she would like to possess. [illegible] from these books would cost $1.00 each. Each book is complete in itself.
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, a large collection of Acting Charades, Tableaux, Games, Puzzles, etc., for social gatherings, private theatricals and evenings at home.
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Hidden Perils."
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, a large and choice collection for school exhibitions and public and private entertainments.
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, a complete guide to correspondence, giving plain directions for the composition of letters of every kind, with innumerable forms and examples.
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne," etc.
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. "The Lady of the Lake" is a romance in verse, and of all the works of Scott, none is more beautiful than this.
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, author of "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss," etc.
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, a large collection of the funny stories, sketches, anecdotes, poems, and jokes.
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, author of "Mary Barton," etc.
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, embracing love, humorous and detective stories, stories of society life, of adventure, of railway life, etc., all very interesting.
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Aurora Floyd," etc.
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, an entirely new work upon this subject, containing easy and practical instructions for making fancy baskets, wall pockets, brackets, needle work, embroidery, etc., etc., profusely and elegantly illustrated.
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. The finest collection of fairy stories published. The children are delighted with them.
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, a guide to politeness and good breeding, giving the rules of modern etiquette for all occasions.
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, a handy book of useful information for all, upon many and various subjects.
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, containing hundreds of excellent cooking recipes and hints to housekeepers, also telling how to cure all common ailments by simple home remedies.
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, a very interesting and instructive book of travels, describing the peculiar life, habits, manners and customs of the people of foreign countries.
24. 37 Popular Ballads. Same size as sheet music. Words of all the old and new songs.
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, author of "The House on the Marsh," etc.
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," author of "Molly Bawn," etc.
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, author of "Bread-and-Cheese-and-Kisses," etc.
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Brenda Yorke."
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "No Name," etc.
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, author of "Old Middleton's Money," etc.
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, author of "Lady Audley's Secret," etc.
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, author of "The Wooing O't," etc.
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, author of "The Woman in White," etc.
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, author of "East Lynne."
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," etc.
39. Robinson Crusoe. A thrilling narrative by Daniel De Foe, describing the adventures of a castaway in the South Pacific Ocean.
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. A practical and instructive series of articles by Mr. P. H. Jacobs, Poultry Editor of "The Farm and Garden," Phila.; illustrated.
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, a book which tells how to perform hundreds of amusing tricks in magic and instructive experiments with simple agents.
42. Gems of the Poets, containing charming selections from Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Byron, Shelley, Moore, Bryant, and many others.
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. A full description and plans of Eight modern houses, ranging in price from $500 to $4500. Illustrated.
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—Washington, Franklin, Webster, Clay, Tilden, Lincoln, Scott, Grant, Garfield, Gladstone, Butler, Hancock, Lee, and all the leading men of the century.
45. Æsop's Fables. The work of an ancient genius. Children have read them for centuries, and grown people quote them every day.
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of
"SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW.
WORLD RENOWNED
CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but—by means of a steel frog—is set directly in the Center of the Line of Draft, making a steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy.
If your Agent has none write us for price.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY
J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS,
RACINE, Wis.

Good PAINT
An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the SHERWIN-WILLIAMS COLORED LEADS.
Also
St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and
STATIONERY,
OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line
JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING
YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN
Boiler Works!
Builder and Manufacturer of
BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.
Sheet Iron Work given special attention.
MARINE WORK
a specialty.
HENRY BARTH, Prop.
Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC
Single Thread Sewing Machines
will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic.
Address,
78 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES
Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S
COUGH
SYRUP
[illegible testimonial], Mich. Aug. 15, 1874. I was attacked with a severe cold and threatened with lung fever while on a visit to Hudson, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment to preach on account of my severe coughing, but managed to get home, and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup that I had in the house, and my cough left me as soon as I commenced taking it, and I find permanent relief when I am attacked by cough or lung complaint. REV. ROBT. CORE.
Howell, Mich., Oct. 2, 1874. I have tried Dr. L. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year, as I find occasion, as a remedy for Colds and Coughs, and I find it a reliable medicine. I have used his Ague and Liver Syrup in my family with the best of success, curing my mother (whose age was over seventy years) of one of the hardest attacks of Fever and Ague, after the second chill and fever. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who need them. REV. S. B. [illegible]
Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.
W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

FRANK E. WOODS
Bath & Barber Rooms
Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

MONEY TO LOAN,
At current rates of interest, on
Approved Real Estate Security.
School Bonds bought and sold.
MILEY & CHAPIN, Boyne City.

BATH & BARBER
ROOMS.
Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.
If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.
JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE!
At Miss Spaulding's
MILLINERY ROOMS,
I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only.
Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $3.00 will receive a present of her choice of any untrimmed felt hat in the store.
Come early and secure a Bargain.
MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest
JOB WORK,
Patronize The
Sentinel.

JAS. A. GELLICK,
Dealer in
Choice Wines,
Fine Liquors
EXCELLENT CIGARS.
We call Special Attention to our
Old Kentucky Sour Mash
WHISKIES.
We also keep continually on draught
Milwaukee
Export and lager Beer.
Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. MICHIGAN.

THE NEWS CONDENSED.

THE EAST.

A LAD named Defreitus, who recently leaped from the Brooklyn bridge, was sent to prison for three months.

JAMES N. TAGGART, paying teller of the Union Trust Company at Philadelphia, who disappeared about April 18, proves to have embezzled $100,000 of the company's funds....By the great floods in the Kennebec River in Maine millions of feet of lumber were swept into the sea.

THE explosion of a steam-pipe on a tow-boat at Pittsburgh caused the loss of one life and the fatal injury of two other persons....The burning of a breaker of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, at Sugar Notch, Pa., caused a loss of $60,000.

AT Pittsburgh last week the temperature rose to 95 degrees—the highest ever known there in May....A switch-engine exploded at New Haven, Conn., badly wounding six persons, and wrecking the round-house and two other locomotives.

THE WEST.

DAVID S. FOTHERINGHAM, the alleged accomplice of "Jim Cummings" in the famous St. Louis and San Francisco train robbery, was placed on trial at St. Louis on the 2d inst.... The points and affidavits in support of a new trial for Watt and Schwartz, convicted of killing Kellogg Nichols, were filed at Morris, Ill., last week. They claim that new evidence has been discovered, that the Court erred in several instances, that certain of the jurymen were unbiased, and were later prejudiced by Dr. Axtell's sermon, and that the closing address for the people was not according to the evidence presented.

...

found Milo H. Dakin, Representative from Saginaw County, guilty of corruptly soliciting money to pass the Saginaw charter bill, intending to convert the money to his own use and profit. By a unanimous vote they found him guilty of making a list of the members, with figures showing the amount to be paid to each for securing the passage of the Saginaw charter bill, and by a unanimous vote he was expelled.

A NEW liquor law has been presented in the Michigan Legislature, its provisions being very stringent. No distinction is made in the tax for vending malt or alcoholic liquors. The tax is fixed at $500, and saloons are required to close at 9 p. m. It is said the bill will probably pass.

THE RAILWAYS.

THERE is good authority for the statement that the Rock Island Road has decided to extend to Denver in an air-line from Horton, Kas., passing through the county seat of each county in the northern tier of Kansas.

THE Merchants and Manufacturers' Exchange of Detroit requested the Michigan Central Road to issue thousand-mile tickets to commercial travelers at the old rate of $20, at which price they are now sold by the Grand Trunk. One member suggested the sale of five thousand-mile tickets at $100, which would only be taken by commercial houses. President Ledyard offered to make a test case at the expense of the road, and ascertain if traveling salesmen can be favored.

A RAILROAD war is predicted from the refusal of the Pennsylvania Road to sell tickets to the accredited agents of the Western lines. It is said that the latter will retaliate by legal proceedings to compel the trunk lines to show cause why they should not furnish tickets....Jay Gould has purchased 108 acres of land just south of Carondelet Park, St. Louis, on which to place the machine-shops of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Roads.

INTERSTATE COMMISSION.

IN opening the session of the Interstate Commerce Commission at New Orleans Judge Cooley said: "It may be well to say at the outset that the scope of our authority ...

...

GREAT TRADE REVIVAL

The Early Spring Business in Chicago Without a Parallel.

Similar Reports from Every Section of the Great Mississippi Basin.

[Chicago special.]

The early spring trade in all branches of the wholesale business of Chicago was almost without a parallel in its history. The consumption of goods was simply enormous. This was in a great measure attributed to the change to be made in railroad freight rates by the operation of the interstate commerce law, which went into effect early in April. Now that that time has passed and dealers throughout the country are beginning to understand the present cost of transportation, the immense demands for goods throughout the month of March turns out not to have been so spasmodic as it was then supposed to be, but a genuine revival of business throughout the West and Northwest, as there has been during the last three weeks and is now greater activity among the wholesale firms of this city than is usual ...

...

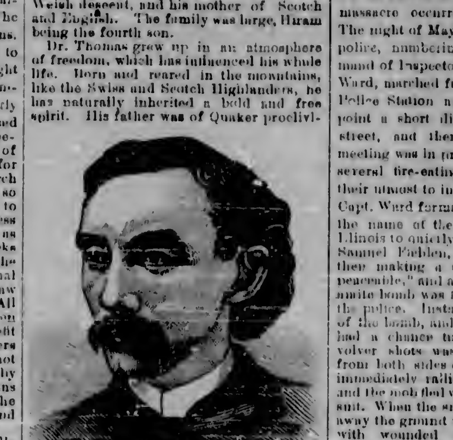
be the impetus to more railway building in Texas."

REV. H. W. THOMAS.

A Portrait and Sketch of the Well-Known Chicago Divine.

The popular pastor of the People's Church, of Chicago, whose portrait accompanies this sketch, was born April 29, 1832, in the Allegheny Mountains, in Hampshire County, Virginia (now West Virginia). His parents were farmers in modest circumstances. His father was of German and Welsh descent, and his mother of Scotch and English. The family was large, Hiram being the fourth son.

Dr. Thomas grew up in an atmosphere of freedom, which has influenced his whole life. Born and reared in the mountains, like the Swiss and Scotch Highlanders, he has naturally inherited a bold and free spirit. His father was of Quaker proclivi-



...

A TRAGIC MEMORY.

First Anniversary of the Haymarket Massacre in Chicago.

Names of the Policemen Killed and Permanently Injured by the Deadly Bomb.

[Chicago special.]

The first anniversary of the event which will be known to history as the Haymarket massacre occurred on Wednesday last. The night of May 4, 1886, six companies of police, numbering 175 men, under command of Inspector John Bonfield and Capt. Ward, marched from the Desplaines Street Police Station up Desplaines street to a point a short distance north of Randolph street, and there halted. A socialists' meeting was in progress on the street, and several fire-eating anarchists were doing their utmost to incite the people to a riot. Capt. Ward formally ordered the crowd "in the name of the people of the State of Illinois to quietly and peaceably disperse." Samuel Fielden, the anarchist who was then making a speech, replied, "We are peaceable," and at the same instant a dyn- ...

...

GRANT'S MEMORY.

It Is Commemorated by His Admirers at Pittsburgh and Other Places.

Mark Twain Scathingly Criticises the Critics of the General's Grammar.

The Americus Club of Pittsburgh commemorated the sixty-fifth anniversary of Gen. Grant's birth by banqueting at the Monongahela House of that city. The tables in the banquet hall were arranged so as to make the initials "U. S. G.," and were elaborately decorated with flower pieces containing the initial letters of the deceased President's name and the dates 1822-1887. Gov. Foraker occupied the seat assigned Gen. Grant on the occasion of the reception given to him on his return from his trip around the world. After the tables had been cleared Governor Foraker was introduced and responded to the toast "U. S. Grant." He sketched the life of the General from early manhood to the close of his honorable career.

"That he was not a third time called to the Presidency," said Gov. Foraker, "was due to considerations that had no relation whatever to him personally. On the contrary he was never more securely intrenched in the affections of the American people than he was at the very ...

...

GREAT GUNS.

Soldiers' Stirring Stories of Solid Shot, Screaming Shells,

Big Battles, Bursting Bombs, Buzzing Bullets, and Bright Bayonets.

In Vain.

BY SINETTE M. LOWATER.

O, God, and is it just?
Was it in vain—my loneliness and woe—
That fair, bright boy's untimely death,
Was it for nothing? And I loved him so!

'Twas hard enough to bear,
To see the glorious summers come and go,
The autumns, with the years' fruition crowned,
And the soft glory of the falling snow,

And know that with unseeing eyes
And closed lips, mute through all his manhood's years,
He lies apart in darkness, with clasped hands,
And answers not, altho' I call with tears,

And feel that I, his mother, gave him up
To one whose claim was holier than my own—
The country which his fathers fought to make
Freedom's eternal home!

Alas! It was not so!
Our land gained nothing when my darling fell;
...
Into that flashing, murderous gate of hell.

His Colonel—whom he loved—
Took that young life to pave his way to fame;
...

General Sheridan was so positive in his opinions on the subject that Secretary Stanton at last ordered him to come to Washington for a personal consultation.

Sheridan obeyed, very reluctantly. He seems to have felt that he had no business away from the army at such a time. To use a common phrase, something was "in the air;" the activity and the saucy demonstrations in his front by the enemy he had lately routed assured him that this enemy had been heavily re-enforced, and was meditating an attack. In all his extended military history this man probably never felt so uneasy as during the four days that he was away from his army.

But the wishes, not to say the orders, of the Secretary of War must needs be respected; and on the 15th of October, with a strong cavalry escort, Sheridan started for Washington by way of Front Royal and Manassas Gap.

At the former place he was overtaken by a courier from General Wright, who was left in command of the army, with the following startling message which our Signal Corps men had read from the flags on the Confederate station on the summit of Three Top Mountain, which overlooked all our camps:

"To Lieutenant General Early:

"Be ready to move as soon as my forces join you, and we will crush Sheridan.

"LONGSTREET, Lieutenant General."

If this dispatch was genuine, it was worth heeding; if it was a ruse, it still showed that the enemy meditated mischief. What its real character was has not been determined to this day.

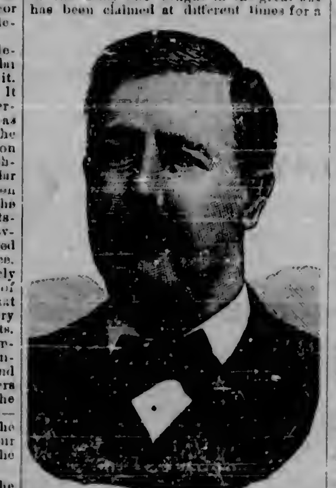
...

of Fredericksburg the brigade commanded by the gallant General Clement A. Evans—now a devout disciple of the Prince of Peace—was in winter quarters on the Rappahannock River near Fort Royal. A snow-storm came, and snow fell to a depth of a foot. General Hoke, of North Carolina, who was quartered near by with his brigade of three thousand men, marched over and sent word to General Evans that he must surrender or stand the consequences. Of course there was no surrender. The North Carolinians, who were making the demand for surrender, attacked the Georgians on the flank, where the Thirty-first and Thirty-eighth Regiments chanced to be. The assault was so unexpected and the attacking forces were so well massed that they swept everything before them, going through the camps and leaving things their own way. When the troops of General Hoke had pretty well routed General Evans, they struck the Thirteenth Georgia, and had such a tussle that the rest of the Georgians were encouraged, re-formed, charged the North Carolinians, and accomplished a complete rout, driving them pell-mell through the snow to their winter quarters, three miles away. The Georgians withdrew, but later in the day planned an attack on General Hoke's camps, intending to bring away anything portable that could be captured. The Georgians were repulsed, however without difficulty, as a good many of the old soldiers refused to go on the raid, and General Hoke's forces outnumbered the forces of General Evans.

In the retreat, the distinguished "Bull" ...

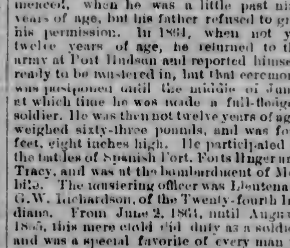
...

Colonel Mott.



...

General Cobb.



...

LEAL AND TRUE.

BY MANDA L. CROCKER.

I had a friend so leal and true—
Leal and true? Yes, leal and true.
When there scattered buds and dew
'Neath vernal skies of softest blue,
I said, "Oh, heart, there are but few
So leal and true; aye, leal and true."

When fragrant bloom of bud and rose
Began their beauty to disclose,
And lilies drooped in sweet repose,
I said unto my soul, "Who knows
But when this star of love arose
'Twas destined mine; ah! who knows?"

I gathered pansies 'mong the leaves,
And bound sweet roses in my sheaves,
And breathed but blessings and reprieves.
So happy went my morns and eves
That bound my days in golden sheaves
So leal and true, 'mid summer leaves.

I had a friend so leal and true—
Leal and true? Ah! leal and true.
But when the asters budded blue,
And skies grew gray and gold in hue,
There fell a shadow 'tween us two,
So leal and true; yes, leal and true.

'Neath autumn skies of somber hue,
The shadow deep and darker grew
Between the leal, the leal and true;
And hot and hasty words, though few,
And bitter tears, and sheaf of rue,
And frowning shadows shut from view
Friends once so leal; yes, leal and true!

A FOUNDLING'S FATE

—OR,—

The Maid of the Tyrolese Valley.

BY H. BIRD, ESQ.

...

"My boy, my boy, I fear the future will prove a sad blank to you!"

Albert looked down, and was silent.

"Speak!" pursued the old man. "You need have no secrets from your father. I fear that your heart is no longer in your calling, and I think it would beat lighter under a farmer's coat than under a priest's gown."

Albert seized the speaker's hand, and pressed it between both his own. "Strength will come to all those who ask for it. I will do my duty honestly."

"My good, my honorable son!" exclaimed old Unterwald. "Never mind my ugly words; stay here as long as you like; the longer the better for us. I cannot say that you have acted wrongly. You did not raise your hand against the lady; the blood that was shed was not of your shedding. You were only endeavoring to protect another—poor ill-used Franzi! I don't think I should have acted differently myself."

"Thanks, father. How shall I ever repay you for your charitable kindness toward me?"

"Say not a word about the matter," rejoined the other. "Now listen to me, Albert," he continued. "You must remain here in your room until this affair blows over, or until we see how the vicar means to act in it."

"And what of my mother?"

"She will not see you. She takes Miss Isidora's part, and deems you much to blame. But don't trouble yourself about that. I will explain all to her, and doubt not but your peace with her will soon be made."

"And, father," Albert commenced, ...

...

with her thoughts, and her companion was regretting that she had told her what Miss Isidora had said.

"How warm the wind comes," observed Katrina, presently. "We shall soon have a thaw. And listen to the river; its waters are rushing along at a mighty rate. Do you hear them?"

Franzi made no reply and the other offered no further remark, but silently went on.

When they had reached the village Franzi paused.

"Here we must part, good friend," she said.

"Part!" repeated her companion. "Whither would you go alone?"

"I can not tell you, Katrina. Thank you for your company thus far, and farewell;" saying which, Franzi wrung her friend's hand, and then hastened away.

Katrina stood for a few seconds, wondering how she should act. "I'll follow her," she said to herself, by and by. "Yes, please or displease her, I will not lose sight of her."

And with that, she nimbly made after the unhappy girl.

Meanwhile, Franzi walked up the village street. The blacksmith's hammer was clanging loudly, and a bright glare was visible through the windows of the smithy, toward which she now directed her steps.

Vigili, who, at this moment was having high words with one of his apprentice lads, had made a rush to the forge, and snatched up a red-hot iron, which he was about to throw at the offender, when his arm was suddenly arrested. He turned round angrily, and beheld Franzi's eye upon him, and heard her long-lost voice in his ear. ...

...

put a stop to it!"

Vigili, as blind in his joy as he was sometimes in his rage, paid no attention to the man's looks, but bade him write from his dictation.

"I endow my wife that is to be with my house, my shop, all the money I have in the bank, and with myself into the bargain," he said; "so now write away, old fellow, and mind you make no mistakes."

The schoolmaster hesitated. "He had forgotten to bring with him a sheet of parchment," he explained. "He would run and fetch it."

And he left the house, but returned after an absence of a few minutes only (during which time he had dispatched a messenger for Miss Isidora), and then he commenced his task. When it was finished to the satisfaction of the blacksmith, some neighbors were called in to witness the document. As one of the men took up a pen, the door of the room was suddenly flung wide, and the vicar's niece was added to the scene.

The lady cast a withering look upon poor Franzi, who had retreated into one corner of the apartment; then she burst forth:

"So it is true, then! You are going to wed this wicked girl;" Miss Isidora cried, addressing Vigili. "I am sorry to interrupt you in this abrupt manner, but I have a certain duty to perform. Your mother belongs to our society, and I am come to her help. She can not remain in her son's house now; my uncle's dwelling will receive her."

And, with that, she took the woman's hand, and led her to the door. But ere they could cross the threshold, the blacksmith had sprung in their way, and barred their exit.

"What are you to my mother that you should thus control her actions?" he demanded. ...

...

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for May 15—The Call of Moses.

[From Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.]

The lesson of the day is found in the third chapter of Exodus, verses one to seventeen. Time, 1491 B. C., about eighty years after the events of the last lesson. The place is Mount Horeb, or Sinai, in the wilderness of the Arabian Peninsula.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Midianites. Midian was the son of Abraham by Keturah (Gen. 25: 2), and the progenitor of the Midianites. They are always spoken of collectively as Midian, except in three or four instances. It is supposed that the descendants of Hagar and Keturah intermarried, and that "Midian" came to be about equivalent to "Arab." The merchantmen who bought Joseph are called "Ishmaelites" and "Midianites" (Gen. 37: 28). They are supposed to have dwelt principally in the desert north of the peninsula of Arabia, and to have extended southward along the eastern shore of the Gulf of Eyleh, and northward along the eastern frontier of Palestine. The oases in the desert of Sinai afforded pasturage for their flocks, and were therefore included in land of "Midian."

When Moses fled from Egypt he was hospitably entertained by Reuel, the priest or prince of Midian, to whose daughters he had shown a kindness. One of these daughters became his wife, and he dwelt with his father-in-law forty years, keeping his flocks (Ex. 2). Descending from Abraham, the Midianites must ...

...

LESSON LINK.

Between last lesson and this two periods ... occur of nearly forty years each. ... first forty years Moses lived in Egypt, the ... in Midian. The only history concerning him are the two incidents which explain ... change of home. The impulsive slaying of an Egyptian task-master compelled him to ... the country to save his life; and the cordial welcome by the priest of Midian decided ... in selecting his future home.

TOPICS AND OUTLINE.

God calls (1) from obscure positions; ... after patient preparation; (3) amid supernatural revelations; (4) by the divine voice; (5) through the willing and honest spirit; ... after gracious promises; (7) to a right ...

...

"NEW HOME" Sewing Machines.

Our Agent will soon begin the canvass of Charlevoix and Vicinity, for the sale of the "NEW HOME" Machine, fully warranted and sold on easy terms, The Machine may be seen at the Millinery Store of Litney & Carr, of Charlevoix.

"SMITH AMERICAN" and "CHASE & EARHUFF" ORGANS FOR SALE at LOWEST PRICES.

DUNHAM & SUTTON, EAST JORDAN.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 18, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

THE SURVEY.

Satisfactory Progress of the D. C. & E. Engineer Corps.—To be at Bellaire Saturday Next.

Engineer Beardslee came in Saturday night from the railroad survey and was seen by our reporter at the Fountain City House.

Mr. Beardslee speaks in glowing terms of the route, as far as engineering difficulties are concerned, and is more than ever captivated with the natural wealth which will be opened up by the road.

He tells us that the highest altitude above Pine Lake yet reached is but 142 feet, and that by gradual grades. They were Saturday at the "ox-bow" of Intermediate Lake, which is a fraction over 25 feet above the level of Pine Lake.

The route selected is practically as follows: From the vicinity of Newman's creek near the Ironton road, they pass near McCabe's lake, thence cross into Eveline at the corner of sections 24 of Marion and 19 of South Arm, thence across 25, and cross town line again to section 36 in Marion, thence to 31 in Eveline, thence across 12 and 7 in that township, between 13 and 18, thence angle to east to 19, and across 6, 7 and 18 of South Arm, crossing John Walker's farm in South Arm.

From 18 they go to Ellsworth, or the "ox-bow," entering Banks on section 13, thence they will follow the Intermediate shore to Bellaire.

The party are in good health and spirits. Mr. Beardslee left again Monday morning for the field of operations, and the last thing he said to our reporter was:

"I would like to build that road."

Programme for Memorial Day.

1. Baxter Post, No. 113, G. A. R. to meet promptly at 10 o'clock a. m., to receive visiting Posts.

2. Procession will form promptly at 1 p. m., under the direction of Comrade M. J. Stockman, in the following order: 1.—Band. 2.—Schools. 3.—Civic Societies. 4.—President and Common Council. 5.—Fire Department. 6.—Visiting Posts. 7.—Baxter Post. 8.—Car of Flowers. 9.—Ambulance, with Aged and Infirm Comrades.

A cordial invitation is extended to all soldiers, whether members of Posts or not, to fall in and take a part in the ceremonies. The same invitation is extended to citizens generally.

3. At the Cemetery, in addition to the services as laid down in the ritual, there will be music both vocal and instrumental. Rev. W. G. Clark will invoke the Divine blessing; Rev. W. H. McCartney will deliver the oration, after which there will be short addresses by visiting Comrades and others, when the procession will re-form and return to headquarters, where it will be dismissed. The Boys' Band will be assisted by the Boyne City Band, and the Post Drum Corps.

Comrades Byron See and Wm. Kanagy will receive and care for any flowers that may be contributed.

The drouth is becoming a very serious matter all over the country, both in regard to the crops and standing timber, Forest fires are becoming prevalent, and unless rain comes much loss of property will follow. Throughout the Northwest and Southwest the crops are suffering severely. Hay, as well as oats, corn and wheat, promise but scanty yield unless there be a speedy change in the conditions. And in some cases the season is too far advanced to permit reasonable hope of a full crop. The time for spring showers has gone by, and the good, vigorous root, which is possible only when moisture has been supplied during the early stages of growth, is hardly to be expected now, the indications being regarded as decidedly unfavorable to an average yield in proportion to acreage. In Northern Michigan, the condition is somewhat more favorable, although grass is suffering in some degree.

A fine line of pillows and mattresses at S. M. See & Son's.

Best wire stretcher only 40 cents at L. D. Bartholomew & Co's.

WANTED.—A quantity of spotted corals at the Pioneer Lapidary of O. W. Smith.

Capt. Way, the photographer is doing a large business now-a-days and giving universal satisfaction with his work.

The house and lot on Main street known as the Newberry house, is for sale or will be exchanged for property in Petoskey. Address, J. L. Newberry, Petoskey, Mich.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

WANTED—A young woman, plain cook, to make herself generally useful in a private family. Apply to Mrs. J. S. SMITHSON.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

Tuesday evening Bible reading. All come. Bring your Bibles and come to work.

Thursday evening, general prayer meeting at usual hour. Be sure and avail yourself of this opportunity of renewing your strength for the work of God.

Sunday morning it is expected that Rev. Gray, D. D., of our Freedman's Aid Society, will preach, and in the evening the pastor will address the people.

Teachers' meeting at parsonage on Friday evening at 7:30. W. H. M.

Baptist Church.

Service next Sunday morning at the usual hour. Subject, "The Gift of Eternal Life." Five minutes talk to children immediately preceding the morning service. Evening service at 7:30. Subject, "Man's obligation to receive the religion which God sends." Regular prayer meetings Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Preaching at Bay Springs Friday evening, May 20. Preaching at Hilton's school house next Sunday at 3 p. m.

Elsewhere.

Preaching on Thursday evening at Ironton, by Rev. W. H. Moore, of Sarnia, Ont. Preaching next Sabbath at Johnson's at 11 o'clock. Sunday school at 12 o'clock. At Black's there will be preaching at 3 o'clock. Sunday school at 2 o'clock.

Episcopal Church.

Bible study in Green's hall on Sunday next at 3 p. m., sharp. Session one hour hereafter. Come all and bring your Bibles. Subject of study, Confirmation: its place and use in the development of life in Christ. Come prepared by study of Acts, 8th chapter.

Ironton.

The furnace is making about an average of 60 tons of iron per day.

The County Teachers' Association meets here on Friday evening next and all friends and patrons of schools should endeavor to be present.

The town clerk's office is now at the Ferry-house on Bedwin's dock. Mr. Miller has fixed it up and made snug quarters there and will always be glad to see his friends, or those having business, to chat and smoke a cigar with you, providing—you buy the cigar.

Mr. Purvis is improving his lot by plowing and leveling the ground in front and will put a woven wire fence in front.

We were in error last week in announcing the M. E. quarterly meeting which should have read the 28th and 29th of this month.

It makes us happy to clip the following from the Outlook, the Harbor Springs school paper: "Harbor Springs and Petoskey can no longer claim the honor of having the only graded schools in Emmet county. Prof. F. W. Howe has placed the Mackinaw City schools among the first rank by his efficient management." The Professor's friends here will be happy to learn of his success.

Little Mary Maroney took a tumble from one of the scows on Saturday. It was feared for a time she was seriously hurt, but she recovered and is all right.

Resolutions Adopted By Baxter Post G. A. R., May 9th, 1887.

WHEREAS, our comrade Josiah Gibson has answered his last roll call, and been mustered out, and discharged from all further duty by that dread general order that awaits us all; and

WHEREAS, the comrades of Baxter Post, in his muster out, recognize the sad fact that they have lost an honored and genial comrade, whose place in their ranks can never be filled; one who in the days that tried men's souls is said to have done his whole duty faithfully and well; one who in the neighborhood where he resided was respected for his many good qualities of heart and hand; one who was ever kind and affectionate as a husband, and loving and indulgent as a father. Therefore

Resolved, that out of respect to the memory of our deceased comrade, the charter and flag of our post be draped in mourning for the space of thirty days. That we turn out in a body and in a fitting manner pay our respect to the remains and memory of our deceased comrade. That we tender to the bereaved widow our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in this dark hour of deepest sorrow and sad bereavement, knowing full well how weak words are to heal a sorrowing heart. That a copy of the foregoing be made and presented to Mrs. Gibson; and that the editors of the Charlevoix SENTINEL and Journal be requested to give these resolutions publication.

EGBERT CARPENTER,
HENRY P. MILLER,
SAMUEL M. SEE,
Committee.

Attest:
C. B. GLASS, Adjutant.
E. H. GREEN,
Dated May 9th, '87. Commander.

The House of Representatives has passed the bill to appoint a State Marshal, whose duty it shall be to enforce the liquor law. Also a bill reincorporating the village of Petoskey.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

CLARION AND BEAR LAKE.

A Thriving Manufacturing Point, and the "Jumping-Off" Place for Fishermen.

At 8:30 Thursday morning last, we dropped off the south-bound train at Clarion, Charlevoix county, with three objects in view, viz: To see John E. Darrah in his native haunts, catch some game and fish depredators, and some—fish.

Darrah was the first man we met on the platform, and to him we surrendered ourself, and was conducted to the aforesaid haunts, pending arrangements for our transportation to Bear Lake.

Mr. Darrah was one of the first settlers in that part of the county, and his pleasant home, well cleared acres, and fat animals upon the hillsides, attest the fact that he has made good use of the time. His farm adjoins the village plat, and his residence occupies a promontory overlooking the village. He is completing a large new barn, and has about him all the conveniences which bespeak thrift and good management.

Clarion has about 200 inhabitants, and is beautifully situated; the undulating, wooded hills on the east rising one above the other, now in fresh foliage, presents a view that charms the eye.

Clarion ranks as a manufacturing town. The extensive establishment of Hood Bros. covers over a half-acre of ground, and uses over 100,000 feet of maple timber per month in the manufacture of broom handles, rolling pins, potato-mashers, and many other articles which come from the turning lathes. An ordinary saw-mill is attached, and common lumber can be made at the rate of 15,000 feet per day. They employ 35 men, and tell us they ship a car-load per day, and find a ready market for their goods. One feature of the factory is the use of many pieces of machinery which are the invention and manufacture of the Hood brothers.

Merrill & Son have a saw-mill at Clarion for the manufacture of straight lumber, and a considerable quantity of long pine timber is shipped from this point.

The town has four stores and a hotel, Mr. Hass, landlord. Wm. H. Ellis, the postmaster, is a very pleasant gentleman.

While we were gleaning the above information, Darrah's man had hitched up a spanking pair of blacks before a most comfortable buggy, and we were soon on the way to the north arm of Bear Lake.

We reached it at 10:30, and were introduced to Mr. Alexander Milne, a canny old Scotchman, who had been a Sergeant of police in Dundee. Ed. and the Fish Warden captured Alex. for the good of the service, and until the sun was sinking behind the woodland which rose between us and home, old uncle Alex. remained with us, taking us to the best spots; siding with us in our disputes with Darrah as to who caught the most fish and the best ones; baiting our hook and taking the fish therefrom; sounding the toesin of victory with us when we pulled in a ten-pound pickerel, and meantime, spinning yarns in his beautiful Scotch brogue. Mrs. Milne made us happy at noon-time, as we sat down to a repast in which the most temptingly fried black bass figured conspicuously, while uncle Alex. told us of his old home in the highlands.

Uncle Alex's is a favorite resort for fishermen. He has the best of boats, abundance of tackle, and always a supply of minnows. Clarion is the "stopping-off place," and with one of Darrah's rigs you can reach this beautiful spot in less than an hour from the time you put your foot upon the platform.

Mr. Darrah has commodious and comfortable rigs always ready, and the ride is a pleasant one.

With 28 pounds of the finest bass and pickerel, we returned to the train, "clean gone" on this fishing resort, after spending a day the most enjoyably of any for a decade.

Charlevoix people, resident or transient, can take the evening boat for Petoskey, stay with Joe Rowan at the Clifton, run down the six miles on the morning train, and return in the evening with more fish than you can carry, and take the morning boat back home.

Try it!

County Association.

The first meeting of the Charlevoix Teachers Association for the year 1887 will be held at Ironton, Friday evening, May 20th and Saturday, May 21st. The following subjects will be treated: "Technical Grammar," by A. B. Nicholas, of East Jordan; "Kindergarten Work," by Mrs. Pope, of Ironton; "Training to Attention," by Miss Nelson, of Charlevoix; and "How to Teach effects of Alcohol," by Miss Lewis, of Charlevoix. Miss Waterbury of Charlevoix, will give a reading in the evening. A query box will be opened and an opportunity thus offered to bring in any question of interest. Every teacher should propound a question. Let us make this meeting a success.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Josiah Gibson, of Hayes township, requests us to return her grateful thanks to the many kind neighbors and friends, and to the members of Baxter Post G. A. R., who have so thoughtfully and tenderly aided her in the sickness and burial of her husband; and she earnestly hopes that the same kindness may be extended to all in the hour of need.

Old papers for sale at this office.

A Proclamation.

To the members and all who may wish to become members of the Very Ancient and Most Honorable I. O. M. B., wherever they may be scattered throughout the earth, I make this, my 999,999th Annual Proclamation, and by the power in me vested, by virtue of my high and exalted office as master supreme of the Order throughout the Universe: I do hereby command you to assemble yourselves together in conclave at the rink on the evening of Friday, May 2th, at 7:30, for the purpose of making arrangements for the proper observance of that memorable day, July 4th. At the same time you will have to choose captains over tens, and captains over fifties; also some one of the most eminent to take the supreme control, as my time will expire on that night. In this conclave arrangements must be made to so display our great emblem Helios and those of our lesser lights, when the memorable day comes, as to reflect great credit on ourselves and our glorious Order throughout the Universe.

HANNIBAL ALEXANDER VON DONDERBERG.

Witness my Hand and Seal,
May 16, 1887.

Good washing machines for 10 cents at L. D. Bartholomew & Co's.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate court for said county, held at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City on the 13th day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Josiah Gibson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Elizabeth Gibson asking that an administrator be appointed for said estate; Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the 13th day of June next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs at law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are requested to appear at a session of court, then to be holden in the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

JAMES A. KEAT,
Judge of Probate.

(A true copy.)

POSITIVELY THE FINEST LINE OF

CLOTHING

AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS YOU EVER SAW IN CHARLEVOIX,

JUST RECEIVED FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Prices are unusually low this Spring and if you need anything in my line, just step in.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

A. T. WASHBURNE AND CO.

WE ARE PUSHING THINGS!

DRY GOODS, CARPETS,

DRY GOODS, CARPETS,

DRY GOODS. CARPETS.

ASTONISHING RESULT OF NEW GOODS AND LOW PRICES.

Bound to sell and not be undersold. Our goods are well bought and are just what the people want. NEW, NEW, NEW! Don't buy old goods when you can get new ones cheaper.

Come in and see for yourselves. We have got just what you need.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.
Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

LAST WEEK IN THE OLD STORE!

WE ARE SELLING ALL GOODS VERY CHEAP AND OFFERING MANY SPECIALLY GREAT BARGAINS.

Best Timothy Seed	- -	$2.25 pr bu
Best Medium Clover Seed	- -	$5.50 "
Best Millet Seed	- -	$1.25 "
Best Hungarian Grass Seed	-	$1.25 "
Best Manistee or Saginaw Salt		$1.00 a bbl.
Best Factory Filled Dairy Salt	-	75c pr bu

H. O. ROSE'S PETOSKEY LIME Imported and Domestic Cements, Calcined Plaster, Plastering Hair, etc., at Lowest Prices.

During the rebuilding of our store our Headquarters will be in the store of Fox & Miller,

Where we shall be pleased to see our friends and serve them,

J. L. HURD & CO.

HAVE REMOVED TO THE LEWIS BLOCK,

Give Me a Call in My New Store, Second door south of the Bridge.

ALLICK ROSENTHAL,

Successor to

S. ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Jno C Miller may21 8

VOL. XIX. NO.—4 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1887. WHOLE NO. 913

School Books!

SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!

---HEADQUARTERS---

For Everything needed in the School Room, at

HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.

You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

Respectfully,
F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

THE CHEAPEST!!

STOCKMAN AND IDDINGS

THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS

THESE SUPERB STOVES

UNEXCELLED IN FINISH AND INIMITABLE IN STYLE.

Detroit Stove Works

Stockman And Iddings

ARE OBTAINABLE ONLY THROUGH THE AUTHORIZED AGENTS OF THE DETROIT STOVE WORKS, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS,

THE NEWEST PATTERNS.

S & I

THE MOST DURABLE.

THE OLDEST Manufactur's

S & I

Be Sure and Buy One & B Happy.

The Best Groceries At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Wait A Minute!

WHY NOT TRADE AT

WILLSEE & CO'S

Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.

A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.

TELEPHONE Orders promptly delivered.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year - $1 50 | Six months - $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Circuit court is in session at Boyne City.

—Rev. Mr. Moore returned to his home in Sarnia to-day.

—Bert Mason has just received an elegant line of crockery.

—The street sprinkler is out again, and is doing good work.

The rebuilding of the Fox store building is nearly finished.

—Read the timely letter of Hon. E. B. Fairfield on our fourth page.

—Capt. Jepson of the steamer Clara Belle, will move his family to Boyne City soon.

—Mr. C. F. Gates and S. M. Moore of the Chicago resort, returned to Chicago, yesterday.

—Mrs. Buzzell left for her home in Port Clinton, O., Monday, accompanied by Mabel Green.

—The Charlevoix Knights Templar attend the funeral of Sir Knight Cole at Petoskey to-day.

—Ed Aldrich, clerk of the Park Place hotel, Traverse City, Sundayed with the parental circle.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. expect to reoccupy their store next week with an elegant stock of new goods.

—Mr. H. Lee Iddings returned from Albion Friday, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. Ada Iddings Gale.

—T. R. Chapin of Boyne City advertises 160 acres for sale in Marion township in his card on 6th page.

—Elk Rapids Progress: Charlevoix and Elk Rapids are going to be the two leading towns of this section.

—The new time cards of the steamers Joseph Gordon and North Star will be found on our fifth page.

—Stockman & Iddings will have something of interest to say next week to all wanting to buy paint this season.

—Rumor has it that Hines & Co are negotiating for a soda fountain and that they will have one running in a few weeks.

—Rain is needed badly—it "drizzles" a little occasionally—but what we need is a regular old "drencher" helped out by thunder and lightning.

—The ladies of the Baptist church will serve a ten cent lunch in the Maddaugh rooms on Decoration day. Ice cream and lemonade will also be served.

—Rev. A. T. Waterman, late of this place, was assistant moderator, of the Congregational Association at Lansing, last week. Congressman Cutcheon was the moderator.

—Jacob Weyburn has purchased of C. N. Shaw the machinery and right in a new process of laundry work and is doing a fine business in that line. The polish cannot be excelled.

We call especial attention to the improved quality of our inside pages this week. Among the new attractions is the column of Sunday School notes on the lesson for next Sabbath.

—W. A. Reynard has opened up a fruit store in the Lewis block. He will also carry a large line of vegetables, and has new potatoes and cabbages already in stock. See card elsewhere.

—Charlie Brown, the popular agent of the Chicago Newspaper Union, was invited to accompany the party that was lost on the yacht Coral Sunday, but arrived at the landing five minutes late.

—Henry Aldrich left Monday for Cadillac where he has accepted a situation in the grocery house of Fred S. Kildson. Henry will be missed on the Faxton. Will Franklin, formerly wheelsman, will now act as first mate.

—With a small party of gentlemen, on Thursday, we enjoyed a short excursion on Lake Michigan in Mr. Brown's beautiful family steam yacht, the "Beulah B." This fine little craft is of Beauvais' build, and is driven by one of Shipman's kerosene engines. She is speedy and staunch, and of exquisite model.

—Jos. Beauvais is winning an enviable reputation as a superior yacht builder. After visiting the largest yacht manufactory in the west, E. Shay, the well-known machinist of Bay Springs, gives Mr. Beauvais an order for a model for a 27 foot steel yacht to be propelled with one of Mr Shay's engines.

—Kalamazoo Telegraph: Walter W. Barton, senator from the 29th district, is one of the most level-headed men that they grow up in his part of the state. He is large in body and has heart and brains to correspond. He is a native of New York, coming to Michigan in 1858, and is now engaged in the drug business at Leland, Leelanaw county. He has been postmaster five years, justice of the peace eight years and twice supervisor of Leland. Mr. Barton is a staunch republican and was a representative in the legislature of 1881-82.

—Council meets to-morrow night.

—Crouter's soda fountain is again flowing its delicious drinks.

—There will be thirty-two cases before the Circuit court this term.

—M. E. Ladies' 10 cent lunch and ice cream at the SENTINEL building, Memorial Day.

—The Royce & Lansing Bell Ringers appear at Opera hall June 7th. They come highly recommended.

—Mrs. Geo. W. Miller and her two little daughters returned from Chicago Thursday, all in good health.

—Al Washburne & Co. present a new advertisement this week. Their summer opening begins next Friday.

—The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cruickshank, died on Thursday of last week, and was buried on Saturday, Rev. W. H. McCartney officiating. The funeral was very largely attended.

—Capt. J. Penfold and wife came up from Frankfort Thursday and removed their household effects back to that place—leaving here on the Lawrence Monday evening. The Capt. has by no means abandoned Charlevoix, but intends to return with the tug Hall next spring.

Hymeneal.

The marriage of Miss Minnie Lewis and Mr. Dar F. Meech occurred Wednesday evening, May 18th, at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. C. F. VanAuken, assisted by Rev. W. H. McCartney, performing the ceremony.

The ceremony was a private affair, only members of the two families and a few intimate friends being present. Misses Celia Nicholls and Flora Nelson acted as bridesmaids, while Messrs. Arthur Meech and Harry Nicholls officiated as groomsmen. The presents were unusually numerous and elegant.

During refreshments, the newly wedded pair were serenaded by the boys' band.

Mr. and Mrs. Meech are "At Home" to their friends at the residence of Hon. F. J. Meech.

Memorial Services.

HEADQUARTERS BAXTER POST, G. A. R. }
Charlevoix, Mich., May 21, 1887.
[Circular No. 7.]

I. In accordance with a unanimous vote of Baxter Post, G. A. R., at its last meeting, all members of said Post are hereby ordered to assemble at the Bridge Street House on Sunday, May 29, 1887, at ten o'clock a. m. sharp, for the purpose of attending Memorial services in a body at the M. E. church.

II. The committee on Memorial services have perfected the arrangements for a proper observance of Memorial Day and every soldier and sailor of the late war whether a member of our Post or not, is very cordially invited to join us at the Opera House next Monday at ten o'clock a. m., and aid in doing honor to the cause and to ourselves. By order of

C. B. GLASS, Adjutant. E. H. GREEN, Commander.

Marine Jottings.

The steamer Gazelle had the repairs on her boiler completed Monday, and left for her new route in the Straits.

The steamers Friant and Cummings, as a means of travel and transportation, are becoming more popular every day. They are fine boats, and well officered.

The propeller Van Raalte came in Monday and was partially hauled out at Campbell's ship yard to receive repairs to her stern-bearings. She left the same evening for Manistique.

The Tioga has made the run between Buffalo and Chicago in sixty-three hours and a half, beating record. She ran from the straits to Chicago, 315 miles, in twenty-two hours and twenty minutes. She is a steel propeller and not quite two years old.

The steamers Lawrence and Champlain, of the Northern Michigan line, will get on their schedule time this week. This popular line of steamers is in better shape than ever for the accommodation of the traveling public. Staunch and seaworthy, well officered and speedy, they just fill the bill. May they long remain afloat.

The propeller Faxton entered port yesterday on her way to the Straits the property of the Mackinaw Transportation Co., (the three combined railroad companies,) who purchased her Monday, for $13,000. She is to run between Mackinaw City and St. Ignace, in connection with the Algomah. Capt. Aldrich took her to the straits and turned her over to his successor.

The two-cents a mile railroad fare bill has passed the House.

On Saturday the thriving village of Lake Linden, in the Lake Superior country, was totally destroyed by fire, bringing misfortune to over 200 families, and entailing a loss of over $1,500,000. This presents another opportunity for the generous people of the state to give relief to the worthy and distressed.

Ex-Senator Charles E. Stuart of Kalamazoo, member of congress two terms and United States Senator one term, 1853-59, died on the 19th inst. He had been an invalid over 20 years. Michigan owes Mr. Stuart the passage of the act appropriating the land which constructed the Sault Ste. Marie canal. He was one of the most brilliant leaders of the democratic party in the days of Douglass.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

L. W. Cole and Four Others Drowned at Petoskey, Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon, the news came by telephone that Levi W. Cole, his eldest son, Fred, George Wise, Marion Tripp and young Stark, all of Petoskey, were drowned by the capsizing of the yacht Coral, in the bay, near Petoskey.

Later information revealed the fact that these, with five others, had gone out for a sail, and a sudden squall overturned the boat. They clung to her bottom some time, but supposing the heavy weight of iron with which she was ballasted would soon sink her, they took to the small yawl.

A swell soon filled her, so that they were compelled to take to the water and cling to the boat's gunwales. Young Tripp soon lost his hold and went down, clinging to the legs of the others until they were compelled to kick themselves loose. Mr. Cole, seeing that the boat would not keep them all afloat, called to his son to take his place, and he struck out to swim ashore, but when ten rods from the boat he went down. The air under his overcoat brought his body to the surface, and it was found floating soon after.

Two commercial travelers, named Freeman and Blount, were of the party. By the efforts of the former, the latter gentleman was saved. As one by one of the unfortunate ones let go their hold, these, with three others hung on until a sail-boat from Harbor Springs came to their rescue. Had they all remained with the yacht the chances are that all would have been saved, as she floated, and was afterwards taken in.

This sad event has cast a gloom over Petoskey such as it has never been called upon to experience before. Mr. Cole was one of its leading and most respected citizens. He was the leading druggist of the place, and was a genial companion and loyal friend. He was, at the time of his death, High Priest of Emmet Chapter of Royal Arch Masons; chief officer in the Council of Royal and Select Masters, and Generalissimo of Ivanhoe Commandery, Knights Templar. His son Fred, who went into eternity with his father, was his assistant in the store, and was his type—honorable and generous hearted.

Young Wise was well known here, having been in the employ of the SENTINEL for some time two years ago. He, as well as the other two young gentlemen, were exemplary youths, and had many friends. At last accounts, the body of Mr. Cole was the only one found.

He is to be buried this afternoon with Knight Templar and Masonic honors.

Ironton.

Jacob Vandusen of Norwood, was in town over Sunday.

The Teachers' Association though thinly attended did not lack in interest.

Harry Coblentz has been in the Upper Peninsula for a while, but is again among his friends at home.

The H. H. Society met with Miss Daisy Allen on Wednesday night and adjourned until September.

The tug Bob Stephenson has changed countenance so as to be scarcely recognized. She looks younger however. Capt. Bennett of Traverse City, has the wheel this year and Wm. Marshall of the same place, the bells.

Mrs. G. McDonald's sister from Forest, Canada, is visiting with her.

Rev. W. H. Moore, of Sarnia, preached to a full house in the M. E church on Thursday evening last. Elder Moore used to climb trees and play marbles with ye scribe, and now proclaims the Word with as much zeal.

Ore is unloaded with wheel-barrows until the new train is ready.

John Frenz circulated among his friends here last week.

Among the teachers attending the Association were the Misses Garner and Crane of the Boyne City schools accompanied by friends, also the whole corps of Charlevoix teachers who seemed to be much enamored with our town. Boyne City people went away laden with relics—we call them cinders.

Hazings from Hayes.

Geo. Saunby raised his new barn last Friday.——Alex. Ross has purchased a three-spring wagon.——E. H. Burgess has his shingle-mill almost completed.——R. H. Bennett lost a valuable cow a few days since. ——The feet of the musquitoes and black flies are red hot.——The meadows and wheat fields begin to feel the drouth.——F. J. Smith lost his barn, fences and some furniture by fire.——O. T. Booth will put up a wind pump on his farm.——Miss Maud Scott was at home on a visit over Sunday. ——Jack Saunby shipped a cargo each of ties and wood last week.——Dr. Lewis, of Charlevoix, owns one of the finest farms in Hayes.——Delos Compton is building a dwelling on his farm.——Miss Lizzie Watson is teaching the Undine school.——Wm. McNally received 72½ cents for potatoes. —Isaiah Austin's corn is up about three inches high.——Wm. Schneider has purchased the John Macy lot.—— The Adventists performed the right of baptism last Saturday.——A. S. Norman has purchased one half of A. Ross' farm.—— A. W. Chew and F. J. Smith are members of the Board of Review.——J. A. Hacot will occupy his new house in a few days.

New Goods! New Goods! New Goods! at Allick Rosenthal's store.

THE COTTAGE IN THE LANE

BY WILLIAM H. PATTEN.

Deserted it stands at the foot of the lane,
[illegible] the orchard, lonely and drear,
[illegible]
[illegible] to pieces, year after year.
Gone are the days when the little brown cot
Shelter gave those now dead and forgot.

Whispers the wind that sweeps neath the eaves,
Calling and sobbing when dark is the night,
[illegible]
[illegible]
Resting in graves at the foot of the hill,
Freed from the cares of this life and its pain.

Summers pass by, and winter snows fade,
Stands the old cottage in the dreary, bare lane,
Lonely it looks in the sunshine or shade,
Sadly appears in the soft-falling rain;
Red is the sunlight of sunset that falls,
Touching the windows and faded brown walls.

Laughter no more is heard in the lane—
Silent the voices of children, so sweet;
Never we'll hear them—no, never again,
Dear lives often end far from complete!
Gone are the days when the little brown cot
Shelter gave those who are dead and forgot!

LILLIE EDDLES;

—OR,—

ABDUCTED BY THE BUSH-WHACKERS.

A Story of the War in the Southwest.

BY ARVIDE O. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

The war was an extremely severe strain on the people of the South, especially those situated along the southern border of Mason and Dixon's line. It would not have seemed so severe if it had not been for the suffering of the innocent. Men precipitate war, and should be the ones to assume war's duties and pay all its penalties; but alas! they do not. Many poor women, with small children, have had to resort to that sort of food that an animal would disdain to eat, in order to sustain life in that country.

Bushwhackers, guerrillas, jayhawkers and [illegible] around the large open fire-place that threw its cheerful light over the group and made it very pleasant on this chilly March evening. Questions were eagerly asked and answered for a time, but the two ladies, with their natural shrewdness and insight, saw that there was something hanging heavily on John's mind, and that while he seemed cheerful he was far from feeling so.

[illegible]

"There is something the matter, John. Are you unwell, dear son?" asked the fond mother, reaching forward and lovingly stroking his curly hair.

"Mother," John slowly replied, and he held his head low, "we are on the brink of a terrible war. It may not last long; I hope it will not, but if it does, it is going to be terrible. That brought me home."

"But how will that affect us? We will have nothing to do with it."

"Why, mother, they are now organizing bands of soldiers all over the country almost at our own door. The danger of losing life and property, in case of war, is very great."

And John arose and thoughtfully paced the floor.

"In May the convention will meet, and if our State secedes, which I believe it is determined to do," John went on to say, "the United States will send troops here, and fighting is likely to take place even on our own plantation."

"No, no; the people of Arkansas cannot be so rash as to bring war into their own borders," Mrs. Eddles replied, "for it would be rash and suicidal for them to do so, and they must know that they would suffer by the act. No, it cannot, cannot be."

"I do not wish to frighten you, mother; but the country is greatly agitated, and war is unavoidable. The South has gone too far."

"What had we best do, my son?"

"I am not decided on what will be best, but I could not remain away from you, knowing the excited condition of the people. Perhaps it would be better for you and Lillie to go North to our relatives, and remain there until all danger is past. I will remain here and see to the property."

"Mother may go, but I never will while you remain here," said Lillie.

She had been an attentive listener until now. Her pearly teeth were closed, and a firmness settled around the delicate mouth as she spoke.

"We never should run from an imaginary danger. We will all remain here until there is evidence of trouble," the brave mother replied, and the children quietly acquiesced, although the better informed mind of John Eddles convinced him that there were reasons for fear.

As the spring passed away and summer came, it was observed that there was an unusual increase of lawlessness.

The convention had met as arranged and the act of secession was passed.

The citizens that were opposed to the act did what little they could to prevent any [illegible]

[illegible]

anything to me you can say it here," she replied.

"But this is on business of some moment and interest to you."

"Very well, then, be brief." And Lillie led young Woodsley into the parlor.

"Lillie," he broke out abruptly as he clasped her hands, "you must know that I love you! yes, that I adore you! O, have you not a little love for me in return?"

"I can never love you, Mr. Woodsley," she replied, "but you will command my respect and friendship so long as you conduct yourself as a gentleman should."

"These are unsettled times, Miss Lillie, and you must have some one to take an interest in your welfare—some one to protect you. I love you, may I not be your protector?"

"We have a protector," Lillie loftily replied.

"John, you mean, of course?"

"Yes."

"But you do not understand."

"Understand what?" she asked.

"That John is a tr——," but before he could finish the word "traitor" one delicate finger was pointed at him like the barrel of a pistol, and with equal effect.

"Don't you dare say that of John, you scoundrel!" and her eyes flashed as she spoke.

"What! do you call me scoundrel?" he demanded, doing his utmost to control his temper, which still showed by facial contortions.

"I call anyone a scoundrel that dare to say our John is a traitor."

"I mean that he was a Unionist, and against the South, if that pleases you better."

"He is not against the South, sir," Lillie angrily answered.

"Well, he is not with us, and you know that 'he who is not with us is against us.'"

"Neither am I with anyone who is wicked enough to break up our Government; but I do not wish to talk more of this matter. We are having trouble enough now." And she arose to go.

"Lillie, Lillie Eddles, will you not say that I may hope; that I can some time call you 'wife,' and thus have a protecting claim over you? I can be of great help in these troublesome times to all your family, if you will only bid me hope."

"No, Mr. Woodsley, I do not wish to marry; and if I did it would be by different wooing than this." And Lillie advanced toward the door.

Edom Woodsley stepped suddenly before her and grasped her arm with such force that it made her cry out with pain. "I must, and will know——" But before he could finish the sentence a blow laid him quivering on the floor. A pleasant-faced, plainly attired young man stood over the prostrate form and prevented the half-fainting girl from falling, and conducted her gently to a seat.

The stunned man only remained in that [illegible]

[illegible]

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

SHOT AND SHELL.

Old Veterans' Reminiscences of the War of the Rebellion.

Embracing Anecdotes of Actual Experience and Colloquial Acquisition.

Voices of the Rivers.

BY A VETERAN.

Where the Mississippi's flow
Sweeps down to the Gulf below,
Echoes seem to dwell and grow.

Voices of tumultuous strife
With a demon discord rife,
Battling for the nation's life.

Shadowy iron ships patrol,
Flying, taking iron toll,
And the heights with thunders roll.

Fair Potomac! Every wave
Whispers of a patriot grave
By the shores thy waters lave.

[illegible] Shenandoah comes
With the far off sound of drums,
Faintly now the battle hums!

Farther southward, see the James
Fiercely wrapped in warlike flames,
Echoing dead heroes' names.

Rappahannock! While thy tide
Rolls to hoarse Atlantic's side,
Murmur of the brave who died!

Requiem for the gallant dead
In the years that long have fled,
Sings the wandering, winding Red.

Sweet their warrior rest shall be,
Now from toil and strife set free,
Choruses the Tennessee.

Rivers, running to the main,
Praise them—they in death and pain
Saved the land and broke the chain!

Bob Ingersoll Taken Prisoner.

An old soldier relates the following very interesting incident of the event of taking Bob Ingersoll prisoner, and how he entertained the Confederate soldiers during his brief existence as a war prisoner:

"I served in Colonel Bob Ingersoll's command, and whenever I want to have a good laugh I recall in my mind the incidents connected with his capture in Tennessee. I have seen somewhere a cruel paragraph to the effect that the Colonel surrendered very willingly, and I want to brand that falsehood for just what it is. A bracer man I never saw in five years of service. We were scattered over a good deal of territory surrounding a village at the time the Colonel was taken in and cared for by the Johnnies. We were in a skirmish at the time, and the Colonel was trying to get to a demoralized wing of his command. As he was passing through a series of cattle pens he was surrounded by a lot of Confederates and commanded to surrender, but he didn't do it worth a cent. He kept right on, running at breakneck speed. He was not so stout then as now, and as a pedestrian he was no slouch. The bullets were flying about him as thick as hail. If he could get to another branch of his command he felt that he could rally the boys and win the fight. A number of his men saw that he was in imminent peril, and that if he didn't [illegible] cidly and then would receive a shower of canister. We made it lively while it lasted. In the meantime, General Chilton, General Lee's Chief of Staff, made his way to me and asked, 'Where are the troops you are holding your line with?' I pointed to my two pieces and to Cooke's regiment, and replied, 'There they are, but that regiment hasn't a cartridge.'

[illegible]

"Chilton's eyes popped as though they would come out of his head, he struck spurs to his horse and away he went to General Lee. I suppose he made some remarkable report, although I did not see General Lee again until night. After a little a shot came across the Federal front, plowing the ground in a parallel line. Another and another, each nearer and nearer their line. This was from a battery of D. H. Hill's line.

"This enfilade fire, so distressing to soldiers, soon bent back the attacking column."

General Pemberton.

General John C. Pemberton was one among the active Confederate officers, and was a prominent figure in the campaigns of the Southwest, notably the siege of Vicksburg.

General Pemberton was born in Philadelphia in 1817. He graduated at West Point in 1837, and became First Lieutenant of artillery in 1842. He was aid-de-camp to General Worth during the Mexican war, being brevetted Captain for gallantry at the battle of Monterey, in 1846, and Major for distinguished services at the battle of Molino del Rey, in 1847.

General Pemberton also distinguished himself at Contreras and Churubusco, and also at the capture of the City of Mexico, where he was wounded.

He entered the Confederate service as a Colonel of cavalry, and was appointed Assistant Adjutant General to General Joseph E. Johnson. In 1862 he was made a Brigadier General, and in the latter part of the same year a Lieutenant General, and given command of the Army of the Northern Mississippi.

He was at the head of the Confederate forces in the battles preceding the siege of Vicksburg. His forces were defeated at Champion Hill, May 16, 1863, and at Big Black River the following day, and was shut up in Vicksburg.

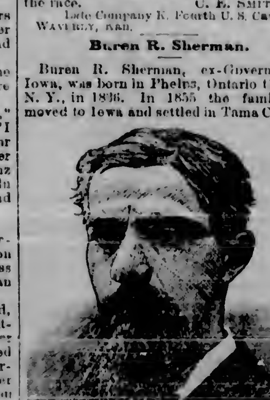
General Grant was the commander on the Federal side.

After a regular siege General Pemberton surrendered July 4, 1863.

[illegible]



[illegible]

regions, and they retired back as their predecessors had done.

Seeing them return, the Tennesseeans rose and yelled, "Make way here, and let Mississippi out!"

Cavalry Horse Racing.

While we were camped at Paint Rock, Ala., we had fun racing, both for fun and for money. I have known as high as five hundred, and even more than that, to be staked on a race of a half mile, and the excitement would run as high as at any of the great horse fairs, for we had some as good stock as the country would afford, for Uncle Sam never bought any but the best.

There was a man in my company, K, Fourth United States Cavalry, by the name of W. H. Jarnagan, and he and myself went out to what was known as Bell's factory, about six miles from camp, to see the girls that worked in the factory, and also on a sort of foraging expedition. While we were gone there came a good shower of rain, and made the thin mud about two inches deep in the road all the way to camp. Well, when we got our visit out we started for camp, feeling good and in good spirits.

Well, to return to the horse-race. We started for camp in good order, and when we got within about a half mile of camp we struck a level piece of road where we had been in the habit of trying the speed of our horses, and there we concluded to have a little fun of our own, and no one any the wiser of it. So we got in position and Jarnagan gave the word "Go!" and away we went, pell mell down the track, it being agreed before starting that the last man into camp had to pay for a can of oysters, twenty-five cents' worth of crackers, a pound of butter (that article being worth seventy-five cents), and a quarter's worth of cigars, all amounting to two dollars. So you see it was enough to make a fellow try the mettle of his trusted steed.

Away we went, and the way the mud flew was a caution. It went as high as the cedar trees along the road. My horse being a little the quickest to start, of course I got the road in front of Jarnagan, and his horse, being a well-trained cavalry horse, of course followed his file leader and kept within about twenty feet of my horse's heels. Jarnagan tried to pull him out of the track, but could make no impression on "Old Dun," as he was called, that being his color. He was bound to follow in the wake of my horse.

Jarnagan jerked on the bridle-rein, but that had no impression on Old Dun, and so he thought he would spur him up and run by, but he could not do that; and at last he began to swear, first at Old Dun and then at me—first because he couldn't stop Old Dun, and next because he couldn't outrun my horse, so as to let him out of the shower of mud that my horse was throwing at least twenty feet high; and at last at me for not stopping. But I had no notion of stopping and letting him beat me to the camp, and having to pay for the oysters.

I looked around and saw him, and if ever I was pleased it was then, for there he came right through that shower of mud, and a worse-looking person I never saw in my life, for he was covered with mud till he looked as if he had been on a drunk and rolled in the gutter for a week. And such winking and blinking I never saw. He couldn't see for the mud. Then I got to [illegible]

[illegible]

The Paris Stock-Exchange.

Edward King describes, in the Cosmopolitan, one of the most interesting institutions of Paris, as follows:

If the peaceable daughters of Heaven, who once wandered through the pretty arcades of the Convent of the Daughters of St. Thomas d'Aquinas, could have foreseen that the site of their nunnery was to be occupied by one of the great temples of commerce, and was to become a rendezvous for the most excitable commercial class in Christendom, they would have felt some slight perturbation in their innocent breasts.

The Paris bourse, or exchange, the building of which was decided by an imperial decree dated March 16, 1808, was erected almost in the exact center of the French capital, on a part of the grounds that, up to 1790, had been occupied by the above-mentioned convent. Napoleon, with his magnificent eye to business, saw that this was the exact spot for the daily meetings of all classes of commercial people, and so he fulminated one of his decrees. The State gave the site, the city of Paris paid down the money for the expenses of building, and the old architect Brongniart furnished the plans for the edifice on the model of a pagan temple. He had spent a little more than 8,000,000 francs when, in 1813, death carried him off, and his successor, M. Labarre, continued the work until 1827. The edifice was dedicated on the 3d of November, 1836.

Surrounded by its majestic Corinthian columns, fourteen upon each of the fronts and twenty upon either side, the bourse of Paris is, perhaps, one of the most important edifices of the capital. Decorated with costly statues of Justice, Fortune, Abundance, and Prudence, it is a veritable "monument" in the European sense. Its interior is exceedingly simple. The central hall, reserved for the operations on 'change, can hold about 2,000 persons on the ground floor. A spacious gallery, extending entirely round this hall, enables the populace of Paris and the strangers to observe the mad antics of the speculators—antics that are as ridiculous and remarkable as those on the New York stock-exchange. All the French volubility and capacity for gesture are here intensified a thousand-fold.

Evaporation of Water.

It is an almost universal practice to have a vessel of water attached to furnaces and stoves for the purpose of moistening the air of rooms heated by them. The common notion that the aqueous vapor purifies the air in any way is, of course, absurd; but the possibility that it may render the air heated by the furnace more healthful and easier to breathe may be worthy of consideration.

The following calculation, based upon [illegible]

[illegible]

"THE SILENT PARTNER."

A Lesson to Men About Their Wives—What a Good Wife Really Is.

[Detroit Journal.]

In many a firm, with only a single name or even with a double name, there is a silent partner. He lends his capital or his credit; he gives the council of long business experience, but he never appears to the public except in a modest notice of the copartnership or under the uninforming name of "company." These mercantile partnerships are not the only associations where there is a silent partner. They are frequently formed in youth and formed for life. A magnificent structure of fame, of renown, even of wealth, may be erected, and the success achieved be wholly attributed to the name on the sign which the world can read; to the active, bustling member of the firm who is always at the front of the establishment; who sells its wares, who comes in contact with the people; who is associated with every enterprise and applauded for every great stroke that it makes. But back of it all stands the silent partner.

In the splendid life work accomplished by Beecher, he is now in the literal sense of the words the silent partner. But up to his death the brave, quiet, steadfast woman on whom all eyes are now turned, was for fifty years the silent partner of the concern. How much of its success was due to her, it is impossible to compute. From what blunders and errors her good sense and less impulsive nature may have saved him can only be guessed by counting those which, in spite of her restraint, his impulsive nature succeeded in perpetrating. But more than that probably he owes a large measure of his achievement to her thousand thoughtful attentions and cares; his health to her skillful feeding of him; his leisure for work to her making herself disliked and censured by standing between him and the public, who are always flocking about a famous man and eating away his time; to her strong, sensible temper, which more than once strengthened his own judgment and protected his masculine vanity from the fumes of flattery, which ascends as an acceptable offering to the hero and demigod which many delight in making of distinguished and popular men.

They often have a hard time of it—these silent partners, trying to keep up with their dashing companions. They are the serviceable vehicle that has to follow the spiritual animal wherever it goes, bounding over the rough places in life, jumping out of the beaten paths, shying and running and galloping away with many a snort of impatience, perhaps, at the lumbering, hampering attachment from which it cannot get free. But it is the proud steeds' salvation, notwithstanding. It keeps them straight, it makes them useful.

These silent partners are in these modern times becoming more and better known. They are the "mascots" of many a great man, are so recognized. Mrs. Disraeli, Mrs. Gladstone, Mrs. Carlyle, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Logan, and Mrs. Hendricks are only a few of this gracious and beneficent sisterhood to whom the world owes more than can be reckoned, for what it is accustomed to credit to the active, ostentatious and prominent personages of those happy partnerships.

Private life as well as public life abounds with them. In many a home there goes forth to the counting-house, the lawyer's office, the pulpit, the judge's court, the hundreds of occupations, an influence of not only love and devotion, but of affection seasoned and toned by the strong, wholesome common sense, the worldly shrewdness, the foresight and insight, the corrective judgment and the deserved admonition of "the silent partner."

Long Life and Heredity.

One inherits from his ancestors, near or remote, more or less modified by the blending of the male and female lines, not only complexion, features, form, size, intellect, disposition, etc., but the tendencies to particular ailments, and even the germs of positive disease.

Consumption can be traced along in some family lines for many generations, while in others it is almost unknown. So, too, asthma, gout, rheumatism, apoplexy, constantly reappear in some lines, while they are unknown in others. We should expect, therefore, beforehand that heredity would have much to do with the question of longevity, and it is a matter of common observation that it does.

Life insurance companies recognize the fact. Still it has not had the full scientific consideration that it should have, and doubtless will have in time. Meanwhile, it is desirable to accumulate facts.

Says the London Lancet, "It would be interesting to study more closely, in the case of centenarians and other aged people, the ages of their near relatives and immediate ancestors." Of Sir Moses Montefiore, who passed his hundredth year, it says, "One parent died at 79, one at 83, his grandfather at 87, his grandmother at 93, a brother at 75, another at 69, a sister at 84, another at 79, another at 82. Those nine ages at death give an average longevity of 81 years. The first four—those of the parents and grandparents of Sir Moses give an average of eighty-five years."

A long-lived ancestry, however, does not insure longevity, for many in such a line fail of reaching advanced age. Indeed, vigor of constitution often leads to suicidal violations of physical law. It is therefore a matter of congratulation if one has inherited the long-lived tendency, but the rich gift should be well guarded, for physical vigor is apt to render one thoughtless of the little things that sap the foundations of the grandest constitutions.

Let him, also, who has inherited but a poor patrimony of health remember that, after all, there is nothing like taking good care of one-self. By obedience to the laws of health, he may reverse the hereditary tendency.—Youth's Companion.

Caravansaries in India.

Many years ago traveling in India was anything but pleasant, as hotels or other places of entertainment for man and beast were seldom met with. On this account the Government put up buildings for the accommodation of Europeans at many places, and called them dawk bungalows, the Indian name for post-houses. To-day hotels can be found in any important town in India, but the dawk bungalow still remains, being conducted in the same manner as originally. An agent, appointed by the ruling authority of the district, manages the establishment, and is held responsible by the appointing power. Any traveler can stop at a dawk bungalow if there is room for him. The [illegible]

No guest can retain a room longer than twenty-four hours if it is needed for a new arrival. The charge for the occupancy of the room is one rupee (about 36 cents) a day, and guests can have meals or not, as they please, and if they have them, at such hours as they please. A printed card in each room gives the rules regulating the establishment, and a Government scale of prices for food, wines, etc. On departing from one of these places guests are expected to enter the length of stay, amount charged, and their impression of the place. A dawk bungalow differs from a hotel in allowing guests a greater amount of freedom in regard to time of meals. Both places have about four servants to wait on each guest, all of whom expect a gratuity when the guest leaves. The morning after our arrival I was aroused by a Mohammedan servant who brought me my chota hazeree (little breakfast) of tea and toast. Prior to this the sweeper, the lowest caste of the Hindoos, had cleaned out my bath-room, and a Hindoo water-carrier had prepared my bath from goat skins filled with water. Each one of these servants had his own particular work, and religious and caste prejudices would not permit either to do the work of the others.

Jealousy.

The old adage that "jealousy is as cruel as the grave," is, to my way of thinking, wrongly put, for were the grave one half as cruel as this taunting fiend, no one would desire, with the longing which at some time or other in life comes to poor jaded humanity, to fly to its sheltering arms for rest.

Were I asked to diagnose this passion, it would be as the chill of despair, the sting of envy, the fire of lunacy, and claim for it precedence in the celebrated box presented by Jupiter to Pandora, but with hope left out. I would call it a monster greater than the python of old, for where is the hand that can stay its ravages when once its hydra head is lifted? Step by step it makes progress to the verge of the maelstrom where lie so many wrecked barques which started on life's journey with such fair freight of hopes and promises; withering the freshness of the heart and narrowing the judgment, it makes a pandemonium of home and happiness; like the swallow, goes and comes then finally takes a farewell flight.

Not the least contemptible phase of this many-sided evil—and often displayed when least expected—is that which makes one envious of another's personal influence or position. If the hitherto dearest friend of such a person is unfortunate enough to arouse this antagonistic feeling, he or she will not hesitate to resort to the meanest subterfuges and innuendoes; especially is this the case where the offending party has the least claim to good looks or fascinating manners. At once they become the target for invidious remarks, and branded by their suspicious natures as designing; everything to them is tinged with a lurid light. With such persons friendship counts for nothing, for the slime of the serpent is trailed over all the hitherto pleasant relations. Envy and doubt are allowed to creep in and blind the eyes to true merit and motives. Sacred confidences are laid bare and put to such base uses as would cause friendship to veil her face in shame and make the very name a by word.

No one who studies the vagaries of this passion and notes its influence on various temperaments, but has abundant food for moralizing over the strange and often ridiculous amusements—like wine it seems to bring out the idiosyncracies of character and runs the entire gamut of feeling. Caused after all by that "spasm of the heart" so graphically described in Chesbro's Victoria.

I have seen persons under the influence of this emotion do the most unnatural things; love, fatal consequences, pride, the one thing only that holds many a strong nature in check, are swept away by its mighty power.

Lives are wrecked, reputations blasted, and tragedies enacted through this insane passion that fills our lunatic asylums and prison cells with its victims. I doubt if Heaven's shining messengers stood with flaming sword at the portals of this monster's keep they would have power to stay its course, for with the strength of the attachment comes the intensity of the fever that consumes.

I believe that jealousy is one of the component parts of all human nature. A latent germ, perhaps, in many who are unconscious that the least taint lurks within their veins until some circumstance forces it to the surface, and they are suddenly awakened to the fact that there is a slumbering volcano in their breasts, ready to throw out the deadly lava which withers everything it touches.—Mary V. Stiles, in St. Louis Magazine.

The Lime-Kiln Club.

"De case of Brudder James Warren, of Miner Hill, Tenn., will be fust tooken up," said Brother Gardner as he opened the meeting and winked to Elder Toots to push another empty herring box into the stove. "Brudder Warren claims dat he am bewitched, an' he has written to dis club to ask it to do sunthin' to drive de evil sperrits away. It has got to sich a pass dat de witches take his ole mule outer de ba'n at night an' ride him all ober de kentry, an' Brudder Warren feels sperrit hands passin' ober his face an' pullin' his h'ar o' nights. Dis club will do sunthin' fur him. If he war a local member we'd cure him in about ten minits. As he am an honorary, an' fur away, we shall cross his names off de books an' send him offishul notis dat he am a lunnetick man.

"I hev repeatedly referred to dis matter of superstishun, an' if members can't be enlightened dey kin be fired out. De day of ghosts, hobgoblins an' witches has passed away, an' de cull'd man who can't belive it has no bizness in dis club. Mebbe dar' was a time when witches went chasin' 'round de kentry on an ole raw-boned mule, scarin' people half to death an' leavin' a trail of fish an' smoke, but things hev changed. De wedder hain't right fur 'em now, an' de purleece giv 'em de collar an' send 'em to de work-house.

"Mebbe sperrit hands hev bin laid on Brudder Warren, but I doubt it. I guess Tennessee whisky had a good deal to do wid it. All o' you just listen to me when I say dat de fust complaint of sperrit hands in Detroit will be followed by a scene to make somebody's heart ache! Be keerful how unknown hands pull yer ha'r. De member of dis club who sees a witch had better keep powerful quiet about it or he'll be turned ober to de Kickin' Committee to be dealt wid. De Seckretary will write to Brudder Warren dat we hev dun sunthin' fur him, an' notify our branches at Chattanooga an' Knoxville dat he has been fired."—Detroit Free Press.

GEN. SHERIDAN OUTWITTED.

Why His Portrait Did Not Go West to Grow Up with the Country.

[Pittsburgh Times.]

It seems that some artist about three or four years ago painted a portrait of Gen. Sheridan that proved a dismal failure, but nevertheless was hung in the General's private office and there continued to hang until it became so familiar as to cease to cause comment. Finally, after the portrait had been hanging there for two or three years, a request came from a G. A. R. Post in Ohio for a picture of the hero of Winchester with which to adorn the walls of their rooms. The General was meditating as to how he could fill this request, when his eye lit upon the caricature of himself that hung upon the wall.

"The very thing!" sprung into his mind, and, as it is well known, with him to think is to act, he straightway tapped his bell and bade his orderly take down the picture and box it ready for shipment. That night at dinner he informed Mrs. Sheridan of the request from the Ohio post and the manner in which he intended complying with it.

"Oh, Philip," said Mrs. Sheridan, "not that horrible thing that has been hanging on your office wall for the past year or so?"

"The very same," responded the General.

"But, Philip, if you send this picture out it will be placed prominently on the wall and labeled as a present from you, and that awful daub will go down to posterity as a likeness of yourself and some future day will turn up, to the unspeakable horror of your children and friends, as a perfect likeness of how you looked when in your prime."

Then followed a stormy scene, Mrs. Sheridan arguing that the picture should not be sent, and the General taking the side that he must, in some way, comply with the request, and, as he had nothing else to send, this picture should go. The argument waxed hotter and hotter, until finally Gen. Sheridan got up and marched to the door, and, having reached that strategic point, turned and said:

"Mrs. Sheridan, that picture shall go. Now let neither of us ever mention its existence again."

Having said this, he left the room before Mrs. Sheridan had time to say a word in reply.

But he little knew his wife's pluck; for early the next morning, before any one was up, she went down to his office and surprised the orderly in the very act of boxing the picture.

"Is there any paint or varnish here that will stick and not wash off?" she sweetly asked.

"Yes, madam," answered the unsuspecting soldier.

"Bring it to me, please," said Mrs. Sheridan.

The orderly fetched some black paint from the outer office and gave it to Mrs. Sheridan. Then she, deliberately turning the unlucky painting over upon its back, brushed every semblance of a picture from off the canvas, only leaving a dim vista of black paint.

"Oh, do stay here until the General comes," was all the wretched orderly could gasp as he saw this surprising proceeding. But he had no need of this request, for hardly were the words out of his mouth before Sheridan's light step was heard in the outer office, and in an instant his stout figure darkened the door. His quick eye in a second took in the state of affairs, and turning red in the face, he said:

"Mrs. Sheridan, what does this pro——"

"Stop, Philip," said she; "last night you made the request that neither of us should ever mention this again," pointing to what remained of the picture. "Do not you be the first to break this request," and without another word she swept out of the office, leaving little Phil absolutely rooted to the floor.

It is, perhaps, needless to add that that picture has been a dead letter in the Sheridan household from that day to this, and bids fair to remain so.

The Sense of Humor.

There is somewhere in George Eliot a remark to the effect that a dissimilar taste in jokes is a great strain upon affection, and innumerable families might serve as melancholy instances of the truth of the observation. Many a marriage has come to an unhappy ending from the lack of a sense of humor to serve as a lubricating oil to the wheels of daily life. There was a profound practical wisdom in the advice given by a shrewd and worldly-wise old woman to her granddaughter on the latter's wedding day: "Feed your husband well and learn how to amuse him;" and it is safe to say that if the bride succeeded in filling those two injunctions her married life moved on with smoothness and happiness. Somebody has described humor as the sixth sense, and certainly the unfortunate mortal who lacks this is deprived of as large a part of the pleasure of life as a man who has lost one of the five which are reckoned the rightful inheritance of all humanity. It is true that a majority of mankind are more or less lacking in this respect, and that a genuine and delicate appreciation of humor is rarer even than a musical ear; yet it is fortunately true that in most of us exist the rudiments which may be cultivated into a very respectable capability of enjoying the ludicrous. Only one man in a thousand can compass a philosophical superiority which shall enable him to regard the accidents of life with undisturbed equanimity; but if one can cultivate the habit of discovering in all things a subject for laughter or for smiles, there are few lots which may not be very comfortably endured. Upon him who persistently smiles at fate, she is very apt to bestow the opportunity of smiling with her. The sense of humor, moreover, serves as a common meeting-ground for natures which without it must forever remain separate. It is the password to a secret brotherhood in which the good-fellowship is perfect. Those who possess it are never strangers after occasion has brought a recognition of this powerful bond of sympathy. No matter how diverse the tastes, the circumstances, the ambitions, the sixth sense makes of one race all who are endowed with it, and the fact that the exquisite delight they enjoy must forever remain a mystery to ordinary mortals increases the strength of the bond that unites them. A comforter in sorrow and misfortune, a lightener of life's burdens, a quality that heightens joy and lightens misery, there are few human qualities so well worth cultivation as a sense of humor; and there is no other which does so much to render its possessor pleasant to live with or so much aids him to avoid the sharp corners and no- [illegible]

Seemingly Eradicated

With repeated and powerful doses of quinine, chills and fever, in some one of its various forms, springs into active existence again, often without the slightest apparent provocation. To extinguish the smoldering embers of this obstinate and recondite malady, no less than to subdue it when it rages fiercely in the system, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is all sufficient. When every resource of the pharmacopœia has been exhausted against it in vain, the Bitters conquer it, will remove every lingering vestige of it. Nay more, the Bitters will protect those brought within the influence of the atmospheric poison that begets malarial disease, from its attacks. Disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are among the complaints to be apprehended from the use of miasma tainted water. These are both cured and prevented by the Bitters. Rheumatism, constipation and renal complaints yield to its action.

The Accident Insurance Craze.

Accident insurance has made a steady, running growth during the present year, and seems to be a popular craze. I know of canvassers who are taking in as high as twenty policies a day. All railroad men are going into it, and I find the workingmen following. Men who can carry regular insurance on their lives only take accident policies when going on journeys, but poor men, who cannot afford regular premiums want some guarantee of support if disabled. Speaking about insurance, this branch of insurance has gone into many peculiar ramifications. Did you know that railroads insure more than other corporations?

Railroad cars are all insured, and the companies figure very close—so close that there is not much profit in it, the only inducement being the large amount that can be taken, owing to the small quantity of property that can be destroyed at one time. Then there are tornado policies that have a large area of country to cover. When a cyclone strikes a district, the company's agents catch all the farmers. There are also tornado companies, which insure against loss by wind. There used to be live-stock companies, but several of them failed so easily that the others lost confidence. It was easy enough to insure an animal, but it was not so easy to identify a dead beef or sheep as the same one insured. Then you can get window plate glass insured—well, I may say, anything of any value.—Globe-Democrat.

AT Bieber, Lassen County, Cal., resides Mr. Thomas P. Ford, who writes: "I can truthfully say I have used St. Jacobs Oil in my family for years, and find it a never failing remedy for all painful complaints."

Arab and Persian Horses.

The general run of Arabs are no doubt first-rate horses, as far as they go, for military purposes, but they are too small to mount satisfactorily any but native cavalry. There are, of course, exceptional animals, which have size and power enough for anything, but they are so few that they may be left out of the general estimate which we take of the race. For any soldier whose weight is such that he can be mounted on an Arab he will be found the hardiest, soundest, and most docile of war-horses. He will do an enormous amount of work on a very little and very indifferent food, and will always bear himself well and handsomely. In one point only is he, more than other horses, susceptible to disease, and that is his eye, which is liable to cataract. His great characteristic is his undaunted pluck, which is never more clearly shown than when by any chance he is ill, when all veterinary surgeons will allow that he is a most admirable patient, resisting and throwing off the effects of illness or treatment in a way that no horse of another race can equal. Persian horses have always been found among the most generally useful remounts in India, and they take their place both in the ranks of cavalry and in gun teams. They have more power and size than Arabs, with much of the same constitutional good qualities, and—a matter of great importance to the state—they are generally cheaper in price.—Blackwood's Magazine.

MR. F. E. HUSH, Adrian, N. Y., says: "My father was very lame with rheumatism. Now, after using St. Jacobs Oil, he is no lamer than I am. He was cured." Price Fifty cents.

They Wouldn't Wait for Him.

Lady—Now, since I've given you a good meal, won't you saw and split a little kindling wood for me?

Tramp—Madam, nothing would give me greater pleasure, but I have got to catch the through freight at a siding a mile away, where she stands to permit the passage of the express on the main line. As I have sent no intimation of my intention to take this particular train it will at once be obvious to you that they will not wait for me. They will proceed as soon as the express has passed and I—madam, I will be left. But in gratitude for your kindness, madam, let me give you this piece of advice: The next tramp that comes along, make him saw before he sees your food—saw! see?—Boston Courier.

Von Moltke Once Beaten.

La France has discovered by dint of rummaging over ancient history, that the great Von Moltke was once beaten by a Frenchman. It was in 1839-'40. Von Molke was the military adviser of Hafiz Pasha, the Turkish commander sent to oppose Mehemet Ali. But the Egyptian leader had as an adviser Capt. Beaufort d'Hautpone. In the operations on the Aleppo road this young Frenchman checkmated Von Moltke's moves, and his triumphant progress was stayed only by European interventions and the treaty of London.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

"THAT Miss Jones is a nice-looking girl, isn't she?"
"Yes, and she'd be the belle of the town if it wasn't for one thing."
"What's that?"
"She has catarrh so bad it is unpleasant to be near her. She has tried a dozen things and nothing helps her. I am sorry, for I like her, but that doesn't make it any less disagreeable for one to be around her."
Now, if she had used Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, there would have been nothing of the kind said, for it will cure catarrh every time.

HOW OFTEN you see a country tavern with the sign hanging outside on the inn side.

No Opium in Piso's Cure for Consumption. Cures where other remedies fail. 25c.

ELY'S CREAM BALM Gives relief at once and cures COLD in HEAD CATARRH Hay Fever. Not a Liquid, Snuff, or Powder. Free from Injurious Drugs and Offensive Odors. [illegible]

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD CATARRH ROSE-COLD HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE PRICE 50 CENTS ELY BROS. OWEGO N.Y. U.S.A. HAY-FEVER

Bartholdi's Statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World"

Will be a reminder of personal liberty for ages to come. On just as sure a foundation has Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" been placed, and it will stand through the cycles of time as a monument to the physical emancipation of thousands who by its use have been relieved from consumption, consumptive night-sweats, bronchitis, coughs, spitting of blood, weak lungs, and other throat and lung affections.

SEVERAL deaf persons in a Massachusetts rural community are circulating a petition praying the Legislature to give them a hearing.

* * * * Nervous debility, premature decline of power in either sex, speedily and permanently cured. Large book, 10 cents in stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

WANTED, the name of the goldsmith who made the welkin ring.

Excursion to Ottawa, Kansas.

The Great Rock Island Route announces an excursion rate of one first-class fare for the round trip to Ottawa, Kan., and return, on account of the annual meeting of the German Baptist brethren. Tickets good for going passage May 25 to 29, inclusive, and for return passage thirty days from date of sale. Free chair cars, magnificent Pullman palace sleeping cars, elegant day coaches, unequaled dining cars. Two daily trains each way. For further particulars address E. A. Holbrook, General Ticket and Passenger Agent Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway, Chicago, Ill.

Vitality of Great Men

Is not always innate or born with them, but many instances are known where it has been acquired by the persistent and judicious use of Dr. Harter's Iron Tonic.

MENSMAN'S Peptonized Beef Tonic, the only preparation of beef containing its entire nutritious properties. It contains blood-making, force-generating, and life sustaining properties; invaluable for indigestion, dyspepsia, nervous prostration, and all forms of general debility; also in all enfeebled conditions, whether the work of exhaustion, nervous prostration, overwork, or acute disease, particularly if resulting from pulmonary complaints. Hazard, Hazard & Co., proprietors, New York. Sold by druggists.

EVERY town of 700 or more inhabitants can support a local newspaper, and should have one. Full particulars regarding cost of material, how to run the paper, and make money out of it, will be furnished any one who will take the trouble to communicate with PRACTICAL PRINTER, Box 497, Chicago, Ill.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, and am glad to say it has cured me of a very severe pain in the small of my back. I also gave it to my little girl. She had very little appetite, but Hood's Sarsaparilla has increased it wonderfully, and from our experience I highly recommend this excellent medicine." MRS. A. BAUCLIER, 28½ Van Horn Street, Jersey City.

Makes the Weak Strong

"I must say Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best medicine I ever used. Last spring I had no appetite, and the least work I did fatigued me ever so much. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon I felt as if I could do as much in a day as I had formerly done in a week. My appetite is voracious." MRS. M. V. BAYARD, Atlantic City, N. J.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

KIDDER'S PASTILLES. Sure relief ASTHMA. Price 35 cts. by mail. Stowell & Co. Charlestown, Mass.

Ingrowing Toe-Nails cured without pain, without cutting. Sent by mail on receipt of $1 by L. Tanner, Druggist, Plymouth, Ind. Reference, F. N. Bank, Plymouth.

RUPTURE If you want relief and cure at your home, send for Dr. J. A. Sherman's circular of instructions. 294 Broadway, New York. MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

OLD CHRONIC PILES—WORST CASES. Also other Rectal Diseases cured by measures mild, safe and certain. Write for references. M. GILL, M. D., 38 N. Clark St., Chicago.

RRR RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

Cures and Prevents Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Hoarseness, Stiff Neck, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Headache, Toothache, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Asthma, Frostbites, Chilblains, quicker than any known remedy. It was the first and is the only

PAIN REMEDY

That instantly stops the most excruciating pains, allays inflammation and cures Congestions, whether of the Lungs, Stomach, Bowels, or other glands or organs, by one application.

No matter how violent or excruciating the pain the Rheumatic, Bedridden, Infirm, Crippled, Nervous, Neuralgic, or prostrated with diseases may suffer, will afford instant ease.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

Thirty to sixty drops in half tumbler of water will in a few minutes cure Cramps, Spasms, Sour Stomach, Nausea, Vomiting, Palpitation of the Heart, Malaria, Chills and Fever, Faintness, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Colic, Wind in the Bowels and all Internal Pains.

Fifty Cents per Bottle. Sold by Druggists.

DR. RADWAY & CO., N. Y.,

Proprietors of Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent and Dr. Radway's Pills.

35 MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER

Cures Pleurisy, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Weakness, Colds in the Chest and all Aches and Strains.

Beware of imitations under similar sounding names. Ask for Benson's and take no other.

THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

$5 to $8 a day. Samples worth $1.50, FREE. Lines not under the horse's feet. Address Brewster's Safety Rein Holder, Holly, Mich.

PILES Dr. Williams' Indian Pile Ointment is a sure cure for blind, bleeding or itching piles. Cure guaranteed. Price 50c and $1. At druggist's or mailed by WILLIAMS MFG. CO., Cleveland, O.

ADVERTISERS or others, who wish to examine this paper, or obtain estimates on advertising space when in Chicago, will find it on file at 45 to 49 Randolph St., the Advertising Agency of LORD & THOMAS.

Milo B. Stevens & Co. PENSIONS. Metropolitan Block, Chicago, Ills.

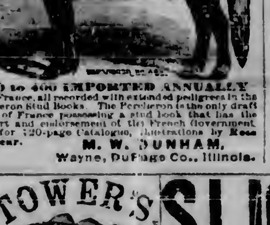
OAKLAWN

The Great Nursery of

PERCHERON HORSES.

200 Imported Brood Mares Of Choicest Families.

LARGE NUMBERS, All Ages, both Sexes, IN STOCK.



300 to 400 IMPORTED ANNUALLY from France, all recorded with extended pedigrees in the Percheron Stud Books. The Percheron is the only draft breed of France possessing a stud book that has the support and endorsement of the French Government. Send for 120-page Catalogue, illustrations by Rosa Bonheur.

M. W. DUNHAM, Wayne, DuPage Co., Illinois.

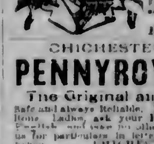
PENSIONS Send for Pension Laws to U. S. Claim Agents FITZGERALD & POWELL, Indianapolis, Ind.

PATENTS R. S. & A. P. LACEY Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Instructions and opinions as to patentability FREE. 17 years' experience.

Eclectic Shorthand [illegible] MENTION THIS PAPER when writing to advertisers.

DETECTIVES

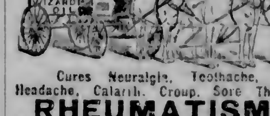
Wanted in every County. Shrewd men to act under our instructions in our Secret Service. Experience not necessary. Send stamp for particulars. GRANNAN DETECTIVE BUREAU, 6 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.



JONES HE PAYS the FREIGHT 5 Ton Wagon Scales, Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam and Beam Box for $60. Every size Scale. For free price list mention this paper and address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

CHICHESTER'S ENGLISH PENNYROYAL PILLS The Original and Only Genuine. Safe and always Reliable. Beware of worthless Imitations. Ladies, ask your Druggist for "Chichester's English" and take no other, or inclose 4c. (stamps) to us for particulars in letter by return mail. NAME PAPER. CHICHESTER CHEMICAL CO., 2818 Madison Square, Philada., Pa. Sold by Druggists everywhere. Ask for "Chichester's English" Pennyroyal Pills. Take no other.

WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN



Cures Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Catarrh, Croup, Sore Throat, RHEUMATISM, Lame Back, Stiff Joints, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Wounds, Old Sores and All Aches and Pains. The many testimonials received by us more than prove all we claim for this valuable remedy. It not only relieves the most severe pains, but It Cures You. That's the Idea! Sold by Druggists. 50 cts. Song Book mailed free. Address WIZARD OIL COMPANY CHICAGO.

HARTER'S THE ONLY TRUE IRON TONIC

Will purify the BLOOD, regulate the LIVER and KIDNEYS and Restore the HEALTH and VIGOR of YOUTH. Dyspepsia, Want of Appetite, Indigestion, Lack of Strength and Tired Feeling absolutely cured: Bones, muscles and nerves receive new force. Enlivens the mind and supplies Brain Power.

LADIES Suffering from complaints peculiar to their sex will find in DR. HARTER'S IRON TONIC a safe, speedy cure. Gives a clear, healthy complexion. All attempts at counterfeiting only adds to its popularity. Do not experiment—get ORIGINAL AND BEST.

(Dr. HARTER'S LIVER PILLS Cure Constipation, Liver Complaint and Sick Headache. Sample Dose and Dream Book mailed on receipt of two cents in postage.)

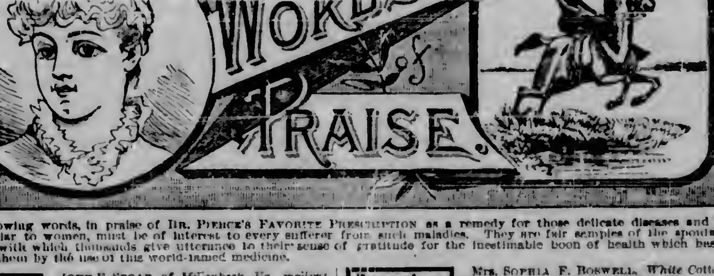
THE DR. HARTER MEDICINE CO., ST. LOUIS, MO.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION

C. N. U. No. 21—87

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS, please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

TOWER'S FISH BRAND SLICKER The Best Waterproof Coat. The FISH BRAND SLICKER is warranted waterproof, and will keep you dry in the hardest storm. The new POMMEL SLICKER is a perfect riding coat, and covers the entire saddle. Beware of imitations. None genuine without the "Fish Brand" trade-mark. Illustrated Catalogue free. A. J. Tower, Boston, Mass.



The following words, in praise of DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION as a remedy for those delicate diseases and weaknesses peculiar to women, must be of interest to every sufferer from such maladies. They are fair samples of the spontaneous expressions with which thousands give utterance to their sense of gratitude for the inestimable boon of health which has been restored to them by the use of this world-famed medicine.

$100 THROWN AWAY. JOHN E. SEGAR, of Millenbeck, Va., writes: "My wife had been suffering for two or three years with female weakness, and had paid out one hundred dollars to physicians without relief. She took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it did her more good than all the medicine given to her by the physicians during the three years they had been practicing upon her."

THREW AWAY HER SUPPORTER. Mrs. SOPHIA F. BOSWELL, White Cottage, O., writes: "I took eleven bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and one bottle of your 'Pellets.' I am doing my work, and have been for some time. I have had to employ help for about sixteen years before I commenced taking your medicine. I have had to wear a supporter most of the time; this I have laid aside, and feel as well as I ever did."

THE GREATEST EARTHLY BOON. Mrs. GEORGE HERGER, of Westfield, N. Y., writes: "I was a great sufferer from leucorrhea, bearing-down pains, and pain continually across my back. Three bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' restored me to perfect health. I treated with Dr. ——, for nine months, without receiving any benefit. The 'Favorite Prescription' is the greatest earthly boon to us poor suffering women."

IT WORKS WONDERS. Mrs. MAY GLEASON, of Nunica, Ottawa Co., Mich., writes: "Your 'Favorite Prescription' has worked wonders in my case."

Again she writes: "Having taken several bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I have regained my health wonderfully, to the astonishment of myself and friends. I can now be on my feet all day, attending to the duties of my household."

TREATING THE WRONG DISEASE.

Many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous exhaustion or prostration, another with pain here or there, and in this way they all present alike to themselves and their easy-going and indifferent, or over-busy doctor, separate and distinct diseases, for which he prescribes his pills and potions, assuming them to be such, when, in reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some womb disorder. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, encourages his practice until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, but probably worse by reason of the delay, wrong treatment and consequent complications. A proper medicine, like Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery.

3 PHYSICIANS FAILED. Mrs. E. F. MORGAN, of No. 71 Lexington St., East Boston, Mass., says: "Five years ago I was a dreadful sufferer from uterine troubles. Having exhausted the skill of three physicians, I was completely discouraged, and so weak I could with difficulty cross the room alone. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and using the local treatment recommended in his 'Common Sense Medical Adviser.' I commenced to improve at once. In three months I was perfectly cured, and have had no trouble since. I wrote a letter to my family paper, briefly mentioning how my health had been restored, and offering to send the full particulars to any one writing me for them, and enclosing a stamped-envelope for reply. I have received over four hundred letters. In reply, I have described my case and the treatment used, and have earnestly advised them to 'do likewise.' From a great many I have received second letters of thanks, stating that they had commenced the use of 'Favorite Prescription,' had sent the $1.50 required for the 'Medical Adviser,' and had applied the local treatment so fully and plainly laid down therein, and were much better already."

JEALOUS DOCTORS. A Marvelous Cure. Mrs. G. F. SPRAGUE, of Crystal, Mich., writes: "I was troubled with female weakness, leucorrhea and falling of the womb for seven years, so I had to keep my bed for a good part of the time. I doctored with an army of different physicians, and spent large sums of money, but received no lasting benefit. At last my husband persuaded me to try your medicines, which I was loath to do, because I was prejudiced against them, and the doctors said they would do me no good. I finally told my husband that if he would get me some of your medicines, I would try them against the advice of my physician. He got me six bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription,' also six bottles of the 'Discovery,' for ten dollars. I took three bottles of 'Discovery' and four of 'Favorite Prescription,' and I have been a sound woman for four years. I then gave the balance of the medicine to my sister, who was troubled in the same way, and she cured herself in a short time. I have not had to take any medicine now for almost four years."

THE OUTGROWTH OF A VAST EXPERIENCE.

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to females, at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. Thousands of testimonials, received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which had baffled their skill, prove it to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women. It is not recommended as a "cure-all," but as a most perfect Specific for woman's peculiar ailments.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the uterus, or womb and its appendages, in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an [illegible] cures nausea, weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating and eructations of gas.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system.

"Favorite Prescription" is a positive cure for the most complicated and obstinate cases of leucorrhea, or "whites," excessive flowing at monthly periods, painful menstruation, unnatural suppressions, prolapsus or falling of the womb, weak back, "female weakness," anteversion, retroversion, bearing-down sensations, chronic congestion, inflammation and ulceration of the womb, inflammation, pain and ten- [illegible]

In pregnancy, "Favorite Prescription" is a "mother's cordial," relieving nausea, weakness of stomach and other distressing symptoms common to that condition. If its use is kept up in the latter months of gestation, it so prepares the system for delivery as to greatly lessen, and many times almost entirely do away with the sufferings of that trying ordeal.

"Favorite Prescription," when taken in connection with the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and small laxative doses of Dr. Pierce's Purgative Pellets (Little Liver Pills), cures Liver, Kidney and Bladder diseases. Their combined use also removes blood taints, and abolishes cancerous and scrofulous humors from the system.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women sold, by druggists, under a positive guarantee, from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years. Large bottles (100 doses) $1.00, or six bottles for $5.00.

Send ten cents in stamps for Dr. [illegible]

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 25, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

THE FAIRFIELD LETTER.

A Ringing Letter on the Temperance Situation as Viewed by a Veteran Worker.

HON. SYLVESTER LARNED: Dear Sir—

You have done me the honor to ask me to express in writing my opinion of the true course to be pursued by the republican party of Michigan in respect to the liquor business.

You ask this of one who has, as you know, stood identified with that party through all the years and months and days of its entire history; and, as I have no opinions to conceal I answer your request with perfect frankness; and you are at liberty to make any use of this letter you see fit for the good of the cause we both love so well.

My opinion is that the republican party of this state should plant itself firmly, emphatically and unequivocally upon the ground of prohibiting this iniquitous liquor business, and that they cannot do it any too soon.

1. Because it is right. The only question is between prohibition and regulation. And it is utter folly and opposed to the whole spirit of our Christian civilization to attempt to regulate any unmitigated evil. Germany some years ago undertook to regulate gambling saloons. For a time the nation derived quite a revenue from this source. But the experiment was a failure. It must always be. They abandoned the policy, and now the whole thing is prohibited, and the prohibition is enforced.

The liquor business, when the exception is made in favor of medical, mechanical chemical and scientific uses, is an unmitigated fraud. It has not left remaining a single redeeming feature to save it from utter condemnation.

The use of intoxicating drinks to one in health is not only unnecessary but injurious. By the laws of this state it is now required that every child in our public schools should be so taught. I know of no respectable scientific or medical authority that teaches otherwise. The drink habit is understood to expose to disease, and to diminish the duration of human life.

The business occasions from three-fifths to three-fourths of the pauperism of the state. Thirty per cent. of the insanity and idiocy grows out of it. At least three-fourth of the crimes are occasioned by it. And for all this the people are heavily taxed from year to year.

These are facts that nobody can deny. That such a business which is "evil, and only evil, and that continually," should be protected by law is an anachronism in this year of our Lord, 1887.

It has no rights that anybody is bound to respect. Gambling dens are prohibited. Houses of prostitution are under the ban of legal condemnation. Selling vile literature or obscene pictures is made a crime. Decent citizens would revolt at the thought of deriving a revenue from any one of these vile sources. Even lotteries are no longer regulated, but utterly prohibited.

And yet as a waster of property, as a destroyer of life and health, as a corrupter of the public morals, as an incentive to violence, as a prolific cause of crime, the liquor business towers far above them all.

It is simply absurd to talk of dealing with such a business otherwise than by absolute prohibition. The state owes it to itself to protect its citizens against such a foe.

And more and more is the open saloon a menace to our free institutions. Government of the people, by the people, and for the people is in imminent danger of perishing from the earth. What a travesty on popular government was your late election in Detroit! And scarcely less so in many places. The republican party has stood for liberty and law. The saloon strikes a deadly blow at both. "Two arm!" against such a foe sounds the battle cry along the whole line! We do well to heed it! Righteousness only exalteth a nation; and righteousness demands the utter suppression of this whole accursed traffic.

2. It is wise as well as right. Indeed the right doing is always the wise thing. But in a peculiar sense is this the only true policy for the republican party. It is entirely in harmony with its eventful history. It is not in conflict with any other of the good ends which it proposes still to achieve. There is no inspiration for a grand party like that of a high moral purpose. Nothing else so awakens a response in the hearts of the people. There has been no such enthusiasm in the political meetings for the last ten years, as in those held this spring in favor of prohibition. We have already lost more than 20,000 of our old-time republicans who voted last year with the third party. We shall lose 20,000 more unless we take our stand squarely for the suppression of the saloon. We have never had more than a small fraction of the saloon vote. It is reported that only five out of 100 of the saloon keepers in New York and Brooklyn are republicans. About the same proportion in this state generally. And by submitting the amendment we have lost even the few of this class who have hitherto voted with us. The bridges are burned behind us; it only remains to fight it out on the advance line, or die! Colonel, in my judgment we have won our last victory in Michigan, until we stand squarely for prohibition!

By frauds and intimidation in Detroit and elsewhere we have lost the amendment; but every candid and intelligent man knows to-day that the majority of the qualified voters of the state favor it. But for the storm on election day it would have been easily carried by a majority of 10,000, even despite the frauds.

The Democratic platforms—National and State—are against prohibition. The "saloon in politics" belongs to the democratic party and not to us. A small minority of them voted for the amendment. Of the republicans who voted, two-thirds voted "yes."

Had but a score of the republican leaders followed the good example of yourself and Gen. Cutcheon and taken the stump for the amendment it would have prevailed, despite the storm and the frauds. It was a great mistake that they did not. But I believe if the present Legislature shall do its full duty, and the Republican State Central Committee and the next Republican State Convention, it is yet in our power to save ourselves and the cause. But we must live as redeeming the time, for the days are evil.

This saloon question is at the front, and no voice of command will send it to the rear. We cannot go back where we were even three months ago. Nearly 200,000 voters have put themselves on the record, declaring their independence of the domination of the saloon power, and 10,000 more already wish they had. Many eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord. For it is

"HE has sounded forth the trumpet
That shall never call retreat."

His truth is to march on; and we must march with it, or be trampled beneath the feet of the victor!

Excuse my long letter: I could not well make it shorter. Yours, very respectfully, EDM. B. FAIRFIELD.

The Hon. James G. Blaine, accompanied by his wife and two daughters, will sail for Europe June 8.

The House has passed the Bates Liquor Bill, which places the retail tax on liquors at $500, and the wholesale tax at $800.

A large amount of property is being destroyed by forest fires in Northern Wisconsin and the Upper Michigan Peninsula.

New York Herald: Ireland has been treated to everything except justice. Of that she does not yet know the taste. English fair play is confined to Englishmen only. For Irishmen it is changed to foul play.

A Charleston correspondent of the New York World makes the announcement that "the Stars and Stripes were kindly given a conspicuous place" in the procession which unveiled the Calhoun monument at Charleston. Is it expected that Uncle Sam will take off his hat and bow for such a compliment.

Boston Herald: If prohibition of the sale of liquor by law is right, then every person engaged in purchasing liquor commits a wrong. To punish the party who sells and exempt the party who purchases, is to fly in the face of principles that govern the law, and the inherent sense of justice in the heart of man on which law is, or should be, founded.

Dakota is large enough for four states, and in less than twenty years will have a population equal to nearly a million for each of the four. But just now it is only seeking to be made into two. It is about as large as the whole of New England and the two great states of New York and Pennsylvania added. It has 600,000 people. It has a soil of extraordinary fertility, with comparatively little waste land. It has a severe climate a part of the year, but on the whole a healthy one. It has almost 4,000 public schools. It has $3,000,000 worth of school property, and pays to teachers over $690,000 yearly. It has 325 newspapers. Its people are intelligent, educated, neighborly and social. It has more than 100,000 voters. It has nearly 5,000 miles of railroad. Though, as before mentioned, it is large enough for two or four states, there is an "all-fired-mean" party in this country that has fought successfully for several years to keep Dakota out of the Union. That mean party is the Democratic, and it has done so because the majority of the progressive, go-ahead, sensible and intelligent people of that Territory are Republicans.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

County Teachers' Association.

The Association convened at Ironton last Friday evening, at the Grammar school room, which was filled with teachers and citizens. After some appropriate music by the young people, Mrs. Pope of Ironton, gave a very interesting paper on "Kindergarten Work. She gave a brief history of the Kindergarten, and an outline of the work of Froebel and Pestalozzi, treating the subject with reference to: (1) The origin of the Kindergarten; (2) Its relation to the public school system; (3) Its reformatory character.

She spoke of the two activities of the child life; the first going outward and the second drawing inward from the things made apparent to the senses. Every new born instinct demands new objects of attention and a new field of employment. This, it is the object of the kindergarten to furnish in its proper order and relation, thus giving a child an opportunity to carry out this instinct, and at the same time direct in such a way as to form character. The eight instincts of the child in the order of their development, were enumerated as follows: (1) The instinct of muscular activity, satisfied by movement exercises, such as are conducive to health and grace of action. (2) The agricultural instinct which leads him to dig in the soil. (3) The plastic instinct by which the child desires to make mud pies, etc. (4) The instinct for dwellings which leads him to make play-houses, etc. (5) The love of the beautiful, displayed in a fondness for music, bright colors and the like. (6) The desire for knowledge, to investigate material objects; (7) The social instinct, which properly directed, lead to courtesy and the exercise of those qualities which make him a fit and agreeable associate; and (8) the religious instinct by which reverence for God is taught, and the foundation for a moral and religious life is laid.

The paper was well received and several questions were drawn out by it, and discussed.

After the paper, Miss Waterbury read in a most impressive manner, a selection entitled "The Invisible Glory."

At the morning session, between fifteen and twenty teachers were present. Miss Nelson Read a paper on "Training to Attention." Taking the definition, that attention is mental activity turned to any subject and held by an effort of the will, she proceeded to indicate some of the means by which this end may be secured. The exercise should be voluntary, not secured by any system of rewards or punishments except in extreme cases. The satisfaction of the intellectual appetite should be a sufficient incentive to the pupil to secure his attention. The awakening of this appetite, and furnishing material for its gratification is the teacher's office. Efforts should be directed to this object from the very first. Make every subject interesting. Arouse the curiosity of the child with reference to what is to be learned. Cultivate enthusiasm. All these conditions should exist in the teacher. The exercises in each topic should be short, especially with young children and the comfort of the body provided for by good ventilation, frequent change of position, etc. The teacher must be thoroughly acquainted with what is to be done and have an intelligent plan for doing it.

An interesting discussion followed the paper, most of the teachers present expressing some opinion on some one or more points.

The Query box was then opened and several questions were distributed among the teachers for answers. Among them, "How to teach advanced clases in reading, was answered by Miss Waterbury; What should be the teacher's deportment out of school, by Mr. Harris; What position should be chosen for a singing exercise, by Miss Mason; What is a reasonable means of punishment for pupils who persist in whispering, by Miss Nelson, and some others.

The interchange of views upon these topic was the most valuable feature of the meeting. It was unanimously agreed that those who failed to be present missed a valuable opportunity.

The Association adjourned to meet in Charlevoix during the next school year.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

(36) The Boomerang is a very curious weapon used by the natives of Australia; it is thrown by hand, and is popularly supposed to be so constructed that when skilfully handled it can be made to return almost to the point from which it is thrown.

(37) Wall street in New York is so called from a stone wall which was built across the island in an early day.

Northern Michigan News.

Northern Michigan needs rain.

Col. John Atkinson, of Detroit, is pleading for Ireland's cause in the Northern Peninsula.

Walter Greilick, of Traverse City, says the Journal, has left for Milwaukee, where he will have charge of Greilick Bros. business there.

The Methodists of South Milton have been building a very fine little church. They hope to have it completed in two or three weeks.

Kalkaska Leader: The gentlemen mentioned last week who were looking up a location for a box factory, have decided to locate here, and have rented power and building of H. D. Trim, and will commence operations at once.

Petoskey Democrat: The Petoskey Fish Hatchery will send out a special car the latter part of the month with eight or nine million wall-eyed pike. They are especially adapted for and will be principally planted in the southern part of the state.

Cadillac fishermen. angling for trout in Cedar Creek recently, found a plentiful supply of ice in which to pack the speckled beauties, of which they caught a goodly number. The ice was found near logs in the thickets that are not penetrated by the sun's rays.

L. Durocher & Son, during the winter, banked 45,000 ties for Cameron Bros., of Torch Lake. Besides these, large quantities of ties and posts were gotten out by other parties. The bay shore in that vicinity is literally lined with posts, ties, lumber, wood, etc., awaiting shipment.

East Jordan Enterprise: On Monday morning Prof. Nicholas resigned the principalship of our schools on account of his time being taken up with his hotel. There will be no school the rest of the year in the department he vacates. He has always given the best of satisfaction, and his resignation is very much regretted.

A young man by the name of Milo Bascom was killed by the cars at Mancelona recently. The verdict of the coroner's inquest was: "We find that Milo Bascom, deceased, came to his death at about 11 o'clock a. m., on the 7th day of May, A. D., 1887, on a spur of the G. R. & I. R. R., at Mancelona, by being crushed between the draw-bars of a tender and flat car."

Petoskey Record: Last week Messrs. Curtis, Wylie & Wachtel made an equitable division of the lands heretofore held in common by them.—— Col. O. T. Booth is going largely into the peppermint business on his Carpenter farm.——The Harbor Point Association has engaged Seymour A. Smith, one of the most popular hotel men in the State, at present with the Kirkwood House, Detroit, to conduct the resort hotel this summer. It will be opened about June 20. —The acquisition of the "Mosenaw title" to lands in and around Harbor Springs and along the shore of the bay, which invades the interests of many people has created a great deal of bad feeling apparently in Harbor Springs. The Independent of last week contained an article by Andrew J. Blackbird, and one by B. T. Halsted, upon the subject which reflected upon the motives of Mr. Deuel in the transaction. The Independent withholds judgment, however, until Mr. Deuel has had opportunity to publish his statement of the case. —— Chas. Hankins, road commissioner for Bear Lake township, Charlevoix county, says that he is going to put the road from Clarion to the county line in good shape this summer. If that be so it would be greatly to the advantage of Petoskey to have the road from here to the county line, a distance of only 1½ miles, put in good order. With this work accomplished, we would have a good road via Clarion to Boyne City, and not a little trade from Clarion and vicinity, which now goes to Boyne City, simply because there is a good road to Boyne City, and a horrible road to Petoskey, will inevitably seek the larger market. Good wagon roads are of vital importance to the growth of a village like ours.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 13th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and Phebe E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Otis Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in liber "4" of mortgages on page 491 on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1884, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and upon which said mortgage there is claimed [illegible]

Dated March [illegible]
JAMES H. JOH[illegible]
Attorney fo[illegible]

Notice of Dissolution.

[illegible]
...EL ROSENTHAL.
...K ROSENTHAL.

Notice.

[illegible]
...AS A. GELLICK
...ENJ. F. INGALLS.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, County of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for said county, held at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City on the 13th day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Josiah Gibson, deceased. [illegible]

(A true copy.) JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

Dated March 22, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
D. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

[illegible]

Dated ... the 18th, A. D., 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee. MORGAN CURTIS, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date the first, 1883, made by and between ... and Hannah Norton, his wife of Charlevoix, ... to Mary E. Manley, ... New York, party of the second part, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the ... of Feb. A. D. 1884, in Liber 9 of Mortgages ... [illegible]

Dated Kalkaska ... the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee. MARY E. MANLEY, Mortgagee.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank,

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Vice Pres't.; John Nicholls, [illegible]; A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
A. Smith.

CAPITAL, ... $25,000
SURPLUS, ... 2,000

The liabilities of stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. ... of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. ... for the transaction of every legitimate Banking business extended to our customers as favorable as are consistent with sound banking.

Drafts drawn on all the leading commercial cities of the world for small amounts. Money to loan on approved ... Exchange bought and sold. Certificates issued bearing interest. We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK, New York.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK, Chicago.
NAT. CITY BANK, Grand Rapids.
DETROIT NAT. BANK, Detroit.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security

Is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers

[illegible] is: That to ... money, is folly; that to do ... is criminal.

Security in Banking

[illegible] to both Bankers ... that it furnishes ...

This Bank Invites

[illegible] their money to its keeping ... its dealings.

This Bank Will

[illegible] when desired, paying as ... will be compatible with ...

Parties Seeking

[illegible] money, and desiring to ... of the management ... attractive security

Investment Notes,

[illegible] yearly interest. These ... perfect ...

We Solicit Your Patronage.

CROSS & SONS., Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc. Charlevoix, - Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer. In Bradbeer's Gallery. Photographs of all sizes taken. Old Pictures copied and enlarged. CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.
I have just received a very fine stock of
Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc
which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.
Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefitting yourselves?
All classes of Repairing done quickly.
C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick, ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR, —ON— Chalevoix Summer Resorts.
I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.
I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters.
Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention.
J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, --AT-- LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County.
We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty.
We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.
NOTHING SHODDY.
Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH." Contains the Associated Press Dispatches Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO. Charlevoix, Mich. Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers 3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR Feed, Corn Meal, Graham
We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL.
Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn Charlevoix, Mich.
Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!
The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.
I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the LEAST MONEY!
All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.
LEAVE ORDERS with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.
Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.
J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES
Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?
If not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.
These goods cannot be equalled in the county
Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.

Ladies Look Out
For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for
D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD, Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail! All kinds of FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.
Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.
Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.
A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S MARKET Is supplied with All Kinds Of MEATS At Lowest Prices. CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE. Hides, Sheep and Hogs. Corner of State & Mason sts., JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS, And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

[illegible]

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

[illegible]

SOCIETIES.

[illegible]

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible]

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE, Lorenzo Cook, Manager. Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible] Good Sample Room. [illegible]

NEWMAN HOUSE, W. C. Newman, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. [illegible]

PILE DRIVER.

[illegible]

SURVEYORS.

[illegible]

DENTIST.

[illegible] Dentist, [illegible] Weed's Drug Store [illegible] Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R. "Mackinac Short Line."

[illegible]

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

[illegible]

FLORENCE'S FATE.

A pretty blonde sat in the sumptuously furnished parlor of a mansion on a fashionable street in Washington. She was reclining in a listless manner in a comfortable lounging chair, and her blue eyes had a dreamy expression. She was an exquisitely lovely creature, this Florence Bradly, a woman who would attract and hold your attention among a thousand ordinary beauties, by the wonderful way in which her graceful figure carried itself alone, if nothing else.

"Come in!" she said, in her silvery voice, and a footman entered, bearing a bouquet of rare beauty, composed entirely of white japonicas and purple heliotrope. Florence started up.

"Oh, James! who sent me that? How beautiful it is!" she cried, receiving it from the servant's hand.

"A man brought it, miss. He said his master sent it with compliments, but didn't leave any name. He hurried off instantly, miss, as soon as he gave them to me," answered the man.

"Very well. Is my sister-in-law nearly ready, James?"

"She will be down soon, her maid told me, miss," and the footman retired from the room.

"Who can have sent me this?" mused the beauty, turning the flowers round in her white fingers.

Here Mrs. Bradly, dark and magnificent in rose colored velvet, point-lace, and diamonds, swept into the room. Her face wore an approving and affectionate smile when she regarded her beautiful sister-in-law in her becoming and simple toilet.

"Dear Flora, you will be the handsomest girl in the room," she cried, bending over and kissing the girl. But, Florence, dear, if you would not wear your beautiful hair swept back from your face so! It is not fashionable. I assure you you will be called queer if you do not dress it more in the prevailing style."

"Thank you, Jane; I am satisfied with my hair and my forehead as they are," replied Florence, dryly, and Mrs. Bradly said no more.

"See my flowers; aren't they becoming with my colorless attire?" smiled Florence, holding up her bouquet for her sister's inspection. "They were sent to me by a nameless admirer."

"My dearest girl, they are just the thing for your pure style of beauty; they make you look so lovely! But who can the sender be? Oh, I have it! It must have been that wealthy Mr. Brice—the banker, you know, who raved about you so at the senator's ball three weeks ago. It must be he. Such delicate taste!"

"What, Jane! Not that ugly, vulgar old man! I hate him! No, he never would have such taste as is displayed here," touching the bouquet tenderly.

"My dear, pray don't speak so of Mr. Brice. I assure you he is extremely rich, very wealthy, and could dress you and lodge you like a very queen. I should be happy if I could see you settled as his wife," replied her sister, sententiously.

"Ugh! I don't admire your taste, then, my dear Jane, and I am afraid if you are not happy until you see me so established then your chance of contentment is very slender, for you never will see me so!" and Florence moved away with a queenly step to be muffled in cloak and cloud by her maid Natelle.

The two ladies were soon ready, and Mr. Bradly conducted them to their carriage. The drive was a silent one, and Florence leaned back with bright eyes, trembling a little with excitement, and holding her flowers, the sweet perfume of which filled the carriage closely.

When they reached the Drummonds' splendid mansion, brilliant with light that streamed cheerfully from the plate-glass windows, the street for a whole block was lined with carriages.

"We are a trifle late," whispered Mrs. Bradly to Florence.

"Yes," nodded the girl.

She made her way over to where the youngest daughter of her hostess sat. Margaret Drummond was a silent girl, without beauty, and was consequently overlooked and snubbed by her elder sisters. And for this very reason Florence always was friendly with the lonely girl, and an intimacy had sprung up between the two so widely unlike in appearances.

They sat together discussing the different guests. At last Margaret said:

"There comes mamma with Mr. Saunders! Look, Flora, now don't you think him as handsome as an Apollo? I think he is the very handsomest man I ever saw," she concluded enthusiastically, in a low tone.

Florence looked up and saw in truth a handsome man, tall and straight, with a handsome Saxon face, and eyes as blue as her own. And wonder of wonders! Could it be! in his coat he wore a small japonica and a spray of heliotrope. She had not time to answer Margaret before Mrs. Drummond and the gentleman came up. She dropped her eyes in trembling confusion and did not raise them again until she heard her hostess' voice saying, as in a dream:

"Miss Bradly, let me introduce to you Mr. Saunders. He is one of my friends. I want you two to like each other," and without further ado the lady sailed away again, taking her youngest daughter with her, and left the two people alone.

Florence glanced up then. The two pairs of blue eyes met; Mr. Saunders's were smiling; then, as they both realized the unceremonious introduction given by Mrs. Drummond, they both burst out laughing, which took away Florence's embarrassment. They were soon upon friendly terms. And directly the gentleman, in a casual way, said:

"How well your flowers become you, Miss Bradly! They match your dress to perfection."

Florence looked up, saw a smile lurking in his eyes, and dropped hers in confusion. There was no doubt now, she told herself. The sender of the bouquet was before her.

"How well they look together!" commented Mrs. Drummond to Mrs. Bradly. "They are of the same complexion and a splendid match for each other. He is enormously rich, my dear. My girls admire him immensely; but then, you know, they are all engaged—except Margaret, who is too young."

When Florence lay down upon her couch that night it was to dream of blonde hair and deep-blue eyes.

After that evening they met repeatedly, and the gentleman called frequently at her brother's house. One day when he came Florence was alone. She was playing the piano when he was shown in, but turned quickly, with a welcoming smile, at the sound of his voice. They talked of that evening at Mrs. Drummond's party, and somehow, Florence could not tell exactly how, the gentleman brought forward the subject of flowers. She looked up suddenly right into his eyes with her clear, direct gaze:

"You sent them?" she said.

"Yes, I sent them," he returned. Then suddenly: "Florence, I had seen you at the opera. I fell in love with you at first sight, and I love you now!"

She did not blush and drop her eyes after the manner of ordinary young women, but looked directly at him.

"And I fell in love with you the first time I saw you," she announced, calmly.

What if her friends—her envious lady friends—had heard her! Would not they have voted her more strong-minded than ever? I fear so. The wedding was celebrated with great magnificence, and the bride was lovely as she was eccentric.

The Dog Has Had His Day.

Dogs having been pets for so long are beginning to be set aside in the fashionable domestic circle in favor of cats. First-class, presentable, respectable cats are now in demand. Very nice tortoise-shell pussies and aristocratic Angoras bring fancy prices. The only objection to cats is that they cannot be taken out and displayed on the promenade. So far this season very few dogs have made their appearance on the streets accompanied by their owners, and the sight of grand dames dragging their pugs by ribbon harness into dry-goods shops and of pretty misses hugging shaggy poodles in upholstered carriages is as rare as it was once common. From a fashionable point of view all dogs, like every individual dog, have had their day, and the way in which the dog craze has been ridiculed and the stern objections made to admitting them into hotels and boarding-houses seem to have had the effect of driving them from their throne of favor of beauty's boudoir.—Philadelphia Times.

It is said the Western Union intends to take down all its wires in New York City, but will not bury them in the subway, intending instead to establish a city service of pneumatic tubes.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR, ... CAPT. MEG THOMPSON
Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 am and 4 p m, touching at intermediate points both ways.

Boyne City and Charlevoix.
STR. CLARA BELLE, ... CAPT. GEO. JEPSON.
Leave Boyne City at 6:30 a. m. and 1:00 p. m. and Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m., and 3 p m. connecting with the Friant and Cummings to and from Petoskey, Touching at way ports.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH GORDON .... CAPT. LEWIS GUARD.
Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a.m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports.

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, ... CAPT. R. VANDERHOEF.
MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:00; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30; arrive, East Jordan 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Springs, 6:30.

East Jordan, Charlevoix & Harbor Spgs.
LOU A. CUMMINGS, ... CAPT. W. A. SNYDER.
MORNING: Leave East Jordan 7 a. m.; Charlevoix, 9; Petoskey, 11; arrive at Harbor Springs 11:30.
AFTERNOON: Leave Harbor Springs, 1 p. m.; Petoskey, 1:30; Charlevoix, 3; arrive at East Jordan, 5:30 p. m.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.

PROP. CHAMPLAIN .... Capt. EDW. CASEY.
Going North, Chicago Tuesdays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Thursdays 11 p m; Cheboygan, Fridays 2:30 p m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Fridays 5 p m; Charlevoix, Saturdays 2:30 p m; Milwaukee, Mondays 3 p m; Chicago, Mondays 11 p m.

PROP. LAWRENCE .... Capt. GEO. THOAR.
Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a m.
Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 4 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.

Upright & Emrey, agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.

CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS .... Capt. O. E. WILBER.
Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20
Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave St. Ignace 7:00 a m; Mackinac Island [illegible]; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m. Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Northport 5:15 p m, arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p m.

T. S. FAXTON, ... Capt. A. G. ALDRICH.
Going North, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Torch Lake 9:45; Norwood 10:30; Charlevoix 12 noon; Petoskey 1:30 p m. Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45; arriving at St Ignace 8:20;
Going South, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave St. Ignace 6 a m; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Norwood 4:15; Torch Lake 5; arriving at Traverse City 7:45 p m.

The City of Traverse leaves Chicago dock above 12th street every Saturday evening at 7, arriving at Traverse City Monday morning. Leaves Traverse City Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock.

J. L. Hend & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S LIVERY STABLE CHARLEVOIX.
The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.
Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.
Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

Farming Lands
500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.
50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co.
These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets
By Water and Rail
And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.
The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is
Not a Wilderness by any Means.
It contains a population of [illegible] souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union.
Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold.
Send for English or German Pamphlet, Address
W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner.
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.
TITLE PERFECT.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter.

Miraculous Escape.

W. W. Reed, druggist, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "One of my customers, Mrs. Louisa Pike, Bartonia, Randolph Co., Ind., was a long sufferer with Consumption, and was given up to die by her physicians. She heard of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and began buying it of me. In six months' time she walked to this city, a distance of six miles, and is now so much improved she has quit using it. She feels she owes her life to it." Free Trial Bottles at Dr. G. W. Crouter's

---

Old papers for sale at this office.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.
The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter chapped hands chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

Pan-Zama Balm
THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES the grandest and simplest known remedy for all Female Trouble to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable Lady Agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For medicine and particulars, Address PAN-ZAMA MED CO., Frankfort, Ind.

W. H. FRANCIS FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP, Will also do Contracting & Building. In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.
I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc, on short notice.
Shop on South Terrace, Opposite Sheriff Bordan's residence.

NEW SHOP! All kinds of Blacksmithing, At the Shop in the Foundry Building. Horseshoeing a specialty. ALL WORK GUARANTEED. M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY, FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING.
We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.
DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.
ALDRICH SISTERS. Ingleside Building.

MERCHANT TAILORING.
I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring.
Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.
Call and see me. Satisfation Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,
C. H. Maddaugh.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co. Charlevoix, Mich., Manufactureres of Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc. NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock. Window & Door Frames made to order. All Kinds of Building Material kept constantly on hand. PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS. Furnished on application. Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building Correspondence solicited.

MARVELOUS PRICES! BOOKS FOR THE MILLION
Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible]
1. The Widow Bedott Papers. [illegible]
2. Winter Evening Recreations, [illegible]
3. Back to the Old Home. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, [illegible]
4. Dialogues, Recitations and Readings, [illegible]
5. The Standard Letter Writer for Ladies and Gentlemen, [illegible]
6. The Frozen Deep. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
7. Red Court Farm. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, [illegible]
8. The Lady of the Lake. By Sir Walter Scott. [illegible]
9. In Cupid's Net. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
10. Amos Barton. A Novel. By George Eliot, [illegible]
11. Lady Gwendoline's Dream. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
12. The Mystery of the Holly Tree. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne."
13. The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun, [illegible]
14. John Bowerbank's Wife. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, [illegible]
15. The Gray Woman. A Novel. By Mrs. Gaskell, [illegible]
16. Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors, [illegible]
17. Jasper Dane's Secret. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, [illegible]
18. Fancy Work for Home Adornment, [illegible]
19. Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young. [illegible]
20. Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen, [illegible]
21. Useful Knowledge for the Million, [illegible]
22. The Home Cook Book and Family Physician, [illegible]
23. Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands, [illegible]
24. 87 Popular Ballads. [illegible]
25. Called Back. A Novel. By Hugh Conway.
26. At the World's Mercy. A Novel. By Florence Warden, [illegible]
27. Mildred Trevanion. A Novel. By "The Duchess," [illegible]
28. Dark Days. A Novel. By the author of "Called Back."
29. Shadows on the Snow. A Novel. By B. L. Farjeon, [illegible]
30. Leoline. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, [illegible]
31. Gabriel's Marriage. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
32. Reaping the Whirlwind. A Novel. By Mary Cecil Hay, [illegible]
33. Dudley Carleon. A Novel. By Miss M. E. Braddon, [illegible]
34. A Golden Dawn. A Novel. By the author of "Dora Thorne," etc.
35. Valerie's Fate. A Novel. By Mrs. Alexander, [illegible]
36. Sister Rose. A Novel. By Wilkie Collins, [illegible]
37. Anne. A Novel. By Mrs. Henry Wood, [illegible]
38. The Laurel Bush. A Novel. By Miss Mulock, [illegible]
39. Robinson Crusoe. [illegible]
40. How to Make Poultry Pay. [illegible]
41. Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments, [illegible]
42. Gems of the Poets, [illegible]
43. Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses. [illegible]
44. Anecdotes of Public Men—[illegible]
45. Æsop's Fables. [illegible]
OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.
We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $4.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts., or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

Take The Sentinel.

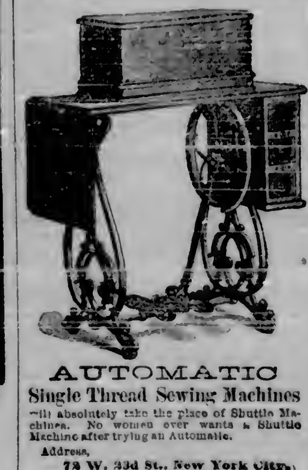
SOMETHING NEW. WORLD RENOWNED CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it
1st. NEVER CLOGS.
2d. ALWAYS SCOURS.
3d. TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.
The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but—by means of a steel frog—is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, making a steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy. If your Agent has none write us for price.
MANUFACTURED ONLY BY J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS, RACINE, Wis.

Good PAINT
An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity, and Superiority of the SHERWIN-WILLIAMS COLORED LEADS. Also St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.
FOR SALE ONLY BY L. D. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and STATIONERY, OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.
A Large and Complete New Line JUST RECEIVED.
EVERYTHING YOU CAN THINK OF.
You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.
PERRY WEED.
The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works! Builder and Manufacturer of BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS. Sheet Iron Work given special attention. MARINE WORK a specialty. HENRY BARTH, Prop. Charlevoix, Mich.



AUTOMATIC Single Thread Sewing Machines will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No women ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic. Address, 78 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.
YOUNG'S COUGH SYRUP
[illegible]
Sold by all druggists. W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

160 Acres in MARION Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.
MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security. THEODORE R. CHAPIN Boyne City.

FRANK E. WOODS Bath & Barber Rooms Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS. Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House. If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me. JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE! At Miss Spaulding's MILLINERY ROOMS, I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only. Any lady purchasing goods to the amount of $3.00 will receive a present of her choice of any untrimmed felt hat in the store. Come early and secure a Bargain. MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

JAS. A. GELLICK, Dealer in Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS. We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES. We also keep continually on draught Milwaukee Export and lager Beer. Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.
CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

NEWS BUDGET.

Fresh Intelligence from Every Part of the Civilized World.

Foreign and Domestic News, Political Events, Personal Points, Labor Notes, Etc.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

A MURDEROUS MOB.

Editor O'Brien and Companions Assaulted in Toronto by a Mob of Rowdies.

[illegible]

Regarding the Railways.

[illegible]

An Alien Labor Law Decision.

[illegible]

Commerce.

[illegible]

CURRENT EVENTS.

EAST.

THE conspiracy trial at Buffalo resulted in the conviction of Hiram B. and Charles W. Everest, of the Rochester branch of the Standard Oil Company. The penalty is one year's imprisonment, $500 fine, or both. The defendants, who are father and son, are millionaires, and naturally enough are much "surprised" at the verdict. They will appeal, of course, relying upon the money and influence of the Standard Oil Company to secure a reversal of the verdict. This is the first time that any of the tools of this unscrupulous corporation have ever been brought within hailing distance of justice, and the event will be hailed as an auspicious one by the entire country.

A fire at the New York Central's hay-sheds in New York destroyed property to the value of $150,000.

GOVERNOR HILL, of New York, has appointed Colonel Fred D. Grant, Quarantine Commissioner.

WEST.

THE extensive shops of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad, at Minneapolis, were burned, with a loss of $150,000. A fire at Milton, Missouri, destroyed the County Jail and a number of business structures; loss, $53,000. Destructive forest fires are reported in the Northern Peninsula of Michigan, and in Wisconsin, near Waukesha.

EXTENSIVE preparations are now being made for the great International Sunday School Convention which meets in Chicago on the night of May 31st and continues June 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th. Battery D has been engaged and will have chairs to accommodate 1,000 persons soon in place, and extensive decorations are in progress. Nearly all of the railroads in the United States have made arrangements to return at one-third fare all who pay full fare to the convention. Persons wishing to avail themselves of reduced rates must receive from Mr. B. F. Jacobs, Chairman of the Executive Committee, No. 99 Washington street, certificates, which will be furnished on application. The prospects are that the attendance will be very large. In order to accommodate those desiring to attend outside of Chicago, reserved seats will be sold to others than regular delegates for $1.50, good for the entire convention.

WILLIAM HABIT, one of the "Jim Cummings" express robbers, is making efforts to be released from the Jefferson City Penitentiary, claiming that the court which sentenced him had no jurisdiction. . . . A Chicago dispatch says that "thus far, in the ten days' effort of the Criminal Court to secure a jury for the trial of the county boodler cases, 733 persons have been examined and only eight jurors have been obtained." . . . Eugene C. Race, the well-known Chicago restaurateur and successor of the firm of Race Bros., has confessed judgment in the sum of $10,427 in favor of Philip Elsworth, a New York oyster dealer. That, in addition to the debts due in Chicago, will make the total liabilities about $35,000. The firm was established about 1870 by the two Race brothers, Henry and Eugene, then located on Clark street. After the fire they moved further down the same street, and in 1876 located the place 114 Madison street, now made vacant by the failure, which had been fitted up at a cost of about $31,000.

The Illinois crop report for the month of May says that the general condition of live stock is good, but that the meadows and pastures are in poor condition, owing to the dry, cold spring. Farm work is well advanced.

WASHINGTON.

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE WM. B. WOODS, of the Supreme Court of the United States, died in Washington on the 14th inst. of dropsy. He was promoted to the Supreme bench in 1880. . . . Secretary Bay- [illegible]

[illegible]

ral Democratic strength, I feel that your chances of success are small." I think that Mr. Blaine was not so deeply interested in his candidacy, and would willingly have given place to some other Republican had it not been for the influences that operated upon him and upon the convention."

LABOR.

THE grave-diggers in the Holy Cross cemetery, New York, are on a strike. The men are satisfied with their wages and terms of labor, but demand that two men who are personally objectionable to them shall be discharged. The men asked the Superintendent to discharge the objectionable men. He refused, and laid the matter before Bishop Laughlin, who also refused. "We'll work with the four other fellows," said the leader, "whether they're in the union or not. But we won't work with Byrnes and Buckley."

A CHICAGO dispatch of Wednesday says: "The lockout of workmen engaged in the building trades continues unabated, and competent authorities estimate that the army of idle men numbers 25,000. The employers seem to be rock-rooted in the stand which they have taken, and, while they regret the untoward condition of affairs at the most favorable portion of the building season, insist that until the mechanics recede from their unwarrantable demands in relation to the hiring of non-union labor and the employment of apprentices it would be useless to attempt a patched-up peace. The German contingent of the Bricklayers' Union does not seem to be satisfied with the situation of affairs."

INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

INTERSTATE COMMISSIONER SCHOONMAKER denounces as "inexcusably erroneous" the statement that any discrimination has been made by the commission in favor of the Southern railroads, or that relief has been refused to Northern roads.

THE Department of State has transmitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission a letter from United States Consul Twitchell at Kingston, Canada, upon the subject of the interstate commerce law and its effect upon our trade with Canada. The Consul says that since the law went into effect railroad rates on imports from the United States have increased from 25 to 100 per cent. The Consul finds that the result of the law is that "coal dealers are preparing to bring from Nova Scotia coal for all purposes where the Nova Scotia coal can be used, two factories which have always used American coal having put in their orders for Nova Scotia coal. In hardware and pressed tinware I find orders have been changed from American to Canadian houses on account of freight. In groceries there is the same complaint; products of countries outside of the United States now expect to get in by way of British Columbia and Halifax."

GENERAL.

THE relations between Dr. McGlynn and the Vatican continue to be "strained." It is announced from Rome that the contumacious priest is to be formally excommunicated unless he presents himself before the "supreme ecclesiastical authority" within forty days. . . . It is rumored at Boston that the Ocean King, the largest American ship afloat, has been burned at sea while bound from Nanaimo, British Columbia, to San Pedro.

WILLIAM O'BRIEN addressed a meeting of fifteen thousand people in Queen's Park, Toronto, on Tuesday. A dispatch from that city gives the following account of the meeting:

Wild, riotous, and ruffianly were the scenes which disgraced Toronto this evening and irretrievably damaged the cause of Lord Lansdowne. William O'Brien's reception in Toronto this morning, as he stepped off the train from Montreal, was one which seemed to guarantee not merely a quiet but an enthusiastic reception at the meeting this evening. He was escorted to his hotel amid the cheers [illegible]

[illegible]

IN MEMORY OF GARFIELD.

Unveiling of the Statue of the Student, Soldier and Statesman at Washington.

The President, His Cabinet and Many Distinguished Men Present on the Occasion.

President Cleveland's Remarks in Accepting the Monument on Behalf of the Nation.

[Washington special.]

The Army of the Cumberland could not have had a more perfect day for their dedication exercises. Promptly at 11:30 o'clock General Baird, Chief Marshal of the parade, gave the signal for marching, and the procession started. A platoon of mounted police led the way, followed by General Baird and his aids, who preceded a carriage in which was seated Generals Sherman, Sheridan, and Rosecrans, three of the four living commanders of the Army of the Cumberland.

On a grand stand near the statue seats had been arranged for 1,500 persons. Just before 1 o'clock the invited guests began to arrive. James and Harry Garfield were escorted to seats by Gen. Mussey, while Col. Wilson performed a similar office for the aged W. W. Corcoran. Secretary Bayard and Attorney General Garland were among the early arrivals. The members of the Supreme Court of the United States came in a body. The District Judiciary, members of the Court of Claims, and District Commissioners were also present.

At 1 o'clock Gens. Sherman, Sheridan, and Rosecrans and Gov. Curtin arrived in a carriage, just after the head of the procession made its appearance. They were soon followed by President Cleveland, escorted by Gen. Anderson, and Secretary and Mrs. Fairchild, Secretary and Mrs. Lamar, Postmaster General Vilas, and Col. Lamont. Ex-Secretary Windom and ex-Attorney General MacVeagh of President Garfield's Cabinet were among the guests present.

At 1:10 o'clock Marshal Wilson, taking his place on the stand, said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The Society of the Army of the Cumberland, with these distinguished guests, are assembled here to-day for the purpose of unveiling the statue of that eminent statesman and soldier, James A. Garfield. The exercises will be opened with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Olesy.

There was a short lull in the proceedings while a battery of artillery fired a national salute. Gen. Sheridan then introduced the orator of the day, Gen. J. Warren Keifer, who, on the part of the Monument Committee, delivered an address transferring the statue to Gen. Sheridan.

At its conclusion Gen. Sheridan, in behalf of the society, transferred the statue to the President in the following words:

MR. PRESIDENT—This statue which has been unveiled in your presence to-day was erected by the comrades of Gen. Garfield belonging to the Army of the Cumberland. They recognized his merit as a soldier and they wished to pay some testimony to that merit and to his worth as a man. I have the honor, sir, on behalf of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, to ask you as the representative of the American people to accept the statue from their hands as it was given to me. [Applause.]

The President, who arose as Gen. Sheridan began speaking, then began his address, accepting the statue as a gift to the nation.

FELLOW-CITIZENS—In performance of the duty assigned to me on this occasion, I hereby accept, on behalf of the people of the United States, this complete and beautiful statue.

Amid the interchange of fraternal greetings between the survivors of the Army of the Cumberland and their former foes upon the battlefield, and while the Union General and the people's President await burial, the common grief of these magnanimous survivors and mourning citizens found expression in the determination to erect this tribute to American greatness; and thus to-day, in its symmetry and beauty, it presents a sign of animosities forgotten, an [illegible]

[illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for May 29—"The Red Sea."

From the Chicago Standard By Rev. J. M. Ludlow.

The lesson for the above date may be found in Exodus xiv. 19-31. The time included was in 1491 B. C., spring of the year. Place, the Red Sea.

SPECIAL MENTION.

The pillar of cloud and fire. The fire was the same as the Shekinah, the Jewish theological term for "the glory of God" manifested over the mercy-seat between the cherubim (Ex. xl. 35). It is in a cloud that God is represented as leading His people and protecting them from terror, calamity, the heat of the day, sunstroke, pestilence. Out of a cloud He spake to Moses, and, amid thunder and lightning, to the nation itself. His fire is represented as lighting up their path by night, and defending them from unseen dangers; from it He terrifies the enemies of Israel. He threatens those who murmur against him and sends the devouring flame which consumes those who are rebellious. (Harper.) Such guiding signals were used by the ancients, according to the testimony of historians. "Passages are quoted from the classical writers which show that the Persians and Greeks used fire and smoke as signals in their marches. Alexander gave the signal for departure by a fire on a tall pole over his tent. Vegetius and Frontinus mention it as a general custom, especially among the Arabians. The success of some important expeditions, as of Thrasybulus and Timoleon, was attributed by popular superstition to a divine light guiding the leaders. To these well-known instances may be added two of peculiar interest, as the contemporaries of Moses. In an inscription of the ancient empire an Egyptian general is compared to 'a flame streaming in advance of an army.' Thus, too, in a well known papyrus, the commander of an expedition is called 'a flame in the darkness at the head of his soldiers.' By this sign, then, of a pillar of cloud, the Lord showed himself as their leader and general." (Speaker's Com.) As to the spiritual significance of this supernatural column, Kurtz describes it as a "pillar of cloud and fire, which did not ascend from earth, but came down from heaven. In this he dwelt; it rose and fell according to circumstances; it sometimes spread itself out, and at other times was closely condensed; at one time it went before the procession; at another, it hung suspended over it, and again it settled behind it, spreading impenetrable darkness on the one side, and lighting up the darkness of the night on the other." According to Murphy: "Fire, in its various forms of flame, light, heat, and electric flash, is a striking emblem of the great Spirit, and the smoke or vapor which accompanies it is a manifest type of the phenomena which surround and conceal the essence, while at the same time they indicate the presence of the mighty potentate, the pillar that balances itself in mid-air, unsupported by the earth and unshaken by the winds of heaven, serves well to mark the presence of Him who is independent of the laws of nature. And lastly, the pillar of fire and cloud is manifestly not the Lord, nor a figure of the Lord, but the visible and real sign of His actual presence among His people for their guidance, protection, and comfort."

The wall of waters. According to some a literal perpendicular wall or precipice of water was piled upon each side, but the narrative demands no such violent hypothesis. The language is poetical, and though it is said (Ex. 15: 8; Ps. 78: 13) that they "stood as a heap," it is also said that they were "congealed in the heart of the sea," and in like manner of the peaks of Horeb, that they "skipped like rams, and the little hills like lambs." (Ps. 114: 4.) It is better, therefore, to take the word wall in the sense of defense or protection on either side. (For a similar use of the term see Nahum 3: 8.) (Harper.) Robinson computes as follows: "If the part left dry were broad enough to enable them to cross in a body one thousand abreast, which would require a space of more than half a mile in breadth, still the column would be more than two thousand deep, and in all probability could not have extended less than two miles. It would have occupied at least an hour in passing over its own length, or in entering the sea; and deducting this from the longest time intervening before the Egyptians also have entered the sea, there will remain only time enough for the Israelites to have passed, at the most, over a space of three or four miles."

The Red Sea. "This body of water, anciently known as the Arabian Gulf, lies between Africa and Asia, separating Egypt, Nubia, and Abyssinia in the former, from Arabia in the latter. Various explanations of [illegible]

[illegible]

AT THE CAPITAL.

The High Tax Liquor Bill Passed by the House—Of Interest to All Laborers—Trying to Lower Railroad Passenger Rates—The Appropriation Bills—Notes.

LANSING, May 16, 1887.

The main and by far the most important business of the week has been the continuation of the discussion on the pending liquor bill by the House. According to previous arrangement, the consideration of the bill was to be the special order for each and every afternoon until completed. On account of the small number present its consideration was put over until Tuesday, and then three half days were added to the two or three it had received two weeks ago, and late on the afternoon of the 12th the final vote was reached and the bill squeezed through and was recorded passed, yeas 53, nays 45. Representatives Bardwell and W. W. Williams had their votes recorded for the bill, while in fact neither was present or had been for a half hour before the vote was taken. Objection was made at the time the vote was declared against such a plain violation of the Constitution, but the objection was not then considered by the House, and the names were left standing on the record for the credit of the bill. Next day the matter was brought up in the form of a protest, numerously signed by the members, against allowing the record to stand as made, and a resolution, offered by Representative Crocker, requiring the correction of the record, was adopted, yeas 40, nays 15. This will probably end a practice that has been gradually growing in both houses for years, but which ought never to have been tolerated in a single instance.

The bill as finally passed is substantially the Bates high tax bill, the first section of which we gave in our last, and which at one time stood such an apparent probability of being knocked out by the substitute of Mr. McCormick, that left the tax as under the old law, but retained more or less of the stringent provisions of the Bates bill. The low-tax advocates tried in every possible way to secure the adoption of some amendment that should help the liquor and beer men out of paying $800 and $500 for what they now pay $500 and $300, but it couldn't be done, and at the fourth trial, just before the final roll call, it failed by a vote of yeas 36, nays 42—a long ways short of the necessary two-thirds required to amend a bill in the House on third reading.

While the bill passed the House by the bare majority required to pass it (after counting out the two who wanted to vote but didn't), it is believed that it will pass the Senate by a good fair majority, and that too without any very material amendments being made to it. Should the Senate decide to make any amendments of importance, it would no doubt result in a disagreement that would call for a committee of conference and create a jangle that would last nearly or quite to the end of the session.

A GOOD LABOR BILL.

The Governor last week approved Senator Edwards' bill to make all debts owing for labor preferred claims in case of the failure of firms or corporations. This is a most valuable law, and one that will prove a boon to the laboring class. The Senator cites an instance of the failure of the Newaygo Manufacturing Company, where a large force of men are swindled out of their wages due for the past six months, but which, had this law taken effect a few weeks earlier, they could have collected. One strange circumstance in connection with the bill is the fact that it is the first bill of any length or importance to pass both houses this session without the change of a word or syllable. This proves the Senator to be a good lawyer and capable of putting his thoughts on paper in good and grammatical shape. He is a valuable and careful legislator as well.

RAILROAD PASSENGER FARES

have been the text in both houses for at least one day of the past week. There are wide differences as to where to fix the rates and on what basis to do it, and several bills that propose to do one or both. It is quite certain that the rates will be somewhat lowered, but they will not be placed as low as two cents per mile for all portions of the State, as some are clamoring for. The rate is more likely to be fixed at 2½ cents for the Lower Peninsula, and 3½ cents for the Upper. Senator W. J. Babcock's bill proposes to make a sliding scale according to the gross earnings of the roads, but the expense of operating roads is so different that the fairer way would be to base it on the net earnings.

THE APPROPRIATION BILLS

are being crowded to the front as rapidly as possible, and within the next two weeks they will all have been passed—or at least most of all that are likely to be at this session.

NOTES.

The proposed Coldwater school investigation was up in one form or another on two or three different occasions last week, but was each time promptly voted down.

Representative Cross' bill for the regulation of mutual insurance companies was partly considered by the House last week and will be further considered this week. It has the support of the Commissioner of Insurance, and is likely to pass.

OBSERVER.

As to Schools.

In Russia there are 32,000 schools, having each an average of thirty-six scholars. This is one school to 2,500 inhabitants, at a cost of less than a cent a head of the population. In Austria, with 37,000,000 of inhabitants, there are 29,000 schools and 3,000,000 scholars. The average number at each school is 104, and the cost per inhabitant 19 cents. In Italy for 28,000,000 there are 47,000 schools, one school for every 600 people, at a cost of 11 cents a head; the average number of pupils at the schools is 40. In Spain there are 2,000,000 scholars, 29,000 schools, giving an average of 50 in each school, and one school for every 100 inhabitants, as in Italy. The number of schools given for England is 58,000, which is one for every 600 inhabitants, with an average attendance of 72 per school, and a cost of 36 cents. The Germans have a school for every 700, giving a total of 60,000 schools, with 100 pupils in each, and 38 cents per inhabitant. France has 71,000 schools, being one for every 500, with 66 in each school. France would, therefore, seem to have more schools than any other great European country. These schools cost the country 29 cents per inhabitant.

Kindness to Animals.

Listen to the words of a humane judge, spoken 200 years ago. "To deny domestic creatures their proper food, to exact that labor from them which they are not able to perform; to use extremity or cruelty toward them, is a breach of that trust under which the dominion of the creatures was committed to us, and a breach of that justice that is due from men to them. And upon the same account I have ever esteemed it a breach of trust, and have accordingly declined any cruelty to Thy creatures. I have abhorred all sports that consisted in torturing them, and if noxious creatures must be destroyed, or creatures for food must be taken, it hath been my practice to do it in that manner that may be with the least torture or cruelty, always deeming it unlawful to destroy for recreation's sake those creatures that were not hurtful when they lived, or were not profitable when they were killed; ever remembering that Thou hast given us dominion, yet it is under a law of justice, prudence, and moderation, otherwise we should become tyrants, not lords over Thy creatures."

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

THE bill making an appropriation for the Agricultural College caused considerable discussion in the House on the 11th inst. President Willits's statement that he wanted all the money he could get stirred up a hornet's nest. Representative Herrington wanted an addition of appropriation of $10,000 to build a home for the unmarried professors, which was carried by a vote of 87 to 30. This makes the total amount for two years $85,700. After spending nearly two hours discussing this matter, the bill was passed by a vote of 47 to 30. The Senate bill requiring civil license in order to marry was forwarded to a third reading in the House. Both of Senator Moon's bills relating to the distribution of specific tax on mining companies passed the House. The result of these bills will be to nearly double the apportionment of school money, which is now about 11 20 per capita on children of school age. The House favorably considered and passed the bill appropriating $75,000 for an Upper Peninsula prison, also a bill appropriating $20,000 to defray the expense of locating the position of Michigan regiments on the battle-field of Gettysburg and of a commission to do the work of marking them with suitable monuments. It also passed a bill amending an act establishing the board of public works at Grand Rapids. The Manly free and uniform text-book bill substitute, which was favorably reported, passed to third reading. The House completed the consideration in committee of the whole of the liquor tax bill, after rejecting an amendment making the tax as at present—$200 for beer and $400 for whisky. The Senate did nothing beyond confirming the Governor's appointments of jury commissioners for Wayne County.

AFTER over a week of constant discussion, the House on the 12th inst. passed the Bates high-license bill as amended by several of the provisions of the Dickema substitute. The vote on its final passage was: Yeas, 52; nays, 35. The more important changes from the present law are a rise in the retailer's tax on all liquors, both spirituous and malt, to $500, and on wholesalers only to $500; on persons selling at both wholesale and retail $500. All dealers convicted of violations under this act are to forfeit their tax and be barred from again selling liquor for the remainder of the year, and a fine may also be imposed. Saloons are to close at 9 p. m. [illegible] and "closed" shall mean back and front doors. The village or city shall receive only one-half of the tax, the remainder going to the county. No public official shall go on a liquor bond, nor can any one connected with the liquor business. Selling or giving any liquors to minors in places where intoxicants are sold is made prima facie evidence of intent to violate the law. Druggists shall not write a prescription for liquor to be filled by them, and the same prescription shall be only once used. During the time when by the provisions of this act places where liquor is sold or kept for sale must be closed all curtains, screens, and other obstructions that obstruct the view from sidewalk, street, or road in front of said building or bar or place in said room where said liquors are sold or kept for sale shall be removed. Druggists are, however, exempted from the general provisions of the bill, but must give a $2,000 bond, and stringent provisions are incorporated to restrict the business of selling by druggists. In cities and incorporated villages the Common Council may by resolution permit saloons to remain open until 10 p. m. on week days. The Senate devoted the day, in committee of the whole, to the consideration of bills of minor importance.

BILLS making an appropriation of $18,000 for the purchase of additional land for the Michigan Insane Asylum, and making an appropriation of $105,000 for the current expenses of the State Reform School for 1887, passed the Senate on the 13th inst. The reduction of railroad passenger rates was the special order in the House. Although no final action was taken, incidental votes showed a disposition not to make a large cut in rates. The Manley bill, reducing fares to 2 cents in the lower peninsula, was practically defeated by the adoption of the W. A. Bates substitute. This allows a fare of two and a half cents a mile in the Lower Peninsula and three cents in the Upper Peninsula. Roads operating less than twenty miles are exempted. All roads must sell 500-mile tickets for not more than $10. This substitute was adopted by a vote of 41 to 33. The Cross graveyard insurance bill came up by special order, and the whole afternoon session was occupied in its discussion. The iniquities of this system of insurance were pretty thoroughly shown up. Pending a vote upon it, the committee rose and asked leave to sit again.

THE age of consent bill, fixing the age at 14 years, passed the Senate on the 17th, without discussion, and was sent to the Governor for his signature. The Senate also passed the following House bills: To authorize the village of St. Johns, Clinton County, to borrow money for the construction of water works; to change the fiscal year from September to June 30; to enlarge the powers of township officers in the town of Republic, Marquette County; to amend the charter of Detroit City relative to street grading; to raise the age of protection for females to 14 years; to authorize the trustees of religious societies to receive money by gift and bequest; also the Senate bills incorporating the village of Ironwood, Gogebic County; to reincorporate the village of Fremont, Newaygo County; to amend the act reincorporating the village of Three Rivers, St. Joseph County; to amend the laws relative to the fees of appraisers and commissioners upon estates of deceased persons and others of local importance; granting $3,000 to Alphonzo Button, who was so sadly injured several years ago by a cannon explosion at Mason on a Fourth of July celebration while a member of a State military company. The House of Representatives passed bills to regulate the appointment and qualification of notaries public; the Senate bill ceding to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over land to be occupied by the Lake Superior Ship Canal Railway and Iron Company, and the Portage Lake and River Improvement Company; the bills to regulate proceedings in law against corporate bodies; to prevent judges of probate from acting as trustees of insane asylums; to regulate the proposed crossing of one railroad by another. The Rosford resolution for investigating the election frauds in Wayne County was disposed of by the adoption of a substitute, referring the whole matter to the joint Committees on the Judiciary. A resolution was adopted to pay the counsel for defendant in the Dakin impeachment trial $250 each in full compensation. The cross-insurance bill to regulate the "graveyard" business was discussed in committee of the whole.

Major Jimmy Bass.

"Uncle Remus" tells in the Century a story of Southern life, whose scene is laid at the beginning of and during the war. One of the characters is Major Jimmy Bass, who is apt to get excited, and once had "cussed out the town." The following bit gives a pen-picture of the Major's remarkable campaigns at Perdue's Corner: "Sometimes between dozes he would make his way to Perdue's Corner and discuss the various campaigns. How many desperate campaigns were fought on that corner! All the old soldiers, who found it convenient or necessary to stay at home, had in them the instincts and emotions of great commanders. They knew how defeat could be wrung from victory, and how success could be made more overwhelming. At Perdue's Corner Washington City was taken not less than a dozen times a week, and occasionally both New York and Boston were captured and sacked. Of all the generals who fought their battles at the corner, Major Jimmy Bass was the most energetic, the most daring, and the most skillful. As a strategist he had no superior. He had a way of illustrating the feasibility of his plans by drawing them in the sand with his cane. Fat as he was, the Major had a way of 'surrounding' the enemy so that no avenue was left for his escape. At Perdue's Corner he captured Scott and McClellan and Joe Hooker and John Pope, and held their entire forces as prisoners of war."

Necessary Air.

How much air, says an English writer recently, we really want is a question which has given rise to a number of experiments, the most important of which are, perhaps, those by Dr. Parkes and Dr. de Chaumont, on hospital and barrack rooms. It was found by the experiment in those places that in order to get the air pure to the senses—that is to say, to prevent their being any offensive smell—it was necessary to supply 2,000 cubic feet of air to each inmate every hour; while to keep the carbonic acid down to six parts in 10,000 required 3,000 cubic feet of air per hour. It is, of course, out of the question to expect that we should have as good air in any room as we can get outside. In an ordinary calm day, when there does not appear to be any wind blowing, the surface of the body is exposed to something like 32,000 cubic feet of air per hour. We cannot get this in our homes, but it is found that there is no feeling of discomfort or unpleasant smell in our rooms when the carbonic acid given forth in them is not more than six parts in 10,000. Unfortunately rooms answering to these conditions are difficult to get.

A FOUNDLING'S FATE

—OR,—

The Maid of the Tyrolese Valley.

BY H. BIRD, ESQ.

[CONTINUED.]

Here Franzi rushed forward, and flung herself at the feet of her some-time mistress. "Oh, Miss Isidora!" she cried, half-choked with her sobs. "What have I done to you that you should thus seek to ruin me? Think of my friendless condition! You know that I am parentless, with none to care for me! Oh, mother, mother! you who deserted your babe from its birth, where—where are you?"

The vicar's niece stood as still and as rigid as a pillar of stone. "Have you done?" she asked in harsh syllables.

The girl staggered to her feet, and, turning, sank into a chair.

"Come!" added the lady, drawing the blacksmith's mother to the door. "I have spoken only the truth. Come!"

"Stop!" thundered Vigili, placing himself before the two women. "My mother shall not be driven from her home; and she who would have imposed upon and fooled me, who is so beautiful, and looks so innocent, she shall not leave this house alive—I will kill her with my own hand!" And, with those words, the furious man tried to seize Franzi; but some of the neighbors caught hold of him, and held him back, while the girl escaped through the smithy, and tottered out into the open air.

"It is all over!" she murmured to herself. "I have nothing left me now but death. Heaven will pity and forgive me, I hope!"

And she started off down the village street in the direction of Unterwald's house, never pausing once till she found herself in front of its doorporch, with only a strip of garden betwixt herself and it. She stood quite still, for Albert was sitting there. "Heaven protect the dear old home!" she prayed, in a whispering voice. "I thank you all a thousand times for your goodness to me! I shall never see you more, but I will show you that I have not forgotten you." And, hastily opening the little bundle she had brought with her from the cottage, she took out of it the crushed wreath which Albert had worn on the evening of the festival, tore off the ring she had once shown to him, pressed them both to her lips, and afterward tied them up in a handkerchief, which she threw over the hedge.

The little parcel fell at his feet; but she who had thrown it there was already gone.

He picked it up in amaze, and immediately went into the house, in order to examine it. When his eyes fell upon its contents, he seemed to understand all that had happened, and alarm at once possessed him.

He hurried out of the house again, and looked over the gate—up the road and down it. It was starlight, and every object was plainly to be seen.

While he was thus standing, the vicar's niece, who had quitted the blacksmith's in triumph, came hurrying along on her way back home. As she approached the gate, three men, who had just left the village inn, met her face to face.

"Oho!" cried one of them, stopping her. "Here is the mischief-maker of the village—the saint who takes away the character of honest girls. Let us give her a remembrance."

"Agreed!" replied the other two.

With a scream, the woman broke from them, and flew, she knew not whither, the men following, shouting and hooting behind her.

Blindly she passed through the passage, which Albert had flung open to receive her.

"Here—conceal yourself here!" he whispered, dragging her into an outhouse. "Nobody will seek you here," he added, pulling the door after him, and leaving her in darkness.

Then he went back to meet the men, who had already entered the garden.

"She went in here, I'll swear!" said one of them.

"Nonsense!" replied another. "Miss Isidora knows better than seek protection under the roof of him whose good son she sought to injure."

"What is the matter? Whom seek you here?" asked Albert, approaching the intruders.

But before they could answer his inquiry, a woman's voice was heard in the distance, crying out, "Help, help!"

The voice came nearer and nearer, and with it hasty footsteps through the snow.

"Help, help, in heaven's name, reverend sir!" cried Katrina, recognizing Albert.

"Help whom?" he asked, fear shaking all his limbs.

"Franzi!" she gasped, in reply.

"Franzi!" echoed all.

"Something to-night told me to follow her steps, and not to lose sight of her," answered the woman, panting for breath. "When she left the smith's, I was close at her heels, flying after her like the wind; I called to her, but she did not hear me. All of a sudden, she made toward the river, and then was lost to my view. I reached the bank, but could see nothing but the rushing waters, and at my feet this hat and kerchief. Ah, now I understand her words; the poor darling has, indeed, stopped the people's tongues."

By this time Albert's father and mother, bearing a lantern, were added to the rest.

"Oh, father," exclaimed the young man, falling on old Unterwald's shoulder, "poor Franzi has rushed out of the world, and I am the unhappy cause of her death. See, here is her parting gift to me—her ring."

"A ring!" echoed Madame Unterwald, taking the little golden hoop out of her son's hand, and holding it to the light. "Ah, I recognize it! It was found round her infant neck. It must have belonged to her mother, the unnatural creature! An old gold ring with three stars engraved inside it."

From the outhouse there now proceeded a woman's agonized cry. But no one noticed it, for all the men, followed by the devoted Katrina, had hurried away in the direction of the river.

It was a hopeless quest.

After two hours' absence, Albert and his father returned home with heavy hearts.

The former looked into the outhouse, where he had left the vicar's niece; it was empty.

CHAPTER VII.

On the following morning, Albert made inquiries after Miss Isidora, but he was told that she had not been home all night, and that the vicar was in almost a distracted state about her. But day followed day, and no news whatever was heard of her.

Franzi's fate seemed uncertain, and remained so until the spring time came, and the river became lower. Then a female corpse, in peasant's dress, was found, but its features were unrecognizable. No one, for a moment, doubted but it was the body of poor Franzi.

Albert's time of suspension being past, the vicar dead, and the young priest's fame cleared in every way, he was presented with the vicarage, and the living annexed to it.

The wicked schoolmaster was discharged, and another was engaged—one who was not too obstinate to work hand in hand with the new vicar, whose name, all through Volothal, was ever the theme of constant commendation. Every one who stood in need of a friend sought the wise counsel of the good priest, by whom the hungry were fed, the naked clothed, and the unhappy comforted.

The pain that had once wrung his heart was gone, and calmness now reigned in it. Nevertheless he always looked sad, as one over whose head a mighty storm had passed. He often thought of the friend of his early youth—of Franzi—and prayed that her only sin might be forgiven.

* * * * * *

A whole year had gone by, when, one day, a letter bearing the post-mark of an adjoining city arrived at the vicarage, praying him to come to one who was fast passing away from the world.

The worthy priest lost not a moment in attending the summons; and the following morning found him at the door of a cottage, the servant of which admitted him, and led him up stairs into a room, where she left him. As the door closed behind her, another opened, and a female figure entered.

It was Miss Isidora. Yes, despite her changed face, and her bleached hair, he knew her in a moment.

"Is it you, Miss Isidora?" he exclaimed, starting. "What mockery is this? Why am I brought hither?"

"Nay, you are not mocked, reverend sir," she replied, very mournfully. "You are summoned here to visit a death-bed. But, first, I must render you an explanation—I must tell you my tale."

Albert took the chair to which her finger pointed, and sat down, a vague fear creeping into his heart.

"Do not imagine that I am the same woman whom you formerly knew," she commenced. "As my face is changed, so is my soul purified. The hatred that once filled my breast is gone, and love lives in its place. You remember that terrible night, when you afforded me shelter and protection, and what happened after I was hidden in the outhouse? Well, I heard every word that Katrina said, and also about the ring with the three stars engraved on it, and a light seemed to shine upon me, and the darkness went out of me forever. My father was a rich man, and I was his only child," she went on. "But I was not good, I was vain, ambitious, and false-hearted. I had a crowd of suitors whom it was my daily delight to deceive and torture. But I met my punishment before long, for one came who succeeded in deceiving me. For a time I managed to preserve the secret of my downfall from every eye. At length I discovered that I should soon be a mother. I was bold, and I did not tremble even then. I asked my honorable and trusting father to allow me to visit an old schoolmate, and he consented. I must tell you that I did not travel far before my unhappy child was born. I never saw it. I left it with a woman, who carried it to a place where it would be certain to be quickly found, and——"

"Heavenly powers! What dire forebodings you awaken in me!" Albert cried.

"Your forebodings do not deceive you, reverend sir," the lady rejoined. "Judge me as you will, and curse me as I deserve to be cursed. Well, I learned that the town took charge of the foundling; and afterward I had to discover that the girl whom I had so persecuted, and driven to despair, was my own daughter!"

The last words were almost shrieked out, and Miss Isidora, overpowered with grief and shame, slid from her chair, and buried her face in its cushion.

The good priest remained speechless.

"When first I met the girl years ago," resumed the speaker, "I felt my heart drawn toward her. My father died, and I then went to live with my uncle. I now began to play a part—to seem the woman I was not. I hated every body, and I learned to feel delight in making people suffer. My youth was fled, and with it every hope. Judge how I felt when I heard your mother speak of the ring with the three stars, and learnt who was its wretched owner. At one moment I felt inclined to rush forth, and reveal all to you. But I chose to act otherwise. I left my hiding-place, and flew toward the river. 'If Franzi has sought death, so will I!' I cried, inwardly."

Here Miss Isidora paused again, quite overcome with emotion.

Albert raised her from her knees, and placed her once more in her chair.

"What more—what more?" he exclaimed. "Oh, my whole soul goes forth to meet your words!"

"I soon reached the river bank, and by the light of the moon and the stars I followed her footprints in the snow. I saw that they went toward the water. But, further on, I remarked that there were footmarks as of some one coming from the river. I did not understand this. I sought further, and, praise be to Providence, I found her at last, lying among some thick bushes, quite insensible, and with her clothes all stiff with the water that had frozen on them.

"Merciful powers!" uttered Albert. "It is no dream, I hope! Oh, my heart, of what a heavy load thou wilt be relieved if all this be true! Go on—go on!" he continued, turning to the lady. "Tell me all! What happened further? Does Franzi still live?"

"She does. We have lived here for some time, content that the world should believe us both dead. I wrote to my uncle, and told him everything, and he arranged for me all matters relative to the property I possessed. My life for the last twelve months has been one of almost unalloyed happiness; a heaven on earth seemed open to me. But now all is changed, and I am become one of the most miserable women in creation."

"Impossible! With such a daughter you can not be otherwise than happy."

"Hush! She knows not who she is; I have not dared to tell her. I feared that she would turn from such a mother as I with horror and loathing. Could I say to her, 'I am the heartless parent who deserted her new-born babe, and left it to the mercy of the wide world, caring nothing whether it lived or perished?' Oh, how often I have longed to take her in my arms and call her my own! But when sometimes the words rose to my lips, a choking sensation would come in my throat and prevent my speaking, and the words were left unsaid."

"Where—where is she?"

"She is here. Can you bear to hear the sad truth?"

"What more have you to tell?" he demanded anxiously.

"I am about to lose her," the lady answered, in unsteady accents.

"You are about to lose her!" echoed Albert. "I do not comprehend you."

"She is dangerously ill—dying!"

For an instant Albert's lips quivered, and a cold shiver pervaded his frame; in the next he was himself again.

"It was her wish to see you once more, and I obeyed her wish seeing no sin in it."

"You did well," he returned.

"She is in yonder chamber, impatiently expecting you."

Albert turned aside his head, and silently wiped away the tears he could not repress.

"Are you ready?" she asked.

"I am."

"But one word more. Before you enter, pronounce me your forgiveness."

"Not by words alone; my acts shall prove that I pardon you."

And he gave her his hand, and she straightway led him into Franzi's chamber.

There, on the bed, lay a wasted form, by the side of which he fell on his knees. He saw at once that there was no hope for the sick girl, of whom nothing remained of her former self save her honest dark eyes.

She turned to him.

"Albert," she began, very feebly, "this is more than I had dared to hope for. Now I shall leave the world without regret. Can you pardon me.

"For what? I have nothing to utter save thanksgivings. I have mourned you dead, and have been filled with regret for your loss."

Here Franzi's white cheeks flushed. She tried to speak, but was too weak to do so at the moment.

Her mother watched her with aching eyes, and gently slid her arm beneath the invalid's pillow.

"Oh, how good you are to me!" Franzi said, with a grateful look. "I shall not live to repay you for all the acts of kindness you have rendered me. I shall not have time to do so," she added, meaningly, and with a smile.

"Oh, do not tear my heart!" wept the other.

"I am so happy—then wherefore do you shed tears?—happier, almost, than when I wore the wreath on the festival," sighed the dying one.

"And who knows but there is some still greater felicity in store for you?" said Albert. "If I could bring you news of your mother, what would you say?"

"My—my mother!" gasped Franzi, trying to raise herself upon her pillow, and afterward sinking back upon it. "My mother? Does she live?"

"She does," he replied.

"Can I see her?"

"You shall see her when you are strong enough to bear the joy her presence will bring to you," answered the priest.

"Where is she—oh, where?" cried Franzi, the roses once more blooming in her face.

"She is here, my child," Miss Isidora answered, falling sobbing across the bed. "Oh, hate me not—thrust me not from you."

"My mother! Is this true? Why do you not take me in your arms, then, and press me to your bosom, that I may say I am on my mother's breast—if only for once and the last time?"

"My daughter—my good, good daughter!" the wretched woman exclaimed, taking Franzi in her arms, and pressing her closely.

"Oh, my mother!" faintly dropped the expiring girl.

Then there was silence for some few seconds, and she was laid back on her pillow, where she remained, looking as if she had already ceased to breathe.

By and by she felt for Albert's hand, then for that of her mother, and placed them together; as she did so, saying, in broken accents, "My mother—my brother."

After that the gentle spirit of Franzi at once took its flight.

* * * * * *

Albert returned to Volothal, and worked with increased zeal; and, after a short time, Isidora came back to the village, where she spent her money and her time in performing all sorts of charitable and womanly acts. Her secret lay buried with Franzi.

When Albert had worked at his sacred calling for fifty-six years, there was another festival given in his honor at Volothal. But the friends who made merry at his first had most of them passed away, and Albert's parents slept in peace.

One morning, a few days after the above-mentioned festive occasion, the priest's chamber-door not being opened at its accustomed hour, his servant entered the room, and found his master in his old armchair, with his head resting on his breast, and a smile on his lips. On the table before him rested a holy volume. Albert had gone to Him who waited.

Many, many years have fled since Albert Unterwald's death. But among those of the village who were children when he lived, and knew his many virtues, he is still fondly remembered; and they recount to others who have been narrated to them of him, and shake their heads when any other pastor is praised, observing "Well, well; we say nothing against him, but such a man as our late vicar we shall never see again."

[THE END.]

An Abe Lincoln Story.

I heard a story repeated the other day as an "Abe Lincoln story," but which is older, and must have slumbered somewhere for a good while. Certainly it is not one that the politicians would be likely to repeat on the stump, because it reflects on their craft. In a little group at the Parker House a rather noisy young politician from the City Hall was echoing the sentiments of Henry Watterson and defending the principle that the spoils belong to the victor.

"I see no reason," said he, "why any Republican should be kept in a Federal office here in Boston while I, a Democrat, who have worked hard for the party, am left out in the cold."

"That reminds me," said an elderly man, whom all the town would recognize if I were to describe him, "of an incident that I heard of early in Lincoln's administration. There was a local politician who went on to Washington to get an office that he felt sure only awaited his application to be given to him. In a couple of weeks he came back.

"'Well, did you get your office?' his friends asked him.

"'No,' said he.

"'Did you see the President?'

"'Yes, of course.'

"'What did he say?'

"'Well, we went in and stated our errand. He heard us patiently, and then said: "Gentlemen, I am sorry that I have no office for Mr. ——, but if I can't give you that I can tell you a story."

"'We thought best to hear the story and let him go on.'

"Once there was a certain King," he said, "who kept an astrologer to forewarn him of coming events, and especially to tell him whether it were going to rain when he wanted to go on hunting expeditions. One day he started off for the forest with his train of ladies and lords for a grand hunt, when the train met a farmer, riding a donkey, on the road.

"'Good-morning, farmer,' said the King.

"'Good-morning, King,' said the farmer, 'where are you folks going?'

"'Hunting,' said the King.

"'Lord, you'll all get wet!' said the farmer.

"The King trusted his astrologer, of course, and went to the forest; but by mid-day there came on a terrific storm, that drenched and buffeted the whole party. When the King returned to his palace he had the astrologer decapitated, and sent for the farmer to take his place.

"'Law's sake,' said the farmer when he arrived, 'it ain't me that knows when it's going to rain; it's my donkey. When it's goin' to be fair weather, that donkey always carries his ears forward, so. When it's goin' to rain, he puts 'em backward, so.'

"'Make the donkey the court astrologer!' shouted the King.

"It was done. But the King always declared that the appointment was the greatest mistake he ever made in his life.

"'Lincoln stopped here.'

"'Why did he say it was a mistake?' we asked him. 'Didn't the donkey do his duty?'

"'Yes,' said the President, 'but after that time every donkey in the country wanted an office.'"

The shout of laughter that echoed from the hotel corridor at the telling of this narrative would have made the fortune of two or three entirely new stories.—Taverner, in Boston Post.

Manifest Destiny.

Omaha mother—My husband, are you sure Mr. Moneybags would be willing to have his daughter marry a fortuneless youth?

Husband—I heard him say distinctly that he married for love, and was determined that his children should, no matter what the difference in circumstances or social grade.

"Then our George can marry an heiress. Isn't it fortunate?"

"I know George is badly smitten in that direction, but I'm pretty sure from his gloomy demeanor that he meets with no encouragement."

"That's his own fault, then. She loves him devotedly, madly. She'd go crazy if she didn't get him."

"My gracious! How did you discover that?"

"She talked with me an hour yesterday about different members of our family, and never mentioned George once."—Omaha World.

SIZE ain't everything. A watch ticking can be heard further than a bed ticking.

THE THIRD WATCH.

The Time When Criminals Do Their Worst.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Exhorts His Hearers to Give Money to the Poor Rather than Tracts—Gamblers the Most Heartless of All Evil Doers.

BROOKLYN, May 15.—At the tabernacle this morning there were the same great throngs of people as usual, overflowing the main audience room into the corridors, and from the corridors into the street. This, the largest church in America, is more and more inadequate to hold the people, as the years go by. The pastor, the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, D. D., took for his text this morning: "Watchman, what of the night?" Isaiah xxi. 2. He said:

When night came down on Babylon, Nineveh, and Jerusalem, they needed careful watching, otherwise the incendiary's torch might have been thrust into the very heart of the metropolitan splendor, or enemies, marching from the hills, might have forced the gates. All night long, on top of the wall and in front of the gates, might be heard the measured step of the watchman on his solitary beat; silence hung in air, save as some passer by raised the question: "Watchman, what of the night?"

It is to me a deeply suggestive and solemn thing to see a man standing guard by night. It thrilled through me, as at the gate of an arsenal in Charleston, the question once smote me: "Who comes there?" followed by the sharp command: "Advance and give the countersign." Every moral teacher stands on picket, or patrols the wall as watchman. His work is to sound the alarm; and whether it be in the first watch, in the second watch, in the third watch, or in the fourth watch, to be vigilant until the daybreak flings its "morning glories" of blooming cloud across the arching trellis of the sky.

The ancients divided their night into four parts—the first watch, from 6 to 9; the second, from 9 to 12; the third, from 12 to 3; the fourth, from 3 to 6.

I speak now of the city in the third watch, or from 12 to 3 o'clock.

I never weary of looking upon the life and brilliancy of the city in the first watch. That is the hour when the stores are closing. The laboring men, having quitted the scaffolding and the shops, are on their way home. It rejoices me to give them my seat in the city car. They have stood and hammered away all day. Their feet are weary. They are exhausted with the tug of work. They are mostly cheerful. With appetites sharpened on the swift turner's wheel and the carpenter's whetstone, they seek the evening meal. The clerks, too, have broken away from the counter, and with brain weary of the long line of figures, and the whims of those who go a shopping, seek the face of mother, or wife and child. The merchants are unharnessing themselves from their anxieties on their way up the street. The boys that lock up are heaving away at the shutters, shoving the heavy bolts and taking a last look at the fire to see that all is safe. The streets are thronged with young men setting out from the great centers of bargain making.

Let idlers clear the street, and give right of way to the besweated artisans and merchants. They have earned their bread, and are now on their way home to get it.

The lights in full jet hang over 10,000 evening repasts—the parents at either end of the table, the children between. Thank God, "who setteth the solitary in families."

A few hours later and all the places of amusement, good and bad, are in full tide. Lovers of art, catalogue in hand, stroll through the galleries and discuss the pictures. The ballroom is resplendent with the rich apparel of those who, on either side of the white, glistening boards, await the signal from the orchestra. The footlights of the theater flash up, the bell rings, and the curtain rises, and out from the gorgeous scenery glide the actors, greeted with the vociferation of the expectant multitudes. Concert halls are lifted into enchantment with the warble of one songstress, or swept out on a sea of tumultuous feeling by the blast of brazen instruments. Drawing rooms are filled with all gracefulness of apparel, with all sweetness of sound, with all splendor of manner; mirrors are catching up and multiplying the scene until it seems as if in infinite corridors there were garlanded groups advancing and retreating.

The outdoor air rings with laughter and with the moving to of thousands of the great promenades. The dashing span, adrip with the foam of the long country ride, rushes past as you halt at the curbstone.

Mirth, revelry, beauty, fashion, magnificence mingle in the great metropolitan picture, until the thinking man goes home to think more seriously and the praying man to pray more earnestly.

A beautiful and overwhelming thing is the city in the first and second watches of the night.

But the clock strikes 12, and the third watch has begun.

The thunder of the city has rolled out of the air. The slightest sounds cut the night with such distinctness as to attract your attention. The tinkling of the bell of the street-car in the distance and the baying of the dog; the stamp of the horse in the next street. The slamming of a saloon door; the hiccough of the drunkard; the shrieks of the steam whistle, five miles away—Oh, how suggestive, my friends, the third watch of the night!

There are honest men passing up and down the street. Here is a city missionary who has been carrying a scuttle of coal to that poor family in that dark place. Here is an undertaker going up the steps of a building from which there comes a bitter cry, which indicates that the destroying angel has smitten the first born. Here is a minister of religion who has been giving the sacrament to a dying Christian. Here is a physician passing along in great haste, the messenger a few steps ahead hurrying on to the household.

Nearly all the lights have gone out in the dwellings, for it is the third watch of the night. The light in the window is the light of the watcher, for the medicines must be administered, and the fever must be watched, and the restless tossing off of the coverlid must be resisted, and the ice must be kept on the hot temples, and the perpetual prayer must go up from hearts soon to be broken.

Oh, the third watch of the night! What a stupendous thought—a whole city at rest!

Weary arm preparing for to-morrow's toil; hot brain being cooled off; rigid muscles relaxed; excited nerves soothed; the white hair of the octogenarian in thin drifts across the pillow; fresh fall of flakes on snow already fallen; childhood with its dimpled hands thrown out on the pillow, and with every breath taking in a new store of fun and frolic. Third watch of the night! God's slumberless eye will look. Let one great wave of refreshing slumber roll over the heart of the great town, submerging care, and anxiety, and worriment, and pain.

Let the city sleep. But, my friends, be not deceived. There will be thousands tonight who will not sleep at all. Go up that dark alley and be cautious where you tread lest you fall over the prostrate form of a drunkard lying on his own doorstep. Look about you, lest you feel the garroter's hug. Look through the broken window-pane and see what you can see. You say "Nothing." Then listen. What is it? "God help us!" No footlights, but tragedy ghastlier and mightier than Ristori or Edwin Booth ever enacted. No light, no fire, no bread, no hope. Shivering in the cold, they have had no food for twenty-four hours. You say "Why don't they beg?" They do, but they get nothing. You say: "Why don't they deliver themselves over to the almshouse?" Ah, you would not ask that if you ever heard the bitter cry of a man or a child when told that he must go to the almshouse.

"Oh!" you say, "they are vicious poor, and, therefore, they do not deserve our sympathy." Are they vicious? So much more need they your pity. The Christian poor, God helps them. Through their night there twinkles the round, merry star of hope, and through the broken window-pane they see the crystals of Heaven; but the vicious poor, they are more to be pitied. Their last light has gone out. You excuse yourself from helping them by saying they are so bad, they brought this trouble on themselves. I reply, where I give ten prayers for the innocent who are suffering I will give twenty prayers for the guilty who are suffering.

The fisherman, when he sees a vessel dashing into the breakers, comes out from his hut and wraps the warmest flannels around those who are most chilled and most bruised and most battered in the wreck; and I want you to know that these vicious poor have had two shipwrecks—shipwreck of the body, shipwreck of the soul—shipwreck for time, shipwreck for eternity. Pity, by all means, the innocent who are suffering, but pity more the guilty.

Pass on through the alley. Open the door. "O," you say, "it is locked." No, it is not locked. It has never been locked. No burglar would be tempted to go in there to steal anything. The door is never locked. Only a broken chair stands against the door. Shove it back. Go in. Strike a match. Now look. Beastliness and rags. See those glaring eyeballs. Be careful now what you say. Do not utter any suspicion, if you value your life. What is that red mark on the wall? It is the mark of a murderer's hand!

Look at those eyes rising up out of the darkness and out from the straw in the corner, coming toward you, and as they come near you your light goes out. Strike another match. Ah! this is a babe, not like those beautiful children presented in baptism. This little one never smiled; it never will smile. A flower flung on an awfully barren beach. Oh! heavenly Shepherd, fold that little one in Thy arms. Wrap around you your shawl or your coat tighter, for the cold wind sweeps through. Strike another match. Ah! is it possible that that young woman's scarred and bruised face was ever looked into by maternal tenderness? Utter no scorn. Utter no harsh word. No ray of hope ever will dawn on that brow. But the light has gone out. Do not strike another light. It would be a mockery to kindle another light in such a place as that. Pass out and pass down the street. Our cities of Brooklyn and New York and all our great cities are full of such homes, and the worst time (is) the third watch of the night.

Do you know it is in this third watch of the night that criminals do their worst work? It is the criminal's watch.

At 8:30 o'clock you will find them in the drinking saloon, but toward 12 they go to their garrets, they get out their tools, then they start on the street. Watching on either side for the police, they go to their work of darkness. This is a burglar, and the false key will soon touch the store lock. This is an incendiary, and before morning there will be a light on the sky and a cry of "Fire! fire!" This is an assassin, and to-morrow morning there will be a dead body in one of the vacant lots. During the daytime these villains in our cities lounge about, some asleep and some awake, but when the third watch of the night arrives, their eye keen, their brain cool, their arm strong, their foot fleet to fly or pursue, they are ready.

Many of these poor creatures were brought up in that way. They were born in a thieves' garret. Their childish toy was a burglar's dark lantern. The first thing they remember was their mother bandaging the brow of their father, struck by the police club. They began by robbing boys' pockets, and now they have come to dig the underground passage to the cellar of the bank and are preparing to blast the gold vault.

Just so long as there are neglected children on the street just so long we will have these desperadoes. Some one, wishing to make a good Christian point and to quote a passage of Scripture, expecting to get a Scriptural passage in answer, said to one of these poor lads, cast out and wretched: "When your father and your mother forsake you, who then will take you up?" And the boy said: "The perlice! the perlice!"

In the third watch of the night gambling does its worst work. What though the hours be slipping away, and though the wife be waiting in the cheerless home? Stir up the fire. Bring on more drinks. Put up more stakes. That commercial house that only a little while ago put out a sign of copartnership will this winter be wrecked on a gambler's table. There will be many a money till that will spring a leak. A member of Congress gambled with a member-elect and won $120,000. The old way of getting a living is so slow. The old way of getting a fortune is so stupid. Come, let us toss up and see who shall have it. And so the work goes on, from the wheezing wretches pitching pennies in a rum grocery up to the millionaire gambler in the stock market.

In the third watch of the night pass down the streets of these cities, and you hear the click of the dice and the sharp, keen stroke of the ball on the billiard table. At these places merchant princes dismount, and legislators, tired of making laws, take a respite in breaking them. All classes of people are robbed by this crime—the importer of foreign silks and the dealer in Chatham street pocket handkerchiefs. The clerks of the store take a hand after the shutters are put up, and the officers of the court while away their time while the jury is out.

In Baden-Baden, when that city was the greatest of all gambling places on earth, it was no unusual thing the next morning, in the woods around about the city, to find the suspended bodies of suicides. Whatever be the splendor of surroundings, there is no excuse for this crime. The thunders of eternal destruction roll in the deep rumble of that gambling tenpin alley, and as men come out to join the long procession of sin, all the drums of death beat the dead march of a thousand souls.

In one year, in the city of New York, there were $7,000,000 sacrificed at the gaming table. Perhaps some of your friends have been smitten of this sin. Perhaps some of you have been smitten by it.

Perhaps there may be a stranger in the house this morning come from some of the hotels. Look out for those agents of iniquity who tarry around about the hotels and ask you: "Would you like to see the city?" "Yes." "Have you ever been in that splendid building up town?" "No." Then the villain will undertake to show you what he calls the "lions" and the "elephants," and after a young man, through morbid curiosity or through badness of soul, has seen the "lions" and the "elephants," he will be on enchanted ground. Look out for these men who move around the hotels with sleek hats—always sleek hats—and patronizing air, and unaccountable interest about your welfare and entertainment. You are a fool if you cannot see through it. They want your money.

In Chestnut street, Philadelphia, while I was living in that city, an incident occurred which was familiar to me there. In Chestnut street a young man went into a gambling saloon, lost all his property, then blew his brains out, and before the blood was washed from the floor by the maids the comrades were shuffling cards again. You see there is more mercy in the highwayman for the belated traveler on whose body he heaps the stones; there is more mercy in the frost for the flower that it kills, there is more mercy in the hurricane that shivers the steamer on the Long Island coast, than there is mercy in the heart of a gambler for his victim.

In the third watch of the night, also, drunkenness does its worst. The drinking will be respectable at 8 o'clock in the evening, a little flushed at 9, talkative and garrulous at 10, at 11 blasphemous, at 12 the hat falls off, at 1 the man falls to the floor asking for more drink. Strewn through the drinking saloons of the city, brothers, husbands, sons, as good as you are by nature, perhaps better.

In the high circles of society it is hushed up. A merchant prince, if he gets noisy and uncontrollable, is taken by his fellow revelers, who try to get him to bed, or take him home, where he falls flat in the entry. Do not wake up the children. They have had disgrace enough. Do not let them know it. Hush it up. But sometimes it cannot be hushed up, when the rum touches the brain and the man becomes thoroughly frenzied. Such a one came home, having been absent for some time, and during his absence his wife had died, and she lay in the next room prepared for the obsequies, and he went in and dragged her by the locks, and shook her out of her shroud, and pitched her out of the window.

Oh, when rum touches the brain you cannot hush it up. My friends, you see all around about you the need that something radical be done. You do not see the worst. In the midnight meetings at London a great multitude has been saved. We want a few hundred Christian men and women to come down from the highest circles of society to toil amid these wandering and destitute ones and kindle up a light in the dark alley, even the gladness of heaven.

Do not go wrapped in your fine furs and from your well-filled tables with the idea that pious talk is going to stop the gnawing of an empty stomach or to warm stockingless feet. Take bread, take raiment, take medicine as well as take prayer. There is a great deal of common sense in what the poor woman said to the city missionary when he was telling her how she ought to love God and serve Him. "Oh," she said, "if you were as poor and cold as I am, and as hungry, you could think of nothing else."

A great deal of what is called Christian work goes for nothing, for the simple reason it is not practical; as after the battle of Antietam a man got out of an ambulance with a bag of tracts, and he went distributing the tracts, and George Stuart, one of the best Christian men in this country, said to him: "What are you distributing tracts for now? There are 3,000 men bleeding to death. Bind up their wounds and then distribute the tracts."

We want more common sense in Christian work, taking the bread of this life in one hand and the bread of the next life in the other hand. No such inapt work as that done by the Christian man who, during the last war, went into a hospital with tracts, and, coming to the bed of a man whose legs had been amputated, gave him a tract on the sin of dancing. I rejoice before God that never are sympathetic words uttered, never a prayer offered, never a Christian almsgiving indulged in but it is blessed.

I could give you the history, in a minute, of one of the best friends I ever had. Outside of my own family, I never had a better friend. He welcomed me to my home at the West. He was of splendid personal appearance, but he had an ardor of soul and a warmth of affection that made me love him like a brother. I saw men coming out of the saloons and gambling hells, and they surrounded my friend, and they took him at the weak point, his social nature; and I saw him going down, and I had a fair talk with him—for I never yet saw a man you could not talk with on the subject of his habits, if you talked with him in the right way. I said to him: "Why don't you give up your bad habits and become a Christian?" I remember now just how he looked, leaning over the counter, as he replied: "I wish I could. Oh, sir, I should like to be a Christian, but I have gone so far astray I can't get back."

So the time went on. After awhile the day of sickness came. I was summoned to his sick bed. I hastened. It took me but a very few moments to get there. I was surprised as I went in. I saw him in his ordinary dress, fully dressed, lying on top of the bed. I gave him my hand, and he seized it convulsively, and said: "Oh, how glad I am to see you! Sit down there." I sat down and he said: "Mr. Talmage, just where you sit now my mother sat last night. She has been dead twenty years. Now I don't want you to think I am out of my mind, or that I am superstitious, but, sir, she sat there last night just as certainly as you sit there now—the same cap and apron and spectacles. It was my old mother—she sat there." Then he turned to his wife, and said: "I wish you would take these strings off the bed; somebody is wrapping strings around me all the time; I wish you would stop that annoyance." She said: "There is nothing here." Then I saw it was delirium.

He said: "Just where you sit now my mother sat, and she said: 'Roswell, I wish you would do better—I wish you would do better.' I said: 'Mother, I wish I could do better; I try to do better, but I can't. Mother, you used to help me; why can't you help me now?' And, sir, I got out of bed, for it was a reality, and I went to her, and threw my arms around her neck, and I said: 'Mother, I will do better, but you help; I can't do this alone.'" I knelt down and prayed. That night his soul went to the Lord that made it.

Arrangements were made for the obsequies. The question was raised whether they should bring him to the church. Somebody said: "You cannot bring such a dissolute man as that into the church." I said: "You will bring him in church; he stood by me when he was alive, and I will stand by him when he is dead. Bring him." As I stood in the pulpit and saw them carrying the body up the aisle, I felt as if I could weep tears of blood.

On one side the pulpit sat his little child of 8 years, a sweet, beautiful little girl, that I had seen him hug convulsively in his better moments. He put on her all jewels, all diamonds, and gave her all pictures and toys, and then he would go away, as if hounded by an evil spirit, to his cups and the house of shame—a fool to the correction of the stocks. She looked up wonderingly. She knew not what it all meant. She was not old enough to understand the sorrow of an orphan child.

On the other side the pulpit sat the men who had ruined him, they were the men who had poured the wormwood into the orphan's cup; they were the men who had bound him hand and foot. I knew them. How did they seem to feel? Did they weep? No. Did they say: "What a pity that so generous a man should be destroyed." No. Did they sigh repentingly over what they had done? No, they sat there, looking as vultures look at the carcass of a lamb whose heart they have ripped out. So they sat and looked at the coffin lid, and I told them the judgment of God upon those who had destroyed their fellows. Did they reform? I was told they were in the places of iniquity that night after my friend was laid in Oakwood cemetery, and they blasphemed and they drank. Oh! how merciless men are, especially after they have destroyed you. Do not look to men for comfort or help. Look to God.

But there is a man who will not reform. He says: "I won't reform." Well, then, how many acts are there in a tragedy? I believe five.

Act the first of the tragedy: A young man starting off from home; parents and sisters weeping to have him go. Wagon rising over the hill. Farewell kiss flung back. Ring the bell and let the curtain fall.

Act the second: The marriage altar. Full organ. Bright lights. Long white veil trailing through the aisle. Prayer and congratulation, and exclamation of "How well she looks!"

Act the third: A woman waiting for staggering steps. Old garments stuck into the broken window-panes. Marks of hardship on the face. The biting of the nails of bloodless fingers. Neglect, and cruelty, and despair. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

Act the fourth: Three graves in a dark place—grave of the child that died for lack of medicine, grave of the wife that died of a broken heart, grave of the man that died of dissipation. Oh! what a blasted heath with three graves! Plenty of weeds, but no flowers. Ring the bell and let the curtain drop.

Act the fifth: A destroyed soul's eternity. No light. No music. No hope. Anguish coiling the serpents around the heart. Blackness of darkness forever. But I cannot look any longer. Woe! woe! I close my eyes to this last act of the tragedy. Quick! quick! Ring the bell and let the curtain drop. "Rejoice, O, young man, in thy youth, and let thy heart rejoice in the days of thy youth; but know thou that for all these things God will bring you into judgment." "There is a way that seemeth right to a man, but the end thereof is death."

A DEMOCRAT ON THE WAR PATH.

Colonel Pat Donan Excoriates the Cleveland Administration.

In spite of all the gush and twaddle and molasses-and-water slop of toadying organs and office-hankering scribblers, this administration strikes me as a dreary, dismal, damned failure. It came in promising everything, and it has done next to nothing, and much of the little it has done had better been left undone. The country has for years groaned under a system of war taxation in time of peace that piles up in the Treasury $12,000,000 a month of revenue excess. An exaction so monstrous would drive almost any other nation on earth to revolution. This much trumpeted Democratic-reform administration has done nothing to lighten this intolerable burden. These swelling millions of millions of useless and wicked surplus must either be hoarded in the Treasury as an incentive to political burglary, or spent in knocking the bottom out of the best financial system on the globe by buying up the bonds on which it is based, and that means an indefinite contraction of the currency and ultimate disaster to every business interest. This vastly bepuffed administration has done nothing to remedy this evil and dangerous condition of affairs. It has done nothing toward amending the inequalities and the iniquities of the tariff, which its whole party had denounced for years; it has done nothing to curb the importation of millions of foreign outcasts, the paupers and criminals of all creation. It has done nothing to promote the purity of the ballot box; it has done nothing to restore American commerce and shipping to their once proud pre-eminence on the seas; it has done nothing to foster trade relations with our American neighbor nations.

Some things, I admit, it has done. It has married two or three new wives; it has baptized one standard-oil baby with as much flummery and flunkeyism as if it had been a Spanish Infanta with 100 grandfathers, or a royal Russian Czar cub with a name as long as a fishing pole; it has brought back poodles into fashion, and inaugurated more nauseating tricks of servile fawning and soft-squashy panegyric than any other outfit that ever wallowed in the White House; it has demoralized the finest postal service under the sun by appointing tens of thousands of ignorant and incompetent substitutes for trained officials; it has sent a horde of ancient and uncouth fossils of the ichthyosaurian period in politics to represent our mighty New World Republic at foreign courts, and render us a laughing-stock to all the world. And it has passed and signed that masterpiece of malignant jackassery, the interstate commerce destruction bill, which, if enforced, will speedily drive the whole country into bankruptcy.

The President's Exclusiveness.

The statement that President Cleveland has caused a private entrance to be cut into his private box in one of the Washington theaters, so that he may not be annoyed by the vulgar curiosity of the common herd when he goes to the play will not be received with complacency by the Jeffersonian Democracy. Many of them will re-echo Mr. Watterson's caustic remarks on this theme:

"At a time when all that is mean and sordid in our shoddy society is turning itself inside out to ape the manners of the titled and rich aristocracies of Christendom; when ill-gotten wealth is tumbling heels over head in the scramble for a coarse, corrupting pre-eminence in parvenuism; when the old stately courtesy of simple manhood and womanhood, which once were a charm all their own in our public walks and ways, are being ingulfed in the hog-wallow of the new-made greatness, with its imported trappings, it was most fit and needful that a Democratic President and his Democratic administration should rise above the mud and the mire of fraud and cant, and plant themselves upon the high and solid ground of self-honoring reality, with its homely lessons of modesty and truth. A private entrance to a private box because the crowd 'annoys' him! Fah and out upon such tomfoolery! On what birdlings doth this our birdie feed that he hath grown so sensitive?"

This private box exclusiveness and isolation from the people is excusable among the European sovereigns, who are not altogether secure as to the design of the subjects and who are apprehensive of what might occur to their royal persons in case of close propinquity, but Mr. Cleveland cannot urge this excuse, which would only write him down a coward. Hence it can only remain that he desires to be exclusive because he is annoyed by the gaze or touch of the crowd, of which a few short years ago he was an unknown and inconspicuous member. This peculiarity has been manifested several times since he entered the White House, and appears to be growing on him. As a bachelor lodger over the grocery store, as one of the "boys" in Buffalo, as Sheriff and hangman, and even as Governor, he was always approachable, but since his consorting with the mugwumps and his elevation to the Presidency he has cultivated exclusiveness and the usages of aristocracy with all the zest that is characteristic of parvenus blossoming out with sudden wealth and beggars dizzy with equine ascendency over the peripatetic hard beneath them. Nothing more surely proclaims the smallness of a man than the assumption of dignity among his fellows, or his pretentious character than his painful effort to assert and protect it. Men of real dignity never have to assert it or to withdraw from their equals from fear of losing it, or from apprehension that it may be questioned as counterfeit. Men born to the purple are never afraid of soiling it by contact with their kind. Men of native dignity do not have to guard it or give it any thought. The President does not appear to be one of this kind. He is evidently apprehensive that his dignity is ill-fitting, and that if he exposes himself to the public he may fall back into his old ways and lose it altogether, or that it may be discovered that it is pinchbeck and not the real thing. As the leader of the tawdry procession of flummery in Washington, none of whom will bear very close inspection, it is evidently needful that he should isolate himself from the public, lest some Jeffersonian sans culotte should rudely brush against the bubble and burst it. But how about Jeffersonian simplicity in a royal box?—Chicago Tribune.

Ex-Attorney General Speed on Kentucky and the South.

[Cincinnati special to Chicago Inter Ocean.]

EX-ATTORNEY GENERAL SPEED, of Louisville, who was here to attend the Loyal Legion meeting, said: "I think even the Democrats of the South perceive how important it is that, for example, in my own State of Kentucky and throughout the South generally, there should be some strong opposition to the dominant party. Why, in Kentucky it is a question of nomination only, and election is so sure that those elected do not hesitate to disregard all pledges. I believe that the next election will show a very decided change in the vote of the State, and that the Republican candidate for Governor, W. O. Bradley, will probably be elected. I think that Tennessee, Virginia, and North Carolina will be among the uncertain States, and that, with the Labor party in the field, the next election will not turn on New York."

ONE of the most enthusiastic Blaine men in the country is the Hon. Stephen W. Dorsey, of Arkansas. He has just now declared that Mr. Blaine will be nominated by acclamation and triumphantly elected over any candidate the Democrats may put up. Mr. Dorsey is an eminent Republican; he has rendered invaluable services to his party; and while so many combinations with Blaine at the head are being suggested, why has not some one suggested Blaine and Dorsey?—Chicago Times.

"NEW HOME" Sewing Machines.

Our Agent will soon begin the canvass of Charlevoix and Vicinity, for the sale of the ''NEW HOME'' Machine, fully warranted and sold on easy terms. The Machine may be seen at the Millinery Store of Litney & Carr, of Charlevoix.

"SMITH AMERICAN" and "CHASE & EARHUFF" ORGANS FOR SALE at LOWEST PRICES.

DUNHAM & SUTTON, EAST JORDAN.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, MAY 25, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

The Secretary of the Interior has addressed a letter to the President, suggesting that, with the latter's approval, he will take immediate steps to carry out a policy indicated in the letter—the restoration to the public domain of certain lands heretofore included in grants to railroads, on which it appears that a reasonable time for the companies to make their selections has elapsed. He says: "It appears from the records of the general land office, that a large number of land-grant railroad companies have made indemnity sales to the full extent of their rights under their respective grants, and that a number of others, while they have not selected the full quantity, have selected all the lands within the indemnity limits of such grants which are subject to selection." Among those which have selected the full quantity as shown by the records of the Department, is the Marquette, Houghton & Ontonogon, as far as that road has been constructed. Among those which have selected as far as there are lands subject to selection, are the Grand Rapids and Indiana, Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw, Flint & Pere Marquette, and Chicago and Northwestern in the State of Michigan.

A lot of cranks in New York have conceived the idea of a grand celebration of Queen Victoria's jubilee in that city, and have been sending out letters of invitation for preliminary meetings, and soliciting funds for that purpose. Among others, they invited Mr. Andrew Carnegie, the prominent iron manufacturer of Pittsburg. Mr. Carnegie is by birth a Scotchman, and the fact that he was once a subject of the Queen probably led the projectors of the jubilee scheme to thus address him. He replied to them in a scorching letter which ought to quicken the pulse of every true American. He says: "1. I am an American citizen and a very staunch Republican-American, who rejects the monarchical idea as inconsistent and insulting to his manhood. I should stultify myself were I to celebrate the reign of any hereditary ruler. 'I was born as free as Cæsar.' 2. I am at a loss to see what naturalized American citizens have to do celebrating the reign of any sovereign monarch. If they are not loyal Republicans, and true to the land of their adoption, it is open to them at all times to leave its shores and find homes elsewhere. The Republic deserves to be served by citizens true to the fundamental idea upon which her political institutions are based." Mr. Carnegie then suggests that "the canons of good taste, not less than gratitude to the Republic to whose hospitality they are indebted for so many favors," should dictate to foreigners from his country who see fit to enjoy the blessings of American residence and yet remain aliens, a little modesty in parading their first allegiance to a foreign ruler, and rulers, and adds: "If our fellow countrymen must celebrate something, let me suggest to them that the proper day for a political demonstration in New York is the Fourth of July, and on that day let them pray that the day is not far distant when our less favored countrymen at home shall share with us the blessings of institutions founded upon the political equality of the citizen—the day when hereditary privilege will be unknown, and when 'Government of the people, by the people and for the people' will be the watchword of English speaking men throughout the world." That has about it the ring of true American patriotism.

Card of Thanks.

EDITORS OF SENTINEL:

I wish (through the SENTINEL) to thank my many kind friends and neighbors who were so true in my great bereavement, the sickness and death of my dear wife. Again my dear friends many, many thanks.
G. W. WHITE.

The above card was handed in to the Boyne Citizen for publication about two weeks ago and was not published. Last week I got it from headquarters that the proprietor of the Boyne Citizen would not publish it, and as the SENTINEL has a greater circulation and is read by more people in Boyne City than any county paper; therefore, I would be pleased to have you publish the card, and this entire letter. The reason for T. R. Chapin not publishing the card was this: A day or so before going to press, he (Chapin) asked me about my son Frank, helping him out with the Citizen. I told Chapin, Frank was at work for me on the farm and I could not let him go, that Frank was worth more to me than to him. He replied that I asked too much for Frank, just as if he was the one to say what my son should do. I said it was not for him to say where my son should work; that the price I put upon my boy was none of his business; that if the boy was worth more to me than he could pay him, it was my privilege to say what the boy should do. Chapin walked off madder than a hornet and said, you and your boy can go to h—ll. I do not care to go to h—ll, or to have my family go as we would like better company in the future than T. R. Chapin. Yours Resp'y,

Boyne City, May 17th. G. W. WHITE.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

Northern Michigan.

The new city hall at Cheboygan will be a beauty.

Petoskey people think their town is over an oil reservoir.

The Jordan river is reported free of logs now, and trout fishing good.

Dexter & Noble have a surveyor on the route between Elk Rapids and Kalkaska.

The G. R. & I. will run a 14-mile branch from Kalkaska into the pine owned by White & Fryant, east of that town.

The United States Hotel at Boyne City, is now under the management of C. E. Lytle and W. H. Skinner of Battle Creek.

The saw mill at Kewadin, owned by Wm. Flanagin, of Atwood, which has been shut down for a few weeks, is now cutting shingles again.

Hoxie & Scripture, proprietors of the East Bay woolen mills at Acme, will about June 1st. open a branch establishment at Traverse City. A. T. Hoxie will have charge of the business there.

A body was found at Frankfort recently wedged between the wreckage of the barge Menekaunee, which was wrecked there last fall. The body had on black and brown pantaloons, red stockings and leather boots, but is otherwise unrecognizable.

A. W. Black who lives about six miles from Traverse City, raised 6,000 bushels of potatoes on thirty-five acres. He sold 4,000 bushels last fall and claims that he made enough to pay for planting and digging, so the 2,000 bushels was clear, which sold for over 50 cents a bushel this spring. A good investment.

Elk Rapids Progress: C. E. Gill, general freight agent of the G. R. & I. R. R., was in town recently looking over the advisability of the building of a branch road between Elk Rapids and Kalkaska, the road to be finished by Oct. 1. Messrs. H. H. and E. S. Noble accompanied Mr. Gill to Kalkaska, and we believe that the road will be built. The amount Elk Rapids will have to contribute will be small.

Base Ball Notes.

From the Petoskey Record.

Klock, the new short stop and change catcher, shows up well in practice, and besides being a good ball player is a very quiet and retiring young man—qualities particularly appreciated in Petoskey.

Vice President Plamondon and Manager Bell did a good thing in covering the runways between bases with clay. The covered grand stands will now accommodate about 600 people comfortably.

The Reed City batteries this season are Vogle and Jordan, Coles and Ewald. Big Rapids batteries, Chamberlain and Flagg, Wisnell and Campbell. Vogle, the left-handed pitcher of Reed City, is captain of the nine.

The boys were out again on the diamond Friday afternoon for practice. The practice they are getting at the bat in solving Hoyt's curves will be of immense value to them this summer, as they will not be likely to face a speedier or more puzzling twirler.

A match game with the Big Rapids club for Thursday fell through, owing to the fact that the cost would have been $50, and the Big Rapids boys having a game on the home grounds on Friday could not stay for the second game. It is a little too early for our season to open to paying audiences.

The editor had a chat last week with Mr. George S. Wharton, manager of the Cheboygan club, and with Pat Morrisey, last year short stop for Petoskey, but now pitcher and field captain of the Cheboygans. Manager Wharton is anxious to either make a circuit to take in from four to six clubs in this vicinity, or, failing that, to arrange for a match series of games between Petoskey, Cheboygan and Alpena. As Bay City, Howard City, Greenville, Reed City, and probably Kalamazoo, will give us a call during the season, a series between Petoskey, Cheboygan and Alpena would give the club a good deal of work. Manager Wharton, of Cheboygan, and Manager Bell, of Petoskey, are arranging a meeting with the manager of the Alpenas to talk over matters. One advantage of the latter plan is that all three towns are of good size and will turn out good crowds, whereas the percentage plan and the taking in of as many small places would result to the financial advantage of the small places, and the loss of the larger ones.

Alick Rosenthal is receiving new goods every day.

WANTED.—A quantity of spotted corals at the Pioneer Lipidary of O. W. Smith.

The house and lot on Main street known as the Newberry house, is for sale or will be exchanged for property in Petoskey. Address, J. L. Newberry, Petoskey, Mich.

The merits of the "King" tinted paints are too well known to need extended commendation. For sale only by Stockman & Iddings.

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The annual resort hand-book will be out next week.

J. P. Hart and wife of Ionia, are expected this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bishop will open their cottage this week.

In view of the number of members of the resort who have died within the past year, it would be very fitting to have a memorial service at Music Hall this summer.

We visited the new Club House on the Charlevoix summer resort Monday, and found the painters putting the last coat on the interior. The plastering is completed and the carpenters are hanging doors and putting on the veranda trimmings. The building will be the handsomest hotel structure of its size in Northern Michigan.

Kalamazoo Telegraph: The executive committee of the Charlevoix Summer Resort, composed of Messrs. Sebring, Merrill and Bixby, have prevailed on ex-Marshal Blaney to go up north this summer and assume charge of the Belvedere house. Mr. Blaney gave consent to this arrangement. He will be absent three months. Mr. Blaney will make an excellent landlord, and the Belvedere under his management will be kept up in excellent shape.

Later—The TELEGRAPH was in error in stating that ex-Marshal Blaney would have charge of the club house at Charlevoix. The committee have made no arrangement as yet. They are looking for a good man to take the position.

When the summer greetings are exchanged between the members of the resort this season, there will be five faces sadly missed, five members of the resort circle, in the last winter, having passed over the river into an eternal summer-land of song. First to go was that eminent mathematician and Christian scholar, Prof. Olney; then followed one whose death will be mourned by all, especially her young friends, who knew her but to love her,—Miss Gertie Sears; later, Mrs. John S. Estabrook, whose death made a loss that can never be filled in her home and resort circle, was summoned hence. Two weeks ago yesterday, Mr. John West died at the Chicago residence of his son, at the age of 80. For six years Mr. West has been one of our best-known and most universally respected summer residents. His faith in the resort is evinced by the fact that he was the largest stockholder in the new Belvedere, and was one of the largest shareholders in the resort property. In his death, his neighbors and acquaintances on the resort feel that they have lost a personal friend.

Mr. Hale W. Page, who died at his Kalamazoo home last week Tuesday, at the age of 71, of typhoid pneumonia, after an illness of but 13 days, might justly be termed the Father of the Charlevoix Summer Resort. He came up first to look over the ground when the resort was first talked of, and his name heads the list of the first seven directors. He has also been president of the resort, and has been among those at the head in pushing any resort enterprise. For a number of years he has had charge of the Belvedere House, and the building of the new structure was largely intrusted to him, and had he lived he would have had charge of the same this summer. He was also a partner in the old firm of Upright, Emrey & Co., of this place. His loss to the resort is irreparable. The Kalamazoo Telegraph says of him: "Deceased was born in Shirley, Mass., in June, 1816. He became an orphan at the age of nine years. He was brought up in Andover, Mass., and his early life was a continual struggle for advancement. He learned the trade of cabinet-maker and became a master thereof. He afterwards established himself at Fitchburg, near Boston, and for 24 years manufactured piano material for the famous firm of Hallett & Davis, employing a large number of men. He was also interested in other enterprises. He was also prominent in political, social and religious matters. He represented his town in the State Legislature in 1857 and in 1863, and was proud to say that in both sessions he supported and helped to elect Charles Sumner United States senator. * * * This is the third time he has suffered from typhoid pneumonia, and although a person of rare physical perfection for his age, he had to succumb to it. He has suffered much, yet has borne it with characteristic nerve. It was believed that he would recover, until Sunday, when the symptoms became alarming, and he continued to fail till life went out. Mr. Page was personally one of the pleasantest of men, genial, warm-hearted, enterprising, always ready to aid others, thoroughly honest and reliable. He was one of the most agreeable of men to meet, and very companionable. He seemed to have sympathy with all people who needed help. He was highly respected and esteemed, and his high character was evident on a brief acquaintance, and confirmed as one knew him more and more. He served as one of the first aldermen of this town after it became a city, and filled the position with great acceptance. In business circles his opinion was respected. He was a member of the Baptist church, and a regular attendant.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Religious.

M. E. Church.

All are cordially invited to the Tuesday evening Bible reading and prayer service. Meeting begins at 7:30.

General prayer meeting on Thursday evening at usual hour. These are refreshing hours spent with God our father.

Teachers meeting at parsonage on Friday evening at 7:30 to study the lesson.

Sabbath morning a memorial service. Subject of sermon, "National Guards and Dangers."

In the evening a sermon to young men. Text: "Quit you like men."
W. H. MCC.

Congregational Church.

Rev. Mr. Woodmansee, of Hudson, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning at 10:30. Union service in the evening at 7:30.

Elsewhere.

Preaching at the Ironton M. E. church next Sabbath morning and evening. All are invited.

NOTICE. All persons indebted to me are requested to call and settle at once. JOHN MCCABE.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix

W. A. REYNARD,
Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of Vegetables and Fruits
OF ALL KINDS,
TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.
I will also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars.
Buttar and Eggs a Specialty.

POSITIVELY THE FINEST LINE OF CLOTHING
AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS
YOU EVER SAW IN
CHARLEVOIX,
JUST RECEIVED FOR SUMMER WEAR.
Prices are unusually low this Spring and if you need anything in my line, just step in.
Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.
GEO. W. MILLER.

GOOD BYE SPRING! WELCOME SUMMER!
A. T. WASHBURNE AND CO.

Our Grand Summer Opening!
Will occur FRIDAY, SATURDAY, MONDAY, May 27, 28 & 30th.
WE SHALL THEN PLACE ON SALE ALL THE LEADING FABRICS DESIRABLE FOR SUMMER WEAR, BOTH IN WASH AND FINE WOOL FABRICS.

Also a full line of Parasols, Brocade Wraps in Brocade Silk Nett and fine Silk and Wool Textures from Boucle Jackets at $1.25 to $25 Wraps. Our line of SHAWLS will surpass anything yet shown in this region from the cheapest to the finest Silk and Wool Ladies' Scarfs for 90c up. If you wish to choose a Carpet now is your best chance as we shall show from 20c Ingrain up to the finest Moquette. Remember the dates, 27, 28, & 30th.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.
Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

LAST WEEK IN THE OLD STORE!

WE ARE SELLING ALL GOODS VERY CHEAP AND OFFERING MANY SPECIALLY GREAT BARGAINS.

Best Timothy Seed	$2.25 pr bu
Best Medium Clover Seed	$5.50 "
Best Millet Seed	$1.25 "
Best Hungarian Grass Seed	$1.25 "
Best Manistee or Saginaw Salt	$1.00 a bbl.
Best Factory Filled Dairy Salt	75c pr bu

H. O. ROSE'S PETOSKEY LIME
Imported and Domestic Cements, Calcined Plaster, Plastering Hair, etc., at Lowest Prices.

During the rebuilding of our store our Headquarters will be in the store of Fox & Miller,

Where we shall be pleased to see our friends and serve them,

J. L. HURD & CO.

HAVE REMOVED TO THE LEWIS BLOCK,
Give Me a Call in My New Store, Second door south of the Bridge.
ALICK ROSENTHAL,
Successor to
S. ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

VOL. XIX. NO.—5 CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1, 1887. WHOLE NO. 914

School Books!
SCHOOL BOOKS! SCHOOL BOOKS!
---HEADQUARTERS---
For Everything needed in the School Room, at
HINES & CO.'S DRUG AND STATIONERY STORE.
You will find it to your interest to look over our stock before purchasing elsewhere.
Respectfully,
F. G. HINES & CO.

Emrey Bros.
are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of
General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES
WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.
IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT
TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

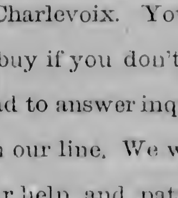
Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.
We call especial attention to our complete stock of
WALL PAPER.
The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.
Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.
OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF
GENERAL MERCHANDISE
now being received is the finest we ever offered
TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.
ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.
A Fine line of Everything in
FURNITURE.
BIG DRIVES IN
BOOTS and SHOES.
Please bear in mind that our stock embraces
EVERYTHING
usually found in a General Store.
Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.
Resp'y Yours,
Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Save Your Dollars
AND BUY HARDWARE
OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Aiming to keep a complete stock, it is our honest endeavor to sell all goods at lowest living prices, for the reason that we court the attention and patronage of every cash customer in Charlevoix County, who wants to save money by making a dollar go as far as possible. Try us if you happen to be one of those who have not already done so. We are preparing a SURPRISE for YOU. Do not fail to come to our store and see us if possible, every time you come to Charlevoix. You are under no obligation to buy if you don't want to. We are always glad to answer inquiries regarding anything in our line. We want to help you and want your help and patronage to that end.

We call your attention to PAINTS &c.

ALSO PLEASE REMEMBER THAT THE JEWEL STOVES


ARE THE BEST, THE WORLD'S BEST!

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries
At The Lowest Prices
ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF
A. E. MASON.
I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices

New Furniture
AT S. M. SEE & SONS!
We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.
Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.
UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S
REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE, AND LOAN OFFICE.
The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.
Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.
ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Wait A Minute!
WHY NOT TRADE AT
WILLSEE & CO'S
Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.
A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.
TELEPHONE Orders promptly delivered.

Charlevoix Sentinel.
The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY
SMITH & PARMELEE,
Charlevoix, - Michigan.
Address all business correspondence to the firm.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
One year - $1.50 | Six months - $.75
Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Notice J. L. Hurd & Co's change of advertisement.

—Mr. Allen writes that the dredge will be here the 5th.

—W. S. Johnson, of Sutton's Bay, was in town yesterday on business.

—Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart., and niece, are guests of J. S. Smithson for a few weeks.

—Royce & Lansing Swiss Bell Ringers and Musical Comedy Co., at Opera house Tuesday night.

—The ladies of the M. E. church will give a ten cent tea at the church next Monday evening from 5 to 8.

—John McCabe has bought 20 feet of J. M. Clark's lot on Antrim street and will erect a meat market thereon.

The university engineering class leaves for a trip to Charlevoix, to practice field work.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

—The boys' band are to have a dance at the rink next Wednesday night; bill, 50 cents. Give the boys a good benefit.

—Mrs. Al. Draper, of South Arm, and Miss Maud Loveday, of East Jordan, have been in town the past few days, visiting friends.

—The Amoskeag steam fire engine, which Charlevoix rejected some time ago, was purchased by St. Ignace, and came very near letting the town burn up recently.

—Hon. W. H. Hurlbut, of South Haven, is here looking after his property interests, and is as enthusiastic as ever in his predictions of the future of Charlevoix.

—Fred A. Cochran of this place, has accepted a position as head prescription clerk in the drug house of A. H. Webber, of Big Rapids, and left Monday for that place.

—No more bodies have been found of those who met their death in Little Traverse Bay a week ago last Sunday, and very little hope is entertained of any success rewarding the efforts being put forth.

—The opening at A. T. Washburne & Co's. was a great success. In addition to the tasteful display of draperies and suitings, carpets, rugs, fancy goods, etc., a number of music boxes and birds and a profusion of beautiful house plants rendered the show room very inviting. Al's enterprise and good taste is evinced by the handsome arch he erected over Bridge street, Memorial day. It was surmounted by flags and a pair of crossed muskets, while below a large canteen hung a couple of cavalry sabres and the staff sword of Dr. Chamberlain.

—The funeral of Levi W. Cole, at Petoskey last Thursday afternoon, was an occasion of much solemnity, and an event in which the entire town participated. The ceremonies of interment were according to the ritual of Templar Masonry. Rev. Mr. Curtis of Cheboygan, acting as prelate of the Commandery, which numbered forty swords. Rev. Mr. Bancroft officiated at the house where the only services were held, excepting at the grave. The floral offerings from friends at home and abroad were numerous and elegant. The high esteem in which Mr. Cole was held by his neighbors, was evinced in the outpouring of the people to his obsequies.

—East Jordan Enterprise: S. M. Rose informs us that he will not run the steamer Valley Queen on the north arm of the intermediate lakes as the water is not deep enough. He will run on the route between Elk Rapids and Bellaire. * * * D. C. Loveday's hardware store narrowly escaped being burned Tuesday morning. His son Asa, had been out fishing the night previous and coming home left his fish light, which, he supposed was extinguished, on the front steps of the store. In the morning Mr. Henderson, who works at Fochtman's meat market, noticed smoke on the steps, and on investigation found that a hole was burned through the floor, which was put out without any further damage.

—Speaking of the Royce & Lansing Swiss Bell Ringers and Musical Comedy Co., the Marquette Journal says: One of the most pleasing numbers of the evening was the vocal trio with bell accompaniment. Lizzie Royce has a very sweet voice and her singing was received with great pleasure throughout the evening. Probably the thing which most interested the audience was the performance on seven distinct musical instruments at the same time by Web. Lansing. It was the best thing of the evening and was in itself worth the price of admission. He kept perfect time on all his instruments and perfect harmony as well, producing music and not discord. The company will appear again to-night with a change of programme and the Journal advises its readers to be present; it is the best troupe that has visited the city in some time. The entire audience seemed greatly pleased last night and many of the best people in the city were present.

—C. S. Hampton will remove the Independent to Petoskey.

—Al Washburne & Co. have a change in ad this week.

—J. S. Smithson will preach at the Opera Hall Gospel meeting Sunday evening.

—Rev. Mr. Gordon baptized over 50 persons in Pine lake near Sweet's landing, last week Sunday.

—The three months series of Gospel meetings will begin next Sunday evening at Opera Hall, all the churches participating.

—Stockman & Iddings, in their new advertisement, call your attention to a surprise that is in waiting for their patrons.

—Alick Rosenthal is receiving many compliments on the attractive manner in which he has arranged his goods in the Lewis block. Notice his new ad.

—Mr. Stockbridge of Kalamazoo, a nephew of U. S. Senator Stockbridge, has purchased the Kirkpatrick cottage and will put it in first class repair for this season's occupancy.

—Five prisoners confined in the county jail at Cheboygan, made their escape Saturday night by sawing the iron bars of the main cell and leaving by the window. They were hard characters and doomed to the penitentiary. The sheriff and assistants are in pursuit.

—United States Senator Edmunds is devastating the trout brooks in northern Michigan along the line of the G. R. & I. He travels in a special car which was attached to the regular train at Howard City Wednesday and taken to Boyne Falls and Petoskey Friday morning.

—According to the Michigan Tradesman, President Hughart of the G. R. & I. R. R., was recently approached by the editor of that paper in the interest of Cheboygan business men who want a branch of the above road to their city. Mr. Hughart stated that all the money the company can raise this season is pledged other enterprises, one of which is the construction of a branch from Kalkaska to Elk Rapids. The above is a pointer of considerable value, and pretty good evidence that the K. & E. R. branch is to be built and that soon.

—Marshall Statesman: The entertainment at the M. E. church last evening was excellent and was certainly worthy of a larger audience than was present. Mrs. Ada Iddings Gale and Miss Winifred Gale gave some fine readings, good music was furnished, delicious ice cream and cake were served and the entire entertainment did credit to the activity and good taste of the ladies who managed it. A large proportion of the selections given by Mrs. Gale were of her own production and showed that this talented lady is as much of a poet as elocutionist. Miss Winifred is a veritable child prodigy and her rendering of familiar selections is worthy of much praise.

—H. H. Kennedy, a piano tuner hailing from Grand Rapids, came near having his head cracked for insulting a lady of this village. He will have to make himself scarce about these parts hereafter. To end up his deviltry he invited a young man to go out for a sail with him, hired Chris Baur's boat and started for Charlevoix. When down near there he ran the boat ashore, picked up his grip, which he had taken with him, and skipped, leaving the young man to pay for the use of the boat and get it back the best way he could. The y. m. mentioned hired a livery to return to this place, and then hired a man to go after boat. Kennedy will have to keep out of this town hereafter, as there are other naughty things said of him and a real red-hot reception awaits him if he comes here again.—Elk Rapids Progress. This same fraud played hob in Charlevoix also. His wife left him at Petoskey.

—It is comparatively a rare thing for us to be able to announce an entertainment which we honestly feel will be in no sense a disappointment to our people. Such we are confident will be given by the Royce & Lansing Bell Ringers on Tuesday evening. From all sources we gather nothing but praise for their entertainment. They are patronized everywhere by the best and most cultured people. This is accounted for by their strict adherence to what eight years ago laid the foundation to their continued success, viz: always presenting a strictly clean and thoroughly enjoyable programme. One which combines in a happy manner, the very best of mirth and music. Probably another stepping-stone to their unqualified success, is the fact that, aside from their artistic work, the company is composed strictly of ladies and gentlemen whose social and moral standing is beyond question. Wherever they have once appeared the announcement of a second visit is almost an absolute guarantee of a crowded house and highly pleased audience. Tickets now on sale at Weed's drug store.

Warden Smith's Report.

Game Warden William Alden Smith has sent his monthly report to the Secretary of State, for the month ending May 25, and the record shows that the violators of the law are being carefully looked after. The report shows the arrest of 61 parties for offense as follows: for fishing with a seine, 19, for fishing within 300 feet of a dam with a schute, 6; spearing fish, 9; other offenses, 26. All the parties, with five exceptions, were convicted.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

The new Club House will be ready for occupancy by June 10th.

Mr. Holmes of Kalamazoo, will have charge of the Belvedere this season.

J. L. Sebring was in town Wednesday on resort business. He expressed himself as highly pleased with the new hotel.

Mrs. VanVleck of Ionia, and Mrs. B. A. Stone and daughter of Kalamazoo, are expected at the Charlevoix resort for the season, this week.

Henry Bishop and family arrived last Wednesday. Mr. Bishop appreciates life at Charlevoix. He is generally the first to come and the last to go.

Marine Jottings.

Capt. A. G. Aldrich has been retained as master of the steamer T. S. Faxton

Capt. Vanderhoef is having a new brussels carpet made for the cabin of the Friant.

The Manistique Pioneer says that as soon as the railroad is completed to Charlevoix the steamer Faxton will run regularly between Charlevoix and Manistique.

Traverse City Journal: We understand the Champlain and Lawrence will hereafter make this port. They will run making two trips a week each way.

The Pine Lake Iron Co.'s tug Bob. Stevenson, which came out this season from Washburn's ship yard with a rebuild, is every bit as good as a new boat. "Sandy" Bennett is master, and takes a just pride in her.

Traverse Bay Eagle: The steamer City of Traverse has been sold by Messrs Hannah Lay & Co., to the Lake Superior Transportation Company, on private terms, to be delivered July first. In the meantime she will run as usual between here and Chicago, making four more trips. After that the boat will probably run no more to Traverse City, but will be put on the route between Chicago and Duluth. We are sorry to lose this boat, as she has been a great benefit and convenience not only to the people of Traverse City and vicinity, but to all the county round about.

Clearances for two weeks:

1—Schr Bert Barnes, 110 cords wood, Loveday to Milwaukee.
19—Schr J. B. Hawly, 50 ties, Master to Milwaukee.
20—Schr Joe Duvall, 120,000 ft hardwood lumber P. L. I. Co., to Sheboygan.
20—Schr Florence M. Smith, 1,400 posts, Master to Milwaukee.
20—Schr Stampede, 250,000 ft hardwood lumber, P. L. I. Co. to Sheboygan.
20—Schr Lewis A. Burton, 200,000 ft hardwood lumber, Perkins & Co. to Milwaukee.
21—Schr L. B. Shepard, 120,000 ft hardwood lumber, 2,500 ties, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
23—Schr Adventure, 150,000 ft hardwood lumber Perkins & White to Detroit.
23—Prop. Mary Pringle, 150,000 ft hardwood lumber, Perkins & White to Detroit.
24—Schr Sea Gem, 85 cords wood, Stripp. to Milwaukee.
24—Schr Cascade, 180,000 ft hardwood lumber Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
—Schr Bert Barnes, 105 cords wood, Master to Milwaukee.
27—Schr John L. Green, 75 c slabs, Master to Sheboygan.
30—Schr John Schuette, 500 tons pig iron, P. L. I. Co. to Cleveland.

Religious.

Come to the Gospel Meetings at the Opera House. Bro. J. S. Smithson will preach and we hope to see you and your friends present, Sunday evening at 7:30.

The bells of both churches will ring as usual to give notice of time of service. By order of
COMMITTEE.

M. E. Church.

Bible reading Tuesday evening. "Search the Scriptures" is the Divine command; let us obey.

General prayer meeting on Thursday evening at usual hour. "Does any lack wisdom, let him ask of God."

Teachers meeting at parsonage on Friday evening at 7:30 to prepare for teaching the lesson on the Sabbath. Don't forget the work laid out.

Quarterly conference meets at the Parsonage Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m.

Sabbath morning, Love Feast at 9:30 a. m.; preaching at 10:30, after which the sacrement of the Lord's Supper. Come and renew your vows, confess your faith and honor Him who loved you and gave himself for you. Sunday school after service.
W. H. MCC.

Episcopal Church.

Services at Green's Hall Sunday, 3 p. m. Subject for study, Confirmation; its necessity and use in perfecting life in Christ. All candidates for baptism and confirmation, are requested to come with their friends and Bibles.
W. P. BROWN, Warden.

From Boyne City.

We are having some very nice showers, and all vegetation as well as our farmers, are holding up their heads and wearing smiling faces.

By the recent forest fires, Wm. J. Lewis and R. R. Perkins lost quite a quantity of cedar ties, but at the same time they did good service for some of our farmers by burning over some of their old choppings

Boyne City was quite well represented at Charlevoix on Memorial Day. A short service was held here in the morning. A cenotaph was erected by Walter Clifford Post, in honor of our brave dead. Address by Rev. A. L. Thurston, poem by N. J. DeBarr, and music by the band.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX, MICHIGAN.

A FAREWELL.

BY W. J. HENDERSON.

Farewell, farewell, unhappy earth,
That can not see us two as one;
And farewell, sky of little worth,
Till thou canst bring a brighter sun.
And welcome, ocean! I am thine;
Oh touch me with thy bitter wine;
Give out, with wilder fancy's birth,
A wail of waves to anguish run;

Oh! take me to thy crystal breast,
And bear me hence a myriad miles,
Till the year dieth in the west
And next year in the Orient smiles;
Sing to me, bring to me fairer dreams
Till some new sun in the heaven gleams;
Till then I know not peaceful rest
Unmarred by passion's sleepless wiles.

And farewell, maiden, loved too well,
I fear, I hope, I smile, I sigh;
I hear my spirit's final knell,
I hear the joy bells in the sky.
Till spring again hath bared her feet
Out of her winter winding-sheet,
Over the forest and over the fell,
Through loveless countries, wander.

JOSIE'S TRIBULATIONS

Or, Siren of Trivet's Point.

"Well, Gertie," said Josie Fiske, despairingly. "I do not care what any one may say, I do not think that I should be blamed so much. I was a belle in society and taught never to think of money. I dressed as did others of my station, and now that papa is dead, and there is nothing left for us, every one lays the blame at my door; my young companions who often expressed [illegible]

[illegible]

"BEHOLD ALSO THE SHIPS."

Rev. Dr. Talmage's Sermon to the Naval Posts.

Decoration Day Services in the Brooklyn Tabernacle—Survivors of the Navy Advised to Take Admiral Farragut as Their Exemplar.

BROOKLYN, May 22.—As this is the time for the decoration of the graves of those who fell in war, the naval posts invited the Rev. Dr. Talmage, D. D., to preach a sermon at the Brooklyn Tabernacle appropriate to the occasion, as often in the annual commemoration but little had been said of those who served in the navy. An American flag adorned the pulpit, and the congregation sang with great spirit:

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty.

Dr. Talmage's text was from James iii. 4—"Behold also the ships." He said:

If this exclamation was appropriate about 1800 years ago, when it was written concerning the crude fishing smacks that sailed Lake Galilee, how much more appropriate in an age which has launched from the dry docks for purposes of peace the Arizona, of the Union Line; the City of Richmond, of the Inman Line; the Egypt, of the National Line; the Germanic, of the White Star Line; the [illegible]

[illegible]

It looks picturesque and beautiful to see a war vessel going out through the Narrows, sailors in new rig singing:

A life on the ocean wave,
A home on the rolling deep!

the colors gracefully dipping to passing ships, the decks immaculately clean, and the guns at Quarantine firing a parting salute. But the poetry is all gone out of that ship as it comes out of that engagement, its decks red with human blood, wheelhouse gone, the cabins a pile of shattered mirrors and destroyed furniture, steering wheel broken, smokestack crushed, a hundred-pound Whitworth rifle shot having left its mark from port to starboard, the shrouds rent away, ladders splintered, and decks plowed up, and smoke-blackened and scalded corpses lying among those who are gasping their last gasp far away from home and kindred, whom they love as much as we love wife and parents and children. Not waiting until you are dead to put upon your graves a wreath of recognition, this hour we put on your living brow the garland of a nation's praise.

O, men of the Western Gulf squadron, of the Eastern Gulf squadron, of the South Atlantic squadron, of the North Atlantic squadron, of the Mississippi squadron, of the Pacific squadron, of the West India squadron, and of the Potomac flotilla, hear our thanks! Take the benediction of our churches. Accept the hospitalities of the nation. If we had our way we would get you not only a pension, but a [illegible]

[illegible]

PITH AND POINT.

[illegible]

LILLIE EDDLES;

—OR,—

ABDUCTED BY THE BUSHWHACKERS.

A Story of the War in the Southwest.

BY ARVISE O. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER III.

THE SLAVES STOLEN.

"Come, boys, let me show you over the plantation," he said, in as jolly a tone as he could command. They readily followed him out of doors, greatly to his surprise and pleasure, and he tried to entertain them in such a manner as would prevent their wishing to return to the house.

They appeared to be more interested in the slave quarters than anything else on the present occasion.

As they strolled around, the unwelcome visitors would criticise the condition and ask the value of different negroes. They would rudely grasp the muscles of the arm to test their strength, and press them in the ribs to note their condition, just as you have seen butchers do with animals.

[illegible]

Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" cleanse and purify the blood and relieve the digestive organs.

[illegible]

That Tired Feeling

Is so general at this season that every one knows what is meant by the expression. A change of season, climate, or of life has such a depressing effect upon the body that one feels all tired out, almost completely prostrated, the appetite is lost and there is no ambition to do anything. The whole tendency of the system is downward. In this condition Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed. It purifies the blood, sharpens the appetite, overcomes the tired feeling, and invigorates every function of the body. Try it.

The Weak Made Strong.

"I never took any medicine that did me so much good in so short a time as Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was very much run down, had no appetite, no energy, and felt very tired all the time. I commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had used one bottle felt like a different person. That extreme tired feeling has gone, my appetite returned, and it toned me up generally." CLARA W. PHELPS, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered considerably, being for nearly a year troubled with indigestion. I am now on my fourth bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and never felt better in my life. It has made a new man of me." H. M. HILLMAN, Desplaines Street Police Station, Chicago, Ill.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

100 Doses One Dollar

35 MEDALS AWARDED TO BENSON'S CAPCINE PLASTER

THE BEST IN THE WORLD

The treatment of many thousands of cases of those chronic weaknesses and distressing ailments peculiar to females, at the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has afforded a vast experience in nicely adapting and thoroughly testing remedies for the cure of woman's peculiar maladies.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the outgrowth, or result, of this great and valuable experience. Thousands of testimonials, received from patients and from physicians who have tested it in the more aggravated and obstinate cases which had baffled their skill, prove it to be the most wonderful remedy ever devised for the relief and cure of suffering women. It is not recommended as a "cure-all," but as a most perfect Specific for woman's peculiar ailments.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system, and to the womb and its appendages in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, "shop-girls," housekeepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequaled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nervine, "Favorite Prescription" is unequaled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, exhaustion, prostration, hysteria, spasms and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the womb. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a legitimate medicine, carefully compounded by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate organization. It is purely vegetable in its composition and perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the system.

[illegible]

HARTER'S IRON TONIC

PENNYROYAL PILLS

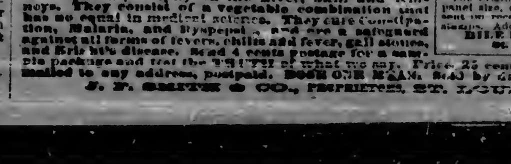
WIZARD OIL FOR PAIN

RHEUMATISM

All Aches and Pains.

CATARRH

SLICKER Is the Best Waterproof Coat



Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, JUNE 1, 1887.

Prof. Samuel Dickie, the apostle of prohibition in Michigan has accepted the presidency of the University of California, and goes to the state of vineyards to preach his prohibition to the wine-makers.

Old settlers in Wisconsin say that this is the driest season for forty years. Wells have failed, the earth is like ashes, fields and pastures have become sandy, and the wheat crop will be a failure unless rain speedily comes.

The Lansing State Republican meditates [illegible] the Knights of Labor [illegible]

In some countries of Europe it is unlawful to cut down an old tree without replacing it with a young one, and large areas are started with pine [illegible]

General Master Workman Powderly [illegible]

Senator Voorhies, of Indiana, in an interview, is reported as saying: [illegible]

The fact that the New York Tribune, Blaine's special organ, should print the following interview, has attracted much attention among politicians throughout the country: "General J. S. Henderson, of St. Louis, Chairman of the last Republican National Convention, speaking of Republican prospects for 1888, said: 'In order to win next year we must nominate a man who is able to carry the state of New York. [illegible] I don't think we can carry New York. [illegible]'"

Petoskey Democrat: It will be remembered by many of our readers, that some time last summer, Boyd a citizen of Rockford, in this state, deliberately shot a man named Johnson while under the influence of liquor. Boyd was arrested, tried, and sent to prison for life. Mrs. Boyd, the wife of the murderer, brought an action of trespass on the case, for damages against one C. Post, a saloon-keeper of Rockford. It was claimed that Boyd was in the habit of procuring his liquor of Post, and although Mrs. Boyd had frequently notified Post not to sell her husband liquor, he, Post, still continued to do so. The case came on for trial in the Kent circuit recently, and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff in the sum of $9,500. By this decision it is very evident that every saloon keeper who sells liquor to a party after they have been forbidden, or to a habitual drunkard, is liable for damages, and public sentiment has reached that stage where very little mercy is shown the liquor dealer if he persists in selling liquor to a person after having been notified not to do so.

Northern Michigan News.

The Manistee county fair will be held at Onekama, Sept. 20 to 22.

Mrs. Eunice Webb, wife of Newton Webb, of Boyne City, died last week.

From the Manton Tribune we learn that the Kalkaska stave factory will be removed to Manton.

The "Soo" News expects a train over the Minneapolis and Sault Ste. Marie railroad to reach that place by September.

The Wexford county Pioneer wants some one to build a steamboat to run on the Manistee river between the railroad and Sherman.

The Manistee Iron Works are busily engaged in fitting up a new sawmill for Mr. Beane, which he will take with him to Washington Territory.

The Cadillac News and Express have been consolidated. By this arrangement Mr. Chapin goes back to his old place in the News office, and the town is represented by two newspapers only.

The Chippewa County News says that work was commenced last Saturday on the great water power canal at the "Soo." That the capital is all subscribed and the money to build the canal is in the bank at that place.

The Inter State bill interferes very seriously with the shipping of tooth picks, and may result in the removal of the factory to some eastern point where competing lines serve to make rates the same to all principal points.—Harbor Springs Independent.

Traverse Bay Eagle: Mrs. Hensley of East Bay, and Mrs. Robinson, of Traverse, were arrested last week upon a complaint for selling liquor without having paid the State tax, and arraigned before Justice Roberts. Both plead not guilty and the trials set down, the first for the 23d and the second for the 24th.

Cheboygan Tribune: W. S. Humphrey and Ive Littlefield secured a fine black bear Tuesday morning. They caught it in a trap. Ive says, Littlefield, Cooper & Co., have caught in the past few years thirty-six bear in the region round Cheboygan. Last spring they captured eleven. They have already gathered in four this spring.

We are in receipt of the catalogue of the Grand Traverse College located at Benzonia, for 1886-7. From it we learn that the institution has 40 students enrolled. The faculty consists of O. S. Dolby, B. S., Principal; Mrs. Eunice C. Packard, Matron; T. B. Pettitt, Harriet E. VanDeman and Herbert H. Scadin, teachers. The fall term for the present year commences October 4th.

Grand Rapids Democrat: Grand Rapids & Indiana officials state that a branch line to Elk Rapids will be constructed this summer. They have been surprised to learn to what extent Dexter, Noble & Co., the well known iron producers at Elk Rapids are dependent on rail transportation. Without railroad facilities nearly half a million of capital is idle more than half the year.

The Kalkaskian: The story is current that when the State fish commissioner was here last month with a car of trout fry, he went to South Boardman, and told them there that he had seventy-five thousand—half of which he would deposit in the South Boardman river and the other half in the North, or Boardman river proper. Accordingly the Boardman people admitted him to deposit those assigned to their stream, and then told him it was but a short drive to the North Boardman, and that they would take him there with the fish. They drove in the country, and took the commissioner by a circuitous route to a point lower down the South Boardman river, and informed him that that was the North Boardman where he placed the little fish—putting the whole seventy-five thousand into the same stream.

Petoskey Democrat: Last Thursday Mr. Badour, who lives about six miles out on the Bear lake road, was burning some log heaps on a piece of fallow some fifteen or twenty rods from his buildings; while the men were at dinner the fire worked up to the barn and when discovered the interior was completely in flames. A desperate effort was made by Joe to save his team, but the fire had gained too much headway and in spite of all they could do, the horses calf, harness, feed, hay and everything was swept away; from the barn, fire was communicated to the house and adjacent buildings, all of which were burned with the exception of the house, and it was only by superhuman efforts that it was saved from the same fate; as it was, several large holes were burned through the roof, and the water used in extinguishing it, together with the smoke completely destroyed everything. This is indeed a sad affair to see the labor of years swept away in a few short hours.

EDUCATIONAL.

All communications on educational topics should be addressed to Prof. H. M. Enos, Superintendent of the Charlevoix Schools.

THE SCHOOLS.

Report of Charlevoix Schools for the Month ending May 27th, 1887.

NO. ENROLLED
1st Department,	67
2nd Department,	51
3d Department,	42
4th Department,	42
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	30
5th Dep't High School,	29
Total,	261
NO. BELONGING.
1st Department,	54
2nd Department,	47
3d Department,	35½
4th Department,	38
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	25
5th Dep't High School,	23½
Total,	223
DAYS ATTENDANCE.
1st Department,	1001
2nd Department,	873½
3d Department,	643
4th Department,	700
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	462½
5th Dep't High School,	435
Total,	4,115
DAYS LOST BY ABSENCE.
1st Department,	87½
2nd Department,	58½
3d Department,	54
4th Department,	42½
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	21
5th Dep't High School,	11½
Total,	275
AVERAGE ATTENDANCE.
1st Department,	50.05
2nd Department,	43.7
3d Department,	32.15
4th Department,	35
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	23.1
5th Dep't High School,	21.75
Total,	206
ATTENDANCE, AND PUNCTUALITY, PER CENT OF NUMBER BELONGING.
1st Department,	94
2nd Department,	95.2
3d Department,	95
4th Department,	96.1
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	97.8
5th Dep't High School,	98.9
Total,	96.1
CASES TARDY.
1st Department,	25
2nd Department,	25
3d Department,	4
4th Department,	4
5th Dep't Grammar School,	0
5th Dep't High School,	0
Total,	58
NO. PUPILS NEITHER ABSENT NOR TARDY DURING THE MONTH.
1st Department,	13
2nd Department,	17
3d Department,	13
4th Department,	10
5th Dep't Grammar Section,	05
5th Department, High School,	13
Total,	71

The spring term of our village schools will close next week Friday. Appropriate exercises will be held in the evening at the Opera House. The people have never failed to be highly pleased with these entertainments, and those who attend this last exercise of the school year will not be disappointed.

The persistence with which a large majority of the pupils in our public schools, are holding on to the work preparatory to the final examinations, is an encouraging sign of progress. The consciousness of having fully completed the year's work, will, of itself make the vacation enough more enjoyable to re-pay the faithful pupil. But this will not be the only recompense for his perseverance: those who leave off a month or even a week of the work will, when they again enter school, find themselves at a disadvantage from the loss of progress made by the class, or the proficiency gained by the reviews. It is to be hoped none of these will then have the assurance to say to their former classmates: "I am able to do as much in seven or eight months as you can do in nine; or if not, so that I can compel you to lose as much this year as I voluntarily lost last year." This is in effect the language of every pupil who losses time and desires the privilege of continuing with the class.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

(38) If a pole 120 feet high breaks so that the top, falling over touches the ground 36 feet from the base while the broken end rests on the stump the height to the break will be a little more than 54 feet.

(39) Lord Baltimore paid to the King for Maryland, a yearly rent of two Indian arrows and one-fifth of the gold and silver which should be found.

(40) We can see the sun before it is really above the horizon.

QUERIES.

(41) Who was the first white child born in America?

(42) Why does corn pop when heated?

(43) What forms sponges and where do they come from?

(44) Why do birds perch with their heads to the wind?

(45 When was the first newspaper published in America and what was its name.

Over four tons of nitro-glycerine exploded eight miles out of Duluth on the 18th. Many dwellings were badly damaged, and one dwelling destroyed. Two men are believed to have been blown up, but no traces can be found. The people in the city thought it was an earthquake. The damage is about $10,000.

Foreign bankers, having figured up the Russian debt at $2,525,000,000, have decided that they will not make any more advances in that direction, as Russian finances are in a very rotten condition. The Russian government will, therefore, raise $45,000,000 by a domestic loan of four per cent.

The counting of the money in the United States treasury, incident to the succession to Mr. Jordan by Mr. Hyatt, began last week Tuesday, and will not be completed for two months. Seventy-five persons will count $137,000,000 in paper money in the reserve vaults, $85,000,000 in the cash vaults, $60,000,000 in standard silver dollars, and 25,000,000 in gold coin and, and a smaller sum of smaller fractional silver.

The marriage bill requiring all parties desiring to commit matrimony to first obtain a license from the county clerk, has passed both houses of the legislature. The bill contains several restrictive provisions intended to retard the progress of those who would "marry in haste and repent at leisure." If either of the contracting parties is a minor he or she must show a written consent from his or her parents or guardian. This will make it exceedingly unpleasant for the callow youth who thinks he ought to be a husband at 18, and to the silly girl who aspires to be a wife at 16 or thereabouts. It has come to be regarded as highly important that the traffic in hearts should be regulated by more stringent measures.

In his speech at the dedication of the Garfield monument at Washington recently, President Cleveland said the chief peril of the Republic to-day was "the dangers of a mad chase after partisan spoils." The president doubtless speaks from experience, as he has been taking an active hand in assisting in the "chase after partisan spoils." Out of the 2,200 presidential postoffices he has removed 2,000 "offensive partisans" and replaced them with offensive partisan democrats when Congress adjourned, and the remaining 200 has been greatly lessened since, and still the mad chase goes on. President Cleveland, by his professed belief in civil service reform secured the support of the mugwumps and his election, and yet he has furthered "the mad chase after partisan spoils" by the removal of over one-fourth of those protected by civil service law.

It is unfortunate for the men of the labor unions that they cannot co-operate in business and prove to the world what they so often assert, that villainous capital is robbing them. In co-operation, if anywhere, they should be able to make a fair division of all their earnings, as well as of the cost of the business which they undertake. In Chicago last year thirty representatives of labor unions organized the Co-Operative Packing and Provision Company. It was to have a capital of $500,000 in 50,000 shares. Either because the workers could not take all those shares, or because some of the projectors had most of the capital, four of the latter, it is reported, gobbled the entire concern, and now there is failure and quarrel in the courts, and a chance for the lawyers. It is an unhappy affair.

Notice.

The partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned, under the firm name and style of Gellick & Ingalls and doing business at Charlevoix, Michigan, is this day dissolved by mutual consent, the said James A. Gellick will continue the business at the old stand, paying all debts of the firm and collect all partnership accounts.

Dated Charlevoix, Mich., April 18th, 1887.
JAS. A. GELLICK,
BENJ. F. INGALLS.

Bank of Charlevoix,

W. P. BROWN, Cashier. W. A. BROWN, Asst. Cashier.

CAPITAL, $25,000

Perfect Security is assured to the depositors in this Bank, both by its Capital and conservative management.

Its Officers Never Speculate. Their business creed is: That to Speculate with one's own money, is folly; that to do so with the money of others, is criminal.

Security in Banking Is the question of first importance to both Bankers and Depositors; and, believing that it furnishes unusual guarantees, therefore,

This Bank Invites People generally to intrust their money to its keeping. Just liberality will mark its dealings.

This Bank Will Borrow Investment money when desired, paying as large interest thereon as shall be compatible with safe use of the money.

Parties Seeking Productive employment for money, and desiring to escape the expense and trouble of the management of private investments, will find attractive security in this Bank's Investment Notes, Now earning Five per cent. yearly interest. These notes afford investors much more perfect security than Savings Bank deposits.

We Solicit Your Patronage.

Probate Order.

State of Michigan, county of Charlevoix, ss. At a session of the Probate court for said county, held at the Probate office, in the village of Boyne City on the 13th day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty seven. Present, James A. Keat, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Josiah Gibson, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Elizabeth Gibson asking that an administrator be appointed for said estate, Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday, the 13th day of June next, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of court, then to be holden in the Probate Office in the Village of Boyne City, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted: And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy) JAMES A. KEAT, Judge of Probate.

Mortgage Sale.

A mortgage dated January 12th, 1883 executed by Andrew Holmes and Mary Holmes (his wife), to the Wayne County Savings Bank of Detroit, Michigan, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Charlevoix County, Michigan, January 17th, 1883, in liber 7 of mortgages on page 382, upon which the whole amount is due and unpaid to wit: The sum of one hundred and twelve and thirteen one hundredths dollars ($112.13) for the recovery of which no suit or proceedings at law have been commenced, will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by a statutory sale of the premises described therein as lot number one in section number fourteen, town number thirty-four north of range eight west (except five acres from the north east corner) containing fifty acres (according to the government survey) of land in Charlevoix County, Michigan to the highest bidder, at the front door of the county building (so called) in the village of Boyne City, in the county of Charlevoix (that being the place of holding the circuit court for the county of Charlevoix), at 12 o'clock noon, Friday, June 17th, 1887.

Dated March 22d, 1887.
WAYNE COUNTY SAVINGS BANK, of Detroit, Mortgagee.
H. C. PAGE, Attorney for Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date Nov. 15th A. D. 1881, made by and between Albert Julienville, batchelor of Charlevoix county, Michigan, party of the first part, to Morgan Curtis of Kalamazoo county, Michigan, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for Charlevoix county, on the 10th day of Nov. A. D. 1881 in Liber 5 of Mortgages at page 437 and by which default the power of sale in said Mortgage contained, has become operative and no suit or proceedings either in law or equity having been instituted to collect the amount due on said Mortgage, and there being due thereon the sum of One hundred and sixty-five dollars, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by sale of the premises therein described in said Mortgage on the 19th day of July A. D. 1887, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day by sale at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the County building, in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, wherein the lands described in said mortgage are situated), of the mortgaged premises described in said Mortgage or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount due on said Mortgage. The premises described in said Mortgage are as follows: the south east quarter of the north east quarter of section thirty-two, of town thirty-two north of range five west, Charlevoix county, Michigan.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee. MORGAN CURTIS, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in a certain indenture of Mortgage bearing date December the first, 1883, made by and between David Norton and Hanah Norton, his wife of Charlevoix, Michigan, party of the first part, to Mary E. Manley, of Wayne county, New York, party of the second part, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for Charlevoix county, Michigan, on the second day of Feb. A. D. 1884, in Liber 9 of Mortgages at page 220, and upon which there is now due and unpaid the sum of seventy-two dollars and no action having been taken either in law or equity to collect the same, therefore the said Mortgage will be foreclosed under the power of sale therein contained by statutory sale of the premises therein described at the front door of the County building in the village of Boyne City, and county of Charlevoix, (that being the place for holding the Circuit court for the county of Charlevoix, in which said county, the lands described in said Mortgage are situated), at ten o'clock in the forenoon of the 19th day of July, A. D. 1887. The premises described in said mortgage are as follows, the north-east quarter of the south west quarter and the north-west quarter of the south-east quarter of section twenty-four of town thirty-three, north of range seven west, Charlevoix county state of Michigan, said premises will be sold subject to the principal sum of Eight hundred dollars yet to become due on said Mortgage together with the accruing interest thereon.

Dated Kalkaska, Mich., April the 18th, A. D. 1887.
A. A. BLEAZBY, Atty for Mortgagee. MARY E. MANLEY, Mortgagee.

Mortgage Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the 13th day of December, A. D. 1881, executed by Richard Lake and Phebe E. Lake (his wife), of Charlevoix County, State of Michigan, to Otis Ross, of South Haven, Van Buren County, State of Michigan, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, in liber "4" of mortgages on page 494 on the 11th day of March, A. D. 1882, by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative and upon which said mortgage there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of two thousand nine hundred and sixty dollars and thirty-two cents ($2,960.32) for principal and interest, and no suit or proceedings at law or in equity having been instituted to recover the amount now due, or any part thereof, now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said mortgage and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided there will be sold at public auction to the highest bidder at the front door of the Court House in the village of Boyne City, County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan (that being the place for holding the Circuit Court for said County of Charlevoix), on Thursday the 30th day of June, A. D. 1887, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon of said day the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the amount due upon said mortgage together with the costs and charges of sale and interest to wit: The south west quarter (¼) and the north west quarter (¼) and the north east quarter (¼) of the south east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty-three (23) in township No thirty-three (33) north of range No. seven (7) west, containing three hundred and sixty acres according to the United States survey. Also the north half (½) of the north east quarter (¼) of section No. twenty seven (27) in township No. thirty-three (33) north range No. seven (7) west containing eighty acres according to the United States survey in the County of Charlevoix in the State of Michigan.

Dated March 7, 1887. OTIS ROSS, Mortgagee.
JAMES H. JOHNSON, Attorney for Mortgagee.

W. A. REYNARD,

Has just received at his Fruit Store in the Lewis Block, a choice line of

Vegetables and Fruits OF ALL KINDS,

TO WHICH OTHERS WILL BE ADDED IN SEASON.

I will also keep in stock a full line of Tobaccos and Cigars.

Butter and Eggs a Specialty.

CHARLEVOIX Savings Bank.

Organized under the General Banking Law of the State of Michigan.

Henry Bennett, Pres.; John Nicholls, Vice Pres.; F. A. Smith, Cashier.

DIRECTORS:
Henry Bennett, O. D. Wood,
John Nicholls, A. Buttars,
A. R. Upright, A. Fox,
F. A. Smith.

CAPITAL, $25,000
SURPLUS, 2,000

The liabilities of Stockholders in all State banks as provided in Art. 3171, Sec. 40 of the Revised Statutes of the State of Michigan, is double the amount of stock taken, making a guaranteed fund of $50,000 to depositors. Superior facilities for the transaction of every legitimate branch of Banking business extended to our customers on terms as favorable as are consistent with safety.

Drafts drawn direct on the leading commercial cities of the world in large or small amounts. Money to loan on approved paper. Exchange bought and sold. Certificates of deposit issued bearing interest.

We respectfully solicit your patronage.

CORRESPONDENTS:
NATIONAL PARK BANK - NEW YORK.
COMMERCIAL NAT. BANK - CHICAGO.
[illegible] BANK - GRAND RAPIDS.
DETROIT NAT. BANK - DETROIT.

Notice of Dissolution

The co-partnership heretofore existing between the undersigned in the name of Rosenthal & Son is this day dissolved by mutual consent. The business will be hence conducted by Alick Rosenthal to whom all indebtedness of said firm will be paid.

SAMUEL ROSENTHAL.
ALICK ROSENTHAL.
Dated Charlevoix, May 9th 1887.

CROSS & SONS,

Buy and Sell all kinds of Farmers' Produce, Fruit, Flour, Fish, etc. Charlevoix, Mich.

DAN'L S. WAY, Photographer.

In Bradbeer's Gallery.

Photographs of all sizes taken.

Old Pictures copied and enlarged.

CABINETS $3 A DOZ.

New JEWELRY AND SILVER WARE.

I have just received a very fine stock of Watches, Chains, Pins, Clocks, Silver-Ware, etc which I will sell at Prices lower than the same goods can be purchased outside.

Did it ever occur to you that by patronizing home Merchants you were benefiting yourselves?

All classes of Repairing done quickly.

C. R. BELLINGER.

J. T. Kirkpatrick, ARCHITECT AND CONTRACTOR,

—ON—

Chalevoix Summer Resorts.

I have the Plans of 10 Cottages of different designs that can be seen by parties wanting to build cottages.

I employ only first-class workmen, both Carpenters and Painters.

Work intrusted to my care will have prompt attention

J. T. KIRKPATRICK.

Fox & Miller

Offer a Mammoth Stock OF BOOTS, SHOES and other FOOT WEAR, --AT-- LOWER PRICES Than can be found elsewhere in the County.

We have just secured a FIRST-CLASS SHOEMAKER, And will make Repairing a specialty.

We have the Goods and we are bound to sell them.

NOTHING SHODDY.

Fox & Miller.

The Kalamazoo "DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Contains the Associated Press Dispatches

Sent by Mail at 50c a month.

RIFENBURG MILLING CO.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Manufacturers of and Wholesale and Retail Dealers

3 EXTRA GRADES OF FLOUR

Feed, Corn Meal, Graham

We will do exchange work for farmers on short notice.

M. LITNEY. JOS. STEIMEL

Litney & Steimel LIVERY, And Feed Barn.

Charlevoix, Mich.

Good Rigs at Lowest Rates.

It Pays to Buy the BEST BOATS!

The large number of boats I have built for resorters, are advertisements of what I have done and can do in boat building. Call and get references.

I will guarantee the best modelled, easiest rowing and best sailing boats in Northern Michigan for the LEAST MONEY!

All kinds of Oars, and Paddles made.

LEAVE ORDERS with me for a boat for next summer's use. I am bound to please you.

Special facilities for stocking boat liveries.

J. BEAUVAIS.

BOOTS & SHOES

Have you seen our $1.50, $1.75, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 Gents Shoes?

If not do so at once. They are made solid throughout even to the counter. You'll have no trouble with these goods running over at the heel.

These goods cannot be equalled in the county

Either in style, quality or price. We will take pains this season to have in stock goods that will suit all. New ad. soon on Ladies' Fine Shoes of latest styles New York, Common Sense, and London Toes.

Ladies Look Out

For the new line of latest style goods that is on the road for

D. SHERWOOD & CO.

A. J. McLEOD,

Having returned to the Charlevoix Meat Market, announces that he will sell at Wholesale or Retail

All kinds of FRESH MEATS, SALT PORK, SMOKED & SALTED HAMS, Dried and Smoked BACON, DRIED BEEF, Bologna, Head Cheese, Sausage.

Highest Prices Paid FOR HIDES and PELTS.

Will kill hogs or cattle for other Markets or persons wishing that class of work at low rates.

A. J. McLEOD.

McCABE'S MARKET

Is supplied with All Kinds Of MEATS At Lowest Prices.

CASH PAID FOR FAT CATTLE, Hides, Sheep and Hogs.

Corner of State & Mason sts.,

JOHN McCABE.

Washburn & Ackert, FOUNDREYMEN, MACHINISTS,

And Manufacturers of The Charlevoix Plow.

Take The Sentinel.

BUSINESS CARDS.

ATTORNEYS.

FRED W. MAYNE, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. MILO EATON, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

CRUICKSHANK & GRIER, Attorneys at Law. Office in Buttars' Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

JOSEPH M. CLARK, Attorney at Law, Charlevoix, Mich.

PAILTHORPE & GEORGE, Attorneys and Solicitors, Petoskey Mich.

DART & CALL, Attorneys, Petoskey, Mich.

R. L. CORBETT, Attorney at law, Boyne City, Mich. (Prosecuting Attorney of Charlevoix County.)

PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS.

L. LEWIS, M. D., Physician and Surgeon. Office in Lewis Block, Charlevoix, Mich.

WM. M. PRESTON, M. D. Physician and Surgeon, 4 doors west of Ingleside, Charlevoix, Mich.

J. A. CARLSTEIN, M. D., Office at residence, Main st Charlevoix, Mich.

SOCIETIES.

G. A. R.—Baxter Post No. 119, meets second Monday in each month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

MASONIC.—Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. Tuesday on or before full moon. Hall over Post-office.

I. O. O. F.—Round Lake Lodge No. 293, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' hall.

K. O. T. M.—Resort Tent No. 138, meets second Thursday every month, at Odd Fellows' Hall.

L. O. L.—True Blues No. 157, meet Saturday on or before full moon in Odd Fellows hall.

EMMET CHAPTER No. 104, R. A. M., meets at Petoskey on the first Monday of each month.

IVANHOE COMMANDERY No. 130, K. T., meets at their Asylum in Petoskey on the first Thursday of each month.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY meets every Tuesday evening at the homes of the members, during the fall and winter months.

CHARLEVOIX IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION meets at Charlevoix Village Hall on the second Monday of each month, at 7:30 p. m.

President—Byron Sec.
First Vice President—W. A. Smith.
Second Vice President—Robert Miller.
Recording Secretary—Chas J. Strang.
Financial Secretary—R. Suffield.
Treasurer—Albert E. Mason.
Executive Committee—J. Milo Eaton, A. D. Cruickshank and E. F. Parmelee.
Corresponding Committee—H. Lee Iddings, W. A. Brown and C. Y. Cook.
Reception Committee—F. W. Mayne, L. D. Bartholomew, M. J. Stockman, H. Cooper, Geo. W. Fronter, B. W. Miller, S. M. Seo, W. C. Newman, E. M. Clark, H. Berdan.

All those wishing information regarding Charlevoix, the largest and most thriving town in the whole Pine Lake Region, will do well to address the corresponding committee. Unequalled opportunities for all classes of manufacturing.

HOTELS AND RESTAURANTS.

FOUNTAIN CITY HOUSE, RICHARD COOPER, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. Every convenience for the travelling public, and headquarters for Petoskey and Elk Rapids Stages.

BRIDGE STREET HOUSE, Lorenzo Cook, Manager. Charlevoix, Mich. The most central location. Good Sample Room. Telephone connections. Only 100 feet to Steamboat Landing.

NEWMAN HOUSE. W. C. Newman, Prop'r. Charlevoix, Mich. Fitted up with a view to the Comfort of the Traveling Public. Good Stabling furnished. Central Location.

PILE DRIVER.

ALLEN'S Steam Pile Driver. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Traverse City and Mackinaw. L. K. Allen, Charlevoix, Mich.

MUNROE'S STEAM PILE DRIVER. Dock owners and Builders, look to your interest. Contracts taken and dock work solicited at any point between Sault St. Marie and Grand Haven. Correspondence promptly attended to. Address, JOHN MUNROE, Jr., Gen'l Manager, South Arm, Mich.

SURVEYORS.

J. R. and J. S. DIXON, Surveyors and Engineers, Charlevoix, Mich. [Deputy County Surveyors Charlevoix county.]

DENTIST

N. J. PERRY, Dentist. Office in Wood's Drug Store, Charlevoix, Mich.

Detroit, Mackinac & Marquette R. R. "Mackinac Short Line."

Only direct line between the east and south and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

Going West read down			Going East read up
[illegible]	6 50 am	St Ignace	8 30 pm	8 05 pm
[illegible]	[illegible]	Newberry	[illegible]	2 05
[illegible]	[illegible]	Seney	5 15	12 35
	[illegible]	Reedsboro	4 15
3 25	11 31	Au Train	3 25	9 05
[illegible]	12 00	Marquette	2 15	7 00
	12 50 pm	Marquette	2 00 pm
	1 55	Ishpeming	12 58
	4 10	L'Anse	10 40
	5 30	Houghton	9 20
	6 30	Calumet	8 15

Connections made with M T Cos boats, M C & G R & I R R & M H & O

E. W. ALLEN, Gen Pass Agt, Marquette

Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad

IN EFFECT SEPTEMBER 27, 1886.

(Trains run on Central Standard Time.)

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	No 6	No 8	No 4
Mackinaw City Lv	7 15 a m	9 30 p m
Petoskey	8 31	10 51
Boyne Falls	9 10	11 30
Mancelona	10 14	12 30
Walton Junc	11 50	1 50	5 15 p m
Cadillac Ar	12 40	2 50	6 10
Cadillac Lv	12 45	6 05	6 30
Le Roy	1 24	6 40	7 07
Reed City Ar	1 55	7 20	7 40
Reed City Lv	2 15	7 45	8 00
Big Rapids	2 48	8 11	8 31
Stanwood	3 05	8 30	8 55
Howard City	3 33	9 03	9 26
D G H & M Cross	4 40	10 15	10 25
Grand Rapids Ar	4 55	10 30	10 50
Grand Rapids Lv	7 15	5 15	11 45
Plainwell	8 36	6 43	1 12
Kalamazoo Ar	9 05	7 10	1 40
Kalamazoo Lv	9 10	7 30	2 00
Sturgis	10 27	8 59	3 28
Ft Wayne Ar	12 40	11 20	6 00
Ft Wayne Lv	1 00	11 45
Richmond	4 30	3 35
Cincinnati Ar	7 30	7 25

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	No 2	No 4	No 7
Cincinnati, leave	7 35 a m	7 20 p m
Richmond	10 20	10 00
Fort Wayne Ar	1 00	1 15
Fort Wayne Lv	2 10	3 00
Sturgis	4 24	5 25
Kalamazoo Ar	5 45	6 56
Kalamazoo Lv	5 50	7 20
Plainwell	6 16	7 46
Grand Rapids Ar	7 4[illegible]	9 20
Grand Rapids Lv	11 3[illegible]	4 55
D., G., H., & M. cross	11 45	5 10
Howard City	12 52	6 18
Stanwood	1 21	6 48
Big Rapids	1 43	7 09
Reed City Ar	2 15	7 40
Le Roy	3 03	8 21
Cadillac Ar	3 45	9 10
Cadillac Lv	3 55	9 30
Walton June	4 45	10 25
Mancelona	6 16	11 50
Boyne Falls	7 15	12 52
Petoskey	7 10	1 30
Mackinaw City	9 50	2 55

C. L. LOCKWOOD, Gen'l Pass. Agent.

How Two Americans Replenished Their Purses by Casting Aside Judgment and Sticking to Patriotism.

"Speaking of Iroquois," remarked a local betting man who was in a party which had been discussing the sale of that famous race-horse, "takes me back to the time he won the English Derby. I was in this country at that date, but I was a winner by the race. The Americans who were in England then found that it paid to be patriotic. There are any number of stories about men who won big sums, the bets running fifty to one against Iroquois. Some offers even went at 100 to one. The experiences of Leslie Slosson are perhaps as interesting as any. Leslie is a younger brother of George Slosson, the billiardist. George had arranged to go to Europe to make a match with Vignaux, and Leslie, who had saved up about $500, thought he would also enjoy the trip.

"When the Slosson brothers reached London George said: 'Now, you stay here and see the city, so that when I come back from Paris you can show me around.' George took about $5,000 with him and started across the channel. You can bet that Leslie 'saw London' during the three weeks that his brother was away. He met Petroleum V. Nasby,' and that gentleman wasn't economical in those days. Finally Leslie struck a gay party, and talk turned on the coming Derby. There happened to be a book-maker in the crowd. Of course that man whipped out his book and began taking bets, English fashion. Every one laid either a 'monkey' or a 'pony,' and Leslie was too game to let American interests suffer. He didn't have much money in his clothes just then, but he said:

"'I don't know what your "monkeys" and "ponies" are, but I'll bet you $50 the American horse will win. You can't beat him.'

"'Fifty to one I lays against Iroquois,' said the book-maker. 'You take a pony, then. That's just about $50.'

"'All right,' said Leslie, going down in his pockets and pulling out his money.

"Some of Leslie's English friends here interposed and explained that he didn't have to put up his money. Leslie demanded that the thing be done in true American style, but the Englishmen wouldn't have it that way.

"When George came back from Paris he was mad at the recklessness of his brother. Derby day arrived and the two went out to see the race. Leslie had never weakened on Iroquois, and had succeeded in getting George pretty well worked up. Just at the last moment George pulled out a big roll of bank notes and said he was going to back Iroquois himself. The crowd around the ready-money book-makers was so large, however, that George couldn't get up to place his money. While he was struggling the horses came out for the great event. George and Leslie climbed on a high picket fence to witness the sight.

"The horses got away together, with Iroquois up in the front division. They ran down a kind of chute out of sight and then dodged in behind a long row of hedge. When they showed again Peregrine, the favorite, was in front, Tristan, the French horse, second and Iroquois third, just half a length away. Leslie saw that Archer was riding Iroquois under a steady pull while the others were getting a free rein.

"'Iroquois wins!' shouted Leslie, nearly falling off the fence. 'It's a sure thing.'

"'You're crazy,' said George, with great disgust. 'Peregrine wins. He's ahead, isn't he?'

"Well, you all know how Iroquois won in a gallop, under Archer's masterly riding. Leslie went back to London, collected $2,500, and was on his feet again.

"George and Leslie went over to Paris shortly after and George was kept busy counseling Leslie not to bet again. Foxhall, another American horse, was to run in the Grand Prix that year at Chantilly. Leslie backed Foxhall, in spite of George's earnest protests, for 100 louis.

"'You'll let your patriotism run away with your judgment until you get broke,' grumbled George.

"'Never mind me,' responded Leslie. 'I guess I'm old enough to take care of myself.'

"George made a sharp retort, and, to avoid an open quarrel, the brothers separated and agreed to keep away from each other until after the race.

"Foxhall won by the scantest of noses, and after cashing his tickets Leslie sought out George, with the intention of 'crowing' over him. But George saw him coming and did the 'crowing' himself. 'You think you're smart, don't you?' he shouted. 'Look a-here!' exhibiting a double fistful of money. I backed Foxhall myself, and your winnings aren't a marker to mine.'

"Sure enough, after abusing his brother for recklessness he had himself succumbed to patriotism and had wagered every dollar he could spare on the American horse.

"The brothers made a continental tour, enjoyed themselves thoroughly, and landed in New York with more money than they had when they started. Leslie says he will back patriotism against judgment every time."—Chicago News.

A Commercial Curiosity.

A gentleman of this city, who spent the summer in Maine, was permitted to make the following verbatim copy of a document in the possession of a family in Norway, that state, the head of which is a descendant of the merchant who wrote it. It is interesting as showing peculiar business transactions, or ways of doing business, in those early days:

PISCATAQUA in N. England 2 June 1732.—Gent: We write you by Capt Wm Frost Since have not received any of Yors; this hope will be delivered by Capt Robert Oram in our Ship Eagle and inclosed you have an Invoice & Bill of Lading for her cargo wch desire you will be Pleased to Receive and Dispose off for our best advantage and Lay out ye at Produce mostly in good rum in Good Strang tite Casks & Cotton wool Rome Small matter of Sugr & Melases & Ship it on board her & Let her be Dispocht Directly here; if any freight Should offer without hendering much Time Should Greatly Oblige to You if You would be pleased to Assist them to Procure it & that You will give them a quic Dispatch we Cluse that the cargo Should be Some thing the Cheeper rather than She Should be Delayed or not bring ye nt produce of her cargo with her.

We pray You to Settel our Accost & pay yor Selfes the Ballance that ben So Long due from us to You we are with due respect

Gent Yor Affectionate & obliged Servts Wm PEPPERRELL.

If west India Goods Should be Scarce & Dear Send us ye nt proceeds of ye Cargo partly in Likely Young negroes of about 12 or 14 Years old if to be had Cheap—my Cooper tells me that ye two hhds of Cod fish is Very Good. W P

The Fanciful Pets of Women.

People have different fancies. You see some take one thing and some another. English women would be lonesome without their faithful brutes. Actresses are fond of dogs. Mlle. Aimee always travels with her toy "Jack" in a little silk bag to smuggle him into hotels and parlor-cars, and other places where dogs are debarred. "Jack" is a French dog, and don't understand a syllable of English, but is as smart as a whip. Fanny Davenport keeps her dog for company, and shows off her white, shapely hand by caressing his shiny coat.

Not very long since a young lady visited relatives in Edmund place and brought with her as a guest and companion a flying squirrel, which she carried everywhere in her pocket. Mrs. Carew, of Congress street, has as a pet a small alligator. Mrs. Wilson also treasures an alligator. Turtles from Connor's creek, captured while sunning themselves on the logs on the Grosse Pointe road, beautify the boudoirs of many of the Detroit ladies. They are secured by little chains made fast to the stationary washstands. One young lady had a red lizard from Ohio; another a horned toad from Colorado, which is made comfortable in her work-basket, where it stays a good part of the time, and looks like a ball of variegated bronze silk.—Detroit Tribune.

Mrs. Colt, the widow of the famous inventor of the Colt revolver, is described as a quiet, dignified lady of middle age, gentle and cultivated in manner, and decidedly aristocratic in appearance. She usually dresses in black silk, very stylishly made, and her white hands are ornamented by a number of diamond rings of great brilliancy and value. Her gray hair is arranged in massive coils. Mrs. Colt's brother, Mr. Jarvis, and her sister's husband, Mr. Nicholas Beach, carry on the business of her late husband.

TIME CARDS OF STEAMERS

STANDARD TIME.

Charlevoix and East Jordan.
STR. NORTH STAR, CAPT. MEL THOMPSON. Leaving Charlevoix at 6:30 a m and 1:30 p m and returning leave East Jordan for Charlevoix at 9:30 am and 4 p m, touching at intermediate points both ways.

Boyne City and Charlevoix.
STR. CLARA BELLE, CAPT. GEO. JEPSON. Leave Boyne City at 6:30 a. m. and 1:00 p. m. and Charlevoix at 9:30 a. m., and 3 p m. connecting with the Friant and Cummings to and from Petoskey, Touching at way ports.

Charlevoix and Boyne City.
STR. JOSEPH GORDON, CAPT. LEWIS GUARD. Leave Charlevoix at 6:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., and Boyne City at 9:30 a.m., 4 p. m., touching at way ports

Harbor Springs, Charlevoix & E. Jordan.
STR. THOS. FRIANT, CAPT. B. VANDENBURG. MORNING: Leave Harbor Springs, 7:30; Petoskey, 8:00; Charlevoix, 9:30; arrive, East Jordan 11:30. AFTERNOON: Leave East Jordan 1:30; Charlevoix, 4:00; Petoskey, 5:30; arrive, Harbor Spring, 6:00

East Jordan, Charlevoix & Harbor Spgs.
LOU A. CUMMINGS, CAPT. W. A. SNYDER. MORNING: Leave East Jordan 7 a. m.; Charlevoix, 9; Petoskey, 11; arrive at Harbor Springs 11:30. AFTERNOON: Leave Harbor Springs, 1 p. m.; Petoskey, 1:30; Charlevoix, 3; arrive at East Jordan, 5:30 p. m.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN LINE.
PROP. CHAMPLAIN, Capt. EDW. CASEY. Going North, Chicago Tuesdays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Thursdays 11 p m; Cheboygan, Fridays 2:30 p m. Going South, Cheboygan, Fridays 5 p m; Charlevoix, Saturdays 2:30 p m; Milwaukee, Mondays 3 p m; Chicago, Mondays 11 p m.
PROP. LAWRENCE, Capt. GEO. THORP. Going North, Chicago, Fridays 8 p m; Charlevoix, Sundays 3 p m; Cheboygan, Mondays 9 a m. Going South, Cheboygan, Mondays 4 p m; Charlevoix, Tuesdays 8 a m; Milwaukee, Wednesdays 1 p m; Chicago, Thursdays 12 m.
Upright & Emrey, agents, Charlevoix.

HANNAH, LAY & CO'S BOATS.
CITY OF GRAND RAPIDS, Capt. O. E. WILBUR. Going North, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave Traverse City 7 a. m; Northport 9:30; Charlevoix 11:30; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45 arriving at St. Ignace 8:20. Going South, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave St. Ignace 6:30 a m; Mackinac Island Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m. Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Northport 5:15 p m, arriving at Traverse City at 7:45 p m.
T. S. FAXTON, Capt. A. G. ALDRICH. Going North, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays: Leave Traverse City 7 a m; Torch Lake 9:45; Norwood 10:30; Charlevoix 12 noon; Petoskey 1:30 p m; Harbor Springs 2; Cross Village 4:30; Mackinac Island 7:45; arriving at St. Ignace 8:20. Going South, Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays: Leave St. Ignace 6 a m; Mackinac Island 7; Cross Village 10:15; Harbor Springs 12:45 p m; Petoskey 1:15; Charlevoix 2:45; Norwood 4:15; Torch Lake 5; arriving at Traverse City 7:45 p m.
The City of Traverse leaves Chicago dock above 12th street every Saturday evening at 7, arriving at Traverse City Monday morning. Leaves Traverse City Wednesday evenings at 7 o'clock.
J. L. Hurd & Co., Agents, Charlevoix.

BURNS & SCROGGIE'S LIVERY STABLE

CHARLEVOIX.

The Best Single and Double Rigs always on hand.

Drivers furnished if desired. Rates low.

Burns & Scroggie, Charlevoix.

Farming Lands

500,000 ACRES Of Splendid MICHIGAN LANDS For Sale By The G. R. & I. R. R.

50,000 Acres in Charlevoix Co,

These lands are timbered with beech and maple elm and other wood and are accessible to best markets

By Water and Rail

And are in a state unequalled for health, well watered and contiguous to the great fruit raising section of Michigan.

The Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad runs through the center of the grant. The part of Michigan in which these lands are situated is

Not a Wilderness by any Means.

It contains a population of 280,000 souls and is rapidly filling up with settlers from almost every state in the Union

Over 200,000 acres of the lands of this grant have been sold

Send for English or German Pamphlet. Address

W. H. HUGHART, Commissioner,

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.

TITLE PERFECT.

An Answer Wanted.

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50c. a bottle by Dr. G. W. Crouter

An Enterprising, Reliable House.

Dr. G. W. Crouter and Crouter & Harris, Ironton, can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the Agency for such articles as have well-known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable. Having secured the Agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and to show our confidence, we invite you to call and get a Trial Bottle Free.

Old papers for sale at this office.

For Sale.

A GOOD SAW MILL COMPLETE FOR SALE cheap. Inquire at Bank of Charlevoix. tf

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter chapped hands chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. Crouter

Pan-Zama Balm

THE ARCH QUEEN OF FEMALE REMEDIES the grandest and simplest known remedy for all Female Troubles to which womankind is heir—$1 per box of one month's treatment. Reliable Lady Agents can make money for themselves and become benefactors to their race by engaging in the sale of this remedy. For particulars and particulars, Address PAN-ZAMA MED. CO. Frankfort, Ind.

W. H. FRANCIS FURNITURE —AND— JOBBING SHOP,

Will also do Contracting & Building, In Charlevoix, and Summer Resorts.

I keep in my shop a full set of hand and foot power machinery which enables me to do jobbing, repairing etc. on short notice.

Shop on South Terrace, Opposite Sheriff Berdan's residence.

NEW SHOP!

All kinds of Blacksmithing, At the Shop in the Foundry Building.

Horseshoeing a specialty.

ALL WORK GUARANTEED.

M. SCOTT.

MILLINERY, FANCY GOODS, DRESS-MAKING.

We have just opened a large line of Spring and Summer Millinery and Fancy Goods to which we invite your attention.

DRESS-MAKING done on the TAILOR SYSTEM. The best work done at the lowest rates.

ALDRICH SISTERS.

Ingleside Building.

MERCHANT TAILORING.

I have located at Charlevoix, and am prepared to do all kinds of Merchant Tailoring,

Repairing and Cleaning done promptly at lowest rates.

Call and see me. Satisfaction Guaranteed. Resp'y Yours,

C. H. Maddaugh.

CHARLEVOIX Manufacturing Co.

Charlevoix, Mich., Manufacturers of Sash and Doors, Blinds, Mouldings etc. NEWELL Posts, Banisters & Stair Rails kept in stock. Window & Door Frames made to order.

All Kinds of Building Material Kept constantly on hand.

PLANS & SPECIFICATIONS. Furnished on application.

Cottages made a specialty also contracting and building

Correspondence solicited.

MARVELOUS PRICES! BOOKS FOR THE MILLION

Complete Novels and Other Works, by Famous Authors, Almost Given Away. [illegible]

[List of numbered titles, 1–45, largely illegible: ... The Frozen Deep, by Wilkie Collins; Red Court Farm, by Mrs. Henry Wood; The Lady of the Lake, by Sir Walter Scott; In Cupid's Net; Amos Barton, by George Eliot; Lady Gwendoline's Dream; The Mystery of the Holly Tree; The Budget of Wit, Humor and Fun; John Bowerbank's Wife, by Miss Mulock; The Gray Woman, by Mrs Gaskell; Sixteen Complete Stories by Popular Authors; Jasper Dane's Secret, by Miss M. E. Braddon; Fancy Work for Home Adornment; Grimm's Fairy Stories for the Young; Manual of Etiquette for Ladies and Gentlemen; Useful Knowledge for the Million; The Home Cook Book and Family Physician; Manners and Customs in Far Away Lands; 57 Popular Ballads; Called Back, by Hugh Conway; At the World's Mercy, by Florence Warden; Mildred Trevanion, by "The Duchess"; Dark Days, by the author of "Called Back"; Shadows on the Snow, by B. L. Farjeon; Leoline, by Mary Cecil Hay; Gabriel's Marriage, by Wilkie Collins; Reaping the Whirlwind, by Mary Cecil Hay; Dudley Carleon, by Miss M. E. Braddon; A Golden Dawn, by the author of "Dora Thorne"; Valerie's Fate, by Mrs. Alexander; Sister Rose, by Wilkie Collins; Anne, by Mrs. Henry Wood; The Laurel Bush, by Miss Mulock; Robinson Crusoe, by Daniel De Foe; How to Make Poultry Pay; Parlor Magic and Chemical Experiments; Gems of the Poets; Building Plans for Practical, Low-cost Houses; Anecdotes of Public Men; Æsop's Fables.]

OUR UNEQUALED OFFER.

We have arranged with the publishers of these books to furnish the whole forty-five with one year's subscription to our paper for $2.00; or we will send any five for 25 cts, or the whole forty-five for $1.50. Address all orders to publishers of "SENTINEL," Charlevoix, Mich.

GRENADES;

Two Sizes—Pints and Quarts.

Over Sixty Millions Sold.

PRICES. Pints, - Per Doz., $10.00. Quarts, - " " 15.00.

"STAR" Tubular Fire Extinguisher, Glass Tube, 19x2½ in. Holds 1 quart. In this device we combine the BEST QUALITIES of our famous Grenades with the NEW feature of having an article that can be used by Sprinkling. It is designed especially for use in Passenger Coaches and Dwellings. It is elegant as ornamentation. It is cheap and reliable. No rust; no corrosion possible. Plain, $12.00 per doz. Ornam't'd, 15.00 per doz.

The "Star" EXTINGUISHER Holds 5 gallons, and will force a stream through 6 feet of hose 45 feet with our pump, which is the best ever made. Needs no attention until used. Will not freeze, explode or get out of order. No rust or corrosion. Can be used by anyone. Price, $80.00 Each.

"STAR" CHEMICAL. Just what is needed in every village, lumber yard, warehouse, etc. Fully equipped with Hose, Ax, Crow Bar, Lantern, etc. It is cheap, and reliable. Wt. 450 lbs. PRICE, $200.00 EACH.

[illegible] Liberal discounts to agents. Send for circulars and testimonials.

The HARDEN HAND GRENADE CO. 51 & 53 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Take The Sentinel.

SOMETHING NEW. WORLD RENOWNED. CENTRE DRAFT PLOW

The Special Features of this Celebrated Plow are, that it:

1st NEVER CLOGS,
2d ALWAYS SCOURS,
3d TURNS A PERFECT FURROW.

The Beam is not bolted to the landside, but—by means of a steel frog—is set directly in the Centre of the Line of Draft, making a steady light running plow, and one that cannot be Clogged. See one before you buy.

If your Agent has none write us for price

MANUFACTURED ONLY BY J. I. CASE PLOW WORKS, RACINE, Wis.

Good PAINT

An example of survival of the fittest is the established Reputation, Popularity and Superiority of the SHERWIN-WILLIAMS COLORED LEADS. Also St. LOUIS WHITE LEAD.

FOR SALE ONLY BY L. H. BARTHOLOMEW & CO.

DRUGS and STATIONERY, OF EVERY DESCRIPTION.

A Large and Complete New Line JUST RECEIVED.

EVERYTHING YOU CAN THINK OF.

You'll be sorry if you do not examine our Goods and Prices.

PERRY WEED.

The only News stand in town.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN Boiler Works!

Builder and Manufacturer of BOILERS, HEATERS, LARD TANKS OF ALL KINDS.

Sheet Iron Work given special attention.

MARINE WORK a specialty.

HENRY BARTH, Prop. Charlevoix, Mich.

AUTOMATIC Single Thread Sewing Machines will absolutely take the place of Shuttle Machines. No woman ever wants a Shuttle Machine after trying an Automatic. Address, 78 W. 23d St., New York City.

CURES

Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, Quinzy, Sore Throat, Consumption, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

YOUNG'S COUGH SYRUP

Dansville, Mich. Aug. 15, 1881.—I was attacked with a severe cold and threatened with lung fever while on a visit to Hudson, Mich., about a month ago, so much so that I was unable to fill an appointment to preach on account of my severe coughing, but managed to get home and immediately took some of Dr. E. A. Young's Cough & Lung Syrup I had in the house, and my cough left me as soon as I commenced taking it, and I find permanent relief when I am attacked by cough or lung complaint. REV. ROBY COPE

Howell, Mich., Oct. 26, 1874.—I have tried Dr. E. A. Young's Cough and Lung Syrup for more than a year, and I had occasion to use it as a remedy for Colds and Coughs, and found it a reliable medicine. I have used his Ague and Liver Syrup in my family with the best of success, curing my mother whose age was over seventy years of one of the hardest attacks of Fever and Ague, after the second chill and fever. I take pleasure in recommending the above remedies to all who need them. REV. S. B. KIMBELL.

Sold by all druggists. Price, 25c., 50c. and $1.00. Large bottles sent free on receipt of price.

W. JOHNSTON & CO., DETROIT, MICHIGAN

160 Acres in MARION

Township For Sale at a Bargain, Terms to suit.

MONEY TO LOAN ON Approved Real Estate Security.

THEODORE R. CHAPIN Boyne City.

FRANK E. WOODS Bath & Barber Rooms

Hot and Cold Baths at all hours. Odd fellows Block.

BATH & BARBER ROOMS.

Hot and Cold Baths and Sea Water Baths at the Barber Shop, 1st door north of Bridge St. House.

If you want a quiet place to get a shave, hair dress or bath call and see me.

JAY L. PRICE.

1-3 OFF SALE! At Miss Spaulding's MILLINERY ROOMS,

I will sell my entire stock of goods, except Yarns and Crewels at greatly reduced prices for cash only.

Any lady purchasing goods in the amount of $5.00 [illegible] choice of any untrimmed felt hat in the store.

Come early and secure a Bargain.

MISS L. SPAULDING.

For Finest JOB WORK, Patronize The Sentinel.

JAS. A. GELLICK,

Dealer in Choice Wines, Fine Liquors EXCELLENT CIGARS.

We call Special Attention to our Old Kentucky Sour Mash WHISKIES.

We also keep continually on draught Milwaukee Export and lager Beer.

Bridge St., 1st door south of Sentinel.

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

BY SMITH & PARMELEE.

CHARLEVOIX. — MICHIGAN.

NEWS BUDGET.

Fresh Intelligence from Every Part of the Civilized World.

Foreign and Domestic News, Political Events, Personal Points, Labor Notes, Etc.

LATEST DISPATCHES.

CATTLEMEN COMBINING.

Plans for a Gigantic Corporation to Control $15,000,000 Worth of Property.

A St. Louis dispatch gives an account of a gigantic scheme to consolidate all the cattle interests of the Northwest and form a company which shall control $15,000,000 worth of cattle and grazing lands. It seems to have originated with the Wyoming Stock Association, of Cheyenne, and it is the outgrowth of the combination of the smaller cattlemen into companies which has been going on for several years. This scheme has been formed for organizing the largest cattle company ever known, controlling hundreds of thousands of cattle, and ranges larger than many States. The failure of the Swan Bros. brought matters to a focus rather unexpectedly. The plan is to unite the Wyoming, Colorado, Eastern Utah, Western Nebraska, Southern Montana, and Southern Dakota companies into one gigantic corporation, each absolutely surrendering his individual herd and ranch, and receiving a proportionate amount of stock in return. A similar association has been recently formed in Texas, but one of far less extent and complete in its organization.

FIRE IN A PARIS THEATER.

Nineteen Persons Killed and Many Injured by Jumping from the Windows.

The Paris theater known as the Opera Comique was destroyed by fire Wednesday evening, and nineteen lives were lost. Forty-three received injuries more or less severe. A dispatch from Paris says:

The iron curtain was lowered in front of the stage, and this prevented the fire spreading immediately to the auditorium and allowed the audience time to escape. Most of the casualties are due to nervousness. Many persons who were unable to trust themselves to walk the narrow ledge of the cornices around the building jumped off in terror. One woman coolly walked all around the cornice, while the flames were bursting above, until she reached the fire-escape. The victims are almost all singers.

National Railway Commission.

Alexander McCloud, General Freight Agent of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad Company, made an argument before the Interstate Commission in support of the petition of that company to be relieved from the operation of the long and short haul clause. He said the road had been forced by the law to relinquish grain trade for the reason that the short trunk lines crossing the road fixed the rates so low that they could not be met if local rates were to be reduced in proportion. The suspension would work no discrimination or injury to anyone or the rates established by the trunk lines, and the only question was whether his road should be allowed to do part of the business at these rates or should be excluded from it. Mr. Green, representing the Michigan Central, gave notice that he had filed a complaint against the Chicago and Grand Trunk charging it with selling thousand-mile tickets to commercial travelers for $20, while the general public is required to pay for the same tickets $25, in violation of the interstate commerce law. As an order has already been made for the appearance of the company complained against Mr. Green deferred his argument until it should be represented.

The Bold Militia Boys.

The parade of the various military organizations in camp at Washington was an unqualified success. The President reviewed the troops from a stand in front of the White House. A couple of Southern companies dropped out of the procession because they were asked to march behind a colored company.

Commerce.

Strikes in different parts of the country have injured business more or less, but it is believed that the aggregate trade of the United States is at least 10 per cent. greater than a year ago. This statement is based on trade reports from leading cities, bank clearings, and railroad earnings. The crops in the Red River valley, which were recently suffering for want of rain, are now said to be in danger of being drowned out. The late rains are said to have embraced the entire wheat belt of the Northwest, and with the exception noted the outlook is generally favorable.——The output of the Minneapolis flour mills last week was 98,520 barrels, against 105,150 for the preceding week, and 135,530 barrels for the corresponding time in 1886.——The receipts at the Chicago Stock Yards Wednesday were: Cattle, 10,500; hogs, 21,000; sheep, 2,800. Cattle and hogs were lower under increased supplies, but sheep were scarce and advancing. Spring lambs were active at $2.50 to $3.50 per head.——These are the latest market quotations:

NEW YORK.
Cattle	$4.50 @ $5.25
Hogs	[illegible]
Wheat—No. 1 White	[illegible]
No. 2 Red	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2	[illegible]
Oats—White	[illegible]
Pork—New Mess	[illegible]
CHICAGO.
Cattle—Choice to Prime Steers	[illegible]
Medium	[illegible]
Common	[illegible]
Hogs—Shipping Grades	[illegible]
Flour—Winter Wheat	[illegible]
Wheat—No. 2 Spring	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2	[illegible]
Oats—No. 2	[illegible]
Butter—Choice Creamery	[illegible]
Fine Dairy	[illegible]
Cheese—Full Cream, cheddars	[illegible]
Full Cream, flats	[illegible]
Eggs—Fresh	[illegible]
Potatoes—Choice, new	[illegible]
Pork—Mess	[illegible]
MILWAUKEE.
Wheat—Cash	[illegible]
Corn—No. 3	[illegible]
Oats—No. 2 White	[illegible]
Rye—No. 1	[illegible]
Pork—Mess	[illegible]
ST. LOUIS.
Wheat—No. 2	[illegible]
Corn—Mixed	[illegible]
Oats—Mixed	[illegible]
Pork—New Mess	[illegible]
TOLEDO.
Wheat—No. 2	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2	[illegible]
Oats	[illegible]
DETROIT.
Beef Cattle	[illegible]
Hogs	[illegible]
Sheep	[illegible]
Wheat—Michigan Red	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2	[illegible]
Oats—White	[illegible]
CINCINNATI.
Wheat—No. 2 Red	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2	[illegible]
Oats—No. 2	[illegible]
Pork—Mess	[illegible]
Live Hogs	[illegible]
BUFFALO.
Wheat—No. 1 White	[illegible]
Corn—No. 2 Yellow	[illegible]
INDIANAPOLIS.

CURRENT EVENTS.

EAST.

Miss [illegible], a well-known soprano, committed suicide at Pittsburgh by hanging. Spiritualism had unsettled her mind.... General James L. Selfridge, a dashing Union soldier, shot and killed himself at Philadelphia. Despondency arising from illness is the only reason assigned for the act.

Charles B. Reynolds was found guilty of blasphemy at Morristown, N. J., and fined $25. He was defended by Robert G. Ingersoll.

WEST.

About two thousand people are sufferers from the fire that destroyed the town of Lake Linden, Michigan. One person was burned to death. Appeals for aid are made on behalf of the victims. A Detroit dispatch says "the town of Ironwood, Michigan, is threatened with destruction, and many villages and towns on the Gogebic range are also in danger. Forest fires are still prevailing in various parts of the Northern Peninsula, and the aggregate losses will reach high into the millions."

A syndicate of Pittsburgh capitalists has leased four thousand acres of land in Adams County, Indiana, and will bore for natural gas. The lands lie in a direct line between Marion, Ind., and Findlay, Ohio, where rich strikes have been made. If gas is found in sufficient volume it will be piped to Fort Wayne, a distance of about twenty-five miles.

The motion for a new trial for Schwartz and Watt, convicted of killing Express Messenger Nichols, was overruled at Morris, Ill., and the Judge sentenced the men to life imprisonment. Notice of an appeal to the Supreme Court was given.

William Andreas, an amateur balloonist, was killed at Oskaloosa, Iowa. He had a hot-air balloon, about twenty by forty feet. When loosened it shot up with great rapidity about seven hundred feet, when a current carried the balloon a distance of three blocks when it took fire. Andreas was on a trapeze ten feet below the balloon, and was seen to climb nearly to the mouth, as was supposed to attempt to put out the fire. Very soon, however, the balloon collapsed, and the doomed man fell upon the roof of a business block near the public square. The body was crushed beyond recognition. The ascent had been largely advertised, and the streets were filled by thousands of people, mostly women and children. The sight was a horrible one, and occasioned intense excitement. Some ladies fainted, and many others had to be carried home.

WASHINGTON.

Ex-Senator Van Wyck has written the Secretary of the Interior urging him not to sell the abandoned military reservations until the Fiftieth Congress has had an opportunity to bring them within the provisions of the homestead act. The reservations embrace about 700,000 acres, and it is understood that certain cattle companies and other corporations are scheming to get possession of them. Under the act of July 5, 1884, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to appraise and sell these lands.

Among the internal revenue districts abolished by an order issued by the President are: The Second Illinois, which is consolidated with the First District; the Fourth Illinois, divided between the Fifth and Eighth; the Eleventh Indiana, added to the Sixth; the Sixth Ohio, consolidated with the First; the Fourth Missouri, consolidated with the First; the Third Wisconsin, added to the First; and the Sixth Wisconsin, consolidated with the Second. Commissioner Miller thinks the Government will save more than $140,000 annually by these changes and the tax-payers will not be inconvenienced.

A delegation of twenty-five gentlemen representing the business interests of St. Louis, headed by Mayor Francis and including representatives of all branches of the municipal government, waited upon the President Monday and extended to him and Mrs. Cleveland a cordial invitation to visit St. Louis during the Grand Army encampment in September. The President said that while it was absolutely impossible to anticipate the exigencies of the public service so far ahead as September he could not now see why he should not visit St. Louis at the time indicated, about the last of September. He said, therefore, that he would take pleasure in accepting their kind invitation.

Secretary Lamar declares that all the railroad indemnity lands will be thrown open to settlement just "as soon as the department is in possession of information that will enable it to act intelligently." He also announces his intention to sweep away the numerous leases of Indian lands by cattlemen, all of which were made without authority of law. It seems, after all, that the Secretary is really "in dead earnest" in his campaign against the land-grabbers.

Attorney General Garland says he does not want a seat on the Supreme bench, and would not accept it if tendered him. The President has refused to pardon James J. Stanley, of St. Louis, convicted of fraudulent registration.

An actual count of all the money in the United States Treasury incident to the transfer of that office from Mr. Jordan to Mr. Hyatt, and which will occupy two months, was commenced last week.

POLITICS.

Pennsylvania's Legislature has adjourned sine die.... Samuel Pasco has been elected United States Senator by the Florida Legislature.... Henry George's New York Labor party is actively preparing for the fall campaign. Mr. George denies that there is or will be any deal with Mr. Blaine, who, he says, represents all that he "has been fighting against for years." Mr. George thinks there will be a labor candidate for the Presidency in 1888.

George William Curtis, in an address upon the political situation before the Commonwealth Club, of New York, said that "the President, amid incalculable difficulties, had been endeavoring to carry out his conviction upon the subject of civil-service reform," but that he "had met with enormous obstructions, and the most enormous was the Democratic party itself." He predicted that the result of the election next year "would depend more upon the candidates than upon the party that nominated them."

LABOR.

The Knights of Labor have in a measure taken up the cause of the locked-out bricklayers in Chicago, and are discussing the propriety of retaining counsel to prosecute for conspiracy the material dealers who refuse to sell brick, lime, sand, etc., unless they be granted a permit to do so by the Builders and Traders' Exchange. The Knights claim to have funds enough to pay the expenses of the prosecution, and it is rumored that they intend retaining "Bob" Ingersoll or "Ben" Butler.... A mob of negro and Hungarian strikers attacked coke-workers at Simpsontown and Dawson, Pa., using clubs and pistols. A number of persons were wounded and a large amount of property destroyed.

Quiet prevails among the strikers in the Pennsylvania coke regions. A num- [illegible]

RAILWAYS.

[illegible]

Railroads has been enlarged so as to embrace the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad.

The Chicago extension of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad is expected to be completed between the first and middle of next September, says a Chicago telegram. At present the work of grading all along the line from Kansas City, Mo., to Fort Madison is being pushed with great energy. Track laying from Kansas City will be commenced about July 1. The road is being constructed with little construction for local traffic, but as directly as possible on an air line.

GENERAL.

The League of American Wheelmen, at its meeting at St. Louis, elected T. J. Kirkpatrick, of Ohio, President; H. B. Hayes, of Massachusetts, Vice President; and W. M. Brewster, of Missouri, Treasurer.

William O'Brien and Dennis Kilbride, the Irish Nationalists who have been making matters so warm in the Dominion for a week past, reached Niagara Falls Saturday night, says a dispatch from that point. They received a warm welcome when they landed on American soil, and it continued all the way to Niagara. Mr. O'Brien is considerably injured by the attacks on him, and may be compelled to quit speaking for several days. A reporter who visited him at his hotel says:

It was with apparent difficulty that Mr. O'Brien spoke. "The words of my left side," he said, speaking at times almost in a whisper, "is suffering considerably from a contusion in the left rib received from the mob in Toronto. It gave me no trouble for a day or two, but has been gradually developing into pleurisy. Dr. Doyle, of Syracuse, who examined it last night, says that the lower portion of the lung is seriously affected by contusion. For a couple of days I have scarcely been able to move with ease or use my voice. My other injuries have mostly disappeared. One was from a stone with which I was struck on the shoulder blade in Toronto and another from a kick behind the ear sustained in Kingston."

Another attempt was made on O'Brien's life at the close of his meeting in Hamilton, Canada, says a telegram from that city:

After the speech-making was over a man came to Mr. O'Brien while sitting on the platform and hurriedly whispered something in his ear. The first sign of commotion was when Mr. O'Brien got up and left the platform. This was to escape to the request several times made to him which he had already refused. It was the idea of some officious and meddlesome man—a plan which he had to save Mr. O'Brien's life. The plan was to leave the rink by a narrow alley, then reach McNabb street and jump into a carriage in waiting and drive to the hotel in the carriage, which was a covered one, besides Mr. O'Brien, were Messrs. McMahon and Roche, of the local branch of the National League, and Dennis Kilbride. On the driver's seat were John Nelson, who held the reins, and T. P. O'Brien. As they whipped up the horses and faced for the hotel, a crowd suddenly appeared and set up the usual hooting and groaning, which afterward proved to be a concerted signal to a group of five men who lurked around the market building in Market Square. The men, who hissed and groaned, followed the carriage, and, as it wheeled into Market Square, there was a sudden click, the horses pounced, and a flash of light suddenly overspread a group of buildings where the men lurked. The reins dropped out of John Nelson's hands, and, with the exclamation, "O, my God, I'm shot!" he fell forward on the seat. Crash! crash! crash! quick as lightning, and through bright flashes of flame sped the bullets from the revolvers until eight shots had been fired. Mr. O'Brien stretched forward to look out, and as he did so a bolt whistled by his face and passed through the opposite window, without harming anybody. T. P. O'Brien, Nelson's companion, who had been amazed and dazed, now grasped the reins and lashed the horses through the square into James street and down to the hotel, corner of James and Merrick streets. Here there was a hostile crowd, who again hooted as the party within tried to open the door, but could not. Mr. McMahon jumped over the door, and drawing a revolver, held the crowd at bay while Mr. O'Brien and his friend were making their exit from the carriage, also by the same uncomfortable way. As the party stepped into the corridor of the hotel a volley of rotten eggs was hurled at them, but no one was hit. Chief McKinnon and his men now rushed up, but all was over. Nelson was taken to the city hospital. Dr. James White extracted the bullet. He says the wound is not dangerous. It is on the left wrist. No arrests were made. When O'Brien reached his room he was smiling and cheerful, and nobody to look at him would have supposed that he had just escaped from the last of a series of attempts to take his life.

The steamer Plover and the schooner Trixie H. of Heart's Content collided off Halifax, N. F., and the schooner was sunk. Ten men and one woman were rescued from the schooner by the steamer. Two women and three men were lost.

The collision of the steamships Celtic and Britannic occurred about four hundred miles from Sandy Hook. The responsibility for the disaster has not been definitely located as yet. Each Captain claims to have taken all possible precautions against accident, and that the other was at fault. The number of killed is not positively known, but probably did not exceed six. The "official list" of injured contains nine names. The steerage passengers on the Britannic claim that they were treated with great severity after the accident, and that the remains of the victims were shoveled into the sea with indecent haste and in a rough and brutal manner.

The lease that Dennis O'Brien, the tenant of Luggacurran, had with Lord Lansdowne has been made public at Montreal. It provides that all improvements, no matter by whom made, belong to the landlord. Animals and birds, the rotation of crops, are all enumerated as the landlord's property, which the tenant has no right to use without his permission. The tenant can only cultivate the most difficult and sterile part of the farm, and must not cut a twig without the landlord's consent. The tenant is also responsible for his sub-tenants. If the tenant fails in any one of the terms of the lease he becomes bankrupt, and all his possessions pass to the landlord.

Mr. O'Brien's health is worse than it has been since he received his injuries at Toronto, says a Hamilton dispatch of Wednesday. He is unable to leave his bed, and will be obliged to take a few days' rest at Niagara Falls. No arrests in connection with the Hamilton outrage have been made. Mr. O'Brien positively denies that shots were fired from his carriage, as charged by the Hamilton Spectator. He apprehends further attempts upon his life when he returns to Montreal.

FOREIGN.

A Vienna dispatch says a more hopeful view prevails among Austrian statesmen of the European situation. The Emperor, in closing the Hungarian Diet next week, is expected to emphasize his confidence in the preservation of peace.... The London Times prints a story of extensive frauds on the agents of an American bank—name not given—by means of forged letters of credit presented simultaneously at six or eight leading cities on the continent. The perpetrators have not been arrested.... A cablegram says that Mr. Parnell's weak and emaciated appearance is the subject of much comment in the British Commons lobby, and that his friends are alarmed at his condition, and his political enemies pained. Several of the latter have been heard to express the opinion that he would not again take his seat in the House.

The strikes in Belgium are extending.... The Westphalian Manufacturing Company will close its works in Russia, owing to the heavy duties imposed by the new tariff on material used by the company.

The strike of the Northumberland (England) miners has ended, the men accepting the reduction in wages.... The condition of the Crown Prince of Germany causes great solicitude at Berlin.... Two more Irish priests, who were imprisoned for refusing to testify regarding the "plan of campaign," have been released under the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of Father Keller.

[illegible]

WORK AND WORKERS.

Notes and News of Interest in the Great World of Labor.

Prosperous Outlook in Nearly All Trades—Doings of Organized Labor.

The Chicago Strike and Lockout.

In Chicago, the chief seat of trade disturbances in this country, a strike of the bricklayers has been answered by a lockout on the part of their employers. As immediate results not only are many thousands of workingmen threatened with loss of employment, but great business interests intimately associated with the city's welfare are endangered. In its origin the quarrel was of comparatively small moment. The bricklayers demanded that payday be changed from Tuesday to Saturday, and that a slight advance be made in wages, threatening a general strike if their demands should not be complied with. Instead of yielding, the Master Builders' Association responded with a circular ordering a complete suspension of work. It is estimated that by this combined movement of strike and lockout no fewer than 50,000 workingmen will be thrown out of employment. Moreover, as is usual in such cases, among the worst sufferers will be multitudes of families whose heads have not had the slightest share in originating the conflict.

In behalf of the master builders the claim is made that this extreme measure of a lockout was taken in self-defense. The suspension of business operations in the most favorable season of the year for building will be accompanied by great losses, and for this reason the builders say they would not have resorted to a lockout except from the necessity of resisting arrogant dictation on the part of their employes. To the Bricklayers' Association belong nearly all the bricklayers and masons of Chicago. It is a local guild that has no connection with either of the national organizations of labor. Strange workingmen are not admitted to the association, and the certificates of membership of other labor unions are not recognized. Resident masons and bricklayers, whether belonging to the organization or not, must pay into its treasury an initiation fee of $75 for the privilege of working at the high wages paid in Chicago. There are other rules of the association under which the master builders have chafed, and when the last demand was made upon them they determined upon resistance.

This is the excuse given by the master builders of Chicago for a lockout which, if continued for the season, must be attended by the most serious consequences.

Knights of Labor.

The New Haven Knights will form a co-operative association to run a grocery store. A ladies' assembly of Knights has just been organized in Wheeling. The Cincinnati Knights are to hold a grand picnic at Parlor Grove, June 20. John W. Hayes, of the General Executive Board, has received $5,000 for the loss of an arm while employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company several years ago. The Hollidaysburg (Pa.) Knights will shortly start a co-operative store with a capital of $15,000. Isaiah Tuppons, the colored man, was elected Mayor of Glennville, Ohio, by the Knights. Some bricklayers of Chesterton, Ind., have started a co-operative brick yard at Porter Station, which will employ 350 men when working full. The Chicago boot and shoe Knights have organized a co-operative shop with $25,000 capital. The notorious Mrs. Parsons is a member of Assembly No. 1724, Jersey City. The San Diego (California) Knights elected a full ticket at the recent election. District Assembly No. 41, of Baltimore, now includes the entire State of Maryland. A Mississippi assembly fines any member caught intoxicated, $2 for the first offense and $5 for the second, and for the third offense the penalty is expulsion.

Indiana's Big Gas Boom.

The discovery of natural gas in Indiana, at various and distant points with varying pressures, indicates a multiplicity of reservoirs that are but feebly connected with one another, if, indeed, they be connected at all. The first well struck in Indiana has been giving out 2,000,000 cubic feet per day, and since then two other wells have been bored in the immediate vicinity, from which still greater volumes are obtained. Well known as No. 2, which was struck on the 31st of November, has been flowing ever since at a rate of 6,000,000 cubic feet per day. It is 916 feet 6 inches deep. Well No. 3 is 912 feet deep, and flows 7,000,000 cubic feet per day. Manufacturing enterprises will be transplanted to that locality as soon as possible.

Influx of Foreign Labor.

The extraordinary influx of foreign labor threatens in time to affect the rate of wages paid. The majority of the new-comers are seeking agricultural employment, and will in time become valuable consumers for our shop and mill products. The rush will continue for months to come, and it will be some time after the inducements disappear before the rush will be over. Skilled labor is anxious to escape from Europe and Great Britain as common or farm labor, and more or less correspondence is going on between the trades unions on both sides relative to opportunities here.

Industrial and Labor Notes.

A $1,000,000 company, composed largely of Philadelphians, is about introducing a new incandescent light system at St. Louis. A $100,000 tack and nail company is about starting business at East St. Louis. A $100,000 company has been organized for manufacturing hay-knives at East Wilton, Me. A Buffalo scale company has just booked a contract for sixteen 90,000-pound scales. The Cleveland ship-yards are overrun with boat orders. A Reading founder has just booked an order for three very large cotton-presses. The first one to be made will weigh 150 tons. The Bethlehem Iron Company has 800 men on its pay-rolls.

The steam engine manufacturing companies throughout the East are all running a full force of men, and the managers report flattering prospects. A new cotton-mill is to be built at Holyoke, 344 feet long by 88 feet wide, which will have 30,000 spindles. The weavers of Fall River, Mass., are about forming an organization similar to the Spinners' Union. Weaving has been advanced 12½ per cent. at the Troy blanket-mills. A Manchester cotton-mill company has just put in a 1,000-horse power engine. A new silk-mill has just been started in Mansfield, Conn.

Rail makers and the manufacturers of railway material generally are predicting an improving demand for material, on account of the steady increase of earnings on the leading railroads. The improving commercial reports are also stimulating confidence, and leading to an enlargement of industrial operations. The reports of earnings of thirty-eight railroad companies for the first quarter of the year show an increase of 21 per cent. over 1886.

The Schuylkill region has 120 collieries, employing 39,600 miners, who mine 9,000,000 tons of coal and are paid $11,000,000 annually in wages. There are fifty-two collieries in the Lehigh region, employing 13,000 miners, and in the Wyoming region there are 119 collieries, employing 34,000 workers who are paid $14,000,000. There [illegible] among the people who advocated socialistic views.

Real estate matters are very active in St. Paul, the aggregate of dealings for the last four months of this year amounted to $22,000,000, as against $7,000,000 for the same time last year. The building permits so far this year call for an expenditure of $2,000,000, against $1,250,000 for the same time last year.

The American cheese manufacturers find their Scotch market leaving them. Last year's imports at Glasgow were 3,642 tons, as against 7,200 tons in 1881. The cheese makers are told they must manufacture more carefully and take more pains in shipping.

The result of the active demand for satinets has been a large increase in the demand for shoddy suitable for such goods. The use of shoddy and wool extract has increased during the last four years, owing to the competition and low price of goods.

The New York workingmen are nearly all busily employed, and since the 1st of May have won a good many small strikes involving questions of unionism and wages.

There is an increased demand for machinists and mechanical labor of all kinds in the West and Northwest. Wages have been advanced in a good many shops.

Building operations are still greatly delayed at Omaha, and contractors are put about. Workmen were sent for to Kansas City, but the Knights there were on guard.

The St. Louis printers expect to secure the nine-hour day after Sept. 1, and believe that it will be enforced generally by the International Union.

The wages of lumbermen will likely be advanced during the coming season. The lumbermen are compactly organized, and are working in harmony.

The brickmakers of Terre Haute, Ind., have decided to introduce molds into the union brick-yard that will leave upon each brick the union imprint.

A new mill, to cost $275,000, is to be built at Fall River, and will have 20,000 spindles, to be used for the manufacture of yarn for the hosiery trade.

A $1,000,000 malleable iron works is to be erected at Nashville; a bridge works at Rome, and a rolling-mill at Florence, to cost $150,000.

The Somerset Iron Works, in Massachusetts, which cost $250,000, are offered for $80,000.

The Union Labor party of New York will hold a State convention at Elmira, June 15.

All of the 200 union brewers of San Francisco have been discharged.

ANOTHER BIG BRIDGE.

The Northwestern Road to Span the Missouri with a Fine Bridge at Sioux City.

[Sioux City special.]

The long talked-of bridge across the Missouri River, at Sioux City, is at last finally assured, and its immediate construction is practically settled. It is to be built by the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Company, and it will not cost the taxpayers of Sioux City a dollar. The contract has been made and signed, and the work is to be pushed forward to the speediest possible completion. It is confidently believed that the bridge will be completed within eighteen months. Representatives of the Sioux City Bridge Company were a few days ago invited to a conference in Chicago where an agreement for the transfer of the bridge franchise was entered into, mutually satisfactory to both parties, and the details under that agreement are now so well advanced that it is only a question of a few days until the negotiations shall have been fully completed.

This involves a consummation greatly desired by this people, and the largest in its material significance toward the future of Sioux City of any single achievement in the history of the city. The Northwestern Railway Company is the most powerful corporation occupying the territory of this Northwest. In the territory north of the Platte and south of the Northern Pacific it is king. It has established and is extending lines radiating to the Missouri River on this side, and from the Missouri River on the other. The bridge means that the Northwestern will focalize these great interests here—that it will make Sioux City its Missouri River hub. This involves some change of policy on the part of the Northwestern Company, and under this change of policy it is happily found—happily for Sioux City, at least—that Sioux City's territorial interests and the Northwestern's territorial interests are twins; and so they have come together in this bright May weather, in complete good-nature and temper, to say one to the other, Shake! And they shake. The bridge to Sioux City, with the support it has back of it and for it, means the bridging of the only chasm that has stood in the way of anybody's confidence in Sioux City. Work on the bridge is to begin just as quick as the plans of the bridge can be approved by the Secretary of War. The plans have already been completed. They have been examined and approved by the Missouri Pacific River Commission. It is expected to have the bridge ready for running trains in the winter of 1888-89. Of course, there may be unexpected difficulty in getting the piers in, which are of unusual depth, etc., but, while this is barely possible, it is improbable. It will be what is commonly known as a high bridge—that is, a bridge without a draw, and so high as not to obstruct navigation. It will embrace three spans. The cost is estimated at a round million dollars.

A prominent citizen expresses the opinion that the move of the Northwestern Company in taking up the bridge building project means two bridges for Sioux City in a very short time. His idea is that the Northwestern people are working to reach the Pacific coast as soon as possible, and that the Union Pacific will now rush a line eastward to Sioux City, build another bridge, and connect with the Illinois Central and the Milwaukee, giving it direct and ample eastern outlet.

J. GOULD.

He Gives Some Interesting Testimony Before the Pacific Railroad Commission.

Jay Gould was before the Pacific Railroad Commission, sitting at New York, in the capacity of a witness, on Thursday and Friday, and his testimony fairly bristled with "points." Few of them, however, seem to have been made at his own expense. Mr. Gould asserted that in 1877 or 1878 he made an offer to the Senate Judiciary Committee to pay the entire Government claim against the Union Pacific at its then value—$15,000,000 to $17,000,000. No record of any such an offer can be discovered. The Thurman bill Mr. Gould considered an effort to "squeeze more out of the turnip than there was in it." He gave an amusing account of the manner in which he was deceived by Oliver Ames and others in the purchase of the Central branch of the Union Pacific, but added, with quiet humor, that he "didn't think he was taken in, after all." He gave various details as to the condition of the Union Pacific and Kansas Pacific roads, and expressed the opinion that the Government would never be able to collect principal and interest of its claim upon the Union Pacific. If the back interest were forgiven, he said the principal sum—$27,000,000—could be paid. In answer to Commissioner Littler, Mr. Gould expressed the Bunsbylan opinion that there was "a great deal of good and some bad" in the interstate commerce act.

[illegible]

GOLD AND SILVER.

Precious Metals Mined in the United States—Report of the Director of the Mint.

[Washington special.]

The report of the Director of the Mint on the production of the precious metals in the United States for the calendar year 1886 is in press, and will soon be ready for distribution. The Director estimates the production of the United States to have been in 1886: Gold, $35,000,000; silver, $51,000,000. The value of the silver in the above estimate is calculated at the coinage rate of silver in United States silver dollars namely, $1.2929 per ounce fine. The production of silver was 39,445,312 fine ounces of the commercial value, at the average price of silver during the year (namely, about $1 per fine ounce), of $39,445,312. The production of gold shows an increase over the prior year of $2,200,000. The production of silver is slightly less than in 1885. A tabular statement shows that the production of silver in the United States has largely increased from 1880, when it was $39,200,000, to $51,000,000 in 1886. The year's production of gold has approximated the maximum of the last seven years, the product of 1880, which reached $36,000,000, against $35,000,000 in 1886.

Colorado maintains first rank as the largest producer of the precious metals in the United States, the value of its production of gold and silver having been over $20,000,000 during the last year. California yields second place to Montana with a production of nearly $17,900,000, against $15,000,000 by the former. The production of Nevada and New Mexico has decreased, while that of the other States has remained almost constant. Texas, for the first time, is added to the list of producing States, with a product on of $200,000 in silver. The annual supply of silver from the mines of the world has largely increased in the last fourteen years, the period covered by the marked decline in the market price of silver, and has doubled since 1872; that is, from $62,000,000 in that year to $124,000,000 in 1886.

During the calendar year 1886 the changes in the price of silver were very marked. Opening Jan. 2, 1886, at 46 15-16 pence per ounce, British standard, the fluctuations were slight until April, when commenced a rapid decline, which continued until July 31, when the price of silver reached 42 pence, remaining at that price until Aug. 10, when an advance took place which continued until Nov. 20, when the price reached 47 pence. But remained at that point only a short time. The closing quotation Dec. 31 was 46⅝ pence. The average price for the year was 45.374 pence, equivalent to 99.165 cents per ounce fine. The price of silver at the present time is 43¾ pence per ounce, British standard, equivalent to 95.6 cents per ounce fine.

The value of the gold deposited at the mints of the United States during the calendar year 1886 was $59,057,818, of which over $21,000,000 consisted of foreign bullion and over $9,000,000 foreign coin. The deposits and purchases of silver amounted to $39,086,070. The coinage executed at the mints during the calendar year consisted of 63,739,966 pieces, of the face value of $61,375,438. The number of silver dollars coined was 31,423,886, on which the seigniorage was $7,095,361.34. The Director estimates the stock of coin in the United States Jan. 2, 1887, to have been, in round figures, gold, $560,000,000; silver, $124,000,000; total, $881,000,000. In addition to the stock of coin, the Government owned gold and silver bullion in the mint awaiting coinage of the value of gold, $81,400,000; silver, $7,000,000; total, $88,400,000; a total of metallic stock on Jan. 1, 1887, of gold, $641,400,000; silver, $331,800,000; total, $973,200,000.

The Director presents official figures to show that of the stock of gold coin estimated to have been in the United States the first of the present year, there was in the Treasury of the United States and in the national and State banks and in circulation on the Pacific slope $360,000,000, leaving $200,000,000 in the hands of the people and in the banks and savings institutions of the United States east of the Sierra Nevadas (other than national banks and the 819 State banks which reported to the Controller of the Currency).

The stock and ownership of gold and silver coins in the United States, Jan. 1, 1887, are given as follows: United States Treasury, $186,901,499; national banks, $166,993,556; State and other banks and private individuals, $531,156,804; total, $885,051,854. The total stock of paper and metallic money in the United States—the paper all either redeemable in coin or secured by bonds redeemable in coin—amounted, Jan. 1, 1887, to $1,879,919,935.

THE CROPS.

Rain in Some Localities, but Badly Needed as a Rule—Injury from Chinch-Bugs.

[Chicago special.]

The following crop summary was compiled by the Farmers' Review: Our reports again show that some localities have been favored with beneficial rains, but, as was the case at the date of our former report, the majority of the counties in all of the Western States, except perhaps Missouri and Kentucky, need rain. Dakota is apparently in better condition as regards the crops than any State reporting. Thirteen counties in Illinois report an average condition in winter wheat of 90 per cent. Damage by chinch-bugs is reported in some counties, while rain is needed in others. Ten counties in Indiana report the condition of winter wheat at an average of 85 per cent. The reports from the State are on the whole good.

The weather in Michigan still continues very dry. Pastures are short from lack of rain. Twelve counties in Ohio report the average condition of winter wheat as low as 66 per cent.

Eight counties in Wisconsin report an average condition of 85 per cent. Rain is badly needed. In Iowa the average condition of winter and spring wheat is 100 per cent. and prospects are good. Chinch-bugs are injuring the winter wheat in many Kansas counties, while others are free from the insect. Wheat is in good condition in Kentucky and rain plentiful. Spring wheat is in very fine condition in Minnesota.

In Missouri eleven counties report the average condition of winter wheat at 91 per cent. Local rains have fallen in Nebraska during the past week, and wheat is in a fair condition.

The reports from Dakota are highly satisfactory, and prospects for heavy crops are good. The percentages of condition are beginning to show the effects of continued dry weather, but local rains have fallen in many districts and conditions may consequently be expected to improve should the rains continue. The hay crop will probably be light in most of the Western States.

In Times of Peace.

The energy of chemists is now being largely directed to the development of improved methods of destruction, and in addition to the lately described "bellite" many new explosives are under trial. The French "melinite" is among them, and is said to be as much superior to nitro-glycerine as the latter is to common gunpowder. Its destructive effects are made especially terrible by the fact that bombs charged with it do not explode for some little time after penetrating a wall or other [illegible]

BASE-BALL STRUGGLES.

The Race for the Pennants—How the Professional Clubs Stand.

Chicago Still Weak in Pitchers, but Will Strengthen Soon—Base-ball Rumors.

[CHICAGO CORRESPONDENCE.]

The struggle for the championships of the two great base-ball organizations continues with unabated interest, although in the National League the Detroit Club is winning its games from rival clubs so easily that it seems to be a foregone conclusion that the Wolverines will take the pennant, and that without any very strenuous effort. The same condition of affairs seems to exist in the association race, in which the St. Louis Browns are evidently so superior to competing teams that the winning place of the pennant in that organization may be named at this writing with little likelihood of a mistake.

The following tables will show the work of the teams in both organizations up to Monday, May 23:

THE LEAGUE.

Clubs.	Detroit.	Boston.	Philadelphia.	New York.	Pittsburgh.	Chicago.	Washington.	Indianapolis.	Games won.
Detroit	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Boston	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Philadelphia	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
New York	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Pittsburgh	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Chicago	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Washington	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Indianapolis	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Games lost	2	5	12	8	12	10	13	18

ASSOCIATION.

Clubs.	St. Louis.	Brooklyn.	Cincinnati.	Baltimore.	Louisville.	Athletic.	Cleveland.	Metropolitan.	Games won.
St. Louis	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	22
Brooklyn	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	13
Cincinnati	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	15
Baltimore	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	15
Louisville	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	14
Athletic	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	10
Cleveland	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Metropolitan	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
Games lost	4	9	12	10	12	15	19	18

STILL WEAK IN PITCHERS.

The Chicago club has improved but little, if any, in its playing during the past week, and all because of its unfortunate weakness in the pitcher's box. When a ball team knows that it is weak in any one particular quarter it is going to funk. At least that is the case with the majority of ball clubs, and the Chicago team is no exception to the rule. Save upon the days when Clarkson pitches the boys take the field with little hope of winning.

TALK OF CONSOLIDATION.

It is rather significant that at this time when the interest of base-ball lovers should be held down to the winning and losing of games in the fight for the pennant that the old question of consolidating the American Association and National League into one great organization should be given the prominence it is now enjoying.

President Spalding still has the idea of one great League in mind, and never loses a chance to give it a push. He has been working hard of late with the various other club presidents to gain supporters for his plans. His idea now is to drop the Metropolitans and Clevelands from the American Association, and the Indianapolis and Washington nines from the National League at the end of this season. Then the League and the Association will be consolidated under the title of the American League. The New Yorks, Philadelphias, Athletics, Bostons, Brooklyns, and Baltimores will comprise the Eastern section, and the Chicagos, Detroits, St. Louis, Louisvilles, Cincinnatis, and Pittsburghs will form the Western division. The Western teams can make one trip East, and the Eastern clubs can return the visit. Each nine could thus play six games with every other club in the League. It may be stated as a fact that several League clubs are strongly impressed with the practicability of this plan, and will give it cordial assistance should there be any chance to carry it into effect.

OTHER RUMORS.

It is a fact that the Athletic, the Cleveland, the Chicago and the Indianapolis clubs are all trying to purchase Pitcher Hudson's release from St. Louis, and have offered big figures for him. But Von der Ahe has declined them all. This fact, considering that he has three such splendid pitchers as Foutz, Caruthers and King, strengthens the opinion which is becoming general in baseball circles here that this is the last season of the Browns in the Association if they again win the championship, and that they are figuring to take the place of Indianapolis in that event next year. It is also apparent that the new scheme includes the superseding of Detroit by Cincinnati, the players of the Detroit Club to be taken charge of by the League when that town is forced to drop out, the choice players to be distributed around to strengthen the weak clubs, and the balance to go to the best obtainable market. Quite a sensation is expected to develop under this head in a very short time.

ANSON ON THE LOOKOUT.

Captain Anson nor President Spalding has as yet succeeded in securing an additional pitcher, but that Anson is by no means idle or indifferent to the wants of the club may be presumed from the following dispatch from Washington: Captain Anson while here visited Bob Barr twice and endeavored to secure the services of that crack twirler, who has been living in quiet retirement since last fall. Barr hesitated on account of his recent illness, but Anson insisted, and it is probable that the Washingtonian will in a few days don a White Stocking uniform. He is to receive $3,000 for the season, furnished suits, and be exempt from reserve. He will be effective under the new rules, as he pitched according to them in most of the games last season.

Another dispatch says: Surprises will never cease. The latest rumor flying around in this neck of woods is that President Von der Ahe is trying to purchase the interests of Mason and Simmons in the Athletic Club, of Philadelphia. Von der Ahe and Sharsig met at the recent meeting in Cincinnati, and the St. Louis President told Sharsig that he was ready to purchase the stock held by Mason and Simmons, and that he would pay the money right down.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

"Notwithstanding that Manager Burnham says there is no trouble in the Indianapolis club, something must be wrong when Denny refuses to coach when told to. From appearances it would seem that things were not all right, and that trouble is likely to break out at any moment."—New York Sun.

The Boston Herald is of opinion that "but one thing seems likely to keep the championship from Boston this year—the failure of the pitchers in its club. There is not the confidence in Radbourn that there used to be, and Stemmyer has not fully established himself among the best. Much will depend on what the younger pitchers achieve."

President Young has appointed as substitute League umpires, Grace Pierce, in New York; Terrence Connell, in Philadelphia; [illegible]

ARMY ANECDOTES.

Bold Boys of Both Belligerents Tell of Battles, Bullets, Bayonets, and Boiled Beans.

Soldiers and Sailors' Stirring Stories of Solid Shot and Screaming Shells.

Our Nameless Dead.

BY [illegible].

Our Nameless Dead! they lie at rest, to wait the last grand rally,
On many a Northern hill to-day, in many a Southern valley;
The Northern sunrise holds his torch above their silent slumber,
The sweet Magnolia's drifting snow will not their quiet number.
No tears may dim their graves from eyes that knew their outward semblance,
Yet not the less their rest, for God still holds them in remembrance.
And o'er them where they fell asleep amid the cannon's rattle,
Our common mother scatters flowers to hide the scars of battle.

Our Nameless Dead! oh, long for them the vigil lamps were burning,
And hearts grew sick with hope deferred—the hope of their returning.
A thousand pulses, languid now, broke into swifter beating
When faded blue of army coats love's wistful eyes lit greeting.
For them no sad funeral trains with solemn plumes and dirges,
But hasty burial when day's shore receives night's dusky surges.
No Sabbath stillness in the air the breath of cannon scorches,
The battle-smoke their only pall, God's stars their funeral torches.

Our Nameless Dead! what tears start up to longing eyes unbidden,
And show the lengthened pain of years in that one sentence hidden;
The helpless watch; the tireless search; the hope no answer meeting;
The hearts that broke in dumb despair—that loved, but kept on beating.
The men who go to meet unmoved with death where he may find them,
No braver are than those who wait and guard the camp behind them.
The weak, but loyal, sent them forth, with duty not debating,
And learned in tearless agony that some may serve by waiting.

Our Nameless Dead! how firm they stood, the outer trenches guarding,
Where fell the leaden rain of death, where raged the fierce bombarding;
Upon the march, beside the camp, where stood the lonely picket;
Beside the dark [illegible] marsh, where death lurked in the thicket;
Upon the cot in torturing pain, amidst the dead and dying;
And where the Cumberland went down, with all her colors flying—
Their voices swelled the victors' shout, the sighs of the defeated,
As on they rushed to meet the foe, or sullenly retreated.

Our Nameless Dead! how brave they were where death's grim angel waited,
Upon the soil whose thirsty grass with human blood was sated.
They made poor Afric's cause their own, they saw her children righted;
Beside the army's foremost lines their bivouac fires were lighted.
They slowly marched with arms reversed, to muffled drum-beats solemn,
Or left their footprints side by side with those that led the column.
The Blue and Gray, how calm they sleep! while through the sunny weather
Dame Nature sends her winding vines to bind their graves together.

The rhythmic tread of marching hosts down time's dim halls is fading,
The tenor of the fife is hushed, the bass of cannonading;
Still faith in all the deeds they did on fields of martial glory,
They shine in golden letters yet in many a song and story.
No need to carve the name he bore above each brave defender,
Since God knows where he wrote them down in loyal hearts and tender.
We trace in thought above each grave that holds them in its keeping:
"Unknown to man, but known to God, what hero here is sleeping."

A Ride for Life.

To one who has given the subject only a casual thought, the danger to life and limb in a soldier's profession would seem to result principally from the whistling minie ball or the bursting shell, or, perchance, the deadly thrust of the saber or bayonet.

The fact is, that all the common modes of exit from life are not only intensified, but modern warfare has added many new ones to the list, from the agile heel of the government mule to the triple danger of the steamboat explosion.

In support of this statement we give the following experience in the narrator's own words, he being one of a squad of cavalry which had been surrounded by the enemy, and in order to escape unperceived by night had taken off their sabers and hid them, that the clanking noise might not betray them, and in this manner pass through the lines and escape. Soon after their command found themselves in the vicinity of where the sabers had been left, and an effort was made to regain them. He says: "The Corporal, myself and Morris, who had helped secrete the sabers, were detailed; the distance might be two or three miles. It was moonlight when we started, but soon a storm of wind and rain came up which beat directly in our faces. On striking the railway we decided to follow that to the river road, as it would shorten the distance. At the crossing of the road and railway was an old inn, used also as a station house. To reach this we had to pass for half a mile or more through a deep cut on a side hill. One side the bank rose high over our heads; on the other the earth and rocks had been thrown into a rocky ravine. Once in this cut we could not turn out. We felt safe enough, however, as we knew the river bridge had been destroyed a few days before, and we were sure the railroad would not be used for some time.

This was also the opinion of the Rebs when they burned the bridge. We were both mistaken about this, however, for in anticipation of such moves duplicate bridges had been prepared by the Government, and unknown to us this bridge had been rebuilt and trains were running even by this time out to our very front lines, which were now across the Etowah River. When about half way through this cut I noticed a colored light flash down by the station. The rain and wind were dashing into our faces, and we were strung out Indian file, picking our way over the ties. As I saw this light I turned to speak of it to my companions, when with a sudden cry they dashed by me, and I saw to my dismay the headlight of a rushing train which had almost run us down. To dash my spurs into my horse, which was already flying at break-neck speed over the wet and slippery ties, where a single misstep was instant death, was my only resource. The engine was now emitting a piercing whistle, which sounded in our ears like the fierce scream of an angry tiger. I could almost feel the hot pulsations of its fiery breath. On, on, on. If ever there was a race for life, that was one. To reach the river road was our only hope, as the cut extended to it. The usual cattle-guards are there, but they will be no obstacle to our flying leaps. Suddenly we scatter like a flock of sheep as the wolf springs among them. Morris goes to the right, the Corporal and I to the left. The Corporal's horse falls as he clears the cattle-guards, and dashes the Corporal senseless on the earth. My horse clears them with room to spare. Another bound took him over the prostrate Corporal, and before I can regain control of him he dashed up the steps and on to the porch of the old inn. I dismounted and led him down, and was at once surrounded by the astonished guard. The horse of the Corporal had been caught; he himself had been picked up, and was coming, too.

While trying to explain that there were three of us, Morris came limping up the bank down which he had been thrown, but returned the Corporal had woke up and, as he was in possession of the password, we were permitted to return to our command with the sabers. We did not use the railroad, as a short cut, on our way back.

F. M. White,
Company M, Fifth Cav., Ind. Vol.
Eaton, Ohio.

General Lee.

Below is found a portrait of Robert E. Lee taken while holding the Presidency of Washington College at Lexington, Va., near the close of his life. In August, 1865, General Lee was prevailed upon to accept the Presidency of Washington College at Lexington, Va., now known as the Washington and Lee University, and was installed on the 2d of October.

The college was in a dilapidated condition, its buildings in a state of ruin, its library destroyed, its faculty dispirited and disorganized, and its endowment so small that it left but little room for hope that the institute could be put in condition to receive students. These difficulties only enhanced General Lee's interest and activity in it. "He found the college bankrupt; he left it rich and crowded with students." He labored incessantly and earnestly to make it complete in all particulars, and found pleasure in the work. To an old comrade in arms he wrote: "I am charmed with the duties of civil life."

After taking charge of the college he had offers of large salaries to identify himself, if in name only, with prosperous insurance companies and great manufacturing associations. One offered him $10,000 a year and another $50,000, both of which he refused, because he would not receive pay where he did not render service, and his college duties engrossed his entire time and strength; yet his salary as the President was only a modest $3,000, it is said.

General Lee was summoned before the Congressional committee on reconstruction in March, 1866, and later as a witness in the proposed trial of Jefferson Davis, and these were the only occasions on which he appeared before the public after the surrender.

His health began to fail two or three years before his death. He died at nine o'clock on the morning of the 12th of October, 1870. For some days previous he had been delirious, and he talked of the battles won and lost, of actions on the field and the movements of the enemy. Among his last words were: "Strike my tent! Send for Hill!"

How Ben Woodring Captured One Hundred and Two Men.

The young men of the country about Piedmont, like those near the border generally, contributed to fill the ranks of both Federal and Confederate armies, and the Piedmontese who cast their fortunes with the South found much fascination in guerrilla warfare. Knowing every natural mountain fastness perfectly, and also knowing where the best horses in Virginia could be procured, a few dozen men could often make themselves as effective as a whole army. A few of the mountaineers one day swooped down from their eyrie on a hotel and captured all the main officers commanding eighteen thousand men, and got away with them before the troops were apprised.

The most desperate and determined man, perhaps, in the entire country there was Ben Woodring. He was a holy terror in a fight of any kind—one who had rather fight than eat, at any time, it agreeable to the rest of the company. Though Ben has settled down and is now a peaceable citizen, and as staid as the average, his eye still twinkles when he talks of the time he, single-handed, captured one hundred and two men, with their Captain. Woodring and six other men had been detailed to throw a train off the track and then burn it, in the vicinity of New Creek.

The hearts of the six died within them when they saw aboard the train about 100 Union soldiers, with their guns, and they mounted their horses and precipitately withdrew behind a high bank. Not so Woodring. Hurling a volley of curses after the fleeing men, he sprang aboard the train, rushed into the car containing the soldiers, and brandishing a navy revolver demanded their surrender. The suddenness of the attack unnerved the Captain in command, but he had strength left to ask Woodring how many men he had, and the latter answered "1,000." Just then the frightened guerrillas, having recovered from their fright, suddenly galloped to the top of the bank and reining in their horses gave a yell that curdled the blood of the Union soldiers, who were a company of convalescents and not in good trim for fighting. The panic-stricken Captain surrendered and Woodring paroled the men, after which he and his followers burned the train and with it all the arms he could not carry away. The incident occurred at Bloomington.

The Captain who so precipitately despaired of the Republic had much trouble to escape a court-martial, but Colonel Porter saved him by setting forth to the department the state of affairs and presenting a petition signed by all the known loyal people in the district asking for his release.

Whisky.

Company D was enlisted at Ann Arbor, Michigan, in April, 1861, and contained one hundred and two men.

We drilled on the fair ground for several weeks before we went to Adrian to meet other companies to form the Fourth Regiment. Before leaving Ann Arbor we were introduced to two celebrated temperance lecturers, who induced sixty-three of the boys to take the iron-clad temperance oath and sign the pledge. Now, those that I have just mentioned probably never drank alcohol again except on extraordinary occasions—such as coming in off of picket duty wet to the skin—but others would get passes and go to Washington, when they would fill up on the fiery stuff, and get one or two bottles full to bring back to camp.

The scene of this sketch is laid at Minor's Hill, Va., in the winter of 1862.

Of course when whisky was brought into camp some of the boys always would get drunk and raise a disturbance. We had one man who was in the guard house a big part of his time for being too drunk, daily, for military duty; and another one would be on splendid terms with his enemy and strike the best friend he had when drunk. But a time came for a change. Jim Murphy shot John ——, a young German, in the hip, while standing camp guard. It was a very bad wound, and lamed him for life. The question was asked how and why did he do it?

"Well," says Jim, "M—— he would not stay off of my beat when I told him to, so I [illegible] trial, in imitation of those of a higher court. Lieutenant J. Hall was Judge Advocate, and Sergeant E. H. Gilbert for the prosecution, and Robinson, a "high private in the front rank," a man who studied law before the war, for the defense.

It would have done you good to have heard that trial. The result was that Andrews was sentenced to march up and down the street all day, in front of a bayonet. A square hole was cut in the bottom of a pork barrel just large enough to let his head through, and with this coat he marched up and down the company street all day. It did look too comical for anything, for on the outside of the barrel was written the word whisky in large letters.

J. F. Harley,
Co. B, Fourth Regt. Mich. Inf. Vols.

A Narrow Escape.

While reading over some of the war reminiscences in your interesting paper, some time ago, one recalled to my memory an amusing incident that occurred in my old regiment, the Sixth Michigan, while in camp at Port Hudson, La.

Some months after the fall of that stronghold, in 1863, the regiment had been changed by an order from the War Department from infantry to heavy artillery, and we were there for the winter. Officers and men had fixed up their tents with every degree of comfort that could be thought of and accomplished with the means that could be found. Many had made the raise of small stoves to put in the tents, but the majority had gathered together brick and stone, in pieces of all shapes and sizes, and with mud plaster had made ample fireplaces, finishing off with the old-fashioned stick chimney. They mostly worked to a charm, too, and looked so cheerful and homelike, with the big backlog and blazing light wood, that many would gather around them and pass away the long evenings in social chat, with occasionally a little game of draw.

One day late in the afternoon, when all was quiet in the camp, the whole regiment seeming to be taking a rest (I myself was taking a snooze in my tent), the whole camp was suddenly aroused by a terrific explosion. I sprang up and looked out of my tent to learn the cause of the rumpus, and saw everybody running toward the tent of Lieutenant Edwards, or what was left of it. On reaching the spot I saw the Lieutenant crawling out of the ruins covered with dirt and dust, and the picture of despair and fright, but otherwise unhurt. The scene was ludicrous in the extreme. I could not have stilled a laugh at the time had death been the penalty.

"What's the matter? What was it?" all asked at once.

The Lieutenant said: "Let me get my breath and I will explain it all. I have gathered a lot of relics of different kinds, such as bits of shells, minie-balls, solid shot, pieces of muskets, etc., and among them I had two beautiful shells of a conical shape that had been thrown in the place during the siege by some rifled gun of a large caliber—I think a hundred-pound Parrott. The fuzes had blown out, and they did not explode. I, of course, did not suppose there was any powder left in them. They were such beauties I intended to take them to Michigan with me. Well, it occurred to me to-day that I could make them useful as well as ornamental, so I placed them in the fireplace for andirons, and lay down to take a nap. That's all. Look at my tent!"

We saw it. The whole gable-end had disappeared, the fine fireplace and elegant chimney were scattered to the four winds, and things were torn up generally. The Lieutenant and his bed had been covered with the debris, and as the bed stood at the side of the tent and very near the fire, I think it was a miraculous escape.

"Thank the Lord!" said the Lieutenant, "I escaped. I thought my time had come. That is the closest call I have had since I entered the service."

There were no more unexploded shells used as andirons in that camp.

J. A. Ellis.

Captain Marsh.

Captain Frederick H. Marsh, whose portrait is herewith presented, was born in England on Sept. 7, 1843, and became a citizen of Oregon, Ill., in 1855. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company H, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, but was discharged some time after, on account of sickness. In October, 1861, he re-enlisted in the Forty-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and continued, steadily in the service until he was mustered out at Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 20, 1866, having been in the service four years and eight months, during which time he was promoted to a Captaincy. Captain Marsh was a member of the Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth General Assemblies. In 1869 he formed a partnership with his brother, Charles F. Marsh, and opened a book and stationery store under the firm name of Marsh Bros., until about 1870, when he retired, and some time later was appointed express agent. In 1870 and 1871 he was Town Clerk of Oregon. As Sheriff of Ogle County he gave good satisfaction, and was very popular with his constituents. Captain Marsh was a delegate to the Chicago National Convention which nominated Cleveland, and was from the first an advocate of Mr. Cleveland. He is now Marshal for the Northern District of Illinois.—Chicago Ledger.

Incidents.

During the summer of 1863, while at Memphis, we were camped near the Big Spring, as we called it. One morning I was going for a camp-kettle of water, when I met one of the boys rushing into camp. He was loaded with chickens and geese, and a fat old man was in full chase. Just as I met him he turned and threw a chicken at the old fellow with all his force, saying, "Take that, if you are hungry." It struck him full in the breast, but did not stop him. I saw that he was so close to the forager that he would not be able to dodge him, so I managed to give him a trip with my foot as I passed, which threw him sprawling. By the time he got up the chicken-thief was gone.

I have heard my brother-in-law, who went from Southern Indiana, tell about when the army marched into Bowling Green: Two women were standing on adjoining porches, looking at the soldiers as they marched through the street, and one said to the other: "Good land! Look at the Yanks! Where do they all come from?" Quick as a flash, a slab-sided Hoosier said: "Great Scott, ma'am, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan have all had pups ninety-nine times, and we are only the first litter!"

H. E. Nason.

There Were Some Americans.

It was charged by the Confederates that the Union armies were recruited from all Europe, and the following anecdote is probably of Southern origin:

The Colonel of a New York regiment asserted that nine different nationalities [illegible]

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Notes on the Lesson for June 5—"The Manna."

(From the Chicago Standard. By Rev. J. M. Coon.)

The lesson for June 5 is found in the first twelve verses of the sixteenth chapter of Exodus. Time, B. C. 1491, soon after the events of last lesson (see v. 1). Place, in the northern part of the Wilderness of Sin, between Elim and Sinai.

SPECIAL MENTION.

Wilderness of Sin. The place of this encampment was near the plain of Ras Zelimeh, reached by traversing Wady Taiyibeh, eighteen miles from Elim. The route from this encampment to Sinai, as well as the situation of the Wilderness of Sin, is disputed. (1) If from this encampment the Israelites went south by the narrow road along the seashore only at the ebb of the tide, they came into a plain extending along the shore of the sea for twenty-five miles, called at its southern part El-Kaah, in its northern El-Murkhah, from the lower end of which there is a road to Sinai through the Wadies Feiran and Es-Sheik. El-Murkhah, according to Robinson, Kurtz, Stanley, Palmer, and many others, is the Wilderness of Sin. But (2) according to other scholars, an inland route was taken; leading from the encampment on the Red Sea and "passing through several wadies to Debbet er Ramleh, which is a sandy plateau lying 'between Elim and Sinai,' and so corresponding with the description of the Wilderness of Sin." (Prof. Harper.)

Manna. So called from the exclamation of the Israelites, Man-hu, "What is it?" While it resembles the product of the tamarisk tree in some respects, yet the points of difference are very marked, and plainly disprove the identification of the two. These differences Todd has classified as follows: (1) The whole manna crop of the entire peninsula of Sinai is not more than seven hundred pounds annually; whereas the manna of the Israelites fell in sufficient quantities to support two millions or more of people. (2) The manna of to-day is not a certain crop, but often fails for four or five years consecutively; but the manna of the Israelites fell regularly for forty years (Deut. 8: 2, 3; Josh. v. 10-12). (3) The manna of to-day can be gathered for about two months only; whereas the manna of the Israelites fell the year round. The Scriptural statements, however, do not necessarily imply that the manna always fell in the same immense quantities, or in any larger amounts than were necessary to make up for the deficiency in other kinds of food. (4) The manna of to-day is found, in the peninsula of Sinai, only in the neighborhood of the mountains of Sinai, under or near the tamarisk trees; whereas the manna of the Israelites continued to fall long after they had passed entirely out of this region, and even after they had crossed the Jordan, and entered the land of Canaan (Josh. 5: 10-12). (5) The manna of the Israelites could be ground in mills, pounded in mortars, baked in cakes in pans, or seethed (v. 23; Num. 11: 8), showing that it was largely farinaceous; whereas the manna of to-day has no starch in it, but is purely saccharine, and therefore can not be subjected to the same processes. (6) The manna of the Israelites could not be kept more than one day (v. 20), with the exception of that which was gathered on the sixth day, which could be kept for two days (vs. 23, 24), and that which was preserved in the ark perpetually (v. 33; Heb. 9: 4)—circumstances evidently involving the miraculous; but there is no difficulty in keeping the manna of to-day for years. Other things also point to the miraculous nature of the manna of the Israelites. The ordinary product of nature cannot but have been well known to the Israelites; or, if not, they would have found it, and become acquainted with its qualities gradually; but the first fall of manna created in them the greatest astonishment (v. 15); and the fall of manna began (v. 12) and ceased (Josh. 5: 12) abruptly. And Canon Cook farther comments as follows: In the appearance of the manna we have all the conditions and characteristics of divine interpositions: (1) The condition of a recognized necessity; for all writers agree that under any conceivable circumstances the preservation of the Israelites would otherwise have been impossible. (2) The condition of a harmony with a divine purpose, the preservation of a peculiar people on which the whole scheme of providential government and the salvation of mankind depended. (3) We have the usual characteristics of harmony between the natural order of events and the supernatural transaction. God fed his people, not with the food which belonged to other regions, but with such as appertained to the district. The local coloring is unmistakable.

CONNECTING LINK.

After leaving the Red Sea the Israelites went out into the wilderness of Shur, a three days' journey, finding no water. Coming to Marah, whose waters were bitter, they were shown a tree which, by casting it into the waters, made them sweet. Thence they came to Elim, where were twelve wells of water, and seventy palm trees, making a suitable encampment for them. As soon as they began to pass through the Wilderness of Sin their food fell short, causing them to murmur. It is often asked, "How did the Israelites, with their vast herds, subsist in the wilderness?" The answer to this is ready. First, their cattle, of which they had great abundance, while they needed large regions for grazing, furnished the people with milk, butter, and meat. From Deut. 2 it is evident that the Israelites purchased provisions to some extent from the neighboring tribes. Psalm 78: 14 seems to allude to a supply of fish, possibly from the Gulf of Akabah, where the people were encamped at one time (Num. 33: 35), and possibly for many years of their desert life. The vegetation of the wilderness contributed farther to the sustenance of the wanderers. By their training in Egypt they had learned the art of irrigation. And yet with all these aids the resources were not sufficient for the necessities of the multitude; and, therefore, the sacred writer states repeatedly and plainly that the deficiency was supplied by miracle. Those by which the nation was delivered from thirst and hunger were probably very frequent, the few recorded in the Scriptures having been mentioned as specimens of miracles which were constantly occurring. (Stand. Bed. Comm.)

TOPIC AND OUTLINE.

The manna as a type or picture of the gospel. The manna (1) was divinely given; so is the gospel. (2) It was sufficient for all; so is the gospel. (3) It was near at hand; so is the gospel. (4) It never failed them in their wilderness wanderings; neither does the gospel. (5) It came silently and without demonstration; so does the gospel. (6) It satisfies in the direst need; so does the gospel. (7) It came although man was sinning and murmuring; so does the gospel. (8) It was for each individual; so is the gospel. (9) It was to be gathered and appropriated; so with the gospel. (10) It was for every-day life; so is the gospel. (11) There was no excuse for any Israelite failing to have food; there is no excuse for anyone failing to be saved.

SEED-TRUTHS AND GERM THOUGHTS.

1. God's gracious remedy for murmuring (v. 4).
2. How easily and bountifully God can supply the needs of his people (v. 4).
3. All the blessings should be carefully and reverently received (v. 4).
4. Helpful providences to Sabbath observance (v. 5).
5. God always has a Moses and Aaron to whom he reveals his purposes (v. 6).
6. The power and influence of even one or two stalwart spirits (v. 6).
7. Mighty faith asserting itself amid the gross and prevailing unbelief (v. 7).
8. Complaints against God's people are complaints against him (v. 8).
9. It is a great deal easier to murmur than to pray; but it is a great deal better to pray than to murmur.
10. God gives unmistakable proofs of his deliverance and protection (v. 6).
11. "God's method with his people is first blessing, then a proof."
12. God bears long with man's infidelity and ingratitude, but a day of settlement comes at last.

Subject of lesson for June 12, "The Commandments." Ex. 20: 1-11.

Mexican Workers in Wood.

The Guadalajaran wood-carvers are famed for the beauty of their workmanship. In a hundred little shops we find swarthy workmen patiently carving bits of wood into wonderful rosaries, every bead of which shows a miniature picture of some Scriptural scene, heads which are really perfect portraits for the tips of canes and umbrellas, [illegible]

THE PRESIDENT AND THE BOURBONS

Senator Gorman having expressed approval of so much of the Kentucky Democratic platform as glorifies the spoils system, the New York Times takes occasion to glorify Mr. Cleveland. It is a case of light coming from that which is not a source of light, but the mugwumps are never particular as to the relation of cause and effect. It does not follow that the President disapproves the Kentucky platform because Senator Gorman approves it. It does not follow that "the Democratic spoilsmen are becoming desperate, and that they will leave nothing untried to break down the President in his own party," because Mr. Gorman has said that when the President declined a renomination in his hearing, "he did not impress me as being so sincere in this as in other statements." Nor does it follow that Mr. Cleveland resents this assertion of Mr. Gorman. There are a great many indications that he is anxious to have such assertions made. He is reported to have said, very lately, that he did not blame Senator Vest for discrediting his sincerity. "In fact," said the President, "no one but my wife does believe me."

It would have been well if the Times had waited until some word or deed of the President had given reason for belief in either his dissent from the Kentucky platform or his disapproval of Mr. Gorman's utterances. The appointments in Maryland have been, the mugwumps themselves being witnesses, as bad as bad could be. They have been distributed among Mr. Gorman's supporters, and, it is generally believed, at Mr. Gorman's dictation.

Mr. Gorman has no reason to be, and is not, dissatisfied with the distribution of patronage in Maryland. It has been worse than partisan; it has been factional, and factional to Gorman's personal desire. The Maryland Senator accepts the gift, and despises the giver, and so do the Kentucky Democrats, and so do most Democrats. There is little dissatisfaction, even in Indiana, with the distribution of patronage; the dissatisfaction is with the manner of it. The old-fashioned Democrats are plain speakers. When a Democratic President bounces a Republican and replaces him by a Democrat they do not care about cant phrases concerning "efficiency of the service;" they like a plain acknowledgment of the plain fact that the one was rejected because he was a Republican, and the other chosen because he was a Democrat. And if a Republican be retained they hate to have his retention explained by "devotion to the great principle of civil-service reform." If it were said that he was retained because he could do the party more service as a Republican than he could as a Democrat, all would be well. It is the cant that is objected to.

The truth is that the President is not disliked by the Bourbons for his acts, it is his words that are distasteful. The hands are those of Esau, the voice is that of Jacob. The Bourbons are not a cunning race, and yet there are things that even they can not fail to discern, chief of which is the trick by which it is sought to place Mr. Cleveland before the mugwumps as a reformer with whom the Democrats are disgusted, and by the mugwumps to enforce his renomination in place of Hill or some other who is a Democrat and likes to be thought of as proud of his Democracy. Mr. Cleveland is a Democrat who likes to be thought of as ashamed of his Democracy.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Rebel Rosser.

The Southern Democratic newspapers are commenting in genuine Southern fashion upon the Sheridan-Rosser incident. They have very little to say about the "savior of the valley," or the pumpkin vine which the people of that section advised him to wear as being a better runner than the laurel, but confine themselves to insulting epithets and innuendoes directed against Gen. Sheridan, which come with a bad grace from Mr. Grady's New South. The Charleston News and Courier denounces Sheridan as a "Federal Bashi-Bazouk," and the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph suggests it might be prudent for the Virginians to "bury their silver, double the insurance on their barns, and drive the cows into the mountains" on his approach. All this of course there was no child's play about Little Phil's method of making war, or Gen. Grant's either. But how about pumpkin-vine Rosser? W. H. H. Lancaster, who was the military telegraph operator at New Creek Station, Va., when it was captured by Rosser in November, 1864, thus describes his experiences:

"I was taken in with quite a number of other Unionists, soldiers and civilians, and was completely robbed of money, watches, clothing, and all other valuables, stripped from head to foot, marched across the country to Staunton almost naked, barefooted, and hungry. We lay out nights on the cold, wet ground, were three and one-half months in Castle Thunder, and under their care still, yet suffering from neuralgia and rheumatism. We were captured by Rosser's advance guard, who styled themselves the Baltimore plugs. They were experts in the robbing business, as they went through the whole lot of us in less than one-half hour. I lost about $1,000 in money valuables, and clothing."

Rosser proposes to run for Congress. If he succeeds in getting to Washington would it not be well for the people of that city to hide their watches and lock up their money and valuables? Phil Sheridan was making war in thorough and open fashion. Rosser and his Baltimore plugs were engaged in brigandage and highway robbery.—Chicago Tribune.

No Trouble About New England.

One of the favorite delusions which the Democratic party has been hugging for the past few months has been that it was really making inroads in New England, and would carry one or more of its States at the next election. This flattering unction has been laid to the soul with much pleasure but little profit. The New York World, which looks at political problems from the standpoint of what is and not what it would like to have, sees at once through the fallacy of this belief and very frankly says: "Mr. Carlisle ought to be too good a politician to be willing to take any chances in the Presidential election on the hope of making New England doubtful. Doubts are not counted in the Electoral College, and the only thing doubtful about the vote of the New England States next year is as to the size of their Republican majorities, as usual." The World is not only a partisan but a pretty good prophet as well. New England will take care of itself, and when the time comes will return as hearty a verdict for the Republican candidate and the principles of protection to American industries as it ever has done.—Iowa State Register.

Why He Didn't Ship the Corpse.

"Oi say, Terrence, did ye sind yer brither's corpse home ter ther city yit?" asked one country laborer of another.

"Oi did nawt."

"An' w'y nawt?"

"Ther divil as hez charrudge ov tha foate wuddent lave me sind it oover tha road."

"Tha blaggard! W'y wuz that?"

"He tould me tha Prisidint is afther seignin' er bill fer previnting raleroods from carryin' did-hids oover tha counthree."

Mr. Hard Giddens, of Berrien County, Georgia, is proud of his war record. He enlisted at the beginning of the rebellion, and fought through the war. In the battle of Chickamauga his clothing was torn in twenty-seven places by bullets, only two of which touched his flesh, cutting the skin on the left hip and grazing the little finger of the left hand. One bullet cut his shoe-string in two, another bursted his canteen, [illegible]

AT THE CAPITAL.

LANSING, May 23, 1887.

"Men may come, and men may go," but the Legislature moves right along in the even tenor of its way, and according to the best possible calculations that can be made, is likely to continue until nearly or quite the close of June.

TWO CENTS PER MILE.

One of the much petitioned bills before the present Legislature is the one to reduce railroad fare in this State from three to two cents per mile. Early in the session it looked as if such a bill might easily pass, but later the tide seemed setting in favor of a compromise on two and one-half cents. It was shown that a two cent fare would cause an actual loss on the roads in the upper peninsula and on many of the shorter and weaker roads in the lower, while all roads would thus be compelled to cut off more or less of the accommodations they are now furnishing, and perhaps run less trains per day. When the bill came up for final passage on the 19th the discussion lasted all day, Representative Manley, of Ann Arbor, the father of the bill, making an able and stubborn fight for his pet measure. When the vote was finally reached some friends of the measure were surprised to find that it had passed by a vote of yeas 65, nays 16. Before the roll call on the final passage Representative Yates, of Allegan, who has used passes as freely as anybody else for the session of 1885, and so far this session, sought to shut off the next Legislature from courtesies it has so long enjoyed by moving to add the words "And provided further, that no officer in this State, either elective or appointive, shall be permitted to receive or use any pass, and any officer using any such pass issued to him on account of his being such official, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than fifty dollars, in the discretion of the court." This was voted down, yeas 29, nays 52. Yet the vote does not prove anything as to what the vote will be when the independent proposition comes up to prohibit any road from issuing passes.

As finally passed, this bill provides a two cent per mile rate for passenger transportation in the Lower Peninsula. Three cents may be charged on all Upper Peninsula roads for the next five years, and two and one-half thereafter. For distances of five miles or less four cents may be charged. New roads are also exempted from the provisions of the bill for a term of five years after they are opened for business. Important changes are also made in freight rates. The limit is not more than $5 per car per mile for any distance not exceeding three miles, 50 cents per mile for the next ten miles, and 25 cents per mile thereafter. All Upper Peninsula roads, and all roads operating less than fifteen miles of road, are exempted from the freight provisions.

There are many reasons to believe that the bill in its present form will not pass the Senate, but that it is more likely to be made two and one-half cents for the Lower Peninsula.

NEW BANKING SYSTEM PROPOSED.

Early in the session President pro tem. Monroe introduced a bill to provide for the establishment of a State banking department for the supervision of the business of banking, with a commissioner of banking to be appointed by the Governor for four years, with a deputy and the necessary number of clerks, whose duty it shall be to make at least four examinations of all banks organized under the provisions of the State banking laws each year, and as many other special ones as are called for or deemed necessary. The department is not to be a source of expense to the State, like most others, but will be self-sustaining, as the income from examination fees to be paid by the banks will cover all expenses. These fees are based on a "per cent. of the gross amount of the assets of the bank." Under a provision of the constitution, any general revision of the State banking system must be submitted to a vote of the people before it can become a law, so if the bill passes it will be submitted at the general election in 1888. The Committee on Banks and Incorporations, of which the Senator is Chairman, has been hard at work to perfect the bill for some time. It was ordered printed for the use of the committee, and has been mailed all over the State, and many valuable suggestions thus secured, until now Senator Monroe feels that he has an almost perfect bill, and one that meets all the possible and probable objections. The Senator has been for some days at work upon an elaborate report on the bill, which gives a careful summary of the bill and many valuable reasons for the passage. This report was made to the Senate on the 17th, and the bill (with all amendments made by the Senator and the committee) ordered reprinted. Its consideration will be made a special order for an early day this week, and if there is any single proposition before the Legislature that ought to pass promptly and be adopted by the people, it is this one for a better, more thorough and safe supervision of the banks of Michigan.

GRAVEYARD INSURANCE TO BE STAMPED OUT.

The House, on the 18th, reached a final vote on Representative Cross' bill to regulate the organization and manner of doing business by the co-operative mutual life insurance companies doing business in this State, and promptly passed it by a vote of yeas 59, nays 14; absent or not voting, 24. The bill limits the age at which parties can be insured at 65 years, and places many much-needed restrictions around the business that can have no other effect but to wind up all the "graveyard" companies that have been swindling their patrons with such a high hand and with so much profit to their officers. The Senate will promptly pass the bill.

APPROPRIATIONS, ACTUAL AND PROBABLE.

The Senate Committee on Appropriations and Finance report that bills have passed and are pending before that committee as follows:

By Senate bills appropriating money:
State Weather Service	$3,567
Indexing names	[illegible]
Semi-Centennial	8,000
State Library	6,000
Decorating the Capitol	20,000
Pioneer Society	5,000
University	[illegible]
State Prison	[illegible]
Ionia Prison	14,470
Traverse City Asylum	[illegible]
Mining School building	120,000
Mining School expenses	[illegible]
Adrian Home for Girls	[illegible]
Insane criminals at Ionia	[illegible]
By House bills appropriating money:
Deficit at Soldiers' Home	[illegible]
Expenses at Soldiers' Home	[illegible]
Gift to people of Lyons	[illegible]
Ionia insane criminals	[illegible]
State Public school	[illegible]
State Normal School	[illegible]
Superintendents of the Poor	[illegible]
Deaf and Dumb Asylum	[illegible]
Reform School	[illegible]
School for the Blind	[illegible]
Marquette State Prison	[illegible]
Total so far	[illegible]

With the other bills that are yet pending in the House and are sure to pass both houses, and the general appropriation bill for the current expenses of our State Government for the next two years, which must be not far from $700,000, the grand total of appropriations for the session will foot up nearly or quite $2,500,000, as against $2,635,323.37 for 1885 and 1886.

GENERAL NOTES.

The Governor has appointed H. D. Platt, a farmer of Ypsilanti, as State Oil Inspector, vice S. W. La Du, whose term has expired. The Senate has not yet been notified of the appointment.

Representative Hill, of Clinton County, had a pet scheme to abolish the Board of Corrections and Charities, but when his [illegible]

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

The Cross bill to regulate co-operative insurance companies passed the Senate on the 17th, by a vote of 21 to 11. This is quite a victory for Mr. Cross and friends of the measure for the fight against the bill was bitter and at times somewhat personal. This, however, was to be expected from the nature of the business antagonized by the bill and the character of the people engaged in it. The House killed the bill to abolish the Board of Corrections and Charities. The question was much discussed, and it was charged that the Board was of no real benefit to the State, that it did no important work, and neglected the duties imposed by law on it. Several members denied these statements, and numerous alleged atrocities which have been unearthed by the Board of Correction and Charities were cited by Representative Chamberlain in opposition to the bill to abolish the Board. In one case in Ionia County, it was charged, a girl of 14 years was found confined in a shocking condition. She was locked in a pen and had nothing on, the windows were barred, but this did not prevent passers-by from looking in at the poor creature. When the board discovered her she was entirely naked, and there was no furniture of any kind in the room; she was kicking plaster off the wall and had apparently been working on the lath. Her brother was found imprisoned in a tight board fence in the back yard. He had on a shirt and pants, but had no protection from the sun, which had shone with great fierceness. The wife of the keeper of the Poorhouse said the child had been in the pen since morning. A short time afterward, when the board made another visit to the place, the girl had been given a dress, but was still loose and unguarded in the back yard. In another case the poor authorities of Menominee County had confined nine women and three men for three weeks together in the same room. They were subjected to the barbarous treatment of being brought, and made to dance before a crowd from the town who brought a brass band to accompany the antics of the miserable creatures.

A bill, which had previously gone through the House, was unanimously passed by the Senate on the 19th, providing that all persons handling butterine for sale shall keep a sign conspicuously posted bearing thereon in large black letters not less than three inches in length the legend: "Oleomargarine Sold Here," or "Butterine Sold Here," as the case may be, and further that in every place where either of these articles is used, be it hotel, restaurant, boarding-house, or home, a sign of the same character shall be kept hanging over the entrance to the dining-room, and on it shall appear the words as above except that "used" shall be substituted for "sold" on the sign. Penalties are provided for violations of the law, and it is made a misdemeanor to sell butterine, oleomargarine, or similar compounds as butter, and subjects the offender to a fine of from $100 to $500, or imprisonment from six months to three years in the State House of Correction. The Sharp stenographer bill also passed the Senate. It applies to stenographers of Circuit Courts and regulates their compensation. The bill gives the appointment of stenographer to the Judges of the circuit, the salary to be fixed by the Judge, limited to not less than $1,000 nor more than $1,800. The amount is raised upon the business of the court, but the Board of Supervisors of Wayne County Auditors are privileged to add as much as they choose to the regular salary. An allowance of eight cents per folio is the legal rate for transcribing. It makes the stenographer a public official, similar to the county clerk, and stenographers are hereafter to be furnished to applicants at the legal rate for transcribing. The joint Committee on Banks made an exhaustive report favoring the creation of a State department of banking, with a commissioner to be appointed by the Governor, together with a force of expert examiners. The report states that the present savings-bank system is not safe for the mass of depositors, as it does not provide for the full publication of the bank's condition. Senator Monroe's bill revising the banking laws and creating a State department was recommended for passage. The House spent nearly the entire day in consideration of the Manly two-cent fare bill, and finally passed it by a vote of 65 to 16. The bill provides that all roads in the Lower Peninsula except roads recently built or less than twenty miles in length shall be allowed to charge two cents per mile for each mile and a fraction thereof and no more; that railroads in the Upper Peninsula will be allowed to charge three cents a mile only. The Legislature appears to be getting after the railroads, even though they have their passes still. The Rogers bill, applying provisions nearly similar to the interstate commerce bill to railroads wholly in the State, also passed the House.

The Senate spent considerable time in the consideration of the Herrington divorce bill on the 20th, and it passed the committee of the whole finally. Bills were passed reincorporating Fremont, Newaygo County, and allowing Big Rapids to borrow $5,000 to build a bridge; also a bill incorporating associations of mint-growers. A bill appropriating $5,000 to purchase additional land for a State public school failed of passage. The House of Representatives passed the Bettinger bill providing free text-books for the schools of Detroit by a vote of 58 to 10. It goes into effect Jan. 1, 1888. This is but one of the many similar measures now pending before the Legislature, Grand Rapids having already secured this plan this session. The Manly bill, providing free and uniform text-books for the entire State, was called up by its introducer, and an unusual procedure followed. Hon. S. S. Babcock, of Detroit, who has for years come before the committee on this subject, presumably in the interest of publishing houses, was permitted to speak to the House while they took an informal recess. He made a long and exhaustive argument against the measure, and it failed of passage. It will probably be reconsidered, though the Dillon bill, yet on general orders, is considered by many the stronger bill. Gov. Luce urges legislation of some sort to do away with lack of uniformity in books and excessive charges by publishers.

The bill providing that the $1,000 fund annually raised by counties for bridge purposes should be pro-rated among townships in proportion to the amounts raised by each township for bridge purposes passed both houses on the 21st; also the bill permitting the Board of Supervisors of Houghton County to borrow money to build a bridge. In the House of Representatives an examination of the legislative journal failed to disclose any record of the speech of Mr. Babcock or of the resolution granting him permission to speak on Friday. Mr. Manley sent up a resolution reciting the facts in the case, that such a recess was ordered, and that Mr. Babcock addressed the House. On this the House showed a very unusual and bitter spirit, and at first refused to have the correction made, several of the members charging Mr. Manley with attempting to create capital for himself by this means. The personalities engaged in caused Manley to lose his head for the first time this session, though he maintained a dignified manner throughout his entire caustic arraignment of members, who, he said, had constantly aimed at him ungentlemanly and encourteous charges and slanderous accusations. He concluded his speech by disclaiming any and all attempts to create capital, and startled the House by his final statement: "Gentlemen of the House, inasmuch as I cannot receive fair and honorable treatment at your hands, I shall to-day tender my resignation as a member of this body and return to a constituency where I can at least receive respectful consideration." The statement made a profound sensation. No one ventured a reply, and the resolution to so change the record as to simply show a recess was had prevailed by a very quiet vote.

There was no quorum in the Senate on the 23d, and that body adjourned immediately after roll-call. The House had barely a quorum, and spent the whole day in committee of the whole, the greater part of the time on Perkins' game and fish bill. The main objection to the bill is against the size of the mesh of nets, which it was sought to make four inches. The fishermen protest against this and the committee amended it to three and one-half. Another source of opposition is found in lumber-mill owners, who oppose the provision preventing the depositing of sawdust in any inland stream or bay of the State. They admit that it kills fish, but say it would be a hardship to them. That provision was allowed to stand.

The high license liquor bill was reported from the Senate Committee on Liquor Traffic in the form of a substitute, on May 24. It was ordered printed and made the special order for the 25th, and continuously thereafter until disposed of. The committee made few changes in the bill, most of them, however, of minor character. The amount of tax remains the same, and the general local provisions and division of tax stand as passed by the House. They have, however, incorporated therein a civil damage act, and have added several penal clauses. Also an old act prohibiting students in any State institution from playing cards, dice, or other game in any room where liquors are sold. A bill has passed the Senate incorporating the village of Sault Ste. Marie into a city. The great boom there necessitates more stringent local laws. The Senate took up a dead title, changed it to a bill appropriating $20,000 in aid of fire sufferers at Lake Linden, and rushed it through. It was at once sent over to the House. There was no opposition to the bill. The House spent nearly the entire day on the University appropriation bill, and finally passed it, with the $50,000 for an experimental laboratory still in. On this a fight was made, but the House contains too many University graduates to prevent any reasonable appropriation. Bills were passed to make appropriations for the State Normal School; to reincorporate the city of St. Ignace; to provide for the election of a Mine Inspector by the people on the State ticket.

Recent surveys in the Pyrenees prove that the Aran Valley is tributary to the Garonne, and that south and southeast of this valley are several [illegible]

"NEW HOME" Sewing Machines.

Our Agent will soon begin the canvass of Charlevoix and Vicinity, for the sale of the "NEW HOME" Machine, fully warranted and sold on easy terms, The Machine may be seen at the Millinery Store of Litney & Carr, of Charlevoix.

"SMITH AMERICAN," "CHASE" and "EARHUFF" ORGANS FOR SALE at LOWEST PRICES.

DUNHAM & SUTTON, EAST JORDAN.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

Established, 1869.

CHARLEVOIX, JUNE 1, 1887.

WILLARD A. SMITH Editor.
ED F. PARMELEE Associate Editor.

ON THE SURVEY.

What One of the Party Has to Say of the Vicissitudes of Railroad Engineering.

CENTRAL LAKE, May 29, 1887.

To the Editors of The Sentinel:

I will now endeavor to fulfill my promise, and give a brief outline of our journey for the first four weeks.

We have finished 24 miles of our route, 14 of which has been through dense cedar swamps, where not more than one-fourth of the trees would fall after the trunk was severed from the stump; the surface of the ground covered with dry cedars, that must have fallen as early as the time when Saturn taught agriculture to the Italians, the broken branches sharp as the goads Tisiphone used to awaken the unfortunate sleepers who passed within the Plutonian realms; the insects as venomous as the hair of hissing scorpions of the three Furies, and we here think Dante must have passed through a similar place to draw his information before writing his famed Inferno.

It would be impossible for Thalia to abide here. Our route for the last few miles has been through a beautiful section. The timber of the entire route will be of incalculable value as soon as the railroad is built. We find the people very enthusiastic along the entire line, and they seem delighted with the prospect of an early direct communication with Charlevoix!

The effect on us personally, in our marches, countermarches, tramping from one to four miles for our meals and lodging, may be summed up as follows: (I give my own experience, which is about the same as that of the others of our jolly company.)

About 200 miles rough travel.

One pair of new boots gone to the devil.

One pair pants badly shattered, with bad rents in the amplest part.

One coat seriously demoralized.

One new hat knocked full of holes.

One pair of feet severely galled.

One pair of shins badly bruised by cedar snags.

One tired back.

One stiff neck.

One face and neck badly stung by ferocious insects.

A temper very severely tested.

To compensate for these trials, we have one of the best lines for locating a railroad in the State of Michigan, as well as a very jolly, cheerful company.

ONE OF THEM.

Norwood Notes.

Mr. Nash has gone to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Meech, Miss Phila Averill, Mrs. Guyles, Miss Rose Cody and Jay Guyles, were in town over Sunday.

Frank Richardson, who has been in Lowell, Mass., returned on Saturday.

The Schr. M. L. Collins loaded with lumber for Guyles & Nash on Thursday.

Mrs. Harmon Stafford who has been sick with consumption for the past five months, died on Friday morning. Deceased was the wife of Harmon Stafford, and she, together with her family, were among the first settlers in this region; moving here from the state of New York about 22 years ago. Funeral services were held at the church on Sunday, and were largely attended by relatives and friends.

Mrs. Hattie Brown has gone to Traverse City, having accepted a position in the Insane Asylum as chief cook for the medical staff.

Memorial Day.

The 30th of May dawned cloudy and threatening, and early in the day rain began to fall, and continued most of the time all day. Notwithstanding this, people continued to arrive until noon, and by that time the streets were full.

The programme formulated for the observance of the day, which included ceremonies at the cemetery, was necessarily abandoned, substituting therefor services at Opera Hall, and the decoration of the soldiers' graves by a detail from Baxter Post.

Stevenson Post, of East Jordan, and Clifford Post, of Boyne City, the latter accompanied by their band, were met at the boat by Baxter Post and the boys' band, and escorted to quarters early in the day.

The afternoon services at the Opera Hall, embraced addresses by the Rev. Comrades McCartney, Woodmansee, and Thurston, and Mr. Will A. Norton, and others; the two bands rendered good music, and a quartette sang two selections.

The Charlevoix Fire Department were out under command of Chief Washburn, and, later, brought out their nickle plated pet for inspection.

Had the day been fair, all unite in the opinion that Charlevoix would have been overflowed with people; as it was, the observance of Memorial Day may be said to have been fairly successful.

—A number were baptised in Round lake, Sunday.

—The showers of this week have been a God-send to this region.

Go to Scott's shop for a first-class job of horseshoeing.

Ironton.

Mrs. Pope visited at Horton's Bay over Saturday.

The W. C. T. U. ladies netted $13.65 at their 10 cent tea on Tuesday.

Capt. Woolnough's many friends here sympathize with him in his recent bereavement. While unloading his vessel, the Narragansett, on a recent trip, he was summoned home by telegraph to attend the funeral of his only daughter.

A peep at John Peterson's farm the other day revealed to us that John had 55 acres into crops all looking finely. He says it has taken $2,300 to pay his hired labor on it for the last two years, but it has been changed from forest to cultivated fields.

The school in District No. 5 will close on Friday. Miss Ada Lewis, the teacher, and her pupils will indulge in a basket picnic in the afternoon and treat the people of this vicinity to an exhibition in the evening.

Miss Cherrie and A. Burdick were delegates to the Congregational Association at Lansing last week.

T. C. Bird has added a creamery to his dairy. The arrangement is such that the cream is raised on milk in an incredible short time, giving the butter a flavor of freshness not attainable on the ordinary plan.

The furnace banked on Wednesday for a few days.

The schrs. John Schutte and William Shupe, the former loaded with coal, the latter with ore unloaded at the docks Friday and Saturday.

Mr. Parker has broken up 15 acres of his new meadow and is planting a part of it to potatoes. The fires had destroyed the grass last fall.

Chris. Huggard has moved his family back into his house in town.

The sunny smile on Johnnie Mitchell's countenance is accounted for by the knowledge that a new daughter arrived at his home on Saturday evening.

Some of those boys who are in the habit of having some fun disturbing gatherings should bear in mind that human patience is not boundless. A stone thrown in a crowd a few times spoils the fun—for the crowd. The only harm done by the last one thrown in, was the injury to one of our citizen's arms, keeping him awake for a few nights with the pain.

Hazings from Hayes.

Mrs. Nowland of Eveline has been enjoying a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Gibson.

Mrs. Alex Ross went to Chicago last week to visit her children.

Mrs. Nora Liddle of Grand Rapids, came up Thursday to visit her sister, Mrs. S. W. Solter.

Peter McNally is building a residence on his farm.

Frank Kane, our road commissioner, made his road warrants the past week.

M. E. quarterly meeting at Burgess this week, commencing on Saturday at 2 p. m. It is rumored that Rev. A. L. Thurston of Boyne City, will officiate.

Mrs. Maggie Wolverton of Atwood, is visiting her parents.

Lester House of Cadillac, has been visiting his relatives the past week.

Northern Michigan.

The Manistee Advocate says that the C. & W. M. will be in Traverse City inside of twelve months.

The bill authorizing the village of Cheboygan to use the surplus waterworks power for electric light purposes passed the house of representatives, Friday.

Harry, a bright 5-year-old son of County Treasurer Foster, at Traverse City, was found in Boardman river May 19. He had fallen in and drowned the night before.

St. Ignace had a destructive fire Thursday morning, which destroyed four buildings, and but for the rain would have swept the town. Their steam fire engine would not work.

Work on Planks' hotel at Mackinaw Island is progressing rapidly and it is nearing completion. Already 250 rooms have been engaged from the time it is finished till the end of the season.

Sault Ste Marie is having a lively time of it. Work has commenced on the water power canal with all the men that can be secured, the two railroads making for the town are hurrying preparations the government appropriation for the canal locks is being blown in and the international railroad bridge has been commenced.

The two-cent fare bill is not making very rapid progress, the matter having been put over till the last of this week. It looks now as though the substitute of W. A. Barker, of Berrien, was likely to be adopted. This makes the fare 2½ cents per mile and three cents per mile in the Upper Peninsula, and places the price of 500-mile tickets, good for twelve months, $10—good in the State.

A bill which has just passed the House provides that wages hereafter must be paid in lawful money. No more script or store orders.

FOR SALE—Seven acres of good land for sale just across the road from A. Stover's on the Medad Thompson farm. Enquire at A. J. Mudge's store. 1w

The Atlanta National puts forth this tough conundrum: "When Mr. Cleveland turned out the 'rascals,' in the name of goodness what does he call the people he puts in?"

The Methodist bishops of the United States began their semi-annual session in Minneapolis a week ago last Thursday, with ten of the twelve bishops present. The sessions are private, but it is learned that the most important question to be settled is that of lengthening the pastorate from three to five years. Other questions of church government will be considered.

The Irish are leaving Ireland at the rate of four or five thousand a week for this country, and they are vigorous men and women from the agricultural districts, who see in the menacing attitude of the Tory government in London only disaster for themselves if they remain in their own country. The jubilee year of Queen Victoria will probably be blackened by one of the worst legislative crimes in English annals.

Representative Lincoln's bill relating to the care of ballot boxes has passed the House. It provides that a seal having the name of the township or ward thereon shall be provided which shall be used to hold in place a piece of leather or canvas so placed as to extend from the corner of the box entirely covering the key hole. The box shall be delivered to them sealed before the election and shall be again sealed, with the ballots therein, before it is returned to the clerk. A fine is provided for the punishment of anyone using or having such seal in his possession.

Gen. Sherman is said to be the most unconscious of self of any public man in the United States. At a recent large gathering in a Washington church he occupied a seat in the center of the stage alongside of the old war governor, Curtin, of Pennsylvania. These two, seemingly oblivious of their surroundings, kept up a constant and lively gossip all the evening, to the annoyance of the orators and singers, in what they innocently imagined were whispered tones, but which were in reality bass notes, so distinctly audible as to be heard in all parts of the house. Those on the stage, or close to the two men, must have heard what the two were talking about, too, as the faces of the hundreds fortunately so favored were continually wreathed in smiles, while once or twice their owners burst into involuntary laughter, as Gen. Sherman would get off some good story on Curtin, or Curtin would strike back at the general. The dignified Senator Sherman glanced reprovingly at his older brother, but it had no effect at all in quieting him, and only served to amuse the surrounding veterans.

Detroit Tribune: The vigilance and vigor shown by the game warden and his deputies in prosecuting for violation of the fish laws are certain to have a beneficial effect. The state is expending thousands of dollars every year in maintaining its fish hatcheries and distributing their product. It plants the young fry by the million, and under favorable conditions the supply of fish in the lakes and rivers would be greatly augmented, instead of gradually diminishing. But destructive methods of killing the fish have, to a considerable extent, counteracted the work of the commission in propagating them. By fishing during the spawning season, by using nets with fine meshes, and by calling in the aid of dynamite the work of destruction has been enormously accelerated. In some parts of the state small food fish have been scooped up by the wagon load and used for fertilizing purposes. It is not strange that under these processes complaints are received of a diminishing supply in many of the waters. But for the wonderful fecundity of the fish they would disappear entirely from all of the smaller streams. But they propogate so rapidly that with half a chance they will increase rather than diminish in numbers.

The experience of the eastern states is valuable on this point. There was a time when fears were expressed that the shad would disappear entirely from the Hudson and Connecticut rivers, and that the supply would fall short in the Delaware. But a few simple enactments, strictly enforced, stopped the raid upon the young fry, and in three or four years they were as abundant as ever. In the Connecticut, by limiting the area that could be enclosed in pound nets, and limiting the time when such nets could be set the fish were given an opportunity to get to their spawning grounds and shad soon became, during the season, about the cheapest food in market.

Those who make fishing a business are finding out that it is a short-sighted policy to oppose the laws which, in the end, improve their own catch. But as there are cattle thieves to prey upon the farms, so there are guerilla fishermen to prey upon the streams. The deputy wardens have laid their hands upon a few of these, and it is to be hoped that the justices will not be too easy upon such as may be convicted of knowingly and wilfully violating the law.

A sketch of Mrs. Logan is contributed to the June number of the American Magazine by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton. The article includes some lively anecdotes of the period when General Logan was serving in the field.

Over 120,000 immigrants have landed on our shores since Jan 1, and every passenger ship that reaches New York is crowded with discontented and impecunious new-comers. The statesman who has the wisdom to devise an act that will restrict this tide of immigration and the courage to advocate it will be a great benefactor to the laboring people of this country.

Fresh Butter at lowest price, at Jefferies' Bakery.

TO RENT. Two very pleasant offices over the Bank of Charlevoix.

That Washing Machine, only 10 cents at L. D. Bartholomew & Co.

A house and 6 lots for sale or rent, Inquire of L. E. Allen, Charlevoix.

Good enough. J. Strond and O. D. Hilton will paint with the Sherwin-Williams colored leads.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to me are requested to call and settle at once. JOHN MCCABE.

The finest line of dry goods and notions ever shown in Charlevoix, are being received daily at Rosenthal's.

Don't buy a force pump until you have seen the easy working "Trahern pump." It has no packing. Sold only by L. D. Bartholomew & Co.

FOR SALE—One farm wagon nearly new, one second hand delivery wagon, and three village lots on Antrim st. All very cheap. J. L. HURD.

The Sebring cottage was painted with the Sherwin-Williams paint. For durability and covering capacity this paint has no equal. Sold by L. D. Bartholomew & Co.

Itch, Prairie Mange and Scratches of every kind cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. Use no other. This never fails. Sold by F. G. Hines & Co., druggists, Charlevoix

The ladies are cordially invited to call and examine the large display of millinery including pattern hats and bonnets together with novelties in ribbons, gauzes, flowers, etc. As it is to be a season of novelties it will pay you to call now and often, upon Mrs. Litney & Carr.

POSITIVELY THE FINEST LINE OF

CLOTHING

AND GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS YOU EVER SAW IN CHARLEVOIX,

JUST RECEIVED FOR SUMMER WEAR.

Prices are unusually low this Spring and if you need anything in my line, just step in.

Now is a Grand Time To Obtain Bargains.

GEO. W. MILLER.

GOOD BYE SPRING! WELCOME SUMMER!

A. T. WASHBURNE AND CO.

Our Grand Summer Opening!

Was A Great Success.

Second Invoice Of Summer Goods

NOW ON THE ROAD.

A. T. WASHBURNE & CO.

Successors to F. W. CRAINE & CO.

J. L. HURD & CO.

will re-occupy their store building this week with a large line of NEW, FRESH GOODS. We respectfully invite our friends to call upon us

J. L. HURD & CO.

NEW DRY GOODS,
NEW CLOTHING,
NEW TRUNKS, ETC.

--AT--

ALICK ROSENTHALs

I WANT YOU TO COME AND SEE ME IN MY NEW STORE

In The LEWIS Block.

My new stock is much the largest we have ever carried and at lower prices

CALL and be convinced of the truth of this remark.

DON'T FORGET THE PLACE.

ALICK ROSENTHAL,

Successor to ROSENTHAL & SON.

CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

Jno C Miller may21 h

VOL. XIX. NO.--6 | CHARLEVOIX, MICH., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 8, 1887. | WHOLE NO. 915

"BUG FINISH!"

The new Potato Bug exterminator. We warrant it to give satisfaction. Very cheap. All ready for use. Requires no mixing. Try it.

STRICTLY PURE PARIS GREEN

We have in stock the purest article to be found in the market. It's sure death every time. Buy no other.

Sure Death To Currant Worms!

For these pests we have a pure article of White Hellebone. When ever used it acts like magic not leaving a worm on the bush.

PURE DALMATION INSECT POWDER

The best thing for Flies and other insects.

A trial of any of the above is bound to prove satisfactory,

F. G. HINES & CO.
Druggists.

Emrey Bros.

are on deck this Spring with a complete stock of

General Merchandise, AT LOWEST PRICES

WE ARE DETERMINED TO DO A STRICTLY CASH BUSINESS, AND THUS ARE ENABLED TO UNDERSELL FIRMS GIVING CREDIT.

IT WILL BE FOR YOUR PROFIT TO CALL AND GET PRICES.

Boots and Shoes THE GREATEST BARGAINS EVER OFFERED IN THIS COUNTY.

THE PIONEER HOUSE OF CHARLEVOIX CO.

We call especial attention to our complete stock of

WALL PAPER.

The time has arrived when you need it. We are now receiving a fresh Spring stock embracing all the latest styles. We warrant you lowest prices.

Special Patterns ordered from samples if you wish.

OUR SPRING ASSORTMENT OF

GENERAL MERCHANDISE

now being received is the finest we ever offered

TEAS of all kinds. We will guarantee you the best Tea for the money, in the county.

ALL GRADES of FRESH ROASTED AND GREEN COFFEES.

A Fine line of Everything in

FURNITURE.

BIG DRIVES IN

BOOTS and SHOES.

Please bear in mind that our stock embraces

EVERYTHING

usually found in a General Store.

Remember: Our Goods are the Best. Our Prices the Lowest. Our Record the Oldest.

Resp'y Yours,

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co.

Save Your Dollars

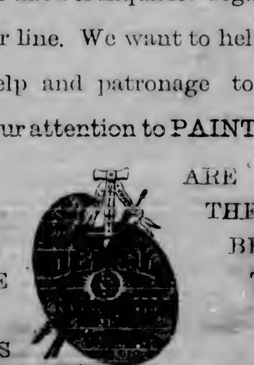
AND BUY HARDWARE

OF STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

Aiming to keep a complete stock, it is our honest endeavor to sell all goods at lowest living prices, for the reason that we court the attention and patronage of every cash customer in Charlevoix County, who wants to save money by making a dollar go as far as possible. Try us if you happen to be one of those who have not already done so. We are preparing a SURPRISE for YOU. Do not fail to come to our store and see us if possible, every time you come to Charlevoix. You are under no obligation to buy if you don't want to. We are always glad to answer inquiries regarding anything in our line. We want to help you and want your help and patronage to that end.

We call your attention to PAINTS &c.

ALSO PLEASE REMEMBER THAT THE JEWEL STOVES



ARE THE BEST, THE WORLD'S BEST!

Resp'y, STOCKMAN & IDDINGS.

The Best Groceries

At The Lowest Prices

ARE FOUND AT THE GROCERY AND PROVISION HOUSE OF

A. E. MASON.

I do a strictly Cash-over-counter business and will guarantee lowest prices.

New Furniture

AT S. M. SEE & SONS!

We have just received an entirely new stock of Furniture of every discription.

Dealing exclusively in Furniture we are confident we can make it an object to all wishing to buy to call and inspect our stock.

UNDERTAKING A Specialty.

J. MILO EATON'S

REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE,

AND LOAN OFFICE.

The oldest in the county. Established in 1875.

Money to loan in sums to suit and at lowest rates on improved farms.

ABSTRACTS OF TITLE furnished on short notice. Office over Postoffice

Wait A Minute!

WHY NOT TRADE AT

WILL SEE & CO'S

Where there is always on hand a complete line of GROCERIES, PROVISIONS, FLOUR & FEED.

A Great Bargain in Canned Goods. Best Cash Price paid for Country Produce.

TELEPHONE Orders promptly delivered.

Charlevoix Sentinel.

The Oldest Paper North of Grand Traverse Bay, in this Peninsula.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY BY

SMITH & PARMELEE,

Charlevoix, - Michigan.

Address all business correspondence to the firm

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

One year $1 50 | Six months $ .75

Invariably in Advance.

Local News.

—Mr. Geo. Rice, of Petoskey, was in town over Sunday.

—Mrs. Stover of Northport is visiting Charlevoix friends.

—Ed Newman is at Mackinac Island working at his trade.

—See & Co. have added a delivery wagon to their grocery business.

—J. S. Smithson will speak at the Barnard school house Sunday, June 9.

—Smithson's camp is to be telephonically connected with Charlevoix soon.

—Mrs. S. K. Bagley left yesterday for Atwood, to visit her daughter, Mrs. Wm. Coulter.

—Pat O'Neil, accompanied by Mrs. Weaver, left Thursday for Green Bay, Wis., to visit relatives.

—Rev. Mr. Thurston, of Boyne City, attended and participated in the Gospel meeting Sunday evening.

—Improvements are going on in various parts of the village in the way of enlarging and repainting residences.

—Mrs. Sherman Cody of Chicago, and Miss Adele Cody of Naperville, Ills., are guests of their sister Miss Rose Cody.

—Capt. "Sandy" Bennett has resigned from the command of the tug Bob Stephenson, and returned to his first love—painting.

—The next annual meeting of the Grand Traverse Baptist association will be held at this place next week Wednesday and Thursday.

—There are 425 residences and store buildings in Charlevoix and the three Charlevoix pastors have visited every one of them in company this spring.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. have moved into their spacious new quarters and the pioneer store building of the county presents the best appearance of any time in its history.

—Extensive improvements on the M. E. church building are contemplated this season. Two wings will be built, the seating changed and two parlors constructed in the west end.

—Three Petoskey young men came over to spend Sunday with their best girls. There are certainly at least three young men in Petoskey who know which town furnishes the handsomest girls.

—The Barnard and Hilton's Sabbath schools have united to celebrate Children's Day, June 12th. An interesting programme is being prepared. W. H. McCartney will address the meeting on "Christian Education." The exercises will commence at 1:30 p. m.

—W. P. Brown left Monday for Big Rapids, to represent Christ Church Mission in Diocesan convention, held at that place. He expects to return the last of the week with the Rev. Dr. Fair of St. Marks, Grand Rapids, who will officiate on Sunday next, on a visit to Charlevoix with a view to find a place to resort for himself and family this summer.

- Petoskey Democrat: Last week Mr. Thomas Burns erected a very handsome monument in the Charlevoix cemetery, upon the lot of Mr. Winton Lampicere. It is by far the most beautiful monument in the cemetery and reflects much credit upon Mr. Burns for skill and proficiency in his business. He also while at Charlevoix secured the contract for placing an inscription upon a monument for Mr. William See, erected to the memory of his departed wife.

—The legislature has made important changes in three sections of the statutes relating to taxes for township purposes and the auditing of bills against townships. Under the law as amended, no more than $1,000 can be raised by tax in any one year, as a contingent or general township fund. Any further money required must be raised as a special fund for a particular purpose, which must be entered in the records of the township, and the money so raised be used for such purpose. All bills audited by the town board must be made out in items verified, and kept on file for inspection of inhabitants or taxpayers of the township.

—The Public schools close on Friday, for the summer vacation. The closing exercises will be held at the Opera Hall on Friday evening next. There is every reason to believe that this entertainment will fully meet the expectations of those who have so highly enjoyed the past efforts of the pupils and teachers in this line. One hundred children of the different grades have been trained for the occasion and the selections to be rendered are specially choice, consisting of humorous, pathetic and patriotic music, colloquies, recitations, etc. All the parts, of whatever character, are such that the drill required from the pupils furnishes the best possible training in reading and other useful arts. Our people should not miss this occasion of enjoyment.

—The dance at the rink is postponed until next week.

—Jay Guyles returned on the Lawrence, Monday, from Milwaukee.

—George Weaver and Miss Florence Hyland were married last week.

—M. S. Moulton has placed his stock of jewelry in the Ingleside building.

—The Buttars' block is receiving a gold-leaf finish at the hands of Capt. Bennett.

—The mail service between East Jordan and Dwight's has been discontinued.

—The Fountain City house has blossomed out with a handsome coat of spring paint.

—It is said that the summer time card on the G. R. & I. will go into effect June 19th.

—S. M. See & Sons have an attractive new stock of willow rockers, easels, fire screens, etc.

—Miss Kate Smith, of Petoskey, was the guest of her brother, Fred A. Smith, over Sunday.

—R. C. Dart, the Petoskey attorney, was in town Saturday and Monday on legal business.

—Mr. Frank Todd, of Cheboygan, spent a few days here last week visiting his sister Emma.

—The Charlevoix schools will give a public entertainment at the Opera house next Friday evening.

—The recent copious rains have saved the hay crop and started vegetation of all kinds booming.

—Mrs. Al. Draper, of South Arm, went to Wisconsin on the Champlain, on Sunday, to visit her old home.

—Rink manager Boak, says the rink will be open on Tuesday and Saturday afternoons and evenings.

—Capt. Dan Way continues to turn out a superior grade of photographs at the old Bradbeer gallery.

—F. G. Hines & Co. have declared war upon potato bugs, insects, etc. Read about it in their new announcement.

—J. L. Hurd & Co. have occupied their new store, and are filling their shelves with a fresh line of goods throughout.

—The steamer Cummings has received a new brussels carpet for her cabin from the carpet room of A. T. Washburne & Co.

—By reference to the Council proceedings it will be seen that the fire boys are to have uniforms. Good. They deserve them.

—Mrs. James Hemmings left on the Lawrence Wednesday, for Chicago. She will visit relatives in Wisconsin, before returning.

—Advices yesterday announce the recent death, in Detroit, of Mrs. Lew. Coulter. She was a sister of the late Will Covert, of this place.

—Herman R. Stoepel, formerly of East Jordan, is to be married June 15th to Miss Jessie VanCourt, a well-known Detroit society young lady.

—Gen. C. F. Leidy of the Detroit Evening Journal, has been promoted to the position of news editor and Gil Osman succeeds as state editor.

—The $1,000 worth of script required for the telephone line to Boyne Falls has been subscribed and the connection will be made in August.

—Rev. D. B. Schoffeld, a prohibitionist, has been appointed postmaster at Williamsburg, and the Democrats there are gnashing their teeth.

—The first of the series of Gospel meetings at Opera Hall Sunday evening was well attended. Mr. Smithson preached a powerful and convincing sermon.

—A Cadillac dispatch of the 28th says: J. M. Ashley was here yesterday with his surveyors and located the course of the Toledo, Ann Arbor, & Cadillac railroad into the city.

—Robert and Wm. Withers, C. B. Glass, Lyman Benson, James Rogers and Arthur Wilson left Monday, the first two for Lake Linden, and the rest for St. Ignace, to work at their trades.

—At the Congregational church meeting held Monday evening, a committee of the Trustees was appointed to confer with a like committee from the Ironton church, relative to a supply for the two churches.

—John Ward's residence in Marion is completed, and Mr. Ward and his family take possession this week. It is one of the handsomest and most convenient farm residences in northern Michigan, and Mr. Ward is deserving of just that kind of a home.

—One of the last and best things that Henry Ward Beecher ever wrote is the following: "Keep your children at home at night. There is many a sod that lies over the child whose downfall began by vagrancy at night and there is many a child whose heart-broken parents would give the world if the sod did lie over them."

—Beware of pack-peddlers. They carry with them a lot of trash, and just when you think you have a bargain is when you are being beaten. No peddler can afford to pay his railroad fare and other necessary expenses and sell goods at as low figures as your resident merchants, and when you discover that you are beaten the peddler may be a hundred miles away, while goods bought from a home merchant can be returned at any time if you find that they are not as represented.—Ex.

Common Council.

Full Council met on Thursday evening, President McLeod in the chair.

The Marshal's report showed $59 received for fines, billiard table licenses and dock rent.

The clerk was instructed to open accounts with the Street Commissioner and engineer, and the Marshal.

An eight foot walk was ordered on the east side of Bridge street, between the livery stable and the bridge.

A sum not to exceed $40 was appropriated to complete the uniform fund of the fire department.

The following bills were audited:

Gurley Boak, St. Com., janitor and engineer,	$39 10
L. E. Smith, drayíng,	3 70
Wm. Phelps, labor,	2 25
John Nicholls, lumber,	11 19
Calvin Thompson, labor,	1 50
O. S. Washburn, services as engineer,	30 32
Byron See, Assessor,	20 00

Marine Jottings.

Capt. Eli Tuinse now commands the tug Bob Stephenson with Cliff Papineau as engineer.

The tug Col. Payne was sold last week to J. E. Rumbell, of Manistee. She will be taken there and overhauled.

The City of Traverse will make but two more trips and will then be turned over to her new owners. So says Mr. Hannah.

Hereafter the Northern Michigan boats will make Traverse City one way. They will arrive at Charlevoix 12 hours later than at present.

The schooner Moses Gage, with a complete wrecking outfit, has left Chicago to aid in raising the schooner City of Sheboygan, sunk near Detour. The wreckers intended to pump the coal cargo of the wrecked schooner into the Gage, and when her cargo is all out batten the vessel up and lift her to the surface. She will be towed to Chicago for repairs.

Cleared: June 1—Schr Lottie Mason, 55 cords slabs, Master to Milwaukee.
3—Schr Seguman, 185,000 feet hardwood lumber, P L L Co to Detroit.
3—Schr Jessie Phillips, 125,000 ft hemlock lumber, 1,000,000 cedar shingles, P L L Co. to Chicago.
3—Schr L. B. Shepard, 175,000 ft hardwood lumber, Glenn & Porter to Chicago.
4—Schr Stampede, 250,000 ft hardwood lumber P L L Co to Sheboygan.
4—Schr Corsican, 225,000 ft hardwood lumber, A. W. Olds, to Detroit.
4—Schr Contest, 160,000 ft hardwood lumber, P L L Co to Chicago.
7—Schr Sea Gem, 7,600 ft hardwood lumber, John Nicholls, to Chicago.
7—Schr Duncan City, 8,000 posts, Downer to Chicago.
7—Schr Bert Barnes, 100 cords wood, master to Milwaukee.
7—Schr John L. Green, 38 c wood, 41,000 hardwood lumber, Master to Sheboygan.

Charlevoix Summer Resort Items.

C. Y. Cook's rooms are all engaged.

Dr. Compau, with two Detroit friends is at C. Y. Cook's.

George Winans came Saturday to look over the yacht Iolanthe.

Mrs. DeGolyer received a handsome basket driving cart from Cincinnati, last week.

J. P. Woodbury came up yesterday. He's always welcome to the best trout in Northern Michigan.

J. P. Hart will put a new roof on the Waterman cottage this week and add other improvements.

F. W. Willcox, Mrs. Fisk, Mrs. Tyler and Miss Tyler came Wednesday and have opened their cottages.

Mrs. Arthur Stone and daughter Ride, came yesterday. They will have rooms at C. Y. Cook's until the Wier cottage is opened.

Architect Kirkpatrick begins work this week upon a handsome cottage for Bishop Gillespie of Grand Rapids. It will be located just east of the Lloyd cottage on the south addition and will command one of the handsomest views on the resort. The Bishop will be up this month and the cottage completed by July 1st.

THE NEW CLUB HOUSE.

The new club house will be turned over to the resort committee next Friday. The exterior of the structure presents a much better appearance than was thought possible last fall, the veranda posts and trimmings having tended to heighten the looks of the building.

A double, covered veranda 10 feet in width, extends along the north, east and south sides of the house. The 27 bedrooms of the west wing all open onto this porch. They are in suites, the front rooms being 12x15 feet in size and the rear ones 12x12. Stoves will be placed in all the lower rooms.

The office, 22x21 feet in size, is located at the north-east corner of the building. It is finished in handsome ash. At the western side of the room the office desk is placed, while a fire place and an attractive wood mantel are located at the right as you enter the double doors from the east veranda. To the left, the main stairway ascends to the rooms above.

Directly south of the office and connected by double doors, is the reading room 12x19 in size. Through this, double doors lead to the spacious parlor 31x34 feet in size. The office, reading room and parlor are all finished in ash.

From the lower veranda three winding stairways lead to the one above.

A six foot hall extends through the upper story of the south wing from which access is obtained to 12 chambers.

The Charlevoix Manufacturing Co., who had the contract for the building, are to be complimented for the thoroughness with which the work has been carried out in detail. It is to be regretted however that they will lose at least $500 on the contract.

A. F. Myers, who had the sub-contract for the mason work and plastering, as well as Graves & Lamphear, the painters, can point to the Club House with pride. They have done their work well.

With a good season the Belvedere will be filled to its fullest capacity.

A VENETIAN IDYL.

[illegible]

LILLIE EDDLES;

—OR,—

ABDUCTED BY THE BUSHWHACKERS.

A Story of the War in the Southwest.

BY ARVIDE O. BALDWIN.

CHAPTER V.—[CONTINUED.]

This news was startling. Then they had already been planning to rob him. He could almost have shot the scoundrel that stood before him for his impudence, but his better judgment prevailed and he answered him quietly but grimly: "I'll try and be there when you come."

"Well, well," thought our young friend, "the fellow is pretty well mixed. He seems to think I am an old man Iggles, or something else. They want my property and money, do they? Perhaps they will get it, perhaps not. We will see."

"If you are going to the river you had better go with me. I'll show you the way." And he turned his horses up the road again in the direction from whence he came.

"Aint yer gwine ter take yer hoss hum?" asked the stranger suspiciously.

"If Woodsley isn't there it is hardly worth while to take his horse there to-day. When he wants it he can come for it."

"Whar does yer live, stranger?"

"On the Wire Road, a few miles north."

"What's yer name?"

"Inquire for Tom Jones," said John, evasively. Then, seeing they had reached Cross Hollows, he told the stranger to take the right-hand road leading directly down the hollow and he would, in a reasonable time, reach the river.

The prospective bushwhacker took the road designated, and without a parting word, or a look behind, went on out of sight, down the valley.

John Eddles thought the gang would hardly welcome such a specimen as this to their ranks. It was true he was a backwoodsman, and no doubt would do any deviltry they might require of him, and he might be of some use about camp; but his mind was dull and not capable of planning the schemes that would bring success, nor had he secretiveness enough to keep silence when it seemed necessary. After the stranger had left his company and before he had traveled a mile, he was startled by the sharp report of a gun and the whistle of a bullet past his head in too close proximity to be pleasant or desirable.

A small puff of smoke rose slowly from a clump of brush about a hundred yards to the left.

The distance was too great for him to use his weapons with any degree of accuracy, even if he could have seen the would-be assassin who fired the shot, which he could not, so he continued on more rapidly. Perhaps another hundred yards was gone over when again the crack of a rifle was heard, and the animal he was riding lunged wildly forward.

The frightened animals did not need further urging, but instantly broke into a mad run, which they kept up until the Eddles plantation was reached.

The panting, foam-covered animals were taken to the stables, and then, for the first time, John saw that his animal had been struck by the last shot.

Blood was trickling down his leg from two holes in the flank—the entrance and exit of the deadly missile. The wound was but a deep flesh one, but it was painful, nevertheless, for the suffering animal was yet restless and trembling from its effect.

When evening came the horses were driven into the corral, and the more valuable ones taken from there to the large barn, which was well secured.

The negroes were assigned quarters. Some were gloomy and morose over the mystery that surrounded them, while others were enjoying themselves with their almost unlimited freedom.

When everything was complete for the warm reception of the bushwhackers it was late. The lights were extinguished and silence stole over the huge mansion, and everything seemed at peace and rest. It was the calm that precedes the storm.

The night wore away, and when morning came the inmates were thankful that they had been unmolested. The watchman reported that nothing unusual had occurred during his watch. Some of the household built up hopes on the report, but were soon doomed to disappointment.

Early in the day another visitor stopped at the plantation. He rode directly to the stables and dismounted. John Eddles watched the rider from the time he entered the grounds until he disappeared within the barn. In a few minutes he appeared again, and with him one of the stable hands leading the horse that Eddles had started to deliver to Woodsley, on the previous day, but failed to do so.

He tied the animal near the one on which he came, and proceeded to the house. John met him on the porch.

He had the oily smile of the educated scoundrel, and saluted Eddles with that courtesy possessed by the polished people of the South.

"Good morning, Mr. Eddles; a fine morning, sir."

"Good morning, sir," said John, coldly.

"I trust I find you well, sir?"

"Quite well."

"And the ladies?" he inquired.

"I don't know that their welfare need interest you, sir."

"The time will soon come when the friendship of Edom Woodsley will be desired, even by the Eddleses." And he still smiled.

CHAPTER VI.

A SHOT IN SEASON.

"I trust we shall never need such friendship."

"When you do need my friendship and assistance, please remember that that friendship has been spurned."

"How does it happen that you do not come here of late without insinuating trouble, and that you have great influence when such trouble comes? Now I demand of you an explanation."

"It is strange, indeed, that a man of the intelligence of John Eddles cannot see the turmoil in our land! Does it not seem to you that the sincere friendship of any man, under such circumstances, is desirable?"

"You will please answer me one question: Do you know of any danger imminent to myself, family or property?"

"How can I tell when any one person is likely [illegible] more than any other?"

"[illegible] believe that we [illegible] him to note [illegible] he could see [illegible] him. A tran[illegible] his coun[illegible]

"[illegible] you were not [illegible] was the evasive [illegible]

"[illegible] answer me di[illegible] we will be [illegible]

[illegible] now called [illegible] slowly up the [illegible] came opposite [illegible] gun, and [illegible] beneath his [illegible] of his gun, [illegible] toward the [illegible] careless man[illegible] it would have [illegible]

[illegible] ready response [illegible]

"[illegible] of Eddles live [illegible]

[illegible] replied.

"[illegible] authority to [illegible]

"[illegible] superior."

"[illegible] and what is the charge?"

"Captain Inglers; and the charge is horse-stealing."

"Is Captain Inglers a military commander?"

"Yes; headquarters on the river."

John now knew who the man before him represented, and he knew that once in the hands of the bushwhackers his life would be jeopardized. His mind was made up.

"You report to Captain Inglers that I do not recognize military authority, and that the charge is false."

"You don't deny the charge, do you?"

"I certainly do."

"But there is the horse now, in yonder yard!"

"The owners of that animal are the thieves who stole two negroes from me a few days ago, and that is one of the horses that they rode home upon."

This explanation did not appear to have much effect on the horseman. He appeared more interested in the capture of John Eddles than in the recovery of the animal.

"I was ordered to take you, and I propose to do it—dead or alive!"

"You propose doing more than you are able to perform."

"You'll see!" And the stranger grasped his gun more firmly, and quickly raised it to his face. As quick as he was John was yet quicker. He quickly sprang aside and it was well he did so, for that instant he saw a blaze of fire stream from one of the barrels and felt a puff of air against his face. The echo of the report had hardly died away before another one, quick and sharp, in the direction of the stables, again broke the stillness, and the strange man's gun flew into the air as his hands went up. He reeled a moment in the saddle, then tumbled headlong to the ground! The man lay gasping for breath, with one hand held against his side.

The men on the porch looked in amazement at each other, for the shot and its effect was utterly unexpected by them. In a moment the remainder of the household appeared upon the scene, and the pale faces of the ladies told of the terrible fright they had experienced.

